PASO (Tex.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] News gathering for e Times is strenuous business war time days in and around El ring that a body of 100 insurrecd appeared in the Juarez Moun opposite the El Paso smelter the battle of Smelter Hill was t, I boarded a street car and went e Smelter settlement to investi There were no insurrectos to be although tracks in the mud d that a number had crossed earlier in the day.

ossed a swinging foot bridge into o and walked up a dry arroyo rhaps five miles in search of any ces of the reappearance of the ectos who were thought to be en to Rancho Flores, the recruiting n for this section. I had reached esa of the second range of hills d appeared on the sky-line of esa when a bunch of Federal to the south took a shot at me.

was the first intimation I had there were any Federals in the ains, but I soon discovered that ills and arroyos were alive with I heard a shrill whistle to the nd up on the side of the first were more than a hundred Fed oldiers, all covering me with the Mauser rifles. A lieutenant and il of fifty men came tumbling out of the hills and over the vol rocks. I waved a soiled pocket rchief at them to let them know my mission was a peaceful one expected to be allowed to go as soon as my identity was established. But instead, they leveled their guns on me and marched me to the top of the mesa where they began an examination of me, my pockets, papers, purse and note pad.

SEIZED AS SPY.

Unfortunately I had a copy of a magazine with pictures of the insurrecto camps, of Gen. Navarro and an account of the progress of the war. This the officers seized upon at once as evidence that I was an insurrecto spy sent out to locate the Federals and then report to the insurrectos who were thought to be over the next range to the west. A bunch of picture post cards of Richard Brown, the American boy who is in the Juarez jail, and some pictures of the funeral of L. Orozco, a cousin of Pasqual Orozco, the insurrecto leader who died in El Paso Thursday, completed the damning evidence against me and I was placed under arrest as a spy and a guard of soldiers placed over me.

The company was from the First Regiment, and were scouring the hills for insurrectos. I was ordered to sit down on the ridge of the mesa, which I did without further orders than the end of the guard's Mauser aimed at the fifth lumbar vertibra in my back. Just as the lieutenant had finished searching me and had gruffly ordered me made a prisoner, the Federals stationed on the highest hills as outposts began a scattering fire, shooting probably forty or fifty times. This caused my lieutenant friend much more

LADY TENNESSEE CLAFLIN COOKE IN TERROR OF LIFE.

Noted Suffrage Worker Now on Verge of Nervous Prostration at Chicago Hotel—Tells of Threats Received by Mail and Over Wire. Asserts Life Is Open Book.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lady Tennessee Claflin Cooke, man's equal rights ,is the victim of a American, who came to Chicago several weeks ago for the cause of woman's Equal Rights, is the victim of a gang of English blackmailers who have been persecuting her ever since she came to this city.

Lady Cooke charged today that the same men who years ago tried to blackmail her husband in England, have followed her to Chicago and are seeking to intimidate her into giving up a sum of from $10,000 to $30,000. Surrounded by the luxuries of a suite in the Congress Hotel, Lady Cooke denounced her traducers.

"These letters are from the same men who tried to blackmail my husband many years ago, and have been making my life miserable ever since I came to Chicago," she declared.

"They threaten to expose things about me which never occurred, and have printed a lot of vile stories which have no foundation in fact. I will not be intimidated into giving them one cent. My life has been as an open book and I can not be hurt by anything of the kind.

"Nevertheless it is a cause of terror to me to be menaced by such unscrupulous persons. I have sent to New York for my attorneys and will fight this thing to the last. I will force these men into the open and expose them to the world."

Lady Cook has been reduced to the verge of nervous prostration. She has been disturbed at all hours of the day and night and called to the telephone to find one of her enemies at other end of the wire with a threat.

"I have never done anything to deserve this," she sobbed, "I said nothing about it when I first came here. I thought they would stop after a little while, but it has been going on and on till I am in fear of my life.

"I have devoted my life to a most important work for the good of the world. I have sacrificed everything for humanity, and now I am made a nervous wreck by this dastardly work."

WANTED—WILLIAM B. HAYES.

Eccentric Artesia, Cal., Man Disappears, Leaving Louisiana Divorce Suit in Tangled Shape.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Beasley Hayes, formerly of Artesia, Cal., who sprang into notoriety here by marrying Miss Vivien Mitchell of St. Louis, with subsequent divorce suits by each, has mysteriously disappeared, and when his case was called in court today, his attorney, Harry M. Moise, could give no adequate information as to what had become of his client or when he could be produced in court.

His complete disappearance has left the divorce proceedings in a strange state. The last seen of him was at the depot in company with a woman of pronounced brunette type. Many believe her description fits that of Hayes's first wife in California. The court is now trying to find $71,000 in Rock Island Railroad bonds which have been in controversy and a charge of contempt is hanging over his should he suddenly appear.

OKLAHOMA CITY CARMEN QUIT.

Unionite Leaders Call Strike for This Morning, Angered Over Discharge of Two Fellow Members.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a week of wrangling between unionists and officers of the Oklahoma Railway Company, leaders of the former element this morning called a strike on the lines of the street car company to begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow. As a protective measure the company has 300 outside laboring men ready to take charge of the cars.

The fight arose over recognition of the union. When two members of the union were discharged for incompetency, according to the officials of the company, the unionists declared the men were discharged on account of their connection with the organization.

A committee was received yesterday by President A. H. Classen, who told them that he was willing to do everything in his power to help any employe, but did not see why outsiders, referring to visiting unionite leaders, should attempt to dictate to him the manner in which his shops should be run.

The unionists claim to have 163 of the 360 motormen and conductors on their membership list.

DYRENFORTH ESTATE SETTLED.

Widow Gains Portion of Estate of Husband From Whom She Became Estranged—Interesting Will Fight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Jennie Dyrenforth, widow of Gen. Robert G. Dyrenforth, one time commissioner of patents, is to have the property in Mount Pleasant on Sixteenth street, near Piney Branch bridge, claimed as a part of her husband's estate, according to a decree of Justice Barnard, signed today.

By his will, Gen. Dyrenforth sought to disregard the interest in the property belonging to his wife, from whom he had become estranged, and directed the proceeds of the property to be used in the education of his grandson and adopted son, Robert St. George Dyrenforth of Chicago, now 12 years old.

The court's decree recalls the now famous will of Gen. Dyrenforth, in which he gave minute directions as to the education of the boy, who was to perpetuate the name of the testator. Special instructions were given to the boy's guardians to see that he had no communication with his grandfather's widow and that he carefully avoid members of the opposite sex.

Should the boy embrace the Catholic faith, professed by his grandmother, he was to lose all interest in the estate, according to the provisions of the will.

CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

Breach of Promise Suit of Pretty Nurse Against Son of Former Washington Governor Suddenly Ends.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The $100,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Mary E. Cronen, a pretty young nurse, against Walter Baker Moore, prominent clubman of Walla Walla, Wash., and son of Miles C. Moore, former Governor of Washington, was settled today outside of court, and the attorneys of the Portland nurse allowed the case to be dismissed.

When the suit was filed Miss Cronen charged the young clubman and capitalist with failure to marry her. She alleged he had promised to make her his wife last summer. Business required him to postpone the wedding, he told her, and this was done. The nurse allowed him to continue the matter until October, when he told her he had changed his mind about marrying. She asked $100,000 for her injured feelings and his failure to fulfill the promise.

There is nothing in the record of the Circuit Court to show the nature of the settlement. The only action taken yesterday was the consent of Presiding Judge Gantenbein to allow the case to be dismissed. It is understood, however, that Miss Cronen has been well provided for.

Miss Cronen was a former nurse for the mother of Walter Baker Moore and accompanied her on trips spent in Southern California. It was during one of these trips that the son became infatuated with the nurse and she stated

President Calls Extra Sessio to Convene During First Week of April.

Bitterness and Strife Merg Into Smiles and Amity When Gavel Falls.

ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—T Sixty-first Congress, heedless one of the most important legi lative tasks set before it, came to end shortly after noon today.

Within the hour following, Pres dent Taft had issued a proclamati calling the new Congress to meet extraordinary session at noon Tuesday, April 4. He will then su mit for ratification to a House ove whelmingly Democratic and to a Se ate barely Republican, the reciproci agreement with Canada. The McC bill, carrying that agreement into e fect and passed by the House, met t day at the hands of the old Sena the death freely predicted for it. T President, warned, if not entir reconciled to the fate in store for t measure, was at the Capitol to wi ness the obsequies. The bill was n allowed at any time to come up in t Senate for a moment's consideratio

The permanent tariff board bi forced to its passage through a relu tant Senate, at 3:30 o'clock this mor ing, was hurried over to the Hou there to be strangled by a Democrat filibuster.

The President, in the room reserve for him in the Senate lobby, heard t news with resignation.

Congress provided funds to contin the work of the temporary tar board, for another year. It was the request of the Democrats of t House and Senate that President Ta fixed the date of the extra session f April 4. The new Democratic Wa and Means Committee of the Hou which is to serve as the new comm tee on committees, will meet Mond to take up its labors.

CAUCUS ON APRIL 3.

A full caucus of Democratic me bers of the new House will not be h until April 3. In the meantime t plans for the extra session will ha developed.

There is little doubt now that t Democrats of the House will underta to revise at least two or three of t schedules of the Payne-Aldrich ta act, and there is every reason also believe these bills will be favorably r ceived in the new Senate, the increa Democratic and insurgent strength that body giving a majority to the pri ciple of a further revision of the ta downward.

It also is supposed that so long the new schedules do not flagran violate the policy of protection, Pre dent Taft will not withhold his a proval of them. He has announce however, that if a general revision, violation of the protective policy shou be inaugurated, he would not hesita to use the power of his veto.

How long the extra session will l is problematical. While the new Co gress may promptly ratify the re procity agreement, some Democrats a in favor of withholding confirmati until two or three new tariff schedul are ready. If tariff differences shou arise between the new House and t Senate, the session unquestionably w be a long one.

In this connection, however, the i teresting fact developed today that t President has a constitutional right bring the session to an end in case t two houses of Congress can not agr upon a time for adjournment. Such a tion, it is admitted, would be revol tionary and there is thought to be litt likelihood that any President wou care to invoke the power.

EXCITING SCENES.

The old Congress ended amid scen of excitement. In the House, the di cord at times in the closing hours, whe the successful filibuster against t tariff board bill was in progress, b came almost a riot. Representati Johnson of Kentucky, glaring angri at Speaker Cannon, shouted above t general roar of confusion, a challen that but for the Speaker's gray hair he would carry the wordy disagreeme to a more serious conclusion.

The Speaker, his sparse gray ha bristling with rage, declared with blow of his gavel on his desk, "that member need let his gray hair be a b to anything they had to offer."

The House stood up and cheered.

In the Senate a filibuster conducte by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, threa ened the final approval of four of t great appropriation measures up within half an hour of the time set f adjournment. Senators of both parti appealed in vain to Senator Owen stop talking and let the supply bills through. The Senator said he had s out to talk to death the resolution a proving the Constitution of New Me ico and conferring upon that Territo the last rights of Statehood.

alifornia Senator Member of Monetary Commission.

His Unexpected Appointment Causes Changed Plans.

May Open Office in East, Instead of Returning.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclu- ye Dispatch.] By the appointment to- ıy of Senator Frank P. Flint as a ember of the Monetary Commission, llowing yesterday's appointment of cLachlan as a member of that body, alifornia secures two members on the ommission. The salary amounts to 7500 a year, the same as that received y a member of Congress.

Senator Flint's appointment has aused a radical change in his plans. It ad been his purpose to leave for Cali- rnia today, but as there will be a eeting of the commission next week, e will remain to attend it, and it is ore than possible that he will decide o open a law office here or in New ork, as he has been in receipt of some attering offers which he has under se- ous consideration.

While his position on the monetary ommission is important it will leave im considerable time to devote to his rivate affairs, but it requires his pres- nce in Washington for a certain part f the year, and he may find it advisa- le to make this city his headquarters or some time to come.

Congressman McLachlan is the suc- essor on the commission of Congress- an Smith, who, at present, is not in he best of health, and who resigned is berth on the commission with the lea of seeing McLachlan succeed him. Whether McLachlan will maintain his esidence here or in Pasadena he has ot announced publicly.

It is certain that Flint had no idea hat he was to receive this appointment ntil within a very few days, as he had old his house, moved temporarily to a otel, and had concluded all arrange- nents to quit Washington. One of his ast acts was to send boxes of oranges o many of his colleagues as a reminder hat he remembered and appreciated ery many favors which he has been ranted at their hands. In fact, few nembers of Congress are more cor- ially liked here than Flint.

IMPORTANT BILL HANGS FIRE.

EMOCRATS TO OPPOSE REAPPORTIONMENT ACT.

Passage of Measure Means Cut of Representation in Missouri and Indiana With Gains to Republicans in Far West, Necessitating Changes in California.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclu- ive Dispatch.] In the rush of business uring the closing hours Congress ailed to pass the reapportionment bill. here is a suspicion that this was not holly design and it is thought pos- ible when Congress reconvenes the emocrats may successfully oppose all eapportionment for the reason that nder the apportionment there would e a loss of representation to such emocratic States as Indiana and issouri, with a corresponding gain to he Republicans, because of the in- rease in population in the far West. hould a reapportionment be made, alifornia with its three new Con- ressmen resulting therefrom, will ave to rearrange the boundaries of he Congressional districts and this ust be done by act of the Legislature.

Representative Needham today, after aving discussed the matter with other embers of the delegation, said:

"While we are not certain that there ill be a reapportionment, it seems ertain to me that it would be a very ise thing for the Legislature to do s the Oregon Legislature has done, nd pass a law redistricting the State ith the provision that it should go nto effect only if Congress should give he State three more representatives. his law, therefore, would be inopera- ive if Congress takes no action, and in he other event, it would save the ecessity of an extra session of the tate Legislature or possibly the elec- ion of three Congressmen-at-large."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—In the valedictory of Speaker Cannon, who laid down the gavel today after an eventful term in the Speakership, he referred to his selection eight years ago after nearly thirty years' service in the House. He recalled when he first marched down the aisle to become Speaker when the present Senator, John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, introduced him.

"From that time to the present," said Mr. Cannon, "I have never forgotten that my duty to the House was to obey its will and enforce its rules and preside with courtesy and impartiality."

Suggesting that all legislative bodies were controlled by a majority, he prophesied woe to that man or to that minority which refused to abide by and conform to the will of the major-cism leaves with me no heartburnings; and in life, whether it be in church or state, or in legislative bodies, the seeming troubles of those clothed with power and responsibility come not from the majority, but from the minority.

SERVED FOR GENERATION.

I have served in this body for almost a generation, and to me it is the greatest body clothed with power on earth. I have abiding faith that whatever political body is in power the privileges of the House will be maintained as defined in the Constitution. In their maintenance rests the freedom, the security and the liberty of ninety millions of people.

"It is necessary that some method shall be maintained," the Speaker continued, "by which the House can select the best from the great avalanche of bills introduced, and no two men agree at all times as to all the business that shall be considered; so the regulations of the House must be sufficient to enable nearly 400 Representatives to select what business shall be considered.

"I leave this place not with regret. I have performed the duties of this office according to my best judgment under the rules of the House. I do not leave the chair with malice in my heart toward any colleague—toward any member with whom I have served.

"My friend, the Speaker-to-be, the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. Clark, believes this is my departure as Speaker of the House. I agree with him. At the age of almost 75, in the course of nature I could not hope to occupy this great place again and would not if I could; but I am so fond of my friend from Missouri, the Speaker-to-be, that I mean to serve under his gentle rule as a member of the House and to look on."

VERY WIDE AWAKE.

Mr. Cannon ushered in his last day as Speaker of the Republican House with a ringing declaration of his vigor and alertness.

All night the Speaker had ranged through the House chamber and lobbies, sitting for a time at the clerk's desk to sign bills that had been passed, poking fun at members who had gone to sleep on the lounges and in chairs and taking an occasional turn at sitting in his place in the Speaker's chair.

He was there a little after 4 o'clock when Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee arose to ask further consideration on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

"Mr. Speaker," began Mr. Tawney.

"The Speaker is asleep," said some member in an aside to Tawney.

The figure in the Speaker's chair galvanized into action.

"The Speaker is not asleep," he shouted. "The Speaker is very much awake," and his gavel struck the desk with an emphasis that brought men tumbling off the lounges in the cloak room.

It was a night of business, much talk and general farewells among the members. Representative Leonidas F. Livingston of Georgia, defeated for reelection, was called forth as one of the few remaining Confederate soldiers in Congress and bade farewell to his associates after twenty years of service in the House.

MURDER CHARGED NOW.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Death intervened yesterday to change the charge against three section hands of assaulting Joseph Festi, which was to have been heard in Truckee yesterday afternoon, to murder. Festi discharged the men February 23 and that night, it is charged, they waylaid him and beat him with clubs and a pistol. The men were arrested and Festi brought here for treatment at the hospital of the Southern Pacific, in whose employ he served as section boss. He died yesterday from his injuries.

RECLAMATION SERVICE STUNG BY THE SENATE COMMITTEE.

Investigators Declare That Hundreds of Thousands of Uncle Sam's Money Have Been Wasted and That Some of the Schemes in New Mexico and California Are Impossible—A Hot Report.

BY. F. J. DYER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Differences of opinion between members of the Senate Committee on Irrigation have thus far prevented the submission of a report on the investigation of irrigation projects, undertaken by that committee under a resolution by the Senate adopted March 3, 1909. The investigation was duly made by the committee in the fall of 1909, over fifty days being spent in traveling 12,000 miles and visiting all of the twenty-four projects under way from the Canadian to the Mexican borders, and from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean.

The majority of the committee brought in a report which was objectionable to the minority, especially to Senators Newlands and Chamberlain.

Senator Carter, chairman of the Irrigation Committee, made reflections on the integrity, ability and good faith of the Reclamation Service, citing the payment of large sums of money for ditches and water rights in the Klamath, California-Oregon, project, the construction of irrigation works to supply private lands, the construction of "projects" where there proved to be an insufficient supply of water, the apparently high relative cost of examination, administration and maintenance, and other matters which were gone into with considerable detail and in a spirit which the minority believed to be indicative of an unfriendly spirit toward the Reclamation Service.

Because of the determination of the minority that a report which it believed reflected unjustly on the service should not be made public, there was a long deadlock in the committee. This has finally been broken and now the committee is practically ready to report, omitting some of the more objectionable things which were contained in the draft originally submitted by the chairman.

While the committee found that the people who had taken up lands under the various irrigation projects were in general satisfied of the honesty and efficiency of the officers and employees in the Reclamation Service, and while the average cost of $100 an acre for the reclamation of the 500,000 acres actually under irrigation out of the 3,000,000 acres eventually to be irrigated was held to be a reasonable investment in view of the big returns from irrigated lands, it was held that the service had been enjoying too large a measure of independence from supervision and that under the rules established the Secretary of the Interior was reduced to giving but perfunctory approval of such plans and projects as the Reclamation Service saw fit to submit to him. Moreover, it was felt by Senator Carter that with $20,000,000 on hand when the Reclamation Service began its work and with large sums falling automatically into the fund from the sale of public lands and from payments for reclaimed lands, the insistence of Congressmen from various States and Territories for the undertaking of projects in their respective sections led to the expenditure of money unwisely. Only last year it became necessary for Congress to authorize the loan of $20,000,000 to complete projects which had been begun, but which were lagging because funds did not accumulate fast enough to complete them economically. With $7,000,000 coming in annually for the prosecution of the work, the projects in hand required the expenditure of twice that amount of money. So Congress authorized the loan of $20,000,000 more, which will be repaid from the payments by settlers.

The majority thought that the purchase of canals, ditches, water and power rights for the Klamath project for $483,600, besides an additional expenditure of $30,000 to provide power rights estimated to be worth $400,000 in satisfaction of private mill rights of somewhat uncertain value, was not the wisest policy. This project cost $1,748,011 and it embraces 42,000 acres in public ownership, beside 130,000 acres in private ownership.

The assertion that the cost of engineering, administration and examination was excessive was supported by references to the cost of the St. Mary's and Milk River projects. For the former, the total expenditure was $213,279.61, while examination cost $36,731; administration, $34,431; buildings, $19,000; real estate, $14,000; roads, $16,000; telephone line, $1600; contruction of irrigation works, $81,603.36.

The Milk River project cost $318,036.29, of which $110,939.41 went for diversion works, $94,406.10 for the canal system, and the balance for administration, examination buildings, real estate, and so forth. There was difficulty regarding the use of the channel of the Milk River running through Canadian territory for a part of the canal system, and while this was being settled diplomatically and a treaty was being arranged, the Reclamation Service maintained an expensive organization on the ground for a period covering several years.

At Garden City, Kan., a pumping project was constructed at a cost of $370,000 to irrigate 10,000 acres, all in private ownership, and for two years the land owners did not pay the charges for the use of water.

The Buford-Trenton and Williston projects in North Dakota were supplied with water pumped from the Missouri River. The former embraced 1400 acres of public lands and 11,000 acres of private lands. It cost $269,990.39, of which $21,435.12 was for the preliminary survey, $29,069 for engineering expenses, and $12,201.54 for operation and maintenance. The Williston project embraced 443 acres of public and 11,500 acres of private lands, costing $501,173.02. Of this $147,961.60 was for preliminary cost, general expenses, operation, maintenance and buildings.

The Honda, N. M., project, an utter failure, cost $344,058.65. It embraced 240 acres of public and 9760 acres of private lands, and when the reservoir was done there was doubt whether it would hold water, although there was no supply to fill it if it had been water tight.

The majority of the committee is doubtful whether it was wise to buy stock and bonds and rights and privileges as was done at Orland, Cal., and at Carlsbad, N. M. The right to maintain experimental farms is also questioned, and differences between the estimates of engineers as to the cost of water to consumers, and the eventual cost, is commented on.

POLITICAL CHANGES IN CONGRESS MEAN NEW DEAL IN SOCIAL GAME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the expiration of the present Congress comes a complete shifting of the scenes on Washington's social stage. Accustomed as it is to the retirement of social favorites and the arrival of newcomers, Washington society is still somewhat dazed by the fact that an entirely new element in official life is to be reckoned with during the "little season" following Easter. Not since the Civil War, say the old-timers, have there been so many new Senators, many of them comparatively new to political life and strangers to Washington folk.

West Virginia, even with the death of Senator Elkins, and the retiring of Senator Scott, will still occupy a large place on the social stage, for the incoming Senator, Clarence Watson, is a man of large wealth. Mrs. Watson, who is one of the best known horsewomen in the country, will be a can-litically from Washington are Senators Depew, Aldrich, Hale, Beveridge, Burrows and Carter.

The number of comparatively young men who will be members of the next Senate promises to add much interest to official society. Mrs. Pomerene, wife of the new Senator from Ohio, is a personage who is already exciting much interest in official circles.

Mrs. Townsend of Michigan, whose husband succeeds Senator Burrows, has made many friends during her residence of several years as the wife of a Representative.

Mrs. Nathaniel Bryan, wife of the new Senator from Florida, has a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Luke Lea, wife of the senatorial prodigy from Tennessee, one of the youngest men ever elected to the Senate, is bountiful, vivacious and fond of entertaining.

In the lower house are a number of its brightest luminaries, who are lost to society through the political up-

HOT BILL FIGHT ENDS SESSION.

Riotous Scenes Mark Closing Hours in House.

Cannon Calls Kentuckian Who Laments His Age.

Bitterness Gives Way Before Champ Clark's Tribute.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Veterans say that the riotous scenes in the House before the tariff board bill was withdrawn surpassed in violence and turmoil those accompanying the closing of any recent session of that body. The determination of the Democrats to prevent the passage of the tariff board bill, which had passed the Senate early in the day, exhibited itself in a most persistent filibuster, which at times looked almost like the famous "rules fight" of last spring.

Representative Johnson of Kentucky, for instance, stood and loudly expressed his regret that the Speaker "was not a younger man."

The Speaker promptly replied that he would not take advantage of his age. The House greeted the interchange with tumultuous cheering.

DEMOCRATS KILL TIME.

There was a series of roll calls on parliamentary motions, every one of which meant the loss of more than half an hour. At last while the vote was being taken on the resolution to force the bill to passage, Republican leader Payne, realizing both the impracticability of reaching a favorable vote and the narrow margin of time before the noon adjournment, asked the attention of the House and in a brief statement, withdrew the bill.

This probably eliminated the tariff board legislation for a long time to come for the Democrats, who accomplished its defeat, will control the House in the coming Sixty-second Congress.

The House then turned its attention to the appropriation bills. The clock was set back half an hour and in strong contrast with the turbulent scenes which had gone before, the House devoted itself to an exchange of courtesies. These were the more notable by reason of the fact that they marked the retirement of the venerable Speaker, Joseph G. Cannon, and the passing of the House control from a powerful Republican majority to a Democratic majority even larger.

First, Speaker Cannon asked Mr. Underwood of Alabama, who will head the Ways and Means Committee of the new House, to take the chair, and Mr. Cannon took a seat among his colleagues. Then Speaker-to-be Clark offered a resolution paying a high personal tribute to the retiring Speaker and Acting Speaker Underwood put the resolution before the House, which adopted it unanimously.

CLARK THROWS BOUQUET.

In his speech Mr. Clark characterized Speaker Cannon as "a great historical character."

Mr. Clark said in part:

"It does not make a particle of difference whether we like him or dislike him, whether we endorse what he has done in whole or in part or not at all. He is a man with whom the historian will deal in days to come and he will occupy a large space.

"Human nature is a very curious and unreliable institution. Under stress of circumstances and aggravation good men say what in good humor they never would dream of saying. Courteous men when angry will act discourteously. Men who are ordinarily just when in temper will be unjust.

"And while we do not endorse everything that Speaker Cannon has said, and while perhaps he and all the rest of us would need to ask that some of our verbal sins, at least, should be forgiven, I offer this resolution without retracting anything from the principles that we have advocated in this Congress or any other, without apologizing to any mortal man for the talk of the minority in this House during this Congress; and according to the others, the same honesty and patriotism that we claim for ourselves, I believe this resolution is just and ought to pass.

"I am certain when the heat of the occasion is passing, when we come to reflect on it, that we all wish for the retiring Speaker peace, plenty, prosperity, happiness and length of day."

The resolution provided for a committee of two to notify Mr. Cannon of the adoption of the resolution and to escort him back to the rostrum.

Acting Speaker Underwood appointed Mr. Clark and Mr. Mann of Illinois.

CHEER CLARK AND CANNON.

Down the main aisle, watched by a great crowd that overflowed the galleries and even spread into all the available space between the railing and the rear of the members seats' of the floor, while members of both parties cheered and handkerchiefs waved, Mr. Cannon with Mr. Clark holding his arm and Mr. Mann close beside, marched up to the rostrum.

There Mr. Clark introduced to the House "Our old familiar friend, the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as 'Uncle Joe.'"

"He is the second man in the history of the government to serve as Speaker of the House as long as eight years," said Mr. Clark, "and he is the only man in the history of the republic that ever served in the House thirty-six years. In consecutive service he leads them all. In length of service he is exceeded by Henry Clay alone."

Alaska Census Enumerator Who Lost Time by Giving Assistance to Suffering Miner Wins Fight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Census Director Durand cut down by $303, the expense of Adolph J. Hackmeier, a San Franciscan who served as a supervisor in Alaska last spring, the director very pointedly charging that the man had been loafing while he should have been enumerating. Today Durand made a new order allowing the account in full and privately he is probably sending an apology.

It appears that Hackmeier, in making his way from one Indian tribe to another, came upon a miner lying beside the trail with feet frozen, and in utterly helpless condition. The prospector had been overwhelmed in a storm and at the time of discovery was near death. Hackmeier halted his trip and spent several weeks caring for the man and bringing him back to health.

Chinese Legation at Washington Declares Manchuria Is Quiet and There Is no Hostility to Foreigners.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Reports of an anti-foreign uprising in Manchuria, published today, drew a vigorous denial from the Chinese legation here. In a statement to the Associated Press, the legation says:

"The Chinese legation absolutely denies the report from St. Petersburg, published this morning, that there is a recrudescence of the Boxer trouble in Manchuria.

"As a matter of fact, the country is quiet and peaceful and the people are pursuing, without the slightest disturbance, their ordinary vocations. There is no hostility whatever to foreigners."

SLAVEY WRITES STORY OF LIFE.

IS ACCUSED OF POISONING AN ELDER SISTER.

Ohio Girl, Aged Seventeen, Now in Ohio Insane Asylum, Tells of Miseries She Underwent as Servant to Relative—Denies Killing, But Admits Buying Poison.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CANTON (O.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Katie Manz, the 17-year-old girl now in the asylum at Massillon, charged with the murder of her sister Elizabeth, has written her life story.

The autobiography was prepared while the girl was a prisoner here for nearly a year. It was found today hidden in a jail box.

First stating that her story is all true, Katie says she was born in 1894, her mother dying when the girl was but a 19-months-old babe. She was taken in charge of a widow, Catherine Militor, who was a foster-mother to her for some years.

When this woman died Katie had to return home with her sister, Elizabeth. Then, according to Katie, her troubles began. She says:

"I went to school, but when I came home at noon there was no dinner ready, no warm coffee and the breakfast dishes were waiting to be washed, as Elizabeth was never up in the morning when I went to school.

"There were many slaps and kicks which I could never account for and I knew I had not done anything to deserve them.

"Then I had to get up at 5 o'clock and get breakfast and make the beds before I got ready for school and I was always late, of course.

"Elizabeth hated me and considered me as a sort of a slave. I bought the poison from which Elizabeth died, but God knows that I did not kill her. She sent me for the poison. She told me to sign my name and to tell them that if they asked me what I wanted it for that I wanted it to kill a dog."

Here Miss Manz tells how she left home to do some errands for her sister on the morning of March 18, 1910. When she returned in the afternoon, she found her sister lying on the kitchen floor, thought she was asleep, and went out.

A few minutes later, she says, she thought it strange that Elizabeth did not come to dinner, and went to awaken her and found her dead.

EDUCATION BONE FOR CONTENTION.

SHALL FIELD GRANDSONS LEARN AT HOME OR ABROAD?

Mrs. M. Baldwin Drummond, Who Was Wife of Son of Famous Chicago Mercantile Prince, Said to Be Involved in Controversy With Trustees of Vast Estate.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Waldin Drummond, formerly Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., and her husband, who are stopping at the Blackstone Hotel, today declined to discuss stories cabled from England to the effect that they were here to settle an issue affecting the education of Mrs. Field's two sons, by her first marriage, Marshall Field III and Henry Field, who are now at Eton.

The disposition of the great estate left by Marshall Field, to the children of his late son, Marshall Field, Jr., is declared to be involved in a disagreement between Mrs. Drummond and the trustees as to the propriety of educating the grandsons of Marshall Field in English colleges.

A clause in the will relating to the education of the children gives the executors wide discretion, but Arthur B. Jones, one of the trustees and a close personal friend of Mrs. Drummond denied that there was any intention of exercising an arbitrary influence in the matter.

"There is nothing in the will that makes it obligatory upon Mrs. Drummond to give her children an American education," said Mr. Jones. "It is probable that the late Marshall Field would have preferred that his grandsons be educated in America, but the executors have not attempted to coerce Mrs. Drummond in the matter."

Refers Humorously at Chicago Press Club Luncheon to Extinction of His Presidential Ambitions.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—Replying to a humorous sally of the toastmaster at a Press Club luncheon here today, William Jennings Bryan reiterated the statement that he would not be a candidate for office again.

Dr. Frank Lydston, the toastmaster, had remarked facetiously that the running for office of Col. Bryan had become an institution rather than an instance.

Bryan, in his reply, declared that Roosevelt and Taft had borrowed Democratic doctrines "so," said he, "why should I seek the hardships of the White House when I can get other men willing to carry out my policies? Do not think, however, that because I am not a candidate for office I am out of politics."

Physicians Use Puritas.

Hundreds of Los Angeles Practitioners Use and Recommend Puritas Distilled Water.

They Know How Essential to Health Pure Drinking Water Is, and Recognize the Uniform Purity of Puritas.

Perhaps you are one of the many people who drink Puritas Distilled Water. If so, you have realized its great health value for yourself. Chances are you have recommended Puritas to your friends—for that is a way that many regular Puritas users have.

Yet even you would be surprised to know how widely recognized the value of Puritas Distilled Water is today. You would be surprised at the large number of Physicians who use Puritas regularly and prescribe it in their practice. Literally, there are hundreds of them—and at practically every leading Hospital in Los Angeles today Puritas is regularly used.

It is only logical, this wide use of Puritas. For, really, Puritas is the only reliably pure water obtainable hereabouts.

You know, our natural waters in Southern California contain large amounts of minerals. These are entirely dissolved in the water, and cannot be seen by the eye. Chemical test proves their presence—in fact, you can often detect them in the "brackish" taste of the water.

To take this mineralized water into the system regularly is a dangerous thing to do. The body cannot assimilate minerals in this form. They are deposited in the arteries, becoming a fertile cause of rheumatic and kidney troubles. Physicians recognize this—and again and again they warn patients with rheumatic tendencies to leave such waters alone.

Could you have analyses of the many so-called "table waters" that are peddled about the city, you would find, in most instances, considerable amounts of foreign matter in them. In fact, such waters are often sold just because of their mineral contents—the idea being that these minerals afford relief when the body is diseased in certain ways.

But what do you want when you are thirsty? You want water—and you want it PURE. Now, properly distilled water is the only really pure water—that's a fact recognized everywhere. You get this—just pure water, and nothing else—in Puritas Distilled Water.

We distill Puritas twice, for we have found that double distillation is necessary to water purity. Test any demijohn of Puritas anywhere—test it in any way. If it's Puritas, you'll find it pure—you can rely upon that.

We aerate Puritas with pure ozone, secured by passing a current of electricity through filtered air. The water is sparkling and delicious to the palate—carrying as much ozone as the pure, "soft" water will take up.

We bottle Puritas in clean glass demijohns, even wrapping the corks in foil in order that impure air, filtering through a porous cork may not contaminate the pure water within.

Puritas is so inexpensive that every family can well afford to have it. Five gallons cost but 40c, delivered within the old city boundary lines. At outside points the cost is a trifle more, owing to the long haul. Regular Puritas customers purchase Coupon Books, thus securing the pure water at a discount.

When you telephone, ask us about these—Home 10053; Sunset Main 8191.

Puritas is obtainable through dealers in most towns in Southern California. If you are unable to secure it easily, do not accept any substitute for Puritas. Just communicate with us, and we will see that you are supplied.

Hired Burglars to Break Into Home as Spies.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Admitting he had engaged John C. Rollar and Samuel Lasser to enter his home as burglars to secure evidence against his wife on which to base a suit for divorce, Dr. B. L. McPike, No. 1844 Golden Gate avenue, today asked that the charges of burglary against the two men be dismissed.

Mrs. McPike, who voluntarily took the witness stand in Police Court this morning, insisted that the request be granted, and the charges were accordingly dismissed. The doctor evidently squared it with his spouse by saying he wanted to test her to show that stories of her misconduct which he had heard had no foundation.

Rollar and Lasser undertook the contract, they declare, in order to secure evidence against the physician's eight-months' bride, on which Dr. McPike might establish grounds for divorce.

Mrs. McPike, a handsome brunette, 22 years old, denounces both Rollar and Lasser as scheming blackmailers and expresses implicit faith in her husband.

MARRIED EASY; DIVORCED EASY.

Daughter of United States Army Officer Weds in South Carolina and Gains Freedom in Reno.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Margaret L. Jones, daughter of Col. T. W. Jones, of the United States Army, stationed at Fort Ethan Allan, went to the easiest State in the Union to get married and came to the easiest State in the Union to get a divorce.

Margaret was only 18 when she eloped with Robert E. Bowles, Jr. She left Asheville, N. C., and went to Spartanburg, S. C., where no license is required, neither does a divorce law exist. Here Bowles's father had a paint shop. The course of true love did not run smoothly and within four days after the marriage the bride was compelled to wire her father to continue her allowance, which had been cut off at the time she was married. Her young husband did not support her and finally she left him.

She testified that he took all her money in 1908 to go to Washington to the inauguration and she was compelled to seek her father's home. She came West with her father and visited her grandmother in Long Beach before coming to Reno to secure a residence. She admitted that her purpose in coming here was to secure a residence for the purpose of securing a divorce, but afterward learned that this did not constitute a bonafide residence, so, as she had no other place she could call home, she believed Nevada was as much her home as anywhere else.

Seattle Commercial Club Declares Sum Is Necessary for Relief of Famine-Stricken China.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, March 4.—The following appeal to the people of the United States was made by the China Relief Committee of the Seattle Commercial Club today:

"The loading and dispatching of the transport Buford marks but the first stage in the work undertaken by this club. During the next few weeks it purposes to push vigorously its campaign for cash contributions and at frequent intervals remit the proceeds by cable to Amos B. Wilder, American Consul-General at Shanghai, who represents the Red Cross and this club in the distribution of money and supplies. There will be the most urgent need for relief till the next crop can be harvested in north China, which will be late in June. To prevent an appalling death rate, at least $100,000 should be cabled to that country during the next thirty days. The Commercial Club sets for itself the task of raising the major portion of this amount, and it appeals to people in every quarter of the Union to aid it. The most modest sum, if given quickly, will help to save untold lives. All contributions should be made payable to the Seattle Commercial Club, Seattle."

TRIBUTE TO GOOD MAN.

PRAISE FOR W. H. CORBETT.

W. H. Corbett.

W. H. Corbett, head of the Willamette Iron Works, Portland, Or., and prominently identified with the Employers' Association of Oregon, who died recently in the northern city, came to the Pacific Slope some eleven years ago.

He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1869, his father being C. H. Corbett, vice-president of the Continental Iron Works of that city, a concern which built a number of the vessels used during the Civil War.

At the age of 16 years, young Corbett left home, going to New Haven, Ct., where he learned the machinist trade. After this he attended Stevens Institute, Hoboken, graduating as valedictorian of his class. He then entered into partnership with a classmate, maintaining an office in general engineering in New York for two years, leaving this to come to the Pacific Slope and take over the Willamette Iron Works, then an insolvent concern. Since his connection with the enterprise he developed a logging engine unsurpassed by any at the present day. In the last three years the firm had branched out along marine lines, building a number of vessels now in service on Puget Sound waters.

Two years ago the Oregon Drydock Company was organized, which is a large institution, he being made president and manager. He was director of the Independent Foundry Company, which is the largest and best-equipped foundry in the Northwest, probably the Pacific Coast.

He was the first president of the United Metal Trades Association of the Pacific Coast, and the Employers' Association of Oregon; director of the Chamber of Commerce; active in the Rotary Club; first vice-president of the Mechanical Engineers' Society of the Northwest; vice-president of the National Association of Manufacturers; member of the Arlington and Commercial clubs; in fact, a leader in any line that he took up.

He leaves a wife, who was Miss Ethel Webster of New York; two daughters, aged 10 and 6; his brother, E. H. Corbett of this city; a sister in Minneapolis; a brother in New York, and a father, who is still connected with the Continental Iron Works.

Resolutions have been passed by the United Metal Trades Association, the Employers' Association, Chamber of Commerce, Commercial Club and Manufacturers' Association, the Rotary Club, Society of Engineers and one by his workmen which folows:

"Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His wisdom, to call from his earthly home, to his heavenly home, W. H. Corbett, and,

"Whereas, as our employer, he had our utmost respect as a gentleman, and we regarded him as our friend; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the employees of the Willamette Iron and Steel Works, wish to express to his family our heartfelt sympathy at the death of W. H. Corbett. He was not only our employer, but was at heart our friend, and did everything he could for his employees that was possible for man to do toward his fellow-men."

From the National Manufacturers' Association came the following telegram:

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform. We can do no more than to hope that in some manner beyond our ability to comprehend the removal by death of this grand exponent of right and justice will enure to maintaining the principles for which he so bravely fought.

"Please convey to his bereaved family, and to his associates, the deep sympathy of the National Association of Manufacturers and myself personally. The Van Cleave of the Pacific Coast has gone from our counsel and help in the battle for industrial freedom.

NORTH LINE PLANS WORK.

New Tacoma Cut-off Promises to Be Largest Piece of Construction in West This Year.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas Cooper, assistant to President Elliot of the Northern Pacific Railway, announces today that work will be started at once upon construction of a Northern Pacific cut-off forty-one miles long between Tacoma's water front and Tenino on the Tacoma-Portland division.

Right of way around the water front of Tacoma has been acquired within the last four years at a cost of $2,500,000. Construction of the line involves very heavy cutting and filling. It will cost $4,500,000 more.

Two tunnels will be bored under Point Defiance, one 400 and the other 4400 feet.

The new line will have a maximum grade of three-tenths of one per cent., and minimum curvature.

President Elliott, who is now in New York, induced Northern Pacific directors this week to authorize the beginning of work on the Point Defiance line. It will be the largest piece of construction work started by the Northern Pacific in the West this year.

The line will be double-tracked. Right of way was purchased wide enough for a four-track line.

The new road will be used jointly by the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Harriman roads. The village of Ruston, above the Tacoma smelter, has refused to give a franchise for a tunnel right beneath the town. The company has appealed to the State Railway Commission to break the deadlock of Ruston Council on this project.

BARES DEAD MAN'S SECRET.

Brother of Slain Sea Captain at Tacoma Exposes Man Accused by Victim on Death Bed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Weighted by the feeling that he was delaying justice in allowing his brother's slayer to go unpunished, Carl T. Blom, brother of Capt. Tervald D. Blom, who was murdered in Wright Park last September, broke down today and told the name of the alleged murderer. The dying sea-captain whispered the name of his slayer to his brother while he lay on a cot at the Fannie Paddock Hospital, the brother says.

The name and all evidence able to be gathered, is in the hands of the prosecuting attorney and if further evidence can be obtained, the man will be arrested. He is still living in Tacoma.

Carl Blom withheld on the witness stand at the Coroner's inquest the fact that he had given him this information. He says his brother swore him to secrecy but that the knowledge that the murderer was going unpunished has hung on his shoulders so heavily that he was forced to break the pledge. Prosecuting Attorney McMurray said today he has gathered all the evidence available, and that although it points as a terrible accusation against the suspected man, there is not yet sufficient circumstantial evidence to warrant an arrest.

NEVADA LEGISLATORS SEEK TO MAKE DIVORCES STILL EASIER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CARSON (Nev.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Emboldened by their success in staving off a limitation of the freedom with which divorces are granted in Nevada, the opponents of the recent anti-divorce legislation which has been killed have taken the offensive and two measures have been introduced in the State Assembly defining what a "residence" really means.

Jones of Washoe county fathers one bill and Coppernoll of Lander county is the father of the second. The latter provides that a person may acquire a residence within the State by declaring his or her intention of staying in Nevada a major part of six months. After an affidavit to this effect is filed and the statutory six months have expired then there will be no question as to the fact of bona fide residence.

This action follows upon the decisions laid down by District Judge Orr, who has dismissed many cases recently where it was shown that the purpose of the plaintiff was merely to establish a residence for the purpose of securing a divorce.

Coppernoll's bill allows the divorcee to leave the State at all times, the only restriction being that the greatest portion of the six months' residence must be spent in Nevada. This is even freer than under the old order of things.

Jones's bill is not as liberal in this way, but is practically the same as the Coppernoll bill otherwise.

RALPH LEAVITT'S LAWYER MOVES AND WINS HIS OWN DISBARMENT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Frank H. Holzheimer having moved for an order striking his name from the roll of attorneys of this court and the court being fully advised in the premises, it is now here ordered that the name of said Frank H. Holzheimer be stricken from the rolls of attorneys."

This was entered today on the judgment rolls of the State Supreme Court records. Earlier in the afternoon a motion which created a sensation had been filed by Holzheimer reading simply:

"Now comes Frank H. Holzheimer and moves the court to strike his name from the rolls of attorneys admitted to practice law in the State of Washington."

When the King County Bar Association recently brought proceedings to disbar Holzheimer, a deputy in former Prosecuting Attorney Vandeveer's offices, a petition was circulated among the members in his behalf. This petition asked the Bar Association as a whole to withdraw the proceedings if Holzheimer would move to have his name stricken from the rolls of lawyers in this State. The purpose of this was to make it possible for him to practice in some other State, which he could not do if he had been disbarred on proceedings by the association.

Acting on the petition and Holzheimer's agreement to have his name withdrawn the Bar Association had the proceedings dismissed. Holzheimer was charged in the dismissed proceedings with soliciting and accepting a bribe of $500 in August, 1909, at Los Angeles in consideration of dismissing extradition proceedings then pending against Ralph J. Leavitt, charged with manslaughter in Seattle in running down and killing a street sweeper.

Worse Than Death.

ONE MAN CRIPPLED, ONE INSANE AS RESULT OF IDAHO BLIZZARD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SILVER CITY (Idaho) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Worse than death is the fate of Charles Headum and Henry Stephens, two prominent citizens of Silver City, who were brought to their homes Thursday after having battled with a mountain blizzard for seventy-six hours. Headum suffered the loss of his feet, hands and ears. Stephens is a maniac.

The men left a week ago for a mine in the mountains. On their return trip a blizzard caught them and they became lost. The snow was from four feet on the level to eight feet in the gulches. After wandering for twelve hours nearly frozen, they dismounted and endeavored to build a fire, all their efforts ending in failure.

Feeling that to remain quiet meant sure death, the men then tried to find their way down the mountain. Stephens, the weaker, finally lay down and waited for death, but his companion, by persuasion, threats of violence and taunts finally succeeded in starting the sufferer on his way and for a few short hours they struggled forward, only to fall exhausted.

When searchers found them Stephens was wandering aimlessly around in the deep snow, crooning to himself. Headum was lying face downward in a huge drift. Not far away were the horses, dead.

Both men may die. If Headum lives he will be a hopeless cripple. Stephens, it is feared, is hopelessly insane.

MEXICO.

excitement than he showed over my arrest. He gave the command "Fronte!" (Forward!) and his company of fifty beggar band formed in battle line with their faces to the northwest, where the rebels were thought to be.

CHANCE TO BE SHOT.

The firing continued for a few minutes and I thought I was going to see a little fight between the Maderists and the Porlrios at close range. My pleasurable anticipation was spoiled when the grouchy captain turned to my fat guard, who had a front tooth missing, and gave him a command in Spanish to load his gun and shoot me if I tried to escape, and if he allowed me to escape he would be shot. This knocked all the romance out of the experience for me.

While I had no intention of running just then, there is no law in Texas against running, and I did not like the idea of having this inalienable right of an American citizen and a Texan denied. The lieutenant ordered me to "Fronte!" along with his tattered troopers and I was placed in the front ranks of the skirmish line which was now moving forward in open order in response to the trumpet call blown by the commanding officer's bugler.

We hiked up hills and down arroyas, over sand, sagebrush and cactus, the sandals of the federal soldiers being little or no protecion from the rough rocky ground. We marched in this order for more than an hour with a second file of soldiers in the rear in command of the first captain. Six mounted rurale police acted as scouts and rode up the canyons and over the hill to locate the enemy.

After searching until sundown the order for retreat was blown and the 120 soldiers of the command formed in the mouth of the canyon without having seen a single insurrecto. Some thirty rifle cartridges were picked up by the scouts, but they may have been dropped there by Orozco's men when they were at the smelter before.

TO MAKE A ROMAN HOLIDAY.

I was placed at the head of the defile and marched to the river opposite the American side and in plain view of the big crowd of spectators who had gathered at the river, expecting a return engagement of the battle of Smelter Hill, total deaths, two poor cavalry horses. The command was halted at the river and allowed to drink of the muddy river water. I took a long shot at the canteen of a private whose claim to fame was that he had shoes on his feet, probably taken from a dead insurrecto at Cierro Prieto.

It was then after dark and we marched into Juarez by way of the river road, the guards keeping a close watch on me while passing the river to prevent my escaping to the American side. An emergency Red Cross hospital that had been established just across the river on the American side, could be seen plainly, but the man in charge was too busy hurling vile names at the troops to pay any attention to me.

Arriving in Juarez I was taken to the cuartel, where the Twentieth Regiment is encamped, was given back my pocket knife which, had been taken at the time the search was made. I was then led off down a side street. I expected to be locked up along with Converse and Blatt in the Juarez jail, but before taking me there they escorted me to General Navarro's headquarters at Cowboy Park. After a half hour's explaining through an interpreter, I had refused to talk Spanish because I was afraid of being misunderstood. I was made to tell my story all over again, explain how I happened to be out there, what the pictures were and why I had them.

RELEASED AT LAST.

Then Gen. Navarro took my case under advisement and finally decided to let me return to the American side. In gratitude I offered him the copy of the magazine with his picture in it, but he said in Spanish that he never read the magazines. I had been for five hours under arrest as a prisoner of war, had had nothing to eat since morning, had ruined a good pair of shoes and had marched over more than twenty miles of territory to get this story.

Returning to Juarez, after the Federals had informed me that I was to be locked in the Juarez jail for seven hours incommunicado before I could even see any of my friends, I consoled myself that I could get a crackerjack interview with Lawrence Converse, the Glendora, Cal., boy, who is being held on the charge of sedition, with Edwin Blatt. But as darkness approached and we neared Juarez I decided to take an afternoon off and call on Converse as the more convenient way of getting the information; besides the idea of remaining in the jail even over night was not the most pleasant for it is filled with the thugs, thieves and murderers of northern Mexico, to say nothing of the vermin which infest it.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Arrested on Forgery Charge.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 4.—Fred R. Hatfield, alias William F. Lawton, was arrested late last night in the lobby of a local hotel charged with forging a check at Winkelman, Ariz., a few days ago. The arrest was made by a deputy sheriff and J. R. Shelton, a Los Angeles detective, who had traced Hatfield from the latter city, where he is wanted on a similar charge. Hatfield it is said, was already on probation for a similar offense at the time he forged a check for $100 in Los Angeles. Hatfield's parents live at Sierra Madre, Cal.

Smuggler Indicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—In an indictment returned by the Federal grand jury here yesterday a charge of conspiring to defraud the customs [illegible] laid against W. A. Wilson, an importer of oriental goods, whose partner, Carl J. Cutting, committed suicide when the accusations against his firm were first published. The partners are alleged to have plotted with G. Komigo, a merchant of Japan to have goods from the Orient passed through the customs at a valuation far below the real worth.

"Never Hurts a Bit"

Painless Operations on Teeth depend largely on the man who uses the instrument. If he is careless, irritable or unsympathetic, he will inflict pain frequently, no matter what methods are at hand to avert it. Patience and gentleness are as necessary as skill and science in dealing with agony.

For this reason members of my staff are selected not only for their skill but for patience and gentleness, and they are required to give special care and extra time to the nervous and sensitive.

I know from personal experience the value of careful, gentle and sympathetic manipulation.

And not only do my operators prepare teeth for filling and crowning painlessly, but they can cut entirely down to a live pulp (nerve) when necessary and remove it without pain. Indeed, the patient would never suspect that they were operating on a nerve if they did not tell him. My method has entirely revolutionized the old and painful way.

Now if you will take the time to visit my office and hold a consultation with me I am sure I can convince you that I am the Dentist you should patronize. Don't delay—come today.

Searchers for Missing Oregon Photographer Think He Slipped Into Extinct Volcano on Finding Duffle.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FORT KLAMATH Or.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the body of B. B. Bakowski, the Bend, Or. photographer is in the water of Crater Lake or buried beneath the deep snow heaped around the extinct volcano, is the opinion of a searching party in quest of the daring man.

H. E. Lomyer, member of the last searching party, stated on returning here, they found the outfit Bakowski took with, him with the exception of his camera and snowshoes and they believe the man has perished.

In searching the rim of the crater and the buildings erected for the accommodation of tourists, the party discovered a tunnel in the snow which contained all of Bakowski's duffle except his camera.

In a telescope valise were found three exposed film rolls and about sixty unexposed. The exposed films were developed to learn if possible where Bakowski was at the time he took the pictures. The case of Bakowski's camera was found near the rim of the crater and searchers think he ventured too near the rim in order to get a picture of the lake and slipped down the steep snow-covered sides.

FIGHT OVER BIG ESTATE.

GIRL'S GUARDIAN RESIGNS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After four years as guardian of Elizabeth Parker Hastings and eight years in charge of her California estate, Attorney Louis M. Hoefler today tendered his resignation, and Mrs. John F. Swift, widow of the late Minister to China, and well known in the social and business world of San Francisco, will be named to succeed Hoefler and take charge of the incompetent's wealth. Hoefler resigns, he says, on account of press of business, but some influence may have been exerted by suits brought by Daniel, the girl's step-father, to have Hoefler removed and Miss Hastings declared competent. The California relatives of the girl agreed to have Mrs. Swift act. They are united in fighting Daniel's effort to handle her estate.

Mme. de La Revere Expert on Feminine Beauty Tells American Women Free, How to Perfectly Develop the Bust.

"I am ready to tell free to any woman who will write me, how the bust may positively be developed to luxuriant fullness and how to fill out the hollows of the neck, by what is admitted to be the only scientific, certain method known.

"I am willing to tell you free of any charge, whatever, full particulars of this remarkable method. You will be surprised how simply it can be done regardless of the cause of the lack of development."

"I know of scores of women who after following my suggestions, have enjoyed what they never before believed possible, a bust development of 6 to 7 inches in [illegible] of four to six weeks.

"Whether you have never had development, or the development you once had lost from any cause, or the bust lacks firmness and proper beauty, you may in a few weeks time be completely transformed, and be a surprise even to yourself—much more so to your friends.

HICAGO, March 4.—[Exclusive Disch.] County Judge Owens will be ed on Monday to order a recount the votes cast at the primary last sday for the Democratic candidates the Mayoralty nomination. The rest will be made by attorneys actfor Edward F. Dunne, who insists t such a recount will show that he not Carter H. Harrison received lurality of the Democratic vote. the county judge ordered a rent of all the precincts, or a part of m, if an agreement to that effect can be reached—and it is believed by Mr. Dunne's friends Judge Owens will do so—that will end all talk of an independent candidacy. If the county judge refuses to grant the petition it is said an independent candidacy becomes a possibility.

Mr. Dunne in a statement makes the charge that there were many irregularities, if no acts of actual corruption, in the primaries and demands a recount, he says, to remove all doubt from the minds of Democrats as to the honesty of the primary.

Petitions for independent candidates must be filed before midnight next Friday. Such a petition for the Mayoralty must have the names of nearly 7000 voters who took no part in the primary last Tuesday.

VALLEJO, March 4.—Mrs. Clara Perkins Constance, accused of the murder of her husband, Thomas F. Constance, on February 4, was discharged from custody today at the close of her preliminary examination. Justice Arthur Lindenauer said that the testimony failed to show that murder had been committed. The shooting of Constance was the result of a family quarrel and Mrs. Constance pleaded self-defense.

The fortieth ballot for United States Senator from New York showed no quorum.

Pimples Off In 5 Days

The New Calcium Sulphide Treatment Does Wonders to Every Kind of Skin Eruption.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it today, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggists.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

ONDON, March 4.—[Exclusive Disch.] In spite of the violent quarrel Portugal between the two factions Socialists, headed respectively by hor Costa and Senhor Camacho, ing members of the provisional ernment, public business is being ducted in Lisbon, according to the st advices from that city, with a ble degree of regard to the real fare of the young republic.

tories of plottings for the restora- of the Braganzas find their way the "yellow journals" of Paris Madrid, but the monarchical elet is altogether too weak and disnized for a formidable attempt of character. It is likely long to ren so.

though strikes have been frequent ng the last four months the Lis- populace continues enthusiastic in support of the new regime, and the cated classes are putting forth spe- efforts to prepare the illiterate the elections to the national as- bly next month, under an electoral rm act well adapted to meet the ue demands of the situation.

ch popular disturbances as occur time to time are due in the main e considerable increase in the cost iving that followed the establisht of the republic and to a rise of es consequent on the strikes and more thorough manner in which customs are now collected.

present the prospect is that the ing Cabinet will be able to hold until the permanent government ces the provisional in April. The uguese moderates, though not fied with it, prefer it greatly to "philosopher cabinet" that took affairs from King Manuel's ad- rs and do not believe a temporary essor would be more competent or ient.

ANOTHER DUEL OVER PLAY.

Two Frenchmen Satisfy Honor by Pistols, Swords and Coffee for Two.

[Associated Press Night Report.]

PARIS, March 4.—Leonard Daugel had another duel today, growing out of the bitterness engendered by the present action of Henry Bernstein's "Apres Moi" at the Comedie Francaise. His opponent was Georges Claretie, a son of the administrator of the theater.

The latter took offense at articles criticising the management of the house which had been published by Daugel.

The men met at noon and exchanged four shots with pistols at twenty-five paces. Neither was wounded and they resumed the combat with swords. Claretie received a thrust in the left breast. The wound will not prove fatal.

Epidemic.

HAWAII TO ASK FEDERAL AID.

CHOLERA SITUATION ALARMS TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT.

Two Deaths and Three New Cases in Twenty-four Hours in Honolulu Disturbs Island Population—Fifteen People Are Dead Out of Eighteen Stricken.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

HONOLULU, March 4.—It is believed that the Territorial Legislature, which is now in session, will ask the Federal government to take charge of the cholera situation in Honolulu. Two more deaths and three new cases in the last twenty-four hours, brings the total up to eighteen cases and fifteen deaths, the three persons taken ill today being still alive.

The Legislature appropriated $25,000 today as an emergency fund for the Board of Health, with which to handle the epidemic. The Legislature also will pass a bill giving the health authorities full power to enforce sanitary regulations, the present laws being ineffective in this emergency.

The opinion is general that the Territorial authorities should ask the Federal government to take charge of the fight against the cholera and that this alone will prevent a serious situation. The resources of the Territory are admittedly inadequate to cope properly with the situation, but confidence is expressed that the Federal health authorities would quickly stamp out the epidemic. This action, it is declared, also would tend to create confidence in the minds of tourists.

The health authorities closed a Japanese dairy today as a source of infection. Additional laborers have been put to work cleaning up the city.

The United States revenue cutter Thetis is co-operating by keeping Japanese sampans from carrying fish or fresh vegetables from Honolulu to other islands.

UNIFORM DISCRIMINATION.

SEATTLE, March 4.—The action of the management of a skating rink in refusing admittance to sailors from the cruisers Maryland and West Virginia, because they were in uniform, has been called to the attention of Mayor George Dilling in a letter from the commander of the Maryland and the adjutant of the army and navy union garrison on that vessel. Mayor Dilling has written the naval officer that he will do everything in his power to see that the men of the United States navy are not discriminated against while in Seattle and yesterday called upon the Chief of Police to make a thorough investigation of the complaint.

RENCH PLAY WITHDRAWN AND BLOODY PARIS RIOTS AVERTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ARIS, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The withdrawal of M. Bernstein's play, "Apres Moi," fro mthe edie Franciase last night has rted what was expected to develop bloody rits. The royalists con- r the success of their anti-Jewish onstrations all the more significant n the fact that the police appeared e unable to cope with the situa- , the nightly disturbances before National Theater requiring the use avalry.

dispersing mobs of 4000 or 5000, majority of whom were students, police wounded several persons refused to obey orders. Imme- ely a storm of sentiment swept the against the "unnecessary violence he police," and the same sentiment forcing the immediate release of all who were arrested. Yesterday many leading authors, artists and musicians, including M. Rostand and M. Massenet, pledged their support to Bernstein and it was known that his friends were secretly organizing counter demonstrations for tonight.

M. Monis, the new Premier, performed his first official act when he visited M. Claretie, director of the National Theater, to confer with him as to what steps should be taken to avert bloodshed. M. Lepine, Prefect of Police, confessed his helplessness because he was not allowed to enforce orders at this crisis.

Then M. Bernstein of his own accord announced he would immediately withdraw the play as he did not wish to cause bloodshed, which appeared inevitable.

LLEGED MEMBER OF CAMMORIST ORDER MAKES FULL CONFESSION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENCE.]

ITERBO (Italy) (Tuesday,) Feb. 21.—The authorities are in possession of a detailed confession by Ger- o Abbatemaggio, one of the forty- alleged members of the Camorra ose trial for the murder of Gen- o Cuoccolo and his wife, "the beau- Sorrentino," is set for March 11. ependence is not placed wholly on revelation made to secure convic- but the statement of the man been of great assistance to the ce as a guide for their efforts in cting evidence. A case in point was declaration that the assassins had instructed to report the success of r mission to Enrico Alfano, the al- d head of the Camorra, at the -A-Marue, an inn at Torre del o, where he had arranged to dine night.

investigation of a detective shows that Alfano was at the inn as Abbatemaggio said, and that when dining with a party of friends he was approached by two men who carried blood-stained coats upon their arms. They saluted "Erricone," as Alfano is also known, and said:

"It is done."

Thereupon the chief drew a deep breath and gave each a glass of wine.

So circumstantial was the proof of this incident that Erricone did not deny it, but explained the affair by saying the men were poor fellows who had come to salute him, and that he could do no less than give them a drink.

The subsequent arrest of Erricone and several associates was the cause of popular rejoicing, which gave way to indignation when he was released later through the connivance of the priest Circe Vittozzi, who is now a prisoner himself, charged with being a member of the Camorra.

MICHIGAN GOVERNOR BARES ENEMY'S ALLEGED SECRETS.

Charges State Senator James A. Murtha With Defrauding Client While Practicing Law in New York and Intimates That Grand Jury Inquiry Will Follow. Accused Man Replies to Executive.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LANSING (Mich.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Displosures made by Gov. Osborn today allege that Senator James A. Murtha of Detroit, minority leader of the present Legislature, former Tammany lieutenant and practicing attorney of New York, was suspended from practice in New York City for defrauding a client and was supposed to have committed suicide. His clothes were found on the bank of the North River in 1905 and New York papers carried a story to the effect that the attorney had ended his life.

At the beginning of the present session of the Legislature Murtha, who represents a strong Democratic district in the city of Detroit, and who is said to be one of the legislative representatives of the Detroit Brewers' Association, antagonized the chief executive by making a stirring speech on the floor of the Senate. In this he referred to Gov. Osborn as a "four-flusher" and charged that his efforts to clean the State of the appointees placed in office by former Gov. Warner were simply a scheme to gain advertising.

Gov. Osborn stated that he would show up all men who opposed him in his efforts to clean the State of undesirable office-holders and Senator Murtha is the first to feel his efforts.

The chief executive secured a record of Murtha's alleged legal tangle and today bared the same to Michigan. He also intimated that a special grand jury might be called to determine how Murtha secured the proper credentials to practice in the courts of this State.

The information obtained from New York alleged that Murtha's transactions took place in 1905; that a warrant was issued for his arrest; that he disappeared and the papers were never served; that he was suspended from practice in the State of New York for three years, and that he was admitted to practice in Michigan within six weeks after his suspension expired in the Empire State.

Murtha is ill at a Detroit hospital, but in an interview given out today, he stated that he had known for some time that Gov. Osborn had been investigating his record, and had been anxiously waiting for him to spring it. He does not deny the story, except to say that all of the incidents of his early life are known to his friends.

"Perhaps Gov. Osborn through he'd drive me from politics or force me to leave Detroit," said Murtha. "He will succeed in neither. I shall stay right here and, furthermore, Osborn has begun something which he will not be able to stop. He will have me on his hands to the end of time, and I shall go just as far for my evidence, if necessary, as he has. I ask no quarter and I shall give none. I claim to wield no influences, but I have control of myself and I never quit."

ESPEE CONTEMPLATING RAILROAD FROM PORTLAND TO LOS ANGELES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As the result of the visit of Judge Lovett and the head officials of the Harriman system to the Coast, it is announced on reliable authority that within thirty days work will begin at Wadsworth, which will result in the completion of a direct route from Portland to Los Angeles via Hazen. The work will be done as a part of the $75,000,000 expenditure planned by the outhern Pacific, to be made in the next five years, and will prove of the greatest importance to Nevada. It will make the State the crossing point of not only two transcontinental roads, the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific, but an important north and south steel highway, joining the northwest with Southern California and ultimately, it is believed, forming an outlet to the Gulf of Mexico and a clear passage for immense cotton shipments to the Orient via northwest ports.

Construction work for a road from Fernly near Wadsworth has already been well begun and the surveys indicate that a connection with proposed extensions into the Deschutes Valey from Washington and Oregon will be made.

In the extension of the branch from Wadsworth the old bridge over the Kentucky River that formerly served for the main line of the Central Pacific will be used and the move will revive Wadsworth from the apathy into which it has fallen for the past twenty years since the yards and shops of the Southern Pacific were removed from Wadsworth to Sparks.

The extension from Wadsworth to Hazen will shortly be commenced, from Wadsworth southeast, and the connection with Hazen which has been progressing south of the Tehachepi for some time will be made within two years.

In connection with the proposed extension into Oregon the plans of the Nevada, California & Oregon Railroad are again a subject for speculation, although the officials have repeatedly denied ny possibility of a sale or lease of their road.

The Nevada, California & Oregon recently amended its articles of incorporation so as to provide for an extension to The Dalles on the boundary line between Oregon and Washington, and if the outhern Pacific runs another line there will still exist a competing line which will be valuable to the Western Pacific or the Hill interests.

Connecticut Widow Whose Extravagance Got Her Into Court, Weds Physician No. 2.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the second time, Mrs. Julia Watt Morris Curtiss of Bridgeport, Conn., and New York, has married her physician. This time her choice has fallen upon Dr. George Alfred Lawrence, the nerve specialist of New York. Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence are spending their honeymoon quietly in Philadelphia, after being secretly married February 14, in Wilmington, Del.

Mrs. Lawrence inherited about $17,000,000 from Archibald Watt and Mary G. Pinkney, and after a career of extravagance in 1907, she was declared incompetent to manage her affairs.

In July, 1910, Mrs. Curtiss and her physician, Dr. Lawrence, were in a taxicab wreck together on Fifth avenue. Both were thrown violently against the front of the car, and Mrs. Curtiss was badly cut by flying glass. Two months later, Dr. Lawrence was an expert witness for Mrs. Curtiss in legal proceedings she brought in Connecticut to have the conservator of the estate removed on the ground that she is now competent to attend to her affairs.

Dr. Lawrence is an associate of Dr. Graeme Hammond and a professor of nervous diseases in Columbia University.

Moses Ellis, Once of New Orleans, Loses Citizenship Papers—Second Case of Kind on Record.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Moses Ellis no longer is an American, but a denaturalized Turk.

For the second time in history, the United States has annulled certificates of naturalization.

The statute is that if a naturalized citizen establishes permanent residence in a foreign country within five years from issuance of citizenship papers, he loses his status as an American citizen.

Moses Ellis was made a citizen here in 1899. The same year he went to South Africa and took up his residence in Johannesburg, Transvaal. Judge Foster issued the decree.

The only similar case ended in Philadelphia last week, though the statute is by no means new.

FIVE DIE IN EXPLOSION.

PORTLAND (Or.) March 4.—While a number of employees of a logging company were gathered about an engine used in logging off land at Estacada today, the boiler exploded. Five men were killed and four seriously injured. The dead: James Pitman, foreman; Richard White, R. W. Smith, William Watson and an unidentified man. The boiler was hurled almost 1000 feet by the explosion.

CHINESE SMUGGLING.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—The recent attempt to smuggle a party of Chinese girls ashore at this port after transporting them across the Pacific in a dungeon-like ship's locker, is to be investigated in the Federal court. The grand jury reported to the United States District Court yesterday an indictment against Paul Schulze, a longshoreman, who is accused of complicity in the smuggling plot. A few hours after the customs officers had captured the Chinese girls on the harbor shore and had fired on the boatmen who landed them, Schulze appeared at a local hospital suffering from a bullet wound. He would give no satisfactory account of how he was shot, and the officers believe he was one of the smuggling boatmen.

Indiana Man Disposes of Wife's Divorce Suit by Using Slipper in the Good Old-Fashioned Way.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EVANSVILLE (Ind.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I don't need a lawyer to fight a divorce case," said Frank Keubler when told that his wife had sued him for legal separation.

Keubler went home, threw his wife across his lap and applied a slipper with telling effect. The result was not long in doubt. As meek as a lamb and as mild as the gentlest wife in this city, she came to her lawyer's office this afternoon with her husband and desired him to at once dismiss the divorce suit. Keubler paid the bill.

"D—n you lawyers anyway," he said. "My wife don't want a divorce, and it did not take me long to show her that she didn't."

DAYLIGHT FILM.

Before a small company of invited guests, the Orpheum management, late yesterday afternoon, demonstrated a new and startling discovery in the motion-picture world, on which it claims to have the sole American rights. This is a "daylight film," and, with all the house lights on and even the footlights up, the lines of the scenery and the countenances of the actors were as visible as they usually are in a darkened theater. The process is a secret one, and is the sole possession of the inventor, who trusts no assistants, but travels from place to place installing his remarkable mechanism. Motion pictures run in a full glare of light are to become part of the Orpheum's regular programme, commencing tomorrow.

Lobster Is a Good Medicine.

Lobster is no longer the insidious source of stomach trouble. It is not the cause of dyspepsia and indigestion. Lobster, instead, is so good that medicine men are prescribing it for ailments. And about $2,000,000 worth of this tempting medicine will be available to the world this year.

These are the promises that came from Canada today, where a number of kind corporations are utilizing what they assert is the best part of the lobster, undiscovered until now.

Canned lobster consists of the meat taken from the claws and the tail, all other parts having, until now, been rejected by the packers. What has been extensively used as fertilizer in the Canadian provinces has now become "lobster rarebit." It consists of a crescent-shaped meaty layer, the liver and the roe. Spice is added to these components, which are mixed in the following proportions: Six-tenths meat, three-tenths liver and one-tenth roe.

Physicians of Prince Edward Island have for some time used lobster rarebit in the treatment of certain ailments.—[New York World.

DEAFNESS

Successfully Treated by the Simplest Method Yet Discovered.

Ninety-five per cent. of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits, stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed, relief is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always effect a cure. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. But there is a scientific treatment for deafness and catarrh which is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapor generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibration of sound. Actina is also very successful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be entirely relieved by a few weeks' use. Actina has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs, colds, headache and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina will be sent on trial, postpaid. Write us about your case. Our advice will be free as well as a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's Farm School for Women Starts Operations With Twenty Pupils, and Description of Costumes Worn Is Apt to Send Many a Judge Passing the Meadows Sweet With Hay This Summer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINEOLA (L. I.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's farmerettes, who are to make the Brockholt estate blossom and produce like the vale of Kasmir without the help of mere men, got down to brass tacks today. Fourteen of them, all from the borough of Manhattan, came down to Hempstead today with hopes high and dress suit cases filled with farm clothes. Those farm clothes are a very important feature of Mrs. Belmont's farm project for suffragettes. Mrs. Belmont designed them herself after much thought and several conferences with persons who are trying to lift femininity from the thralldom of the present and place it upon a perfectly independent plane, even when it comes to farming.

As soon as the fourteen new farmerettes joined six others at their headquarters in one of the comfortable farm houses on the 1100-acre Brockholt estate at Hempstead, making twenty farmerettes in all, they unpacked their suit cases and got right into their farm togs. Then they emerged—the first typical Belmont farmerettes.

To start at the top: Each wore a slouch hat that looked odd. Next below appeared a blue blouse—full, but with comfortable sleeves, not too much puffed at the shoulders to be absolutely out of style, but nevertheless qualifying with a modish suggestiveness.

OH, YOU SKIRTS!

But the skirts! The farmerettes looked down at them and smoothed them out with conscious pride. They are near-harem skirts. Mrs. Belmont decided those skirts could not be the real thing in harems as there must be plenty of leg-room in working about the farm, and for the same reasons hobbles were eliminated. As a matter of course, the skirts are divided, but not just on the lines of the ordinary divided skirt. One might say they closely suggest the smart riding skirts used by equestriennes. They are short, but not too short, coming just to the tips of the high boys' shoes that finish the farmerette uniforms. And unlike the harem skirt, one would know at first glance that the farmerette had on something bifurcated.

It is a perfectly candid divided skirt, as well adapted to the bedding down of cows as to the picking of bugs from potato vines or the training of string beans.

So emerges the Belmont farmerette—the latest sartorial conception in the advancement of women.

DOWN TO BRASS TACKS.

Twenty pioneers got to work today learning just how a farm house should be run. The six who got there first heard the alarm clock sound at 6 a.m. When the fourteen others, who were met at the station by Mrs. Belmont, and were driven to the farmhouse in farm wagons (not automobiles) arrived, housework was taken up immediately.

It's pretty sloppy work farming now. Real Long Island men farmers are now sitting waiting for the frost to get out of the ground, but there will be plenty for the farmerettes to do. They must learn how to milk, bed and feed the cows, how to make butter and cheese and how to keep on good terms with the barnyard fowl.

So, until it is time for the spring "plantin," there will be lots of work about the house and barnyard. Real farm work will be taken up when the force of farmerettes has reached the ultimate number of 200.

Angry Senator.

BAILEY OF TEXAS QUITS IN A PET; THEN TAKES IT ALL BACK.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Senator Joseph W. Bailey added to the excitement and episodes surrounding the adjournment of the Sixty-first Congress today by resigning his office as Senator from the State of Texas, and a few hours later withdrawing his resignation.

Angered by the attitude of his Democratic colleagues in favoring the resolution approving the new Constitution of Arizona, to whose radical features Mr. Bailey has voiced his opposition, he wrote his resignation and took it to the Vice-President with the request that he announce it to the Senate.

Mr. Sherman declined. Senator Bacon, importuned in like manner to announce it, took a similar position. Thereupon the Texan telegraphed it to Gov. Colquitt of Texas, who promptly refused to accept it, replying:

"I decline to accept your resignation as a Senator from Texas and respectfully ask you to withdraw it. Please wire fully."

POPULISTIC HERESIES.

This evening Mr. Bailey withdrew the resignation and made public the following telegram sent by him to Gov. Colquitt:

"You know how unalterably I am opposed to those populistic heresies known as the initiative, referendum and recall, and I would not be willing to remain in the Senate or in any branch of the public service if a majority of the party friends associated with me were willing to give their approval to them.

"I construed the vote of the Democratic Senators in the Senate this morning, on the resolution approving the Constitution of Arizona, as giving their support to those vagaries and under that impression I promptly tendered my resignation. The most conspicuous Democrats who voted that way have given me their assurance that they did not intend their votes to be so construed, and have made through Senator Bacon a statement in the open Senate expressly declaring that they utterly disapprove them.

TAKES IT ALL BACK.

"Under these circumstances, and at their earnest request as well as at your own request, supplemented by many messages from my friends in Texas and some from other States, I have concluded to withdraw my resignation. I am willing to work to the limit of my strength as long as I can serve the public and at the same time obey what I understand to be the commandment of Democratic principles, but no office could tempt me for one moment to compromise with a policy which I am certain would, in the end, destroy the government established by our fathers."

Eleven Democratic Senators sent a telegram to Gov. Colquitt urging upon him and the people of Texas to demand a withdrawal of the resignation. It was signed by Senators Bacon, Foster, Overman, Taliaferro, Paynter, Bankhead, Percy, Johnson, Taylor, Watson and Fletcher.

While Senator Bailey predicated his resignation upon the vote of the Democrats upon the Arizona Constitution, many of his friends looked on that vote as "the last straw" in a series of snubs intended to show Mr. Bailey the futility of aspiring to the Democratic leadership of the Senate.

INYO RESERVE DISPUTE OVER.

PRESIDENT ELIMINATES LAND AND ADDS OTHERS.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached Between Owens River Settlers, Los Angeles Authorities and Forestry Service—Water Supply for City Not Molested.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The President has signed a proclamation eliminating 275,424 acres in California from the Inyo national forest and adding 80,502 acres, the greater part of which is located in California, with a small portion lying in Nevada.

Most of the land lies along the Owens River Valley, where the question as to the proper boundary for the forest has been much discussed. The Owens River settlers have been urgent to have the forest area reduced, but the representatives of the city of Los Angeles have regarded the retention of the land by the government as essential to the success of its great aqueduct project intended to assure the municipality an abundant supply of pure water from the Sierras, 250 miles away.

The elimination now made is the result of an agreement finally arrived at by representatives of the Owens River settlers, the forestry service and the city of Los Angeles, whereby the conflict of views and interests was adjusted on a basis which commands the assent of all parties.

Besides the Owens River Valley elimination, there also has been eliminated an area along the eastern slope of the White Mountain division. The additions comprise an area of mountainous and hilly land adjacent to the northern section of the forest, and covered with a heavy stand of juniper and pinon.

The unappropriated portions of the lands eliminated by this proclamation will be restored to settlement and entry after they shall have been advertised in the local papers by the Secretary of the Interior.

Prisoner in San Francisco Jail Confesses to Crime for Which Another Man Was Just Going to Pen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Having pleaded guilty on the advice of his attorney on a charge of attempted burglary, William McGill, on the day that he was to be sentenced to San Quentin, was freed by the confession of the real burglar, Harry Bauer. McGill was arrested on the charge of Anna Baach, a servant in the home of Murray Vandall, No. 2509 Filbert street.

The Vandall home was robbed and the burglar confronted the servant girl during his operations, locking her in a clothes closet.

While at the Central Police Station reporting the details to the police the servant happened to see McGill, who visited police headquarters to secure a revolver which had been taken from him. She promptly declared that he was the man who robbed the Vandall home and upon her positive reaffirmation in the face of McGill's stout denial, McGill was placed in custody and finally convicted.

McGill, while in the County Jail awaiting sentence was approached by Bauer, who was under sentence of four years for burglary. Bauer informed McGill that it was he who entered the Vandall home, and repeated the story in court, McGill being promptly freed.

Bauer's only statement was that he did not want to see an innocent man "go over" for a crime he did not commit.

Approximately 10,880 acres of land in New Mexico has been designated by Secretary of the Interior Ballinger under the enlarged Homestead act as not being susceptible of successful irrigation. The order becomes affective March 24. This was the total designation to date in New Mexico under the above act 16,056,978 acres.

PARISIAN WEDDING GUESTS.

years, one of the most popular figures in ultra-fashionable Paris society.

Then Paris became excited over a very different oriental figure. This was the Princess Brinda—a pearl of the East in a Paris setting—Princess Brinda of Jubal, descended from the most illustrious and ancient caste of India.

Every one desired to know about her. The Maharajah of Kapurthala was appealed to. Is the Princess Brinda really royal? he was asked.

The answer was yes, and the Maharajah clinched it by the statement that she was being educated in France to marry his son. To his Parisian friends he promised invitations to the wedding.

Years passed. The promise was forgotten by the volatile Parisians. Preparations for the marriage, however, went on apace. Came a day when the Princess Brinda was ready; the Tika was ready; a new palace for the youthful couple was ready.

And then came the invitations. Parisian society gasped with astonishment. Never had there been such invitations. It was like being asked to seat one's self upon a magic carpet to be wafted to far-away oriental lands.

INVITATIONS EXCITE GAY CITY.

Two hundred and fifty invitations came to Paris. Those who got them, received the shock of their lives. The greatest ladies carried the fat envelopes in their handbags when they made calls. Clubmen talked of the oriental voyages of their ancestors—on the Crusades. Ultra-fashionables got excited over maps. To go or not to go? Wives wept, brave men paled, and high enthusiasts showed that the spirit of St. Louis and Godfroy de Bouillon had not died out of the French aristocracy.

One hundred and six sailed. On board the P. & O. S. S. "Persia," are Prince Antoine d'Orleans et Bragrance, Prince and Princesse de Broglie and their son Albert, Comte and Comtesse Jean de Polignac, Comte and Comtesse de Juemillac, Andre Brocheton, Jean de Mieulle, Andre de Fouquieres—but these lists are too long to copy. The importance which attaches to the event may be shown in a word—on the "Persia" are Paul Bariatier and two assistants, loaded down with snapshot portrait and cinematograph apparatus, plaques and films, envoys of the American Biograph Company to Kapurthala!

M. Andre de Fouquieres is in the midst of all this.

It was to the young Ward McAllister of Paris that the Maharajah confided the task of making up the different steamship parties. De Fouquieres is probably the only personage of this world to whom long practice and intimate knowledge give the tact of the moment—not to offend suspectibilities or thrust together those who would be happier apart.

The Maharajah told him that a steamship trip which must last nineteen days would be equivalent to a house party; and de Fouquieres knew it. As the great boat steamed out of Marseilles, he admits an emotion that tightened his throat. He was ashamed of it, until he saw the same agony on the faces of the others. Parisians are not travelers; and what is to Americans a simple pleasure trip, becomes to them a hazardous enterprise.

I have seen some letters of de Fouquieres which will be published by the "Figaro" and "Gaulois." They are delighted with the beautiful tenue of the ship and the style of the English personnel. They take lessons in Hindoo conversation from big black devils, grave, rapid, active, silent. The few officers are of rare distinction. The French ladies are astonished that they have no social relations with passengers, live a particular life and, while showing the greatest courtesy, in fact, they run away from us!

"I have been told about it all, my dear, it comes from an order. There was a drama of the sea, heart-breaking, horrible, years ago, in the Bay of Bengal. There was a ball on board; officers and passengers were dancing joyously, when sudenly the steamship struck a rock, and went down with all on board!"

"They play a thousand childish games on deck—and by breaking down the reserve of certain haughty English passengers, bound, like them, for the marriage fetes of Kapurthala. The French judge them cold and compasses, precise and restrained, but "they finish by laughing with us, more astonished than amused, all the same. They judge us to be very French, and their indulgence has its point of irony.

They chat of the wonders they will see.

"We shall contemplate the treasures of the Rajahs!"

"Shoot tigers from the backs of elephants!"

"We shall see the most expensive Nautches of all India, terminating by an Indo-Parisian cotillion in which we are all to take part!"

"There will be majestic corteges of all the Rajahs, with their suites of elephants and bronzes—"

"—you mean bonzes."

"Tigers break into vilages ten miles from Kapurthala—"

"It seems that the Maharajah is a veritable potentate, with his own army, ministers and headsmen. In our garden parties he was a nice little man, as easy as an old shoe, almost timid. I tremble to think of him in his veritable setting, terrible, redoubtable and sovereign!"

"But, wait!" Does not the Hindoo religion forbid crossing the Black Waters?"

"Yes, but the Maharajah pays the priests his weight in diamonds for a purification. Few can afford it—"

"Also, they make him sleep a week inside a golden cow—"

"You are all wrong. The Maharajah belongs to the Sikh religion and he has the right to travel in Europe. I played against him at Puteaux often. He is a good raquette—"

And the good ship speeds on.

In their staterooms, the envoys of the American Biograph count their films. One of these days you will hear a lot about the marriage fetes of Kapurthala.

The creation of districts with different seasons is entirely new.

The districts by counties as established by the committee substitute measure to be put on the files Monday, creates the following districts:

U. C. ATHLETES WIN WITH EASE.

BEAT CLAREMONT BOYS IN VERY DECISIVE MANNER.

Four First Places Are Won by Men From Southern California—Are Far Behind Their Rivals in Various Track Events—Relay Race Annexed by Pomona Runners.

University of California, 73 points; Pomona College, 49 points.

By winning the mile relay race in three minutes, thirty-three and four-fifths seconds, the Pomona track athletes brought the meet with California to an enthusiastic finish yesterday and partially redeemed themselves for the decisive defeat which they received.

Johnson, the Claremont hurdler, furnished the sensation of the meet when he pulled up on Beeson in the low hurdles and finished apparently even with him. The judges declared the California man a winner.

Four first places were won by the Southern California athletes. Few close finishes marked the meet, and the relay race was by far the best contest of the day. Gillette started on the last lap even with his northern opponent, Butler. They ran side by side, each exerting himself to the utmost until the last curve when Butler weakened and the Sagebrush sprinter pulled slowly ahead winning by a few feet.

The track was heavy so that slow time was made in all of the events. Several inches of water stood on the field until noon before the contest began. The Berkeley athletes won their big lead in the track events, Pomona taking only thirteen out of the forty-five points in this department.

The results:

Mile run: Fischer (P.) won, Woods (C.) second, Merritt (P.) third; time, 4m. 37s.

The 100 yard dash: Claudius (C.) won, Gillette (P.) second, Allan (C.) third; time, 10 1-5s.

The 120 yard hurdles: Donald (C.) won, Beeson (C.) second, Clark (P.) third; time, 16 2-5s.

The 440 yard dash: Butler (C.) won, Chase (C.) second, L. Lorbeer (P.) third; time, 52s.

The 220 yard dash: Claudius (C.) won, Gillette (P.) second, Nye (P.) third; time, 22 2-5s.

The 220 yard hurdles: Beeson (C.) won, Johnson (P.) second, Grub (C.) third; time, 25 2-5s.

The 880 yard run: Dowd (C.) won, Billings (P.) second, Rice (P.) third; time, 2m. 5 3-5s.

The two mile run: Sturgis (P.) won, Fischer (P.) second, Woods (C.) third; time, 10m. 9s.

Hammer throw: Reedy (C.) won, Metcalf (P.) second, Barnes (P.) third; distance, 143 ft. 7 in.

Pole vault: Barnes (P.) won, Seward (P.) second, Taylor (C.) third; height, 11 ft. 3 in.

High jump: Taylor (C.), Hill (C.), Bilas (C.), tied for first; height, 5 ft. 6 in.

Shot put: Wright (C.) won, Reedy (C.) second, Lorbeer (P.) third; distance, 42 ft. 8 in.

Broad jump: Allan (C.), Bilas (C.), Hill (C.), tied for first; distance, 21 ft. 11 in.

Relay race: Pomona won; team, Sloane, F. Lorbeer, L. Lorbeer, Gillette; time, 3m. 33 4-5s.

Exhibition discus throw: Carver, Gardner and Barnes of Pomona placed; distance, 94 ft.

HOWARD IN BUICK GIVES NOVEL DEFI.

Charles Howard, in the Buick "Redbird," offers to race any motor driver in Los Angeles, over a course of his own choosing, and agrees to go three blocks while his opponent only drives two. This is a novel challenge, but the Buick man says he will make good. He could have been persuaded to make a wager, but he is awaiting the acceptance of the defi. He is ready to pull off the stunt.

He would drive the handsome little twenty-horse-power car against a ninety-horse-power machine. This would be a race worth watching, but Howard is confident he would win. He refuses to state just where the course is until after the challenge has been accepted. He has driven over the route several times. It is up a hill.

The new Buick is a stylish machine, which is proving popular. After this stunt Howard says it will be more of a favorite because he says he will win. There is a possibility that this defi will be accepted as quickly as the challenge of the Apperson girl was. If so, another novel contest is promised.

WOLGAST HURTS HIS ARM AGAIN.

[Associated Press Night Report.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—It became known today that Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champion, suffered a severe injury to his arm in one of the early rounds of his fight here last night with "Knockout" Brown. The arm was broken several months ago and, although it knit rapidly, it was weak for a long time and bothered the champion considerably.

Wolgast's doctors have not yet determined just how serious the injury of last night will prove. They probably will insist on his resting the wrenched member for a few days. By that time they hope it will be as good as new again.

Two Games Today.

Owing to the rain yesterday morning the new Washington ball ground was too wet for the Los Angeles-Red Sox game and it had to be called off. It is the intention to play two games today, one at the Vernon grounds at 10:30 o'clock this morning, and the other at the Washington Park at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. These games, of course, will depend upon the rain.

Dr. Adolph Rosenthal, oculist and aurist to the German Hospital, San Francisco, is in the city for a short stay at the Alexandria, accompanied by his wife.

HIGH SCHOOL FIVE FIRST IN BASKETBALL TOURNEY.

Wins Exciting Contest From Huntington Beach Team in Extra Period of Play After Score Had Been Tied at End of Second Half—Guard Daniels Makes Final Goal.

Citrus Union High School won the interscholastic basketball championship of Southern California yesterday when it defeated the Huntington Beach quintette 24 to 22 on the U.S.C. court. The winning points were made in an additional period of play after the second half had ended a tie, 22 to 22.

Daniels made the winning goal with a long shot from near the center of the field, after three minutes of additional playing. It was anybody's game all the way through. Each team was in the lead four or five different times during the contest and six times the score was a tie.

The first half closed with Citrus in the lead, 9-6. Both teams fought until they were exhausted. Huntington Beach defeated the Citrus team early in the season, but did not show near its usual form yesterday. The orange belt players averaged eight inches taller than their opponents.

The lineup:

Citrus Union.	Position.	Huntington Beach.
Daniels	....Forward..	Lor. Livernash
Beardslee	..Forward........	Worthy
Whitted	......Center..	Leo. Livernash
Johnson	......Guard..	Lem. Livernash

CHAMPS WIN AGAIN.

LONG BEACH GIRLS SHINE.

Long Beach High School girls' basketball team won the semi-finals in the Southern California League, when it defeated the Ontario team yesterday by a score of 23 to 8 on the U.S.C. court.

Long Beach won the city league honors and Ontario held the Citrus Belt championship. The final game for the interscholastic girls championship will be between Long Beach and Covina, which won the suburban championship.

The beach town girls seem invincible in the basket game, having had an undefeated record for four years. They won the State championship last season. Their opponents worked hard but had no chance in the match yesterday.

The lineup:

Long Beach.	Position.	Ontario.
V. Tinklepaugh	forward	J. Osborne
J. Stine	forward	E. Willmert
E. Dayman	center	B. Cavanaugh
D. Day	outside center	E. Taylor
H. Perkins	guard	H. Leake
M. Taylor	guard	F. Reicher

EASY VICTORY.

ONE-SIDED SCORE.

With a score of 39 to 16 the Y.M.C.A. Peerless team defeated the Polytechnic quintette yesterday evening on the association court. The C.A. boys won by their superior basket shooting. Their opponents worked hard, but were unable to convert the tries and the Peerless team soon ran up a winning score.

Positive and Negative.

WHAT CONGRESS ACCOMPLISHED AND WHAT IT FAILED TO PASS.

Provision Made for Fortification of Panama Canal the Most Important Bit of Legislation to Go Through. Failure of Canadian Reciprocity Heads List of Bills Which Failed to Pass Muster at Last Moment.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Out of the smoke of the closing battle in Congress emerge these results of larger interest:

POSITIVE RESULTS.

Provision of $3,000,000 for the fortification of the Panama Canal.

Provision for two new battleships.

Recodification of the judicial code—regarded as most important for the amelioration of the law's delays.

Creation of forest reserves in the Southern Appalachian and White Mountains.

Provision for the construction of embassy and legation buildings abroad.

Provision requiring the inspection of locomotive boilers.

Creating Robert E. Peary a rear-admiral on the retired list of the navy and formally tendering thanks of Congress to him.

Creating a committee of five Senators and five Representatives to investigate conditions in Alaska.

NEGATIVE RESULTS.

Failure of the Canadian reciprocity agreement and consequent certainty of an extra session.

Failure of the permanent tariff board bill, which passed the Senate, but was killed by a filibuster in the House.

Failure of the resolution to admit to Statehood Arizona and New Mexico, by reason of a filibuster in the Senate.

Failure of the proposal to increase the rate of postage on the advertising sections of the large magazines; but a commission provided for to investigate the subject.

Failure of the resolution providing for the direct election of United States Senators.

Failure of the general age pension bill.

Failure to act on the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation reports.

Failure to enact the ocean mail subsidy, passed by the enate alone.

Failure of the effort to unseat William Lorimer as Senator from Illinois on the ground of alleged bribery in his election.

Failure of bill fixing canal tolls and settling form of government for Panama Canal zone.

Failures of Congressional reapportionment bill based on the new census.

Indoor Business.

CONTINUAL RAINS KEEP SOX FROM DOING PRACTICE WORK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ball players and magnates alike have ceased to plead with the rain god to be good. Even the Bostonians, who have traveled 4000 miles just to take a chance at California's celebrated sunshine, have decided that somebody slipped a cog, and so they are taking the matter philosophically. Indoor work is not much at the best for a lot of ball players accustomed to outdoor exercise, but the major leaguers are doing a surprisingly small amount of grumbling.

Not yet have the Red Sox been given their first peek at San Francisco. They may have taken the trip across the bay individually to see the little white way and the night life, but, officially speaking, there hasn't been a chance for them to leave their Oakland hotel.

All Friday night here was no rain, and the men, who were worrying over the situation, thought there might be a chance, but the rain began again this morning and continued at intervals all day, and it removes all possibility of the double header for tomorrow, in the morning against Oakland and in the afternoon against San Francisco. The Oakland grounds are hardly in any sort of shape for a ball game, even should the weather clear, and the San Francisco outfield is just about as mushy.

Patsy Donovan had his men at Piedmont Pavilion for a double dose of indoor work across the bay in Oakland, and Danny Long chased his Seals down to Cornel's gymnasium.

It is fairly good exercise, but the main thing is that it keeps the men occupied and their minds off the vacation, that they are by no means hankering after. The Red Sox are slated to meet the Phoenix nine of St. Mary's College at Freeman's Park, the Oakland Coast League grounds on Monday. The St. Mary's team is one of the fast college teams of the Coast. Duffey Lewis and Harry Hooper, two of the Red Sox outfielders, were formerly on the Phoenix team when they were attending the Catholic college. Duffey Lewis was a pitcher as well as outfielder at St. Mary's, and Hooper was one of the stars of the college team for a number of years.

On Tuesday, if luck turns their way, the Red Sox will go to Sacramento to meet the Senators.

Oscar Vitt has been advised by Long to keep under cover this wet weather. His stomach is still bothering him, and Danny would much rather have him take things easily until the pennant season commences, than have him out of shape during the summer.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

ing hours, he found Statehood holding the Senate at a stand-still and the tariff board bill absolutely blockading the progress of the House.

The President was appealed to by Senate leaders to use whatever influence he might have with Senator Owen. The Senator declined to see the President. He said Arizona must come in jointly with New Mexico and have her "referendum and recall" legislation approved at the same time, or the appropriation bills would fail.

CLOCKS SET BACK.

Both filibusters accomplished their immediate purpose. The Senate did not approve the Constitution of New Mexico, and the House did not pass the tariff board bill.

When the filibusters had been brought to a close the time remaining was too short and the time-honored custom of turning back the clock was resorted to.

Thrice in the House the hands of the two clocks were set back, each time fifteen minutes. The Senate resorted to this device but once, the hands being pushed back a full half hour. The Senate adjourned at 12:20; the House at 12:37.

All of the big appropriation bills finally managed to squeeze through in time to secure the approval of the President. The work of whipping these measures into final shape and engrossing them taxed to their utmost the system at the Capitol and at the government printing office. Eight bills carrying more than $700,000,000 were rushed through in the last forty-eight hours of the session.

When the excitement and uncertainty as to the fate of the appropriation bills had died away and the Vice-President's gavel had fallen in adjournment of the Senate, the news came that Senator Bailey of Texas had resigned. It was said he was "miffed" over the action of his Democratic colleagues in not following his leadership during the last few days.

The rumor was discredited at first, but when it was confirmed by the Senator himself, the sensation in the Senate wing soon spread to the House and for a time the vicissitudes of the old session and the speculation as to the new were lost sight of in the discussion of this development. Later Senator Bailey withdrew his resignation.

SMILES FOLLOW SNARLS.

The tumult of the closing hours, following an all night sitting both in the Senate and House died away as the last of the approriation bills had been disposed of, and in both branches there were the usual scenes of non-partisan felicitations.

Galleries crowded to the doors watched the quick transition from snarls and heated words to smiles and handshaking and expressions of good will, the end of the Sixty-first Congress held a far deeper significance than the surface shw of wrangling and disorder indicated.

In the House it meant the turning over of control to the Democrats after sixteen years of Republican supremacy.

Ie meant the stepping down of "Uncle Joe" Cannon from his position of power at the Speaker's desk to a more humble place in the rank of the minority. It meant the retirement to private life of a small army of Republican members who throughout the session had borne the taunts of the Democrats and the sobriquet of "lame ducks." Some departed with mournful mien, while others, loyal to the administration, hurried away to comfortable berths in the public service.

There will be new rules in the House of the Sixty-second Congress and new men in charge of the committees. The work of framing supply bills and of initiating legislation affecting revenues and the general conduct of government will be switched from the left hand section of the chamber to that of the Speaker's right.

The Democratic phalanx will encroach heavily upon the Republican side of the chamber.

For many years the House has been in the hands of a comparatively small coterie of Republican leaders. Men like Payne of New York, Dalzell of Pennsylvania, and Cannon have dominated the chamber. All these remain in the Democratic House and their course as members of the minority will be followed with the greatest interest. It was the Democratic vote that passed the McCall bill, embodying the reciprocity agreement with Canada, through that body. President Taft feels confident such a bill will again be put through.

SENATE SHAKE-UP.

While the terms of thirty Senators expired today and many of these have been returned, the upturn in the upper branch of the national Legislature as to leadership is almost as violent as in the House. Aldrich of Rhode Island, who for years was recognized as holding practically supreme control in the affairs of the Senate; Hale of Maine, Burrows of Michigan, Depew of New York, Carter of Montana, Kean of New Jersey and Scott of West Virginia, all commissioned officers of the "Old Guard" of Republicans, and all stalwart to the core, after serving long terms, will depart.

President Taft in his proclamation convoking Congress on April 4, mentions as a reason therefor only the Canadian reciprocity agreement. There were many persons who held to the hope to the very last minute that the McCall bill might be rushed through the Senate and an extra session avoided.

There were others who said the fact that no statement had come from President Taft might argue that he would decide otherwise on reflection.

As a matter of fact, the extra session proclamation has been drawn up for several days, only the date for the session being left vacant. Following the adjournment of Congress the President held conferences with the House and Senate leaders of both parties as to the date that would best suit all concerned.

Many of the Senators and Representatives were desirous of going home for a brief rest before taking up the tasks of the new session; while others argued it would be the better part of wisdom for the President to consult primarily the wishes of the Democrats and to defer to their wishes for time in which to outline their organization in the new House.

The President himself is anxious for a little rest. April 4, therefore, seemed suited to all parties.

MEMSIC COMING HOME.

Local Fighter Says After He Beats Wolgast He Will Take on the Near Champions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ELSINORE (Cal.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Memsic left today for Los Angeles where he will train. Before leaving he said:

"I never felt better in my life and expect to knock Wolgast out before the fifteenth round. I beat him the last time we fought but the referee robbed me. I have kept in good condition for months getting ready for this match.

"After I win the title I'm going after 'Knockout Brown' and the other near champions. I have been doing road work here for a week and feel great. I am only several pounds over weight. I am faster than when I mixed with Wolgast before and can hit harder. There will be a new lightweight champion after our battle."

The Old Story.

USES COAL OIL TO START FIRE.

CAN HOUSEWIFE HOLDS EXPLODES AND DRESS IGNITES.

Daughter Attempts to Beat Out Flames and Is Burned—Mother in Agony Rushes Into Street Where Neighbors Drench Her With Water—Injuries Probably Fatal.

Mrs. Maria Gioli, 48 years old, of No. 2135 Bay street, was probably fatally burned last evening as the result of using coal oil to make a quick fire. Her daughter, Jennie, aged 21 years, who heroically tried to rescue her mother, had her left hand burned and her tresses badly singed.

Mrs. Gioli was preparing supper for her family and when she found that the wood would not burn owing to dampness, she picked up a can of coal oil. Unfortunately there were red hot embers in the stove, and when the oil struck them a sheet of flame darted up to the can in her hand. There was an explosion and in an instant Mrs. Gioli was a pillar of flame.

The explosion and her agonized screams were heard by Jennie, who attempted to beat out the flames with her hands. Unable to bear the pain, however, Mrs. Gioli ran out of the house into the street where the wind fanned the fire into greater fury.

She threw herself into the mud, writhing in agony and probably would have expired there but for neighbors who drenched her with water. In this condition she was found by her husband, Michael, and his son, who had arrived from work.

Mrs. Gioli's injuries were dressed at the Receiving Hospital. It was found that she was burned from the knees up. She was sent to the Clara Barton Hospital where late last night her condition was reported as precarious.

That millions of people, ill, seeking relief in almost every conceivable direction, are victims of self-poisoning or auto-intoxication is the dictum enunciated by Dr. E. R. Parker, better known as Painless Parker, Dentist, who gives data upon which he bases his conclusions.

In a practice of more than twenty years, meeting all sorts and conditions of people in every section of the United States and Canada, Dr. Parker asserts that his observations and deductions are verified by his clinical experiences. He states that millions of school children are suffering from blood-poisoning; that literally millions of adults are suffering from the same ailment, in varying degrees of virulence; that they are treating for disorders or names of diseases which are only the symptoms of an inward ailment whose baneful influence is sapping the vitality day in and day out.

Asked as to the remote or first cause of the conditions and the factors responsible for its incipiency, he replied that neglected natural teeth were, in the vast majority of instances, responsible for the conditions to which he referred, and he further pointed out that a continual disregard of the most elementary rules with regard to care and cleanliness of the mouth made it hopeless to expect freedom from disease conditions for those who would do nothing for themselves. Inquiry as to the particular bearing of blood-poisoning upon the subject under discussion the doctor replied as follows:

"In every mouth at twelve to twenty years and later, there is an exposed surface of the tops, sides and approximating surfaces of natural teeth aggregating twenty to thirty square inches, and a surface of tongue, gums, cheeks and oral mucous membrane amounting to several times that in extent. When such surfaces are covered with decomposing food particles, exudations from inflamed gums, vitiated salivary fluids, mixed with the adhesions of salivary calculus (tartar), and the chemical poisons which result from decomposition due to a mingling of mouth secretions and food remains, and maintained at a temperature of 98 degrees F., it is easy to understand the opportunity for the propagation of micro-organisms, and the extent to which the system may become infected solely from mouth and teeth conditions."

That the statements which have been made are recognized by the medical profession is shown by the statement by an eminent physician who said: "Decayed teeth, with matter exuding from around the teeth, are the means of producing more nervous disorders, and more terrible consequences to the general health than almost any other cause."

Millions of people persist in allowing broken, defective, abscessed, ulcerated teeth to remain in the mouth, to taint the breath, pollute the saliva, and the emission of pus germs from gum-boils to be swallowed with food or in sleep and to infect the general system.

However wholesome the diet, however pure the air before entering the body, once having passed the portals of a chamber laden with bacteria of decay and their nt Appreciation by a Charming Young Los Angeles Society Matron.

BY MRS. WALTER J. SCHMAHL.

Walter J. Schmahl.

INDIA'S butterflies are brighter than the gossamer-winged insects of any other land; the peaches of Georgia and Michigan have a brighter hue and richer flavor than the pitted fruit of other sections; and, in exactly the same way, I think the Los Angeles girl is richer than the daughters of other cities and other States. Bird-men say that creatures with wings in Southern California are larger and have gayer plumage than the same kind of birds of other localities, and perhaps the same reasons make the Los Angeles girl the brightest thing in America.

They say that environment is half the man. If that is so, the country's half of the Los Angeles girl is something delightful and she reflects it brilliantly. She contains the deliciousness of an incomparable atmosphere. The salt spray of southern seas, the stainless blue of southern skies, the dignity of lofty hills, the breath of orange blossoms and the radiance of southern nights, all blend in the charm of her.

Women everywhere are mysteries, according to men. This is so, perhaps, because women are very simple and men are too stupid to see it. The Los Angeles girl is not a mystery. She is as clear as light. Her complexion takes the glow of the great out-of-doors, her eyes shine with the brightness of clear and vibrant air, her motion is definite and animated. Physically she is superb.

She matures early, like all southern women, and she is strong and self- Her wholesomeness is expressed in the amusements she seeks. She eback, plays tennis, swims, is a golfer; or, if these pastimes are r, she is a devotee of gymnasiums. She is nearer to nature than n girl. In Los Angeles the mothers of girls re from society. The leadership is never placed in the hands of the married women. This causes the Los Angeles girl to attend in- functions with older persons and she gets into the habit of convers- er elders in a serious way about serious subjects. She is naturally ndent thinker and the customs of local society invite her inde- pression.

Wills announced that he would take an appeal.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TACOMA, March 4.—With the Nippon Yusen Kaisha making a cut in the westbound commodity rates and the Blue Funnel line ready to meet all cuts, a general rate war among the trans-Pacific steamship lines is imminent.

The lines affected are the Blue Funnel line, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, the Bank line, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Great Northern Steamship Company, the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company, the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

MONEY BALM DENIED MAIDEN.

Anna Berthe Grunspan Loses Suit for $100,000 Damages Against Millionaire Socialist of New York.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William English Walling, millionaire socialist and settlement worker, will not have to pay $100,000 or any other sum, to Anna Berthe Grunspan, the pretty Paris shop girl, who sued him for damages for breach of promise of marriage.

The jury in the case found for the defendant at 9:55 this morning, after being out since 10:45 last night. Two jurors held out for a verdict for Miss Grunspan, but one of them gave in at 7 o'clock. The remaining obstinate one did not yield until 9:55.

Miss Grunspan and her brothers reached the courtroom early with her lawyers. Walling and his lawyer were late arriving.

When the verdict for the defendant was announced, Miss Grunspan took her defeat philosophically, shrugged her shoulders and remarked: "Well, what do you know about that?" Later she partially lost control of herself and cried as she and her lawyers left the courtroom.

"It is terrible after all I have suffered," she said. "I expected so much from the justice of the American people. He has beaten me because he had the money to do it. But I am not through with him. Mr. Walling will find that he cannot trifle with my heart as he has done and escape this way."

Mrs. Walling was radiantly happy. She kissed her husband and shook each juror's hand. Walling remarked that the case was nothing but a conspiracy, pure and simple.

Speculation.

PARIS GUESSING AT THE FUTURE.

NEW FRENCH PREMIER PROVES SOMETHING OF PUZZLE.

Differs Widely in Type From Briand and Nation Watches to See Course He Will Outline—Minister of Foreign Affairs Said to Be Leaning Toward Reciprocity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Though the new French Premier is expected to receive a blank cheque from the controlling groups in his parliament next Monday, his future will depend entirely on the way he fills it in. Big, ponderous, phlegmatic, except in highly exciting circumstances, Antoine Monis cannot be compared with Aristide Briand in the art of managing men, and already a sympathetic Paris journal refers to his cabinet as "a ministry of great talents and dangerous ambitions."

"We, like our predecessors, will seek conciliation and public security," says Monis, "but by a route somewhat different from theirs."

The general labor confederation is preparing to celebrate an absolute reversal of Briand's programme as to re-employment of the railway strikers of last autumn. By taking them back into service Monis will make to labor an all-important concession, for refusing which Briand was denounced by Jean Jaures on the front page of Humanite.

"No one thinks of requitting upon Fallieres the coercive measures of his ministry," wrote the socialist leader. "He will not on this score be struck down like King Carlos. For our vengeance Briand will suffice. And he will not, in the end, have the consolation of departing and at least saving his skin to end in opulence his contemptible days."

One of the earliest steps to be taken by Cruppi, the new minister of foreign affairs, will be, it is said, to propose a Paris-Washington reciprocity treaty, after the pattern of the Washington-Ottawa proposals.

Cruppi is a strong man and will be able, probably, to check Delcasse, who, as minister of marine, burns to recoup the losses in prestige he sustained when William II's influence forced him into retirement during the Moroccan crisis. Delcasse is the factor of danger in the opinion of all who think internationally. He has not changed his goal.

MOTHER'S LOVE MEETS REWARD.

Mrs. Emily C. Yoell Will Share in Estate of Husband From Whom Separated Many Years Ago.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By reason of the love and motherly care given her family of boys and girls, Mrs. Emily C. Yoell, pioneer resident of San Jose and San Francisco, where for thirty years she occupied a prominent place in social life, is declared a part of the family of the late J. Alexander Yoell, noted member of the California bar, in a decision rendered today by Judge Graham in a contest waged for nearly five years.

Notwithstanding that Mrs. Yoell is guilty of laches toward the protection of any other vested interest she might have in her late husband's $300,000 wealth, the court makes her a family allowance of $100 a month, to date from the death of the jurist in 1904.

The decision is an important one and will have a bearing on the cases of several other widows fighting in the courts for a share of the property they consider belongs to them.

The judge holds that Mrs. Yoell is foreclosed from attaching the validity of the separation agreement between herself and her husband because she made no attack on it for ten years, but he holds that she deserves an allowance

SLAYS WIFE, ENDS OWN LIFE.

Rash Act of a Delta Hotel Employee—Landlady Finds Couple Dead in Bed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDDING, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Brien, until recently employed in the hotel at Delta, were found dead in bed in their apartments in the Ivers House in this city at 7 o'clock this evening.

No one had seen them alive since last Sunday. The revolver in the hands of the husband showed that he had killed his wife and then himself, each bullet entering the temple. There were two empty shells and the bodies were covered deeply with bed clothing.

The fatal shots had been well muffled, and lodgers close by had not heard them. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were married less than three months ago. She was Miss Pearl Scholes of Dunsmuir.

O'Brien floated a spurious check last Sunday. The business man who cashed it pressed today his inquiries about the valuables of O'Brien and he insisted so hard that Mrs. Ivers examined the apartments. O'Brien was very jealous of his wife.

SHOOTS AT NEGRO; KILLS GIRL.

Half Drunken Mississippi Youth Badgers Colored Brother and Fires Fatal Shot in Bravado.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YAZOO CITY (Miss.) March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Katie Cox was shot and instantly killed last evening at Nod, in the eastern part of this county, by Perry Dixon, a prominent young man of the neighborhood.

Miss Cox was bookkeeper for J. C. Johnson, a storekeeper. Dixon, in a half-drunken condition, had been badgering a negro who was standing on the gallery of the store and finally said to him: "Nigger, don't you know I can shoot?" To which the negro replied, "Yes, sir, boss."

Thereupon Dixon fired, evidently at the negro, but the ball struck Miss Cox, who was standing in the door of the store, the ball penetrating her head.

Miss Cox was the daughter of K. Cox, member of the Board of Supervisors, and was very popular.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

DECLARATIONS OF CANDIDATES.

Municipal Campaign Is Getting Fairly Under Way.

Thum Declares Himself a Friend of "Plain People."

Metcalf's Opponents Put Him in Capitalistic Class.

(Office of The Times, 26 S. Raymond avenue.)

PASADENA, March 5.—Yesterday was a day of activity in political circles. The battle is now on in earnest and will be waged without let-up or hindrance for four weeks.

The Metcalf campaign committee of fifteen stalwart politicians have held several meetings, with J. H. Dorn as chairman and chief director. Yesterday afternoon Chief Dorn gave to the public the essential features of the campaign so far as his side is concerned. The slogan of the Metcalf faction, according to Dorn will be "anti-annexation and anti-consolidation with Los Angeles; anti-Owens River water or anti any other supply of water other than that which is now under Pasadena in the form of a great underground lake, practically inexhaustible for a community many times the size of the present city."

This platform has been conjured up by the committee, regardless of the fact that expert water engineers for years, from all parts of the country, have decided unanimously to the contrary.

The Metcalf managers will agitate municipal ownership of water on the same basis as was submitted twice during the Earley administration. The present water companies have the whip hand with the Metcalf crowd and will use every effort possible to sell their plants to the city. Dorn's statement yesterday related as much when he stated that the Lake Vineyard and North Paasdena companies have for more water than they can use.

"REJUVENATION," SAYS THUM.

William Thum, the opposition candidate for Mayor, came out yesterday with a new statement of what he stands for. "New citizenship; ye shall be born again; down with the old parties and put the plain people in power" will be the slogan of his campaign. Thum comes out in the open with his doctrines and advocates municipal ownership.

Thum has made an extensive study of the water question and is generally conceded to be on the right track, but his socialistic tendencies offset his virtues in the minds of many who would otherwise be for him.

Metcalf is "in the hands of his friends," according to his own statement. "I am not in favor of a speech-making campaign," he said. The Thum party will charge that the "interests" are in the Metcalf faction and the Metcalf party will charge socialism against the Thum aggregation. The Thum party will charge that Metcalf will be in favor of selling out the city's lighting plant to the Edison Company for a song and sing it themselves while the Metcalf followers will directly charge Thum with being in an unholy alliance with Los Angeles to trade the Crown City to Los Angeles for a "mess of potage" in form of water from the Owens River.

As a matter of fact neither party intends to do what the other charges. Metcalf states positively that if elected Mayor he will try to put the city lighting plant on a solid and paying basis and Thum promises, if elected, to widen Pasadena's horizon and make her an up-to-date city; with an abundance of water for all time; give the city an advertising which will attract investors; using as illustration the wonderful growth and prosperity of Los Angeles since that city acquired its great water supply. Thum is in favor of paying the present water companies something for their plants, but contends that most of the money spent for water should go towards securing a great abundance for all time. Metcalf believes in selling the present plants to the city at owners' price and developing water to supply the city.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

The Sunday-school Institute of the Methodist churches of Southern California will close its three-days' session this afternoon with an address at the young women's meeting at 3 o'clock by Mrs. Antoinette Lamoreaux and another address at the same hour at the Lake-Avenue Methodist Church by Dr. E. S. Lewis. The institute has been the most successful yet held and a great amount of effective work has been accomplished. The principal speakers of the session have been Bishop Hughes, Dr. E. S. Lewis, Dr. Edgar Blake, Dr. Oren B. Waite and Mrs. Lamoreaux.

The business sessions were closed last night with a big banquet at the First Methodist Church at which many interesting toasts were given by the visiting preachers and several local speakers. The principal address of yesterday was that by Bishop Hughes on "The Personal Attitudes Toward the Bible." The essence of his discourse was that religion is the most natural thing in the world for the human race, the civilized and uncivilized as well. They all demand some sort of religion, according to the enunciations of the bishop.

ATTRACTS SCHOOLMA'AMS.

The beauties of Pasadena as a residential city have been sung far and wide and are attracting people of all kinds and classes. To lady school teachers especially is the advertising literature attractive and they all want a job teaching school. The secretary of the Board of Education is authority for the statement that within the last few months more than 500 women school teachers have made application for positions in Pasadena. Even though they have been told times without number that the bachelor market is away short, nevertheless they want to come. Alluring advertisements for wives for rich men in Canada and other cold and frigid countries are of no avail as against the land of sunshine and roses, where big salaries, short hours and a desirable class of pupils prevail.

The visit was to get pointers to be used in figuring out the kind of a bridge desired across the Arroyo Seco in Pasadena, which has been proposed and for which bids for plans will be advertised following the meeting of the Board of Supervisors tomorrow.

According to the statements of several of the managers of the savings banks of Pasadena the crown city school children are fast accumullating nice fat back accounts. It is believed there is a larger percentage of school children in this city who have savings bank accounts than in any other city in the world.

Dear old sedate Pasadena had a real boxing match yesterday afternoon in Platt's bowling alleys between Kid Fredericks and Mojave Kid. While the fight did not amount to much and no one was seriously hurt beyond bloody noses and battered faces the preachers feel that the city has been grossly outraged and something must be done about it at once. There were no prizes and no admission fee charged and Platt explained to the irate preachers that it was "just for fun" but the fun explanation did not go. The preachers have declared that a more reasonable excuse will have to be given and that such occurances must not be repeated.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

The Rev. Dr. Andrew W. Archibald of Newton Center, Mass., will preach the morning sermon at the First Congregational Church today. His subject will be "Awaking in the Divine Likeness."

The morning services at the First Methodist Church will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Edgar Blake of Chicago.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS.

Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt was hostess at the Valley Hunt Club yesterday afternoon at a delightful entertainment given by Mrs. Edward MacDowell, widow of the famous composer. Her subject was "MacDowell and His Ideals."

A delightful event of last night was a handsome dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cole at their home, No. 849 Lincoln avenue, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Beal of Wyoming, who are spending the winter in Pasadena. Covers were laid for ten.

The Coleman chamber concerts will be given in Clune's Pasadena Theater this year, the 16th, 23d and 30th inst. The proceeds from these concerts will go toward the building of an auditorium and art gallery in connection with Throop.

SAN PEDRO, March 4.—An unofficial report received here today states that S. M. Storer has been appointed to succeed Edward H. Bautzer, as postmaster at San Pedro, the latter retiring after nine years' service in the office, to devote his time to private affairs.

The new appointee has resided in San Pedro for fifteen years, and has been closely identified with the growth and development of the city. He was formerly president of the local Chamber of Commerce and was endorsed by the retiring postmaster and many of the prominent business interests of this locality. Mr. Storer will take charge of the office as soon as he is officially notified of his appointment and his bond is approved.

SCHOOL TANGLE IS CLEARED UP.

District Attorney Files an Important Ruling.

Small Storm Is Threatened Over Pay Check Witheld.

Man Who Failed to Put in Full Time Gets Money.

LONG BEACH, March 4.—A tangle in the school board has been cleared up by a decision of the District Attorney. Member George B. Earley was elected to succeed J. A. Miller, who resigned after being chosen to succeed Andrew Craig, who was elected in 1909 for a four-year term.

In April of this year an election is to be held for three members of the board, Messrs. Rominger, Jones and Burbank, whose terms expire. Some of the members decided also that at this time a new member would have to be elected to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Craig, his successors having been chosen by the other members of the board.

The question was referred to County Superintendent Keppel, who asked the District Attorney for an opinion. The latter has given an opinion that any member who holds his position by reason of choice to fill a vacancy holds over during the term for which the original member was elected. This means that Mr. Earley will be a hold-over member of the board.

LITTLE STORM BREWING.

A little storm is brewing in school circles over a pay check. Some weeks ago it was discovered that Paul Jones, an assistant gardener, was devoting half a day each week to doing some laundry work for a relative while drawing full pay from the school district. He was discharged and his warrant for February held up and not signed by the president.

Through orders from some source Jones was given his warrant and cashed it, but as soon as the cancelled warrant reached the County Superintendent's office, not properly countersigned, it was returned marked "no good."

A relative of Jones reimbursed the bank, but the interference with their business has riled some of the members of the board and an investigation is threatened.

CABLED INSTRUCTIONS.

Justice S. H. Underwood this morning received a cablegram from Gov. George Colton of Porto Rico asking tht the remains of his late wife, who died yesterday in Los Angeles, be buried in Long Beach, and that a letter would follow. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon. Rev. H. K. Booth officiating.

BRILLIANT AFFAIR PROMISED.

Admiral Chauncey Thomas of the Pacific squadron today approved the plans of the Chamber of Commerce naval ball at Hotel Virginia Friday night. Fifteen hundred invitations to Los Angeles, Pasadena and Long Beach society people will be issued. Plans had been made for the cruisers to leave Long Beach Friday afternoon but these orders have been changed and they will not leave until Saturday morning, receiving visitors Friday afternoon.

Today was pay day on the ships and storekeepers and concessions are reaping a harvest today from the fortunate ones who have shore leave. Last night ten of the boys from the Pennsylvania who are rehearsing for their minstrel show next week, found the water too rough to return to their ship in their long boat. They could not reach the wireless station at San Pedro, so they got Douglas Wallace, who has a wireless of his own, to get in communication with the ship and ask for leave to remain ashore, which was granted, otherwise the boys might have been punished for being absent without leave over night

HELD AS WITNESS.

Sam Molino, who has just completed a term in jail for burglary, is unable to furnish $1000 bail and is being held as a witness in the case of Sam Apadaco accused of the murder of J. S. Ranous, and whose trial is set for March 23. Molino is regarded as an important witness, as the day following that on which Apadaco is supposed to have killed his employer, he engaged Molino to help him, and the two went to the Ranous ranch, where they got drunk. He remained with Apadaco several days, and the State thinks his testimony will prove of value.

EMPLOY SECRETARY.

Following a visit to this city last week the directors of the Y.M.C.A. extended a written call to R. H. Gossom of Watsonville, Cal., to take the general secretaryship of the local organization and this morning Mr. Gossom accepted and will assume his duties April 1. The new secretary is 30 years of age, and for six years has been in charge of the Watsonville work. He comes highly recommended by the State committee and by the Watsonville board.

WARD HEARING.

The hearing of the case of George Ward, who is charged with the murder of John Bowers in this city in January has been set for Monday morning before Judge Willis in the Superior Court. Messrs. Clock and Harriman and F. A. Knight, who defended Ward in the preliminary here today, announced that they had severed their connection with the defense because they had been unable to secure their fee in advance from Bowers' widow and her brother X. W. Bygott, who engaged them. Asked if they had received any pay for work already done, the attorneys declined to discuss that phase of the case.

WATER RATES.

The City Council last night passed to its second reading the pending water rate ordinance which goes into effect July 1. An estimated reduction of 20 per cent. is made in the present ordinance. The principal reduction is in the meter rates where domestic use is reduced to 15 cents from 20 cents with further reductions to 12½ and 8 cents for larger quantities. At present there is a flat rate of 20 cents. When applied for water companies must install meters within thirty days at actual cost.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Although the city will lose about $25,000 revenue in its next year's taxes by reason of the State law governing local taxation of corporations, the Council last night instructed the assessor to

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Why Not Shave It Off? If You Do It Right, It Does It Better Than Most Depilatories.

You might just as well shave as use a pasty substance which is to be applied to remove superfluous hair. This simply removes the surface hair; therefore, the effect is the same as shaving, only the razor is more convenient and takes it off cleaner. Of course, it does not matter which way you do it; you only remove the surface hair, which will return stronger after each removal. The same applies to other worthless compounds and so-called "liquid cures." DeMiracle is not like these; it is the only method that gives proof that it is absolutely non-poisonous, safe and sure. You are not asked to buy it on our BARE WORD. It is the only preparation of its kind which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals, prominent magazines and newspapers. Remember, the longer you use such treatments as those referred to above the stronger the hair will grow and the harder it will be to remove it. DeMiracle is sold at all good stores.

No honest dealer will offer you a substitute on which he makes more profit.

We will send you a 52-page booklet containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment. You should read this booklet before you try anything. Write to the DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. G28, 1905 Park Ave., New York, simply saying you want this booklet, and it will be mailed, sealed, at once.

Note—All readers of this paper who are afflicted with superfluous hair growths are strongly advised to write for information concerning this wonderful method, which is endorsed the world over by eminent authorities, who have made a lifelong study of this subject.

The municipal band during the coming season will be increased to thirty members. The reorganization will be made when the band returns from its trip to Salt Lake City in June. Its present strength is twenty-five members.

Mrs. Daniel A. Eno, aged 75, died last night at her home on Elm avenue, supposedly as the result of a fall two weeks ago when one of her hips was broken. She seemed to be improving when complications set in which caused a relapse. A widower and two children survive.

The City Council last night ordered the board of public works to advertise for bids for the construction of 3700 feet of standard double-track railway across and leading from the city docks. Freight carriers desiring communication with the docks will have to connect with this railway.

Covina.

PROVIDE WATER FOR ALL NEEDS.

GREATEST IRRIGATION SYSTEM IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

New Storage Reservoir to Be Built With a Capacity of a Million and a Half Gallons—Heavy Engines and Pumps With Vast Power Being Installed.

COVINA, March 4.—The contract has been let by the Covina Irrigating Company for the installation of machinery at the big auxiliary pumping plant at Baldwin Park, to the H. N. Tracy Company of Los Angeles. A 200-horse-power Corliss steam engine, which will be the largest single engine in this section, and a Byron-Jackson turbine pump, will lift a minimum amount of 250 California miner's inches from a twenty-six-inch well.

In addition to the water-lifting machinery, a "booster plant" will be installed, which will force the flow into a reservoir. This new storage reservoir will be built to accommodate a million and a half gallons. After impounding the water, it will be forced up a raise of 200 feet across the valley and through Covina for a distance of 21,000 feet, to the company's three-acre reservoir on the San Bernardino road, where it will be distributed through the company's pipe-lines to every portion of the valley under the system.

While the machinery being installed is for the purpose of delivering the first unit in the system as planned, the machinery is greater in capacity than that of the first unit, and will successfully handle the second unit of 500 inches, when the second and possibly third well are placed in commission.

The contract with the Tracy company for the first unit is $38,000, and the second about $53,000. Both will undoubtedly be installed. This pumping plant will be the largest single plant in operation in Southern California, and will augment the gravity flow through the ditches from the San Gabriel Canyon. Every indication points to a plentiful supply of gravity water during the summer, but the auxiliary plant will insure absolutely against any contingency.

MUSIC IN SCHOOLS.

The Covina district is excusable in feeling quite a little proud of the progres in music in the schools. Prof. R. W. Groom will hold the annual High School concert next Friday evening with the assistance of what he calls the "junior orchestra," the regular High School orchestra also, the full brass band and the High School glee club. The school will be assisted by Miss Myrtle Ouellet, a concert harpist.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Dr. W. A. Hunter, recently pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles, has accepted the call to the Covina church of that denomination, and preaches his first sermon as pastor-elect tomorrow. Dr. Hunter was for fifteen years pastor of the First Church of Clinton, Ill. A curious fact is that there is also another Dr. W. A. Hunter, who is now pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Riverside, the two being often confused.

The new time table on the Pacific Electric meets with quite general approval. A feature is the leaving time from Los Angeles of the last car at night, which leaves the station at 11:45, giving the theater-goers more time. There are also seven cars each way to San Dimas.

len street has been sold to Mrs. R. L. Garrett of Los Angeles for $13,500. It contains eight acres of navel and valencia oranges. Part of what is known as the old Badger place, consisting of ten and one-half acres, has been sold by the owner, Harry Gibson of Los Angeles to W. E. Sitton of that city for $22,000.

Superintendent of Streets M. L. Mehnert has resigned his position, the resignation being accepted at the last meeting of the city Board of Trustees. No successor has as yet been appointed.

LEGISLATURE GIVES APPROVAL.

FREEHOLDERS' CHARTER SOON TO BE IN FULL FORCE.

Provision That Mayor and Trustees Will Receive Pay Has Stimulated the Ambitions of Patriots and Several "Receptive" Ones Hope to Be Shosen.

POMONA, March 4.—The new Pomona charter bill giving this city a new form of government has been passed by both the Senate and Assembly of the State Legislature at Sacramento. The new charter embodies many points of modern and progressive government.

In two months will occur the election of new city officials The office of Mayor will carry with it a salary of $100 per month and the four Councilmen will each receive $25 per month. This will be the first time that the chief executive of the city has been paid a salary and a number of candidates for the office are already in a receptive attitude.

The contract for a $5000 addition to the San Dimas Lemon Association packing house has been let to R. J. Noble of 959 North Garey avenue, this city.

Architect Robert H. Orr of the State Bank Building, is receiving bids for the erection of a high school and domestic science building at Claremont, which will be opened by the clerk of the Claremont high school district on Saturday afternoon, March 11. Mr. Orr is the architect of the building which is of attractive and convenient arrangement.

The Travel Section of the Pomona Ebell Club met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Mayo. A paper on the "Early Mexican Governors in California" was read by Mrs. W. H. Poston. Mrs. John Yeend read another paper entitled "Mexican Government in California," and Mrs. Samuel D. Moles told of "Mountains in California." A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Mayo. The Travel Section has been making a study of Alta California, and the Southwest.

Rev. M. D. Clubb of the First Christian Church has arranged for a series of revival meetings to be conducted by Rev. Dr. R. H. Crossfield, president of Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky., commencing at the church tomorrow. G. H. Waters, the veteran chorister, will have charge of the music.

SUFFRAGE CLUB FORMED.

Organization Is Launched at Enthusiastic Meeting of Women in South Pasadena Home.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 4.—The Suffrage Amendment Club was launched yesterday afternoon at an enthusiastic meeting of women in the home of Mrs. Leo Longley on Prospect avenue. She was chosen as temporary president and Mrs. P. J. Cooney as temporary secretary.

A committee consisting of Mrs. D. Z. Gardner, Mrs. Cloud and Mrs. Carpenter was appointed by the president to arrange the by-laws and the constitution of the organization. Several prominent speakers upon women's suffrage will be asked to attend the next meeting of the club which will be held next Friday afternoon at the same place.

NEW MEMBERS.

At a session of the South Pasadena Chamber of Comerce last evening, ten new members were admitted.

REPAINTING BODIES.

It's about time for those who shifted from the touring bodies to the enclosed sort on their cars for the winter to go back to the open bodies again. They are now figuring on having the touring for the painting to be done thoroughly and that is a consideration that should be kept in mind. If the painting is to be a rush job it is likely there will come a time in the summer that the owner of the car wishes he had let a little more time be taken with it.

MOTOR RIGHTS.

Thirty bills, affecting to a greater or lesser extent the legal rights and privileges of motorists, have been submitted to the present session of the Massachusetts Legislature, and all have been referred to the Committee on Roads and Bridges. These are divided into three main groups—those affecting the carrying of lights, those concerning fees and licenses, and those for proposed extensions and alterations in the highway system. A number of miscellaneous bills are also being considered.

Scarcely able to keep his balance on account of the swerving of the machine, Rev. Cleveland Kleihauer pronounced the ceremony. None of the party could tell afterwards just where the event took place.

The student body claims the auditorium is not adequate in stage equipment or seating capacity. Principal Gould holds that when the auditorium was included in the High School plans it was intended for class plays and all entertainments originating in the schools.

The student committee tonight declared war, a majority favoring the plan to go ahead with hiring a theater in spite of Principal Gould's ruling.

ELECTRIC RATES ARE DEBATED.

TRUSTEES INVESTIGATE TARIFFS IN OTHER SOUTHERN CITIES.

Edison Company Declares That Any Rate Below Ten Cents a Kilowatt Is in Effect Confiscatory. Presbyterian Church Will Put Pool Tables in for Young Men.

SANTA ANA, March 4.—Next Monday evening the City Trustees are going to pass an ordinance cutting the rate for electric lights for private consumers from ten cents per kilowatt hour to either eight cents or some figure near eight cents.

For the last three months the City Trustees have been carrying on an investigation into electric light rates elsewhere, and have had before them the report of a citizens committee recommending a cut in the rate and the protest and statement of the Southern California Edison Company. The Edison company has been using half page advertisements in both of the daily papers to present to the public the company's protests against any lowering of the rates. These advertisements are headed, "Electric Talks," and they have reached No. 16.

The Edison company's statement shows that in 1910 the company made but 2.47 per cent. on its investment in the electric light business here. It declares that a cut below ten cents per kilowatt hour will mean that the company can make no profit. The company further urges in its defense that on January 1 it voluntarily reduced its rate from twelve and a half cents to ten cents. The higher rate carried a discount for early payments. The lower rate carries no discount.

The City Trustees are informed that the municipal plant at Pasadena is making money at five cents. They have become convinced that the rate of ten cents is too high.

At a conference of City Trustees and candidates for City Trustees last night it was concluded that a proposal to fix the salary of a City Trustee at $25 a month would be submitted to the voters on April 10.

NEW CHURCH.

The United Presbyterian Church of this city is making plans for building a fine new church. The church plans to establish in the basement a department that will be somewhat in the nature of a Y.M.C.A. At a banquet of the Men's League of the church last night approval was given to a suggestion to put into the department a bowling alley, pool table or billiard table, it being stated that in themselves bowling, pool and billiards are wholesome and scientific and should be incorporated in the plans to provide entertainment for young men.

JURY DEBATING.

At 12 o'clock today the Adolph L. Schonek case went to the jury that during the last six weeks has heard the evidence in the case. Schonek was tried for arson. His first trial in San Diego county resulted in a hung jury. Owing to widespread prejudice against him at San Diego the case was transferred to this county.

The fires charged to Schonek began fourteen months ago. Up to April 3, 1910, the night he was arrested, eleven fires were credited to the fire-bug. Letters threatening the use of dynamite if the city did not pay the "bug" $147, were received by San Diego officials and newspapers. The city was aroused, fearing that the "bug" who had successfully fired several vacant buildings, including the First Congregational and the First Baptist churches, was an anarchist.

The case against Schonek was largely circumstantial. Handwriting experts testified on both sides, some alleging that the same person who wrote the letters admitted to be Schonek's, wrote the threatening letters. The jury is still out at midnight.

THINK MILLIONS IN THIS WILL.

REDLANDS MAN'S TESTAMENT FILED FOR PROBATE.

Estate Is Left in Trust—to His Widow and Children, Two Sons and Four Daughters—Plaintiff Wins Suit to Set Aside Lease on Mines at Dale.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 4.—The will of E. C. Sterling, the Redlands millionaire, who died last Sunday, was filed today for probate by O'Melveny, Stevens and Milliken, of Los Angeles. While the petition for probate merely gives the value of the estate at over $100,000 it is believed that Sterling was worth in the neighborhood of $25,000,000.

He leaves his estate in trust, to his widow and children, two sons and four daughters. The two sons, Robert and Edward Sterling, obtain two-sixths of the estate at once, the will making a trust of the share left to the four daughters warns them against giving future profits from their interest in the estate to secure obligations. The will sets aside $83,000 as a special trust for the benefit of the widow, who is advised in the will to turn into this trust the life insurance of the deceased, which amounts to $40,000.

WINS SUIT ON LEASE.

H. A. Landwehr today won his suit against H. B. Slater to set aside a lease to the Seal of Gold mines at Dale, the lease having been made to Slater by P. T. Evans and other Riverside stockholders of the mining company without notice in proper form being publicly given. The court also sustains Landwehr's redemption of the property from Sheriff's sale, and states that the Riverside stockholders sought in every way to conceal from Landwehr the circumstances of the sale to prevent his making redemption. This suit is one of many growing out of the efforts of the Riverside stockholders to oust Landwehr from control. They even had him arrested for embezzlement and issuing worthless checks, and he sued them for false arrest and defamation of character. The jury hearing this case returned a verdict for $25,000 in his favor.

WANTS FORGER HELD.

Deputy District Attorney Hodge has wired to the officers at Fresno to hold B. F. McElroy, the forger, as this county wishes to send him to San Quentin for five years for breaking his parole. January 27, McElroy attempted to pass a worthless check upon merchants of Fresno. He pleaded guilty before the Fresno court, and told such a pathetic story that the court was inclined to be lenient with him. An investigation, though, revealed that he was paroled here. McElroy's crookedness here netted him over $1200 on worthless checks.

MEN WHO'LL ASSESS.

County Assessor H. W. Wilson will start Monday to make the new assessment for the county. His deputies will be: Redlands, C. T. Gifford; Colton, T. E. Moon; San Bernardino, Arthur Palmer; Highland, E. A. Valley; Rialto, Harold Husted; Etiwanda, John Scott; Cucamonga, M. F. Milliken; Upland, F. W. Palmer; Ontario, I. G. Morris; Chino, E. A. Craw; Mission and Yucaipa, A. L. Fowler; desert region, W. B. Coombs.

Licenses were issued today to Charles Edward Miller, native of Illinois, age 24, and Roberta Varnell, native of Texas, age 24, residents of Los Angeles; and Roy Whitmore, native of Iowa, age 25, resident of Washunga, Okla.; and Olive Bernice Lewis, native of Arizona, age 19, resident of San Bernardino; and Abraham Haller, native of Kansas, age 29, resident of Los Angeles, and Pearl Roberson, native of Kansas, age 20, resident of San Bernardino.

POSTOFFICE SAFE IS BLOWN.

High-Power Explosive Is Used Which Wrecked the Building—Considerable Money Secured.

OCEANSIDE, March 4.—The postoffice at Vista, in the Hindle store, ten miles east of Oceanside, on the branch line of the Santa Fe railway at Escondido, was broken into and robbed of $590.84 last night.

An attempt to burglarize the Stevens store at Bonsall, between Vista and Fallbrook, the same night, failed. The watchman who sleeps in the building being awakened in time to get busy with his gun. He fired one shot and the burglar made his escape.

The Sheriff was summoned from San Diego and with Constable Sylvester Marron is searching the country for the burglar. In the burglary at Vista the missing items are as follows: money orders, $71.84; stamps, $418; cash, $81; pennies, $10; nickels and dimes, $10.

RAILROAD INTEREST.

Oceanside people are much interested in the movement on the part of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce to induce the Santa Fe railway to reopen the Temecula gap of the road between Fallbrook and Temecula, which was discontinued after the washout in 1896. The distance which it is proposed shall be rebuilt is 13 miles. With its restoration the distance to Temecula by rail would be 33 miles, as against about 150 miles under the present arrangement. The Chamber of Commerce will meet shortly for the purpose of contract for furnishing about $14,000 worth of cast iron pipe and fittings for improvements on the municipal water system, voted in the recent bond issue of $20,000. The bid of the successful company on the pipe was $34.15 per ton, with $63 per ton for the fittings.

SOLDIERS DOING HEAVY MARCH.

Escondido Detachment of the Fifth Artillery Walk Twenty-five Miles to Bivouac.

ESCONDIDO, March 4.—At the close of a twenty-five mile march, Tuesday, thirty members of the Escondido detachment of the Fifth Company, Artillery Corps, will meet forty members of the San Diego branch of the company in sham battle, and after the skirmish they will go into camp for the night in Murphy's Canyon, continuing on to San Diego the following day. The Escondido troops will be under command of Lieut. H. E. Clyne, and the San Diego soldiers will be commanded by his brother, Capt. S. E. Clyne. It will be the first experience of the local soldiers and there is much interest in the event.

DECIDUOUS PLANTING.

A considerable acreage of the valley will be put into deciduous trees the present season. It was demonstrated years ago that the finest deciduous fruit could be grown here, but the market was limited and the growers for the most part were inexperienced in the industry and many of the trees were taken up. Among the larger individual planters of deciduous trees this year will be W. E. Alexander, of the Escondido Valley Land and Planting Company, who will devote ten acres to peaches and ten acres to pears on the Homeland Acres.

EUCALYPTUS GROWTH.

An excellent growth has been made by the trees of the Eucalyptus Culture Company in the 700 acre plantation, the Bernardo grant, south of Escondidi. The company has over half a million young trees in the nursery at Bernardo, although on account of the continued rainy weather it is doubtful if they are able to plant all of them this season. The plan was to plant 500 acres.

Coronado has some room now.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, March 3.—C. J. Platt of Pasadena has sold through the H. A. Shiffer agency the eighty acres known as the Cooper place northwest of town, to Mr. Huth of Los Angeles, for $3200. Mr. Huth will improve the property and establish a nursery there.

Woodward & Sons report the sale of $10,000 worth of alfalfa hay since January 1. They have sold over $25,000 worth of hay from their hundred acres in the past two years.

George Brum, Dr. J. E. Minney and others are making a test of a plat of sugar beets with seed furnished by the Southwestern Sugar Beet Company. Mr. Brum expects to make a thorough test of a plat at his home place on Sixth street.

A special car arrived today bearing Supt. Hitchcock, Master Mechanic I. C. Hicks, Trainmaster A. G. Wild and General Road Inspector J. E. McNeil. The officials made a thorough inspection of this end of the road.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Adams, who were recently married in Colton, have returned from their wedding trip and will for the present make their home with Mr. Adams's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Adams.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated it extends down the wind-pipe into the bronchial tubes and after awhile attacks the lungs.

Have you a cough?
Do you take cold easily?
Have you a pain in the side?
Do you raise frothy materials?
Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?
Do you feel like you were growing weaker?

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

OF THE EARS

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness.

Is your hearing failing?
Do your ears discharge?
Is the wax drying in your ears?
Do you hear better on some days?
Does a cold make your hearing worse?
Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing mucous which drops down from the head and throat at night.

Is there nausea?
Do you belch up gas?
Are you constipated?
Do you bloat up after eating?
Is there constant bad taste?
Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores are curing hundreds every year.

PETTY SPIRIT IS NOT AVAILING.

EVERY AVAILABLE DOLLAR TO BE USED IN ARRANGEMENT.

Porterville Display at the Los Angeles Land and Products Exposition Promises to Be in Accord With the Enterprise and Spirit of That Thriving City.

PORTERVILLE, March 4.—At a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held at the chamber offices this afternoon, President Thomas named F. L. Kennedy, W. L. Crow and Robert Horbech as the members of the committee to take charge of the installation of the Porterville exhibit at the Los Angeles Land and Products Exposition.

There has been some outside opposition to the appropriation, and the voting of an appropriation for this purpose was deferred, pending an examination by President Thomas of one or two "kicks" at the show and its purpose.

At the meeting this afternoon, H. C. Carr, who attended a banquet of the show's boosters last week in Los Angeles, spoke in favor of the exhibit and his talk was an eloquent tribute to the character of the men behind the show and the Los Angeles boost spirit which ensures its success. Although the motion to install the exhibit had been passed previously, the available funds had not been appropriated. Following the address by Mr. Carr, President Thomas informed the directors that his investigation showed that opposition manifested to the show was due to petty jealousy and he urged the board to appropriate every possible dollar available for the work. The motion passed unanimously to leave the cost of installation and incidental expenses entirely in the hands of the committee.

This committee is the same one which had charge of the installation of the prize-winning exhibit at the Northern California Citrus Fair at Sacramento. The same design and general features will be used as in the exhibit which was the hit of the show in Sacramento.

ALLEGED BLIND PIG.

Officers Isham and Maston, on a midnight tour of the business district, last night arrested Ivan Grue in the Berry pool hall on Main street at Mills upon a charge of liquor selling, the warrant on this charge being quickly followed by one for gambling. Isham entered the hall, which is in the basement, at the same time posting Maston at a rear window, which is on a level with the sidewalk and which affords a good view of the interior of the place. Isham entered the hall unexpectedly and Maston from his lookout, saw Grue slip behind the bar in the room and secrete a bottle of liquor, which he had just a moment before handed to another inmate of the room. Maston acquainted Isham with the proceedings and the arrest followed.

Grue was then arrested on warrants sworn out on a complaint charging him with being the proprietor of a poker game in the same resort on February the 25th, this making the third warrant sworn out against Grue in as many days. The original warrant was for illegal liquor selling, and while this warrant was pending he was engaged, so the officers say, in serving his regular round of customers. There are also said to be two Federal warrants against Grue.

He was released on bail by Judge Lumely, by whom the warrants were issued.

INVITATION DAY.

Friday, March 17, has been chosen as Porterville Invitation day, and every resident of Porterville will be expected to send to as many friends as they have in the Eastern and Middle Western States, attractive packages of Porterville literature, together with a special letter, which sets forth the advantages of Porterville climate atthis particular time of the year. At the chamber the secretary and his assistants are busy making up a high pile of these packages, each of which will contain a copy of the illustrated pamphlet, "Porterville People Prosper," and the chamber publication on "Orange Growing in the Porterville District."

RELATIVES SCORE IN SUIT.

Physician in Reply to a Hypothetical Question Asserts That Deceased Did Not Have Healthy Mind.

VISALIA, March 4.—Contestants of the will of Horace Whittaker, the eccentric land owner, who left a testament bequeathing his immense property to old friends in San Francisco and cutting off his relatives without a cent, scored a point in the Superior Court yesterday, in their suit to set aside the document, by which they are disinherited.

Both the disinherited brother and sister were upon the stand testifying to their brother's unsound condition of mind, prior to his death, but the effect of their testimony was somewhat shaken, when it was shown that neither of them attempted to help take care of the aged recluse during his last illness.

Dr. W. W. Cross, a well-known alienist of Fresno, was called to the stand late this afternoon, and was given a hypothetical and somewhat involved question, carrying in essentials the actions and attitude of mind of Whittaker just prior to his death. In response to the question Dr. Cross asserted that the conditions would indicate "an unhealthy condition of intellect." This is the strongest point yet scored by the contestants, although it is said that the defense has alienists who will assert as stoutly that Whittaker's condition was one no more than eccentric. Property to the value of nearly half a million dollars is at issue.

It is asserted that if the present action of the contestants is successful a move will be made by them to have the courts set aside a deed which was made just prior to Whittaker's death in which he transferred to the regents of the State University a quarter section of the finest redwood timber standing in the Sierras west of Dinuba, on condition that the property be used as a zoological garden and natural history park. It is the claim of the brother and sister that this action was taken when their brother was not responsible for his actions.

Mayor Orr last night issued to the Chief of Police, orders to prevent the presentation here of a melodrama entitled the "Great Trunk Mystery," a blood and thunder show which, it is claimed, is based upon the Elsie Sigel murder in New York. In the play, it is said, the Chinese are as a class held up to scorn as being heartless and blood-thirsty wretches.

This action of the Mayor was taken in response to the following telegram which was received by him this morning from the Chinese Consul at San Francisco:

To the Honorable, the Mayor of Visalia:

Sir—Please do all in your power to prevent the presentation of the play entitled, "The Trunk Mystery," in your city.

[Signed] LI YOUNG YEW,
Chinese Consul-General, stationed at San Francisco.

Upon receipt of the telegram, Mayor Orr communicated with Coalinga, where the show played last night, and finding that the play was one anything but conducive to public morality, it is said, as well as one of a degrading sort, he issued the orders that no license was to be sold to the management. Mayor Rowell of Fresno, who was in communication with Mayor Orr, stated that the performance would not be allowed in the Raisin City.

Investors Draw Dividends

While Promoters Work and Wait

Probably one of the fairest propositions ever offered to investors in California oil companies is that now offered by the SHELL PETROLEUM COMPANY, the president of which is also the editor of "The Oil Age," and probably one of the best-posted oil men in this State. Mr. Shell is a firm believer in the principle that the men and women who supply the cash that makes possible the development of an oil property are entitled to first call upon the earnings, and this principle is being carried out in the organization of the SHELL PETROLEUM COMPANY. This company has two classes of stock—Cumulative preferred, which draws dividends from July 1st, this year, and common stock, drawing dividends only when there is a surplus after paying the preferred dividend. There are probably not more than three, out of about three thousand, California oil companies that have preferred stock, giving those who paid cash a preference right over the promoters.

The preference right is only one of the many superior features of the SHELL PETROLEUM COMPANY—among others may be mentioned the location of property No. 1, almost surrounded by the Standard Oil Company in a field producing the highest grade oil in the State. The Standard has wells producing 50 to 100 barrels per day of oil testing between 35 and 40 degrees Baume, worth more than $2.00 per barrel. No overproduction here.

SHELL PETROLEUM COMPANY is incorporated under California laws with a capitalization of $500,000, one-half of which is cumulative preferred and the other half common. Only one-half of the common stock was given for property No. 1, the other half of the common and all the preferred being in the treasury.

A limited allotment of the preferred stock is being offered to the public at 25 cents per share, in four payments, and each purchaser of the preferred receives a bonus of an equal number of shares of common stock. Honest and efficient management is assured and as the organizers own nothing but the common stock, they will not be able to realize anything on their holdings (because the preferred stock has first call) until the company is on a substantial paying basis. It is therefore necessary for the officials to work hard and wait in order to make anything. Compare this with the organization of most companies that have only one class of stock, one-half of which goes to the promoters

No cash commissions are being paid for the sale of this stock, so if you are interested apply for further particulars direct to

Better Than Spanking

Spanking will not cure children of wetting the bed, because it is not a habit but a dangerous disease. The C. H. Rowan Drug Co., Dept. 306, Chicago, Illinois, have discovered a strictly harmless, yet never failing cure for this distressing disease and to make known its merits they will send a Big Package securely wrapped and prepaid Absolutely Free to any reader of The Times. This remedy also cures frequent desire to urinate and inability to control urine during the night or day in old or young. The C. H. Rowan Drug Co. are an old Reliable House; write to them today for the free medicine. Cure the afflicted members of your family, then tell your neighbors and friends about this wonderful discovery.

PERSONAL—WONDERFUL, WONDERFUL, WONDERFUL! At last he has come. The astral magnetic allophanic doctor and specialist. Who is this astral magnetic specialist? And what is this new perfect and scientific method of treatment? Why astral magnet allophanic treatment embraces all higher expressions of force; light, heat, electricity, terrestrial magnetism, etc. It is the latent life principal and active on all planes of matter, mind and spirit. It is the medium of the senses, the instrument of the mind and the executive of the disciplined will. It is the mystic power in mesmerism, magic and miracle, spiritual phenomena, and every form of healing. It is unconsciously employed in Christian and mental science, Vitapathy, Osteopathy, suggestion, etc., with occasional remarkable results. It is recognized by all eminent medical men as medicatrix natura. The Oriental masters call it "Breath of Brahma," the eternal living light. It is the agent of the Supreme architect that creates, vitalizes and sustains forms. It also heals, renews and restores them when injured or diseased. To grasp and guide it—has been the secret of seers and magi of all ages and countries—Persia, Chaldea, Egypt, India and others. Its curative record reaches back into the dim and distant past 5000 years. The East is still the master's place—the source of living light. This power acting on the spiritual plane produces instantaneous cures. On the mental its action is less rapid, but equally certain. On the physical plane it is slower still, but appeals more to the senses and therefore acceptable to a greater number of persons. And the astral magnetic allophanic doctor and specialist, is the only person in America who is master of this new, wonderful and perfect scientific method of treatment and the only doctor who can give you astral magnetic allophanic treatment when all other methods fail. Astral magnetic allophanic treatment succeeds. If you are suffering with no matter what complaint of mind or body, go at once to the astral magnetic allophanic specialist and receive peace, joy, health, happiness, new, rich vitalized red blood, quiet, strong nerves, brain, body and mind. This master of astral magnetic allophanic treatment is now permanently located at 912 West Sixth street at the Inda Apartments, on the ground floor. Come one, come all, who suffer. Peace be unto you. 912 WEST SIXTH ST. Phone Main 2565.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE.
NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.

A resident of Los Angeles 27 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs, your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc.; also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE, in fact, the HOROSCOPE GIVES ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. Predictions for the FUTURE—made by the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse, will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Annie Besant, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Fritzi Scheff, Ysaye, Capt. Hobson, Jefferson, Joaquin Miller, Ellen Beach Yaw, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, Baron Rothschild, H. E. Huntington, Countess de Swirsky, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliot, Josef Hofmann, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason ONLY are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK, with his trained judgment, must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Personal attention given. Strict privacy.
Daily and evening, Sunday, 10 to 2.
STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and properity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

Must have, at once, more ready cash to cover constantly maturing contracts. Business greater than I can finance, and greater than I can attend to personally, if I had a million. All contracts guaranteed and executed by bank, so we would both be protected. Will sell one-fourth interest for $1500 cash, balance of $8500 to be paid out of profits. The $1500 cash to be returned, so that the entire one-fourth interest would be paid for out of the business. The one-fourth interest worth $2400 profits annually, and a salaried position of $1200 ($100 monthly.) A thorough business woman will be considered. I need a hustling, ambitious assistant as much as I require additional capital, hence this unconventional way of reaching the right party, instead of borrowing the cash needed from my bank and trusting my business to help who take little interest beyond "how much do I get and when?" Only principals need apply; no brokers answered. Bank references exchanged.

VERNON BOOSTS FOR CAR LINE.

Ask Cross-Town Franchise Without Delay.

Councilmen Attend and Get the Inspiration.

Boss Lissner Gets Scored for Dictation.

A mass-meeting was held last night, at the corner of Vernon and Central avenues, in the interest of a cross-town car line on the first-mentioned thoroughfare. The hall was crowded with men and women from the section of the city south of Jefferson street, which is the rival of Vernon for the first cross-town franchise.

Councilmen Gregory, Whiffen and Betkouski were present at the meeting, through an invitation extended to them by the United Improvement Associations, of the south end of the city, and all were pressed into making speeches. Councilman O'Brien came in for some criticism because he did not respond to the invitation, and a committee was appointed to see that he and Councilman Williams go to the meeting to be held at Moneta and Vernon avenues, next Saturday night.

J. M. Glass presided and notified his audience that he would do his best to "hold them down." However, the meeting proved all one-sided, and there was not the least ripple of excitement. Only one man ventured to speak, as a resident of Jefferson street, and he created a great laugh by saying that he didn't just oppose the car line on Vernon avenue, but he thought that thoroughfare ought to be reserved for a boulevard.

HITS LISSNER.

H. S. McCallum and N. L. Blabon tore up the arguments of Boss Lissner in favor of Jefferson street, and decried his attempting to dictate to the people. The former sent a telegram to Lissner, inviting him to attend the meeting last night, but as he did not see fit to answer, either in person nor by telegram, no expression was secured from him.

The two speakers mentioned, together with John Cort, Garner Curran, Dr. Hon and others, brought out the strong points in favor of Vernon avenue. They showed that it would accommodate at least 60,000 people in the southern part of the city; that there are seven school buildings directly on Vernon avenue, and the Manual Arts High School is but two blocks north of it, that it is the only street in the city straight through from east to west, and is the logical route for the car line, and a direct route to Exposition Park.

Councilman Gregory announced that he is and always has been in favor of Vernon avenue; Councilman Whiffen coyly said, "I hope to be able to assist you," and Councilman Betkouski diplomatically left no clear idea as to where he stands.

ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY.

A committee, consisting of Messrs. Curran, McCallum and J. W. Sans, reported a resolution, requesting the City Council to at once advertise the sale of a franchise on Vernon avenue, which was unanimously adopted.

The arguments also brought out the fact that the line on Jefferson street is actually three-fourths built at present, there being a link of but seven blocks, between Main and Central, necessary to complete it. It was argued that by its diagonal course through the city, it could not at all accommodate the people who are seeking the benefit for the school children, more than for any other purpose.

The Streets and Boulevards Committee of the City Council will go over the ground, within the next few days, and will take the matter up in committee one week from Thursday, and will likely make a recommendation to the Council at that meeting.

WILL ANSWER FIRE CALLS.

Police Ambulance Will Hereafter Respond by Special Arrangement, When Summoned for Injured.

The police ambulance, whenever needed, will henceforth attend all fires as quickly and promptly as the fire department, following an order issued by Chief of Police Sebastian yesterday.

Under the new order, whenever some person or persons is or are hurt at a fire, the call for the police ambulance will be sent from the fire box direct, making it the fastest of all "fast calls." In collaboration with Chief Eley of the fire department, Chief Sebastian has had an additional call put on the fire boxes for this purpose. This consists of one, one and seven taps on the fire gongs, as if the gongs were ringing No. 117.

At this signal a police automobile will at once hurry to the Receiving Hospital take on a surgeon or a nurse and proceed to the fire with all speed possible, the location being indicated b ythe number of the fire alarm box immediately following the ambulance signal.

Heretofore, it has been the custom to send the patrol wagon to all fires in a certain portion of the retail district, this, however, being more for the purpose of carrying out the fire ropes and officers to enforce the fire lines. When people were hurt at fires in other sections of the city, nothing was known of it at police headquarters or in the Receiving Hospital until a telephone message from the spot had been received.

WARLIKE MAN SUBDUED.

Ugly Demonstration Against Wife Employed in Refectory Establishment Is Followed by Arrest.

After a warlike demonstration that disturbed the digestion of patrons of the Pig and Whistle refectory establishment yesterday evening, G. W. Zellars was locked in the City Jail, with a charge of carrying concealed weapons lodged against him.

Zellars and his wife recently came to Los Angeles from Portland. She obtained a position at the establishment named, Friday night, Mrs. Zellars appealed to the police for protection against her husband. She said she was tired of furnishing him money and that he was growing violent.

Yesterday evening, Zellars, armed with a razor and a revolver, took a stand in front of the place where his wife was employed. Shaking his fist at his wife inside and tapping the razor in his pocket and the revolver on his hip, he hurled dire threats at her until Motorcycle Patrolman Kierscey, summoned from headquarters, by telephone, caught him by the back of the neck and subdued him, much to the relief of the soda water consumers.

PRISONER IS MYSTERIOUS.

Patrolman Arrests Man Who Has Pistol in Hand and Evidently Author of Three Unexplained Shots.

Investigating the firing of three pistol shots about 11 o'clock last night, Patrolman North found a man, who gives the name of Earl Anderson, and who furnishes what appears to be a police mystery. Anderson was locked up in tre City Jail under a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, pending further investigation. He was thought, at first, to be Sam Barron, one of the Venice car bandits, but is taller and heavier than the description of Leroy Fox's pal.

North was walking his beat along the Southern Pacific yards near Alameda and Macy streets when he heard the shots fired in rapid succession. He started out and overtook Anderson, who was walking down the tracks, pistol in hand.

When he heard North, Anderson wheeled and raised his revolver as though to shoot. North had already drawn his gun and leveled it.

"Drop that gun or I'll drop you," said North.

Anderson obeyed the command, throwing it on the ground and covering it with his foot as though to grind it into the mud.

The prisoner said he was a teamster and laborer here looking for work, and had been in the city about two months. Further than that, he refused to say a word, and it was impossible to learn why he had fired the shots in the railroad yards.

BOY CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Rudolph Schlosser, a delivery boy, was arrested by Detectives Hawley and McKenzie on Vermont avenue yesterday evening and locked up in the City Jail under a charge of theft. It is alleged that, on February 9, after delivering some lettuce at the home of A. B. Lambert, on Vermont avenue, near Washington street, Schlosser returned to the house, let himself in with a pass key and stole a gold watch and chain, which were recovered by the detectives.

BILL TO CUT OFFICIALS' PRACTIC PASSES; ECHO OF FORMER F

Measure Gets by Senate Which Abridges Right of trict Attorneys to Accept Private Retainers—Los geles Members at Sacramento Split on Offices vision in County Government Measure.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of five bills of Senator Hewitt which passed the Senate this morning vitally affects the office of Dist.-Atty. Fredericks.

It provides that the District-Attorney in counties of the first class must devote all his time to his office and must not accept employment in private practice. The bill is one of several measures antagonists of Capt. Fredericks have invented to deprive him of the fruits of his hard-earned victory over "Tommy" Woolwine in the last election.

Reports tonight have it that Fredericks will arrive shortly to discuss the provision for salary and deputies for his office which are to go in the County Government bill when the Senate opens.

The Los Angeles members held another meeting tonight to discuss the provisions for all offices. County Assessor Hopkins was with them. He wants a more liberal allowance for his office.

The inability of the Los Angeles delegation to agree on the provisions for all the county offices is giving them much concern and conference has not been free of asperity.

The differences have been closely guarded but the District-Attorney and his office are commonly supposed to be the bone of contention.

CITY'S JURISDICTION INCREASED.

Another Hewitt bill passed today, permits the city under its charter to exercise jurisdiction for one mile beyond its boundaries, in sanitary matters and give three miles jurisdiction over the waters of the harbor outside of the city limits.

A third Hewitt measure establishes the Police Court of Los Angeles as a separate court, with a presiding justice, and regulates bailing of prisoners and selection of juries. It was prepared by Judge Chambers and amended in committee.

STATEHOOD MEASURES USED TO BLOCK APPROPRIATION

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Consideration of immediate Statehood for New Mexico and Arizona held up the business of the Senate for two hours today and threatened to defeat several big appropriation bills.

The Senate had under consideration the resolution formally opproving the New Mexico Constitution. Senator Owen insisting that the Arizona Constitution, which only reached Washington yesterday, should be approved at the same time, held the floor until the Senate leaders agreed to couple Arizona with New Mexico. After the two had been coupled, however, the Senate voted down the resolution. It was asserted later that this did not metn that New Mexic admitted by action of

"I LOVED HER TOO MUCH," CRIES SLAYER OF QUEEN'S FAVO

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ROME, March 4.—It is expected that Baron Vincenzo Paterno, the lieutenant who stabbed Princess Guilia Trigona di Sant' Elia, lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, will live to answer for his crime.

The attending physicians say that the crisis has passed. The patient appears not to have been seriousyl injured in his attempted suicide.

The crown prosecutor interrogated him this afternoon for nearly an hour. Paterno took advantage of his condition to answer only what he wished. He repeated often:

"I loved that woman. I loved her too much. She refused to belong to me longer. It made me lose my head."

He insisted on issuing a note denying that he killed the Princess for revenge or that he desired money.

FACT AND COMMENT.

INDICATIONS are strong that the prestige of the old business portion of the city is to be established firmly and for all time to come. To everyone who has the best interests of Los Angeles at heart recent significant developments leading to this end are highly satisfying.

The location of the magnificent new Federal building at Temple and Spring streets was the first step in the rehabilitation of the traditional center of Los Angeles. The civic center plan with all that it implies has played an incalculably important part in the quickening that was departing from the area where not so many years ago was to be found all the life of the city. The majestic Courthouse and its new neighbor, the huge and imposing Hall of Records, will, with the Postoffice, anchor forever to their vicinity the civic and political life of the Southland's metropolis. Nearby, the City Hall and other stately buildings will be reared before many years have rolled by.

New Second Street.

Second street especially has the kening been notably in evidence, ugh the signs are not lacking where in the district. At Second Main, Thomas Higgins has erected ment to his faith in the form of of the finest and largest mono concrete office structures in the States. A block east of this, at nd and Los Angeles, rapid progress made on the mammoth six building of the Perry estate. Second and Broadway a ten-story scraper of reinforced concrete construction is now well under way for the Broadway Investment Company. At Second and Hill the stately nine-story home of the Union League Club will be dedicated within a few weeks.

Nor will the improvements on Second street end here. Two men recently bought the southeast corner of Second and Hill streets for the express purpose of erecting a ten-story steel-frame office building on the site, and the early solution of some of the North End's problems will undoubtedly insure the starting of this block within the present year. At the southwest corner of the same thoroughfares a seven-story hotel is planned, while at the northwest corner of Second and Main a fireproof hostelry of twelve stories is projected. All of these structures, taken with some of the fine old buildings already on Second street will make that thoroughfare as imposing as any in the city.

When the men who are back of projects like those of the new Second street ask for a hearing on the question of a tunnel or any other public improvement they are entitled to a serious hearing upon the part of the city authorities.

First Street Also.

First street, too, is responding to the trend of things. A ten-story building at the southwest corner of First and Broadway is an early prospect, tentative plans for such a structure having already been prepared. At First and Main plans are shaping for a twelve-story hotel which may be one of the largest on the Coast.

At the northeast corner of First and Broadway the Los Angeles Times will build a substantial and attractive structure to take the place of the building destroyed by dynamite last October. The Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House is already settled in its new building just north of the Chamber of Commerce Building. On the south side of First, between Broadway and Spring a substantial new building has just been taken by a book concern. The same owners who are planning to improve the southeast corner of Second and Hill contemplate the early improvement of the southwest corner of Hill and First.

A five-story building of imposing lines is one of the immediate prospects for Spring street between First and Second streets ,and an eight-story hotel in the same block is projected by a local capitalist. I. W. Hellman long ago promised that he would erect a ten-story building at Main and Commercial streets as soon as the North End received just consideration from the city.

With the impetus that will be given by a tunnel under Bunker Hill, whether the hoped-for bore be paid for by the city or out of private purses, it can not be questioned that other projects will be heard from in the early future

Already during the present year the real estate inquiry has been unusually lively in the district north of Third street and some of the largest and most significant deals of the past two months have been consummated in that area.

Burnett Act Revised.

The much discussed Burnett Tenement House Act has at last been modified to a point where it will apparently be much more satisfactory to the average builder in this end of the State. The changes were brought about largely as the result of the efforts of

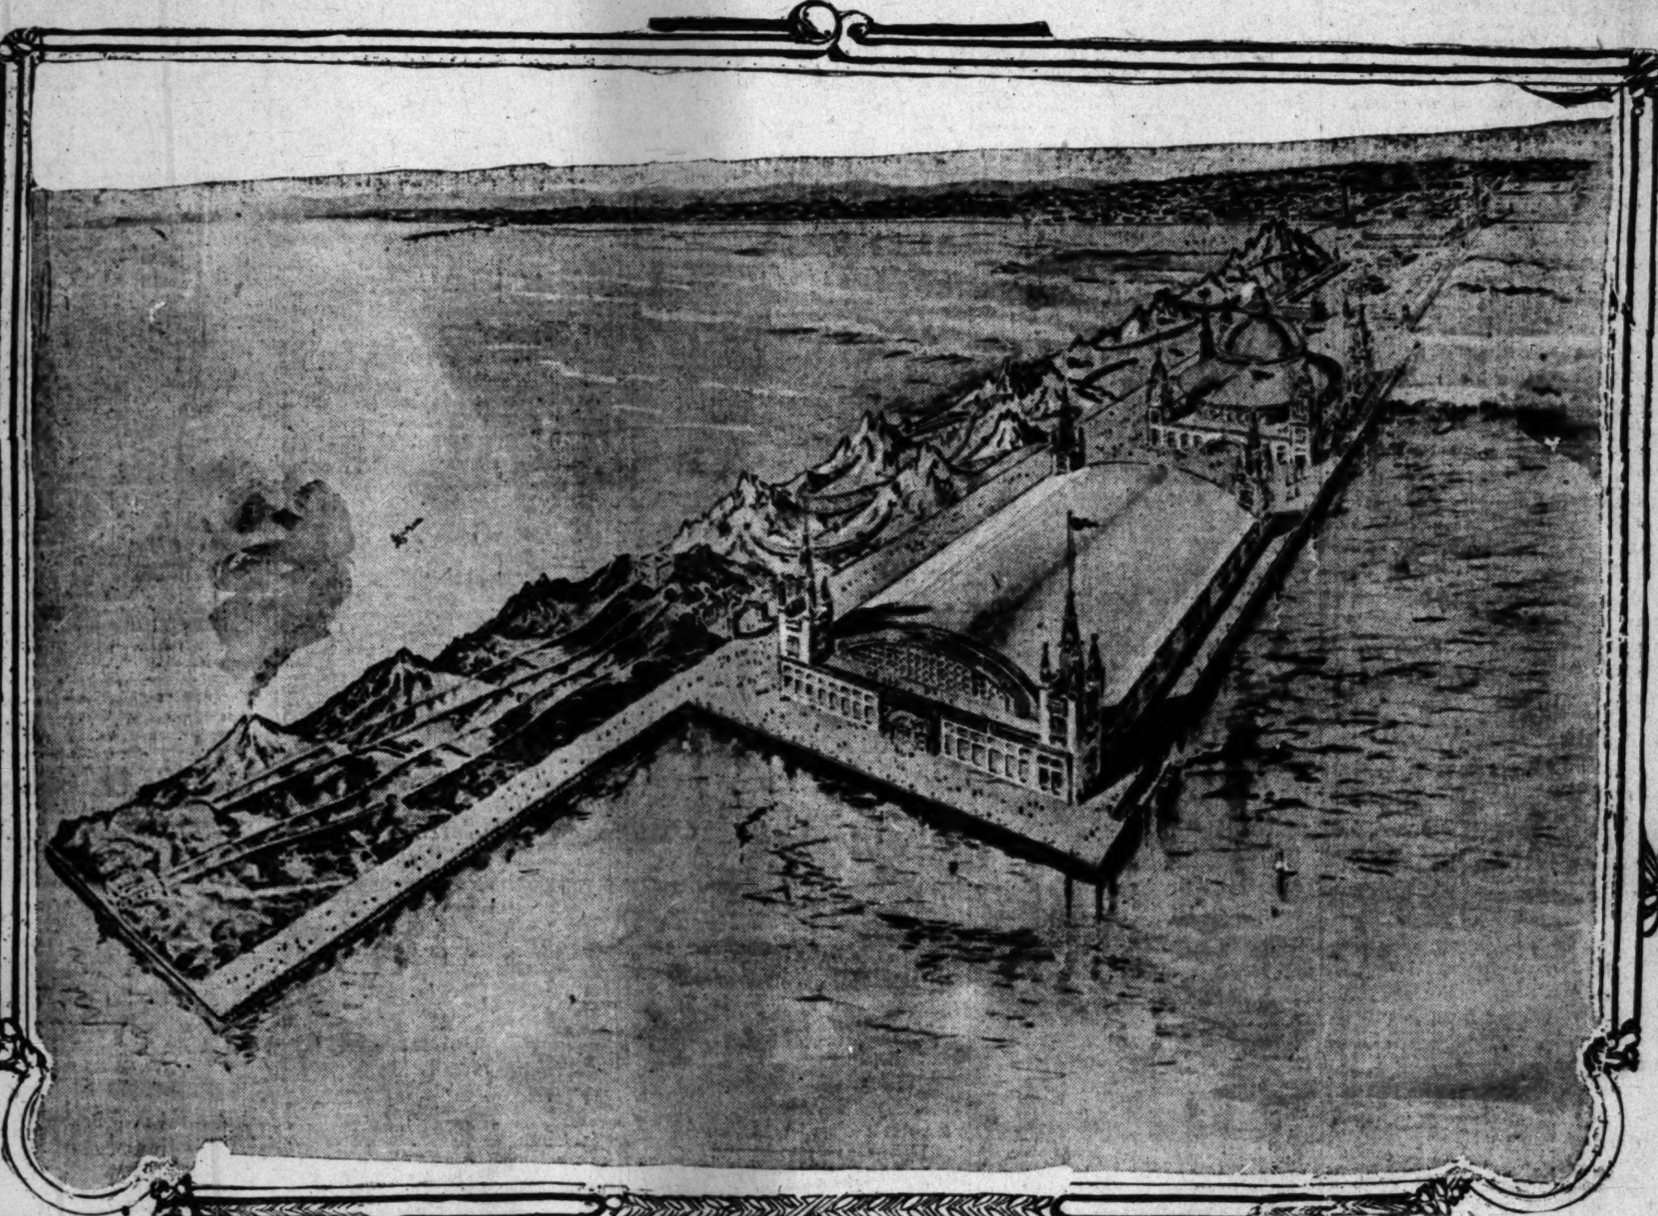
MILLION DOLLAR PIER A NEW MAGNET FOR PACIFIC COAST.



Perspective of the Amusement Pier Being Built at Pier Avenue, Santa Monica,

by A. R. Fraser, as it will appear when completed, the formal opening is to take place on May 30.

The building of a million-dollar pier at Santa Monica is one of the greatest amusement projects so far undertaken on the Pacific Coast. It has awakened visions of a seaside resort as gay, attractive and populous as the most famous of the world's playgrounds. The Ocean Front Promenade of the Crescent Bay is destined to become another "Board Walk," lined with hotels and places of amusement.

A. R. Fraser is building this big amusement pier and promises to make it a world-famous project. It is, to begin with, a great engineering feat. Although the reinforced concrete piling is not all in place yet, all arrangements are being made for an opening on May 30, with the big buildings, the scenic railways and the scores of other attractions are ready for business. At night it will be a fairyland of electric marvels.

The pier itself is 1000 feet long by 285, with an extension of 400x100 feet. It contains sufficient area to accommodate all of the business section of Ocean Park, with room for streets and alleys. It will support an immense dancing pavilion costing $150,000, a revolving cafe costing $135,000, a scenic railway costing $100,000, a mountain roll costing $150,000, and over $200,000 worth of other buildings and concessions.

The approach to the pier will be through two arches, forty feet wide by 120 feet high, costing $20,000. The lighting, sewer and water systems will be built as thoroughly as for an independent city and will cost $50,000. The flasher signs will be used largely for illumination and ten of them have already been contracted for at a cost of $13,650.

Some idea of the magnitude of this amusement enterprise may be gained from the attractions that are going upon it. Nearly all of the space has been contracted for. Among the diversions that will await next summer's beach crowds are the Mountain Roll, the revolving cafe, a carousel, the Third Degree (a new "walk-through" show,) a vaudeville theater managed by Clune, Wheelock and Boland, a comic opera theater opening with the Ferris Hartman company, a Joy Wheel, Pure Food Show, Baby Incubators, Little Tokio and a dancing pavilion. In addition to the big features there will be all kinds of sports and amusements in small booths. A thirty-piece band will be supported the year round.

The revolving cafe will be the first of its kind ever constructed. It will be a large circular building with a fifty-foot stationary core, in which the kitchens will be located. The second and third stories will revolve about this core. Entrance to the cafe will be gained by escalators and elevators, the patrons mounting to the cafe through the core and stepping out upon the revolving portion. This will move slowly, making about four revolutions an hour. The second-floor cafe will accommodate 750 persons and the third-floor roof-garden will accommodate 850. The building will be constructed entirely of glass and steel except for the floors and ceilings. The idea of the revolving cafe is to give diners an ever-changing view of the sea, the beach, the other parts of the pier, the mountains and the crowds coming and going.

In the dancing pavilion there will be automatically changing colored lights and a set of German chimes. The floor space will make it one of the largest ball rooms on the Coast.

Extensive plans are being made for the opening on May 30. The pier is being built according to a carefully-arranged schedule and the work is now seventeen days ahead of it. A fleet of torpedo boats and three cruisers has been promised for the celebration. The school children of the bay and the veterans from Sawtelle will take part in the programme. In the evening, the two big 30,000-candle-power searchlights, capable of throwing beams of light across Los Angeles, will be turned on for the first time.

All Santa Monica is preparing for the impetus that is expected from the opening of this pier. Hotels are building at Seaside Terrace, and the ocean front all the way to Santa Monica's municipal pier is being improved rapidly.

Time and Change.

DOMINGUEZ RANCH TO GO WAY OF SPANISH GRANTS.

Last of Great Tracts of Mission Days to Be Put Under Half-Million Dollar Irrigation System and Leased Out—Vast Holding Is Redolent With Memories of Alta California.

AN IRRIGATION system to be unsurpassed by any in the State is being installed on the old Dominguez rancho, the last of the Spanish grants of great size to remain practically intact in this vicinity. The men behind the project, who are now making it public for the first time, have filed articles of incorporation as the Dominguez Water Company, with the following as officers and directors: Henry O'Melveny, president; Kaspar Cohn, vice-president; James J. Watson, secretary; K. Cohn & Co., treasurer; J. M. Carson and Dr. G. del Amo. Chester B. Loomis is chief engineer.

The tract to be irrigated lies seven miles from the southern limits of Los Angeles, and comprises 19,600 acres. The irrigating system will consist of one main pumping plant, which will be of fireproof concrete construction, 50x150 feet, situated one mile south of Aviation Field, on the Southern Pacific. It will house two Laidlaw-Dunn-Gordan air compressors, with a capacity of 1500 cubic feet of free air per minute, and one 8,000,000-gallon pumping engine. Later this pumping station will be reinforced by the addition of a 4,000,000-gallon pumping engine.

Water will be obtained from wells driven near the Los Angeles River. It will be raised by the air compressors and forced through seven miles of 33-inch steel main to a reservoir of 15,000,000 gallons capacity, situated on a hill 126 feet above the station. Later a second reservoir of the same capacity, supplied through a 24-inch steel main, from the central pumping station, will be built to provide irrigation for 2000 acres of land which lies at an elevation too high to be supplied from the first reservoir.

From the lower reservoir and the main leading to it will run laterals ranging from eight to twelve inches in size, to conduct the water off to irrigate the surrounding territory. In all, the system provides for the construction of about fifty miles of steel and concrete mains, exclusive of lateral ditches. Nigger Slough, a tract of about 600 acres, generally under water, will be drained by an open ditch to the Los Angeles River.

The cost of construction ral advantages of the situation, is set at $500,000. Water will flow from the main pumping station by June 1. This will establish a record, it is believed, in rapid construction, although the complete system will not be in operation for a year. Some of the machinery is already on the ground, and several buildings are under construction. About fifteen carloads of machinery will yet have to be shipped in.

It is planned by the company to cut the land into sections ranging up to forty or fifty acres in size and to lease them to individuals. There are at present only about 100 people living on the rancho, which is leased in sections, that are in some instances as large as 1000 acres in size.

The land is cut by the Pacific Electric line to Long Beach, the Redondo line, the Southern Pacific and the Salt Lake, while the Municipal Road will run through the heart of it. The Panhandle strip traverses it from north to south. Under the new irrigation system the tract will support a large population. The soil, hitherto irrigated only partially by means of small pumps, is extremely fertile, and has been planted mainly to beets and alfalfa.

RANCH IS OLD GRANT.

The original grant by Charles IV of Spain to Juan Jose Dominguez in 1786, comprised a tract of 48,000 acres and embraced the sites of Compton, Hermosa, Moneta, Redondo and other territory now well settled up. Dominguez received the land free as a reward for his services in the Spanish army, sent out to protect the missions of Father Junipero Serra from the Indians. It was divided at his death between his three sons, Manuel, Nacario and Pedro. The latter two sold their interests, and Manuel's share was divided among the present owners, his daughters, Mrs. J. F. Francis, Mrs. G. del Amo, Miss S. M. Dominguez, Mrs. M. Watson and Mrs. V. Carson. The share of Mrs. A. J. de Guyer, deceased, has been administered by the Dominguez Estate Company, a corporation composed of the other heirs.

The chief engineer of the project, Chester B. Loomis, has been in charge of various big pieces of work on this Coast and in the East, and was Standing on a fine 60-foot, east-facing lot, in one of the best Wilshire districts, the building has been designed after broad and spacious lines, which give us seven commodious rooms and two porches, each like a room in itself. All floors are hardwood; there is an old-time log fireplace in addition to the furnace pipes, and a sleeping porch adds a last "comfy" detail. A most artistic and originally planned bungalow. There is nothing like it in the city, and it stands on one of the best Wilshire avenues, among many large and beautiful homes. The house faces east on a generously wide lot, with three fine rooms across its extraordinary breadth, and a part of the rooms open upon a fern-green patio. You will be charmed with the size of all these excellent arrangements, and we know of no bungalow property to compete with it in excellence throughout. It has all of those elegant and finished details which people of wealth and culture should demand; it would be superfluous to name ordinary conveniences. With this last word, that it is a home, we will take as great pleasure to show as you would to purchase, we will invite you to visit it in our company. The price is right.

This magnificent 12-room house, just completed, is one of the best we have had listed in over a year.

The exterior is of stone, cement and frame, and has a very imposing appearance. The lower floor consists of a huge living-room, dining-room, library or reception room, finished in solid oak and mahogany, and a dainty breakfast room and perfect kitchen in white enamel. Also a large reception hall in selected mahogany, with massive stairway.

The second floor has four extra large bedrooms and a sleeping porch. There are two fully tiled bathrooms and a shower bath on this floor.

The third floor has a fine billiard or card room, two bedrooms and a good bathroom.

The walls of the first floor have been beautifully decorated by hand and the second-floor walls are tastefully papered. Furnace heat to every room, even those on the third floor. This house cannot be adequately described in an advertisment—it must be seen to be fully appreciated.

THE VERY CHOICEST

APARTMENT SITE IN LOS ANGELES

WESTLAKE CORNER.

FRONTING BEAUTIFUL SUNSET PARK.

[illegible] $12,500. [illegible]

[illegible] 75x123½. [illegible]

We have for immediate sale the most attractive apartment-house site in this whole city, being the southeast corner of W. Sixth st. and Benton blvd.—4 blocks west of Westlake Park, and the only lot for sale on this beautiful 120-ft. boulevard. It adjoins the $200,000 Rampart Apartments, now almost completed —the only fireproof apartment building in Los Angeles.

Any improvement placed on this lot will overlook Sunset—the only sunken park in the city—and will afford a panoramic view of the beautiful and exclusive Wilshire residence district, the mountains, the whole Cahuenga Valley and the Pacific Ocean.

It has no counterpart here as a high-class site for apartments; is only 17 minutes distant from the business center, and is convenient to 7 car lines—the W. 6th, Western avenue, Heliotrope Drive, Radium Springs, Melrose ave., W. 7th and Stephenson ave., and Westlake ave. (Traction) lines—affording the best car service in the city.

Any one familiar with conditions here knows that the small territory bounded by Westlake and Sunset parks, W. 6th and W. 7th sts., is, and will always be the choicest and most exclusive family hotel and apartment district of Los Angeles. Witness the Hershey Arms, Carondelet Hotel (now under construction,) Trebor Apartments, Coronado Apartments, Rampart Apartments, etc.

Benton blvd. being the western street and fronting a sunken park, affords the only unobstructed view in this choice district.

This lot has not heretofore been advertised for sale, and a comparison with prices of other corners in this vicinity will prove this lot to be at least 33 1-3 per cent. lower in price and 50 per cent. better in location than any other corner offered thereabout.

There are other advantages. Come in and let us tell you about them; but come quickly, as the corner must be sold immediately.

FOR SALE—

$25 CASH SECURES THIS BEAUTIFUL LOT.

I suppose you have $25 to spare—lying in the bank at 4 per cent. interest. Why not put this $25 where it will earn a whole lot more? If you could feel perfectly safe about it, and know it was wisely placed, and make it bring you back twenty times 4 per cent., wouldn't you invest it? Put it into Arlington Square and it will GROW. Here is a finely improved residence section in the best part of the southwest—just in that very part which is going ahead so fast just now, and will grow even faster in the next few years. Service on several car lines. All the conveniences, and improved with graded and oiled streets, cement walks and curbs, and wide parkings planted to large shade trees. A beautiful place in a section that is fast building up to homes. Your $25 will secure a lot now, and $15 monthly will pay for it. Prices only $725 up—in a finished section, mind you! Go see it for yourself. Take Inglewood car to my tract office, corner Arlington street and Santa Barbara avenue, or see Mr. Potter, 2113 West Jefferson st. He will show you about in his automobile.

VICTORIA PARK.

VICTORIA PARK.

VICTORIA PARK.

FINEST HOMESITES IN LOS ANGELES.

OCCUPYING THE CROWN OF WEST ADAMS HILL.

If you cantemplate the erection of a residence, costing anywhere from $5000 to $25,000 or upwards, it is decidedly to your advantage that you look into the merits of Victoria Park.

VICTORIA PARK combines every desirable residential feature of the best residence parks of Los Angeles, and also the most noted thoroughfares of Eastern cities. It is the creation of 20 business men of Los Angeles, whose purpose was to create on the magnificent location on West Adams Hill, a residence park that would be the highest class residence property ever put on the Los Angeles market. From the standpoint of natural beauty and landscape gardening, it is a masterpiece.

VICTORIA PARK Being directly between Pico and West Sixteenth street car lines, and adjacent to the right of way of the Los Angeles Pacific Subway, is particularly favored from the standpoint of transportation. It is also directly connected to the business center by one of the finest asphalt boulevards in Los Angeles.

VICTORIA PARK has many exclusive features that are not duplicated in any other residence property in Los Angeles. The lots range from 60 to 110 feet in width, and average 150 feet in depth, and face on beautiful curved boulevards 100 feet broad. The parkings are thirty feet wide and there are four rows of trees along each driveway. Seven-foot cement sidewalks. All roadways are of petrolithic pavement, the highest quality paving procurable. The park is illuminated by stone and iron electroliers, fifteen feet high, each with five large electric globes. No street or driveway names are used, the address for each residence being "Victoria Park," with the number of the lot.

VICTORIA PARK is delightfully removed from the noise, dust and smoke of the city, and is conceded to be the most delightful residence place in this city of beautiful homes.

VICTORIA PARK has building restrictions of $5000 and $6000, according to location, but all of the residences so far constructed exceed the building requirements.

VICTORIA PARK is most attractive from the investment standpoint. The high character of the improvements, its assured future, and present low prices compared with other high-class property, insure large profits for those who invest now.

If you are on the market for the best there is in residence property, anywhere in this city, do yourself the justice of investigating Victoria Park. We shall be glad to take you out and show you this splendid property any time at your convenience. Phone us for an appointment.

is held at $1500 to $2000 per acre, some of which is not as desirably located.

NOBODY
questions the future of this beautiful location.

THE HARRIMAN INTERESTS recognized its brilliant future several years ago when they secured rights of way, at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, for subways and other improvements, in order to shorten the running time between Los Angeles and this beautiful suburban section.

REMEMBER
this is one of the choicest pieces left, and is better located than some that sold for $1500 per acre, and could not be bought now for $2000.

WILL TAKE $75,000 IN EXCHANGE.

Owners will consider other properey up to $75,000 cash value, and balance by long-time mortgage at low rate of interest.

NO GAMBLE HERE.

Its future is already well established.

YUCAIPA VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

GOING UP $25 PER ACRE.

MARCH 15, 1911.

"RED APPLE LANDS."
—IN—

is the best investment on the market today; we are going to advance the price to $275 per acre March 15th, 1911. Better get in with us and share this profit.

There will be planted about 1000 acres to apples this spring; planting will continue until April; you can have a piece of land planted to apples and cared for by an expert and brought into profitable bearing, for $100 per acre, and this orchard will earn you in a few years $1000 an acre per year. Do you think it would pay you to grow apples in Yucaipa? Investigate it. This is not a chance proposition; Yucaipa Valley has orchards twenty years old, earning $1250 an acre for one crop, which is eloquent proof of what apples will do there.

Cherries, pears, peaches, quinces, etc., as well as currants, and gooseberries, and all kinds of truck grown between the trees will make you big money. We are situated just east of Redlands, one of the finest towns in the State, at the base of the San Bernardino Mountains. Our elevation is 3000 feet; there is no asthma, no bronchial troubles, or catarrh in the Yucaipa Valley.

Pure water is piped to each piece of land under pressure, and you get one share of water stock with each acre of land; our heaviest buyers are people from Redlands, and other Southern California cities, who know the Valley best; arrange to go out with us on one of our excursions, any Tuesday, Friday or Sunday, and let us show you that we have the goods; we are selling at present the cream of the Valley, in our subdivision No. 2, and we are selling it fast. Make your selection at an early date, get your trees planted, and become one of Yucaipa's wealthy and contented citizens. For further information call on or write—

OWENS RIVER LANDS—

FOR SALE—
OWENS RIVER VALLEY
PROVEN APPLE LANDS.
Greatest Land Opportunity
In California.
Of all the marvelous land opportunities that have come and gone in California—there has never been a greater than Owens Valley. The plain, unvarnished facts about this wonderful country read like a fairy tale. Here alfalfa grows so luxuriantly that it can be tied over a horse's back. Corn runs seventy bushels to the acre. Alfalfa seed, 1000 pounds to the acre. Timothy grows with thirteen-inch heads. Potatoes run 300 to 500 bushels to the acre. Currants, gooseberries, pears, berries and fancy grapes grow to perfection. And big, red, waxy winter apples grown here are the finest grown anywhere in America.
The valley is a strip of wonderfully productive land, 80 miles long and eight miles wide, located between two high mountain ranges—the highest in California. Hundreds of crystal clear lakes in these mountains supply more water than can ever be used.
Our lands lie right in the center of the proven fruit belt on the western side of the valley. The drainage is perfect. The soil, a disintegrated granite mixed with deep, rich loam. We are installing one of the most modern steel and concrete irrigating systems throughout our property. It is modeled after the very best orchard systems of Southern California. It will supply water under pressure throughout our entire holdings. The water cost is extremely low.
We are selling these lands today for $150 per acre. Within the last four months, we have sold over $120,000 worth. Among the buyers are apple experts from Washington and Oregon, where similar lands are today selling for $250 to $400 per acre, and similar developed orchards are selling readily at $1000 to $2000 per acre.
The apple growers of Washington and Oregon, notwithstanding these high prices of lands, are rapidly growing rich.
The same opportunity—even greater—is offered you today in these Owens Valley lands. The demand for Owens Valley grown apples is greater than can ever be supplied. They have sold on the Los Angeles market from $2.75 to $5.00 per box. It is only a question of a few years until these lands, like the apple lands in Oregon, will be in great demand at prices that, judged by ordinary standards, would seem prohibitive. Apple growing on these lands is more profitable than oranges, and the man is indeed fortunate who gets in on the ground floor with ten or twenty acres.
Owens Valley is the most delightful place to live. Finest climate in California. Three hundred days of sunshine a year. No extreme temperatures. Four thousand feet altitude. No fogs—nor hail.
If you are interested in getting some of these choice apple lands, it will be greatly to you advantage to get immediate action, for it will soon be too late for this spring's planting, and then it will be necessary to wait another year. Call at our office and talk to us about this wonderful country, and see exhibit of products, or, if you cannot call, drop a card for our literature and photographs.

OWENS RIVER LANDS—

FOR SALE—
720 acres of land, 10 miles from Bishop, with private ownership in mountain stream for power and irrigation purposes; every acre tillable.
This is an ideal stock or dairy ranch, or it would make an excellent fruit subdivision proposition—as the locality is a proven apple district. Adjoining this property is an apple orchard that has never failed to produce a crop in the last seventeen years. The soil is a limestone and volcanic ash combination, especially adapted to fruit, potatoes and alfalfa—easily worked and which never bakes. Three hundred acres of this ranch is now in a fine stand of alfalfa.
Improvements consist of an 8-room house, with bath; cut stone barn, 45x70; powerhouse, 18x40, operated by Pelton wheel with water piped to the plant in steel pines; blacksmith shop, 20x45, with complete equipment of tools; fully equipped slaughterhouse; stone smokehouse; complete outfit for dipping sheep; six large corrals, mostly fenced with cut stone, with water piped to each.
Southern Pacific's new main line runs through the center of the property, with siding and station located expressly for this ranch.
We can deliver this property for $65 an acre, with cash payment of $20,000 and your own time on the balance.
Our position for offering Owens Valley lands is unsurpassed, as our Mr. Tobias stays continuously in the Valley, with his own automobile, and can show lands from Lone Pine to Bishop more advantageously than orthers not similarly equipped. We have all the desirable listings of the Valley, in our office, and can offer lands in forties, and eighties, and up to two thousand acres, at all prices and in all conditions. We have some very attractive buys, and improved ranches with eighties and one hundred sixties now in alfalfa, with a water right that is unbelievable to a Southern California farmer.

LEMON GROVE.

There's no better paying investment in California today than a good income producing lemon grove. Very few good lemon groves are on the market. Here is one, however, which for best of reasons, if purchased within a few days will be sold at a special price.

10 acres, set solid to lemons, in full bearing, in best possible condition, trees heavily fertilized, recently fumigated, best lemon locality, double water stock. About 1500 boxes lemons, a picking just taken from the trees will be included at the special price, if sold immediately. Trees still full of fine fruit, if you want a genuinely good investment, don't miss this opportunity, but come at once and investigate this property. $10,000 to $12,000 can remain on the grove, but no trade will be considered.

FOR EXCHANGE—

APPLE ORCHARD.

We have for exchange an apple orchard of 60 acres in 8-year-old trees, 20 acres in small fruits, and grain, 40 acres in pine timber, making a total of 120 acres.
The apple trees are in a very healthy condition. The soil is excellent. The altitude just right to produce the finest quality of apples, being about 4900 feet above sea level. The land requires no irrigation, which reduces the expense of the care of the orchard to a minimum.
LOCATION.
It is located near Squirrel Inn and Skyland, above the famous Arrowhead Hotel, 14 miles from the city of San Bernardino. The location is so beautiful and healthful that there are hundreds of people camped within a half mile of the orchard every summer.
The 40 acres in small pines is an ideal location for a summer resort. There are sufficient small pines right on the ground to build dozens of artistic bungalows. The drinking water is absolutely pure. The wagon road from Arrowhead to the grove is considered a beautiful drive.
The owner will accept good city property in any city near the Coast for two-thirds of the price, and give 7 years to pay the balance. This will enable the buyer to meet the deferred payments from the sale of the apples.
Price $50,000.

NOW OR NEVER.
For quick sale we offer the stock of the Oil and Metals Leasing Company at the original price of 10 cents a share. The company has withdrawn the stock from the market and we are the only agents who hold a legal contract whereby we can sell the stock at any price. This company has struck it rich, and are now hauling ore to the mill. They have just completed arrangements whereby they are able to mill their ore as rapidly as they can mine it. The new plant is in charge of the well-known mining man Mr. Patterson. Amal-gamation and cynide is the process used to make a high recovery. We most earnestly advise our clients and the general public to buy some of this stock at once, it is a sure winner and there is no doubt but what this is one company that will be a dividend payer in a very short time. They are work-ing day and night. The President and Manager, Mr. Roach, has been six years in this district and knows just what he is doing, you will have to call or write at once as our option will expire in a few days and then no more stock can be had at any price. Call or write Monday.

STOCKS AND BONDS—And Mortgages.

THINK THIS OVER.
It has been our firm conviction for many years that a stock that is listed upon any exchange is always subject to more or less manipulation. On the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, within the last few months, you have seen stocks advance rapidly and then drop back from a few cents to several dol-lars per share in one day. If you are an investor, it is not manipulation that you need. All good stocks will sell for just what they are worth. We prefer a good stock that is gradually advancing upon its true worth, to one that is being "juggled." Last week we advised the sale of Consolidated Midway. It has declined again during the past week. We believe it will go lower. We advised the pur-chase of Midway Five. It has advanced this week and declared a dividend. This is not a listed stock. We know of another stock that will declare a regular dividend before many moons. If you will study the market closely you will note that all the good stocks are gradually getting stronger. There is a good reason for it. Big money is be-ing made in oil and more is going to be made. You can share in the profits if you will only use a little "horse sense." Write us re-garding any stock you may be interested in.

COPPER MINING—
There is no line of business more legiti-mate and honorable than that of mining. The permanent wealth of the world is founded on the product of mines and wealth gained in this way is not taken from oth-ers, but is a permanent benefit to all. Thou-sands of fortunes, great and small have been made from mining in the past few years and many more are being made at present.

The Choix Consolidated mines will produce large amounts of copper, gold and silver and will be a safe and profitable investment.

Where mines can be operated as cheaply as can be done in that part of Mexico, where the ores are rich in copper, gold and silver, where every convenience for both mining and smelting is at hand and where the com-pany is conservatively and economically man-aged, they will be much more profitable than in mines where conditions are not so favor-able. The company owns its mines and smelter, free from debt and will be in posi-tion as soon as the small plant is installed to show big results. The stock will not on-ly increase in value, but large dividends should be made. Stock is now selling at $1 per share.

See the ore display, 553 S. Spring st., or this office. Get booklet and free informa-tion.

WE STILL HAVE A SMALL ALLOTMENT of stock in the Mexico Mining, Refining and Exploration Company, to be sold for the purpose of raising funds for the mill and concentrator recently installed on the Creston de Cobre property, 30 miles west of Hermosillo, Sonora, Mex. This property will begin to make regular shipments of ore to the smelter within the next 30 days, when the stock in a short time will be placed at par value.

Now is the chance for you to invest for a large profit in an absolutely gilt-edge mining property that has stood the closest investiga-tion. This is no prospect, but a mine, which engineers have reported will be one of the large producers in Sonora. Get assay re-turns, also smelter returns and reports from the fiscal agents, NEVADA-CALIFORNIA INVESTMENT CO., 500-1 I. W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

I HAVE AN OPTION ON 600 ACRES PAT-ented land ½ mile from railroad, auto road and pipe line, between Bakersfield and Mc-Kittrick, at $14,000. This is fine agricultural land in the artesian belt and will be worth double for farming within 2 years. It is on the south end of the Lost Hills anticline and oil strikes, are close and rapidly coming closer; within 3 months oil developments will be on us and this land probably sought after at $150 an acre. Am forming a syndicate to buy this snap and want two parties to join me for a seventh interest at $2000 each. This takes cash, but is a sure investment. N. brokers or trades can be considered. E. H. Five Minutes Sometimes Makes A Big Difference

If You Are Suffering the Tortures of Indigestion and Have to Wait Until Someone Runs to the Drug Store for a Box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Free Trial Package.

The instant relief afforded poor overburdened stomachs by the use of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet should be a reason for constantly keeping a box on hand at home and at the office as well.

The Stomach Welcomes Quick Relief.

A Stuart's Tablet not only aids digestion, but it actually does the digesting itself. In other words, it furnishes exactly the same elements for the digestion of food as the natural juices of the stomach. The stomach, therefore, is not called upon to do any of the work except to churn the juices furnished by the tablet and then push the digested food along into the intestines where it will be still further digested and the strength taken up by the blood to be carried to the muscles and nerves of the body.

So by taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after a meal you give the stomach the rest it needs in which to mend itself and grow well again. And you absolutely prevent the souring of any food, the formation of any poisonous gases, belching, foul breath or constipation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have done more for humanity and have caused more rejoicing than any other one agency that can be named.

Every druggist everywhere sells and personally recommends Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The price is 50 cents per box. If you first wish to try them a sample package will be sent you free if you write to F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Connection of Eyes and Voice.

A physician in London, Dr. William Martin Richards, has had occasion to observe a relation existing between the eyes and the voice and has recently made a statement of two cases that came under his treatment where actresses who had lost their voices completely recovered them when treated for defective eyes and fitted with proper glasses.

He tells of one young woman in whose family eye diseases were hereditary who found herself at the age of 22 losing her voice. Her eyes were found to be in need of attention and when she had been supplied with glasses she promptly recovered her singing voice.

When she discarded the glasses some time later and her eyes were once more neglected her voice also relapsed into a husky state that precluded all singing. This practitioner has observed a number of similar cases, and the discovery of the relation between the eyes and the voice should certainly be valuable to stage folk and others who depend largely upon their voices for their status in the world.—[Chicago Tribune.

THE NET OF TRUTH.

BY MARGARET BUTLER.

"Love is the net of truth."—Abu Said.

MR. SIDNEY CATTERIDGE was entertaining at his villa on the Riviera. He sat at the head of a long table. The table was white and its decoration white. Most of the guests who fringed it were anything but. A more dusky-souled congregation has rarely assembled outside the satin-smeared lounges of a fashionable seance.

Mr. Catteridge was short and slightly corpulent. His moustache was of the pale but thick tint of Cheddar cheese, and his eyes were a watery blue. There were no rings on his small, thin, and amazingly inappropriate hands.

To the lady on his right, who affected the appearance and manners of the stone-faced county matron, but was not, he chatted amiably enough about his lack of appreciation of caviare and her late inestimable, if assumed, husband's old craze for collecting brass buttons.

On Mr. Catteridge's left sat a fluffy, wide-eyed girl, "all yoke and yearning," gazing hopefully up at a cashiered German captain, who had previously picked every strawberry out of the fruit salad. The German warrior flanked a thin, determined man-woman, who wore pince-nez and demonstrated, by knife and fork waves, to a bored Hebrew her belief that the home was woman's true sphere. Followed three sandwiches of tinkered-up men and neatly mended women. The rest of the guests were ladies and gentlemen, all looking exceedingly frightened.

No one really knew who Mr. Catteridge was. He had never been noticed on the Riviera before. This, indeed, was his principal recommendation.

All his guests, however, were prepared to tolerate or enjoy his generous hospitality, and his house was not far from being the handsomest and most expensive on the coast.

Tonight Mr. Catteridge was very ill at ease. One of his invited guests had not put in appearance. It was entirely for her sake, too, that the dinner had been arranged. He had known the lady for barely three weeks, and only after repeated entreaties had she consented to honor his house by a visit.

Miss Viola Warne was a very great puzzle to many people besides Mr. Catteridge. She was a strikingly beautiful woman of about thirty years of age. So reserved was she that hardly anyone knew her. She had a suite of rooms at one of the best hotels in Monte Carlo, but she never entertained, amusing herself principally by high play at the tables, where she invariably lost, and motoring round the neighborhood.

Mr. Catteridge had scratched up an acquaintance with her in the Casino by taking her part and proving her correct in a slight dispute with a fellow-gambler. Since then he had haunted her footsteps with tireless devotion.

The admiration of the little man was easy to understand, but few would have persevered as he did in the face of repeated snubs. But a rebuff from Viola Warne was to Mr. Catteridge what a caress would have been from other women. At last he had his reward.

Her car had broken down on the road to Nice. He had been lucky enough to arrive on the scene before anyone else. His offer of a lift was accepted, and the beautiful unknown had, in the course of the drive, consented to join his dinner party.

Dinner had that evening been delayed for nearly twenty minutes in the hope that Miss Warne would eventually arrive. Even then Mr. Catteridge only allowed his unevenly assorted guests to sit down to table because of the impatient comments that reached his ears.

Wherefore, although Mr. Catteridge chatted amiably with the imitatively matronly lady on his right, his heart, which, after pork, always palpitated, was sore within him.

While Mr. Catteridge's dinner was in progress, and the delicacies of the later courses set off the indelicacies of the conversation, Viola Warne was at the hotel dressing herself with the aid of a maid.

She was just such a girl, and just so rare a girl, as to make most men dissatisfied with their loves. She walked and held her head so splendidly that no one questioned the beauty of her figure, in reality quite indifferent. There was a wistful, sad look in her eyes when alone, that was eloquent of an eventful past, or, at any rate, a pretty unusual determination as to the future. Women could not remember the color of her hair. A polite poet—so rare, you know—once said that it was like a sunshine on red ivy.

She was very gentle with her maid, corrected her mistakes without comment, and, as soon as her wonderful hair was dressed, dismissed the girl for the evening.

Though ready to go, she sat by the window for some time, looking out on the caressing Riviera night. Once she got up and commenced to remove her jewelry, but she put it on again and resumed her seat. It was nearly ten before she impetuously rose and left the room. In a few minutes she was in the hall of Mr. Catteridge's house.

He greeted her with surprise and a warm glow of relief which threatened eventually to damp his collar.

"I could not dine with you," explained Viola. "I really should not be out at all. The doctor strongly advises bed, and, I think, gruel for my complaint. But I did not like to disappoint you altogether, and I simply loathe being off my feet."

"It is really most kind of you, Miss Warne. If I had known that you were unwell I should have postponed our dinner party. Will you come and sit on the balcony? You won't want to mix with this crowd if you are out of sorts."

He led the way to a wide veranda and noted with appreciation that it was unoccupied. Miss Warne refused any refreshment, but lit a strong cigarette.

He lit a cigarette also, but he soon let it go out, and sat as close to her as he dared, leaning forward with hands tightly clasped.

"You are the only one here this evening that I really want to talk to. I can't imagine how I should have felt if you had not come."

"What are your guests doing?"

"Gambling."

"The busman's holiday. How tiring it must be to be always doing the same thing."

"That is why the Riviera habitues are generally so very dull."

"You have been here before, then?" she asked, slightly turning her face.

"Oh, yes, often, for brief visits. I'm not very young."

"Forty?"

"And five," he willingly admitted with a boyish smile. He was fifty.

"I have been here for three winters in succession. I love this coast. I should like to live here always."

Mr. Catteridge cleared his throat.

"If I had plenty of money," went on Viola, "I should build a little nest on the shore in as solitary a position as possible. One could live beautifully and die beautifully."

"But you must not contemplate death, Miss Warne."

"It's unbecoming, I know; but I'm thirty, and I haven't got the will to live. Some people are beloved of the gods."

"You puzzle me tremendously. You talk of a solitary life and your indifference to the end of it, and yet I see coast. You have been gambling every day since I first entered the Casino."

"Quite true. I gambled because I hoped to make enough to buy my hermit's cave and the locusts and honey."

"You have not been winning?"

"No, I have lost steadily. In fact, I have no money left."

He sat upright, his eyes filled with concern.

"Miss Warne, you surely don't mean that you——"

"I mean that I have no money left, and can raise no more."

"Miss Warne." The man blushed and almost whispered. "Dare I offer to help you?"

She sat for some time in thought. Then she looked at him, and turned away, a little irritated by the ardent eagerness of his face.

"Of course," she explained, "I knew that you would offer to help me. That was why I told you of my position. But a man of your—temperament—does not lend without security, does not give without being certain of receiving. I do you no injustice, so you must not frown and pull your moustache. You probably want to marry me."

"Miss Warne, I——"

She stopped him, not without a little start of surprise at his look of delighted adoration.

"You know very little of me. What I tell you may not be true. You have no means of judging, at any rate. Yet you have most obviously pursued me for three weeks. That must either stop or continue."

"I should never cease trying to win you, no matter how often you rejected me."

"Then you do want to marry me?"

"Yes, Viola, I love you. I want——." It was necessary for her to repulse him with outstretched arm. The action was for all the world that of a Rugby football forward "handing off" an opponent.

"I don't care for you. Yet the only alternative I have to selling myself is suicide."

"You would learn to care. I swear I would make you happy. I have more money than I can realize, far more than I could spend in fifty years. I am a widower. I have no children. It should all be yours. You should have your hermit's cave and your locusts and honey. You could not be unhappy unless you loved another man."

"That would not happen. I have only loved once. I suffer from a frigidity of spirit that will not let me love again. I have never married. There is no one alive sufficiently nearly related to me to care what becomes of me. I am just a Miss Viola Warne, daughter of people that other people's parents used to know, now penniless."

"What has happened to the man you loved?"

"Six weeks before our proposed wedding he was mixed up in a very painful scandal. He fled the country, was extradited, tried, and sentenced to penal servitude."

"My poor girl, my poor girl!"

"He is probably out of prison now. But where he is, if he is still alive, I don't know, nor, of course, can I care."

"Was his case as bad as that?"

"As bad as that." The pain that the woman suffered as she told the story was reflected in her face. Catteridge unconsciously recoiled slightly from her, so grim was the set of her mouth, so harsh the expression of her eyes.

"Might I know his name?"

"Why do you want to know that?" Catteridge hesitated. An uneasy suspicion had crossed his mind. Was this story, after all, quite new to him?

"I might be able to tell you," he explained, "if he is still alive. Men hear gossip of that sort more frequently than women."

She thought a little while, and then, looking him full in the face, she gave the name.

Catteridge gazed at her as if held up by a revolver. His lower jaw had dropped.

"Do you know the name?"

He still stared.

"Answer!" She rose and held his left arm—tight, with the grip of tingling nerves.

"Yes, I do."

"Is Roy Conlay alive?"

"Yes."

"Where is he?"

"I—I don't know."

"He is out of prison?"

"Yes."

"Ought he to have gone to prison?"

"God! How can I say?"

"You know. You know. Who sent him to prison?"

"Viola! For mercy's sake!"

"Whose evidence damned him?"

He buried his face in his hands. She flung herself upon her knees and tore his hands away, forcing him to look into her eyes.

"Whose evidence damned him?"

"Mine. Mine."

"I knew. I knew. I guessed it was you. Was it true? Beast, answer me. Was it true?"

"Yes, by Heaven, yes. I swear it."

Viola rose to her feet again. She walked to the edge of the balcony and clutched the rail. With heaving breast and swimming eyes she stood waiting for the man to speak, and yet dreading what he might have to tell her.

But he did not speak. He sat very still, half-dazed.

Presently she turned to him.

"If you have any dramatic instinct," she said, bitterly, "this situation ought to appeal to you. I will tell you that I never sought you out. This is no carefully schemed revenge. I never noticed you except to regard you as a mild nuisance, till that day when my car broke down and I was compelled to accept a seat in yours. Then, for the first time, I heard your name. I remembered it. I had good cause to remember it. But I had never seen you in the flesh before. I could not be sure that you were the man who damned Roy. I came tonight to find out. Now I'm glad you're the man. Oh, how glad I am."

"You are very cruel," replied the man hoarsely. "I did not want to ruin my friend. But I could not commit perjury. If I had lied in the witness-box to save Conlay there were twenty witnesses who would have proved that I was lying."

"You were a coward and a false friend. Your word might have saved him, and you funked a little prevarication—a little reticence, even. He was your friend, and you deserted him."

"I stuck to him afterwards. I have done all I could for him."

"Ah!" The woman pounced on the reply. "Then you have seen him since he left prison. You know where he is now."

"Yes—I do." He admitted it in a whisper.

"Tell me, then. You shall tell me. I must know."

"No. You shall never taunt him."

"Is he happy?"

"He is content, so far as his conscience will allow him to be."

For some moments neither spoke. Then the woman seated herself again.

"Listen, Mr. Catteridge. I have a right to see Roy again. I feel that he would like to know that I expressed a wish to see him again. If he were guilty, that is, of course, sufficient reason for his not writing to me. But surely he must value my forgiveness. I feel that I could forgive him. He loved me. I'm sure he loved me. And I loved him then."

"Do you really mean that if I let you see him you would forgive him. It is the dearest hope of his life that you should. He seems to me only to live for that."

"Now?"

"What do you mean?" She caught her breath.

"He is here. He is one of my guests this evening."

The woman clutched the sides of her chair. Her face was white and her chin quivered.

"Send for him," at last she whispered.

Catteridge pressed a bell.

"Ask Mr. Lacon to speak to me for a few moments," he said to the servant.

Both the man and the woman sat silent and waited. Soon footsteps approached and stopped at the window leading on to the veranda.

Viola turned her head very slowly as if it hurt her. She expected to see someone at least resembling the handsome young scapegrace who had proved so unworthy of her love. But here was a bearded man, bent and looking terribly old. His eyelids hung very low, and he did not meet the wondering scrutiny of her eyes.

She rose to her feet and stepped nearer to him.

"Roy!"

The bent figure in the window quivered, but no speech came from his lips.

Viola drew nearer.

"Yes, yes," she half whispered to herself, "it is you. . . . Tell me, Roy. Were you guilty?"

There was no answer.

"Were you guilty?"

The man's head sunk lower, but he did not speak.

Viola moved from him. His nearness almost made her faint. She looked out towards the beautiful sea, but saw nothing. Her heart was blazing.

So they stood, these three unhappy people. And each could measure the anguish of the others.

A white pigeon fluttered down into the space between the rigid figures.

Viola turned once more.

"I forgive you, Roy," she murmured tremblingly. "I am going on a long journey tonight. We shall not meet again. But remember, I forgive you."

The man at the window bowed his head and stumbled away.

A little later Viola left the balcony and went out into the night alone.

Catteridge still sat with his head buried in his hands. The pigeon surveyed him carefully with his head on one side and then deliberately flapped away to its loft.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

Are Working as Expected—Hoards Are Being Uncovered Which Go from the Postoffice Into Circulation.

The experience is yet too short to permit a definite opinion as to whether the experimental postal savings bank will accomplish its purpose, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Reports indicate, however, that the people have taken kindly to the innovation, which is important and significant. While the Postmaster General is asking Congress to give him money to rent quarters for the clerical machinery of the new service evidence accumulates that the bank is justifying the labor and expense of its introduction.

As people in this section of the country remember, the bank at Ashtabula opened under auspices that seemed to promise a high degree of usefulness. Depositors in considerable numbers were ready to patronize it—which is about all the advocates of the bank could wish.

An incident reported from the postal bank at Dubois, Pa., indicates that the public has full confidence, without which the bank would lose its chief usefulness. One man entered the postoffice with $1700 in currency which he had been hoarding and which he desider to place in the safekeeping of the federal government. He had been afraid to deposit the money in a bank, and was anxious to leave it in the government's hands at half the interest he could have got elsewhere. Of course, he could deposit only a part of his hoard in the postal bank.

Postmaster Watson of Pittsburgh, Kan., says of the operation of the savings bank under his care:

"The Pittsburgh Savings Bank recently opened in this city is working just as Congress desired. It is being cautiously investigated and its volume of business increasing every day. Instead of being a competitor of the commercial bank, it is an adjunct, a help and an educator therefor. It will take no deposits away from the commercial bank, but will reach down into hidden recesses and attract therefrom the small savings and accumulations of the unlearned and overcautious who would never entrust it to any institution save the United States. It will receive the earnings of the foreigner, who, temporarily here, is cautious in the extreme, and who does not know the First National Bank but is familiar and well acquainted with the United States government. It offers a place for the small deposits of the ordinary citizen, who would hesitate to place them, because of their size, in the banks of the town with their brass railings and mahogany furniture and the smiling, familiar face of the banker or his clerk, because the average citizen feels a slight backwardness about doing a banking business on so small a scale where he is known. He will, however, use the postal savings bank, because it is his bank and does business on a small scale and is private.

"From these varied depositors, the postal savings bank will gather up great quantities of money heretofore out of circulation and by placing it back into the commercial banks of the country throw it immediately again into circulation. The banks therefore will accumulate a very considerable amount of deposits for which they will, of course, have to pay 2¼ per cent but which without the savings bank they would never have had at all. The law should be corrected, perhaps, to enable the depositor under some conditions to cash his certificate at any postal savings bank.

"The postal savings bank at this office opened immediately after holidays when a great quantity of the savings had been expended for Christmas cheer. Our community is largely industrial and men are paid semi-monthly, and on the first ten days of the bank's operation, immediately following Christmas and immediately prior to the first pay day thereafter more than forty-five accounts were opened and an aggregate of $782.0[illegible] received as deposits.

"With every pay day the deposits of the postal savings bank will increase more rapidly, I should say, in number than in amount."

How Frogs Hide Their Eggs.

In the manner of disposing of their eggs many species of frogs exhibit remarkable peculiarities. A tree frog native of Paraguay, makes its nest in a bush overhanging a pond. The lower ends of a number of leaves are drawn together and fixed in that position by a number of empty egg capsules. The eggs are also covered with a shield of empty capsules to protect them from the sun and air. When the eggs are hatched the plug at the bottom appears to fall out and the tadpoles tumble into the water.—[Pittsburgh Gazette.

Flesh of His Flesh.

KINSHIP'S CALL MAY WAKE HIM.

Confessed Bigamist Dull to Cry of Blood.

For Child's Sake, Wife Would Pardon Past.

Sordid Story of Abandonment and Suffering.

The cry of the blood—the instinct of kinship born of the knowledge of flesh of one's flesh and bone of one's bone—is the keynote of the one plea which can save Philip Gendel, admitted bigamist, from the consequences of his transgression. Though with the memory still hot in her Rusian blood of herself scorned, abandoned and denied for another woman, her children and his dying one after another from cold, starvation and neglect in the years of her solitude, Mrs. Celia Gendel declares that she will forgive it all if he will consent to be a father to the one child left to them.

Winsome little Jennie, born to hardship and suffering on the far Russian steppes, will forgive it, too. Though she has herself known the bitterness of the cold and hunger from which she saw her little sisters die in a New York tenement where "papa" left them, though her father turned from her with unrecognizing stare when she ran to him, her baby arms uplifted in childish glee, after their long separation, Jennie harbors no malice. She peeps out at the world through a riotous mop of tumbling curls and laughs joyously as she patters to her foster playmates in the strange tongue of the lower East Side. Though her brown eyes are troubled and her voice has no mirth in it when she asks her never-answered question about "papa," Jennie is not vindictive.

Pleading guilty five days ago to the charge of bigamy, the father, Philip Gendel, an erstwhile produce merchant, will come up for sentence before Judge Willis next Thursday. The information charges briefly that when he married Sadie Goland, a Russian girl of this city, last August, he had already one wife living. He was arrested last November upon the identification of his first wife, who followed him here from New York City. At that time he had lived for nearly three years in the fancied security of an alias, that of Meyer Enwick. He and his illegal spouse lived in a little home on East Fifteenth street, near Hooper. A son had been born to them, Gendel was prospering in the produce business and he had apparently put the past behind him forever. If the recollection of the woman whom he is asserted to have left penniless, friendless, with a child and alone in the East weighed at all upon him, he did not show it.

HE IS DISCOVERED.

But the long arm of Kismet was reaching for him. A lodger named Koffman, who had lived in the same tenement with Mrs. Gendel and who knew her pitiful story, came to Los Angeles from New York. He did not know Gendel himself, but, through a mutual acquaintance, he happened to learn that he was here. The details of the sordid abandonment came back to him and he lost no time in letting the woman know that her husband was found.

She had no money to pay the transportation of herself and her one remaining child, but her friends of the tenement made up the sum in pennies, dimes and nickels. She arrived here practically penniless and nearly helpless through her ignorance of English. But for the charity of a compatriot, Mrs. Victor Berman of No. 1328 East Twenty-third street, she and Jennie would have gone the way of the two children they had left in the Potters Field of the metropolis.

She did not know under what name her husband went nor where he lived. She could not even use the ordinary sources of information because of her ignorance of American customs. But she knew that he would be found where produce was sold and for days she haunted the market places of the city. The search was at last rewarded. Gendel was pointed out to detectives and placed under arrest. He denied his name, refused to recognize his wife, turned stonily away from the little girl who, recognizing him instantly, ran to stretch her arms through the jail bars with the cry of "papa!" Later, however, in the face af practically incontrovertible evidence, he admitted his identity.

Gendel is 32 years old, and his first wife 26. They were married seven years ago in Kovna, Central Russia, and soon after came to this country. By dint of the most unremitting toil on the part of both, they scraped together what was to them a fortune—nearly $1700, which they deposited in a New York bank.

PENNILESS AND ALONE.

Three years ago, according to Mrs. Gendel's story, told yesterday through an interpreter, the man abandoned her, taking with him every penny of the savings. He said that he was going to look for another place, in New Jersey, but he never came back. Believing that he had met with foul play, she reported the case to the police and for two years she went almost daily to the morgue to see if she could find the body of the supposed dead man.

Six months after Gendel's disappearance another child was born and six weeks later it died, from cold and hunger, according to the death certificate, which Mrs. Gendel says she received at that time. Emma, the second child, died some months later from the same causes, says the mother. She and Jennie, she says, were actually facing starvation themselves when the news of Gendel's discovery reached them.

Of the other woman, Mrs. Gendel says she knows nothing. Though she naturally looks upon her as an interloper, she does not exhibit any of the fury of the "woman scorned." Her jealousy, if she feels any, is submerged in her anxiety that her little daughter may no longer suffer from poverty and enforced neglect. For her sake, she says, she is willing to bury the past, if Gendel will promise to be in the future the husband and father that he once was. If not, she proposes to let the law take its course. What the future of herself and her child will be, she does not know, but it will be without regret that she sees the infliction of the law's extremity upon her husband.

ENGER CARS ARE HERE.

Enger cars were displayed for the first time on the Pacific Coast last week, when the Brown-Symonds Company [illegible] of Los Angeles schools at work. Above are William Hudson and Douglas McArthur making one of the intricate tetrahedral fliers; below, Will Lee, the Chinese expert, tinting his butterfly-model kite like the original.

Oh, Look!

KITE TOURNEY STIRS BOYDOM.

FIFTH ANNUAL FLY HOVERS IN FOREGROUND.

Pupils of City Grammar Schools to Compete in Aerial Sport and Get Prizes for It Besides—Chinese Lad Is Most Formidable Competitor of Young America.

No matter if the average business man of Los Angeles is too pudgy to get down and shoot marbles from a taw-line and too dignified, withal, to hang on to the end of a kite line and do backward gymnastics over fences and ditches and things the while, he is at least expected to revert far enough back into his childhood to be there when the fifth annual kite tournament of the city schools is pulled off. Advance notice is given betimes in order that he may get into the proper juvenile frame of mind beforehand. The actual tournament will be held the 25th inst., probably at Exposition Park.

Already there is hustle and bustle in all of Los Angeles boydom, getting ready. Manual training departments, sloyd rooms and woodsheds all over the city are ahum with the business of kite-making. There will be every kind of kite there that anybody ever heard of and, probably, some besides. From the effect produced with two crossed sticks and a newspaper up to the most complicated tetrahedral, aeroplane, box and Chinese bird kites, nothing amenable to the laws of aerodynamics will be missing.

A feature will be the bird kites of Will Lee, the Chinese boy kite expert of the Grand-avenue school. Will learned to make 'em in Shanghai and they are the real thing—or, at least, they so skillfully imitate real birds as to be hardly distinguishable from such when afloat in the air. Hawks, butterflies, humming-birds and dragons, all extremely lifelike as to shape, coloring and movements, assist in attesting the superiority of the celestial youths over the American boy, when it comes to kites.

There will be handsome and appropriate prizes for size, pulling strength, artistic and original designs, height, speed and tandem exhibits. Something like 500 designs are expected altogether. The events themselves, to be "staged" under the direction of C. M. Miller, assistant city superintendent of sloyd, are as follows:

Aeroplane, Group M—Monoplane as a glider; monoplane as a kite; monoplane, rubber band power; monoplane, metal spring power; monoplane, any other power.

DUTCH SCION HERE.

Descendent of One of the Old Families of New York Comes West to Attend Convention of Navy League.

W. S. Van Rensselaer—no need to say he's from New York—scion of the bluest blue blood families in America, is registered at the Alexandria. He is here to attend the convention of the Navy League, of which he has been a member several years.

Van Rensselaer is not only one of the direct descendants of the old Dutch immigrant of the fifteenth century, but is one of the tallest of the line. He supports his extreme height with a real Beau Brummel cane. Of a very pleasing personality, he stated assuredly that he is connected with no recent scandals, has never attempted an international marriage, is not one of the wealthiest citizens of the great eastern metropolis and really is not a great news feature.

His grandfather was the famous Gen. Stephen Rensselaer, last of the Dutch patroons in the United States. The family in early days held one of the great land grants which included the property which today forms parts of Troy, Albany and several other smaller communities in New York State.

Much of this property was taken away from the Van Rensselaer family as well as from other families of Dutch descent who held large tracts in 1839, at the time of the "rent war," when the Federal government finally gave to settlers the land they had lived on seven years, despite prior ownership through foreign grant.

Young Van Rensselaer will remain here a week, part of which time he intends putting in at Catalina, where he is anxious to catch a few fish to take home as trophies.

AMERICAN QUEENS HIS.

Sheriff of County Which Forms One of the Boroughs of Greater New York Pays a Visit to California.

Thomas McQuinn, one of the most popular men in all New York—excepting with the rogues—is at the Alexandria. He is Sheriff of Queen's county, which includes one of the five boroughs of Greater New York.

Just a short time ago he was presented with an official badge for the excellency of his work, and, if a badge stands for anything, it certainly should be good. This affair has as center a six-carat, steel-white diamond. The name of the Sheriff and the county name are also worked out in diamonds on a solid gold shield.

Quinn is in a party brought to the Coast by W. C. Reed of the Potter Reed & Co., stock and bond dealers of New York. Reed brings a number of New York capitalists to Los Angeles about every three or four months and his company is heavily interested in oil properties in the Bakersfield, Coalinga, Midway and other districts. Two other members of the present party are B. J. Lynam and George Gifford. Several days will be passed in this city in addition to the time occupied in the oil fields.

FOR NAVY LEAGUE VISITORS.

Hospitality to Be Extended to Them at San Pedro on the Warships and Ashore at House of Yacht Club.

Members of the Navy League of the United States who will meet here in a convention this week will be the guests of the South Coast Yacht Club at a "smoker" next Thursday evening in the clubhouse at San Pedro. A number of the delegates of the Navy League will be the guests of Vice-Commodore Warren D. Wood at a dinner at the clubhouse preceding the "smoker."

For the convenience of members of the yacht club, a special Pacific Electric car will leave the depot at Sixth and Main streets at 7 o'clock in the evening and will be run directly to the clubhouse.

Large preparations have been made by the club for the entertainment of the visiting delegates and nothing will be overlooked which will add to their having a good time. Preparations have been made to have several vaudeville acts as part of the evening's programme.

In the afternoon preceding the "smoker," the members of the league will be tendered a reception aboard the United States warships which are lying at anchor in Los Angeles harbor.

STEPHENS STUDIES LAW.

Congressman-Elect, in the Role of Schoolboy, Daily Takes Books Under Arm and Goes to Recitations.

Congressman-elect Stephens has become a schoolboy. Like other students, he daily takes his books under his arms and goes to his recitations.

As soon as the public decreed that he should represent this district in the Congress, he immediately matriculated in the College of Law of the University of Southern California.

He is not studying law because he ever expects to practice it. He is digesting the rules which have been laid down for generations by learned men in order that he may be better equipped for his work when he becomes a lawmaker.

Stephens, the student, is highly regarded in the college. His fellow disciples of the law think well of him and his instructors declare that there is not a brighter pupil. Time has not shriveled his learning capacity, and his examination marks will stand on the records of the institution as among the best ever given.

DROPS DEAD; STAYS TRAFFIC.

Cars Tied Up at First and Alameda Streets a Half-Hour Until the Coroner Can View Body.

Because the law does not allow the body of a person who dies suddenly to be moved until the Coroner can be given an opportunity to investigate, the Boyle Heights and West Seventh-street line was tied up at First and Alameda streets for about a half-hour late yesterday afternoon. Henry Sievres, about 70 years old, of No. 4518 East First street, dropped dead while riding home and the car was immediately stopped and held until the Coroner could arrive.

The body was ordered taken to the Receiving Hospital and later to Bresee Bros'. undertaking establishment. Though an autopsy has not been performed it is believed he died of heart failure.

The occurrence caused considerable commotion and several women became greatly frightened.

FALLING IRON FELLS HIM.

Newberry was rushed to the Receiving Hospital where it was found that his skull had been fractured. He was removed to the Good Samaritan Hospital. He did not lose consciousness though felled by the iron and it is expected he will recover.

The iron which injured him had been stored in the rafters in the roof of the blacksmith shop. Newberry is a blacksmith's helper.

LAW NOTES.

BY HENRY ARDEN.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals (eighth circuit,) in the case of the Atchson, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and City of Shawnee, held that a resolution of a city council ordering a railroad company to open and put in condition for public travel a street through its station yards, previously vacated by an ordinance which constituted a contract with the company, where by the terms of the order of the council a disobedience thereto subjected the railway company to a penalty under the laws of the State, is a legislative act which impairs the obligation of the contract and entitles the company to relief by injunction in a Federal court of equity. The court said that the city had no power to order the street reopened across the railroad company's yards without instituting condemnation proceedings, and paying the damage which the company would sustain.

In Lincoln, Neb., the Circuit Court of the United States holds that the Common Council, in fixing the price of gas to be paid by consumers, should allow nothing as a return or profit from the value of the franchise to use the streets, etc., where such franchise was granted by the city without compensation; that a rate which would entail a loss only, in the case of small consumers is not therefore confiscatory; that in fixing the value of the property of the gas company on which it has a right to a return, excessive value of stock and bonds many times the cost or present value of its property should not be considered; and that where the net earnings of a gas company under a rate prescribed by ordinance would be sufficient to give a return of over 5 per cent. on the value of its plant, it cannot be held confiscatory, for the purpose of invoking the equitable powers of the court to prevent its enforcement, until it is shown after trial that compliance with it does not in fact yield a reasonable return.

In proceedings for opening a street in San Diego the acts of the commissioners were confirmed by the City Council. In a suit by Trust Co. vs. Barnes, Street Superintendent, to set aside the assessment on the ground that the commissioners were interested parties, and that the assessment district was improperly laid out, the Supreme Court of California recently decides that as the street opening act contained no provision that the commissioners should be disinterested, and their determination is required to be reported to another body (City Council,) for correction, an dconfirmation, and opportunity is there afforded after reasonable notice to make objections on account of such interest, a failure to appear and make the objection operates as a waiver, and precludes the party from afterward raising it, or claiming that the determination is for that reason void.

In the case of Niehaus Brothers Company v. Contra Costa Water Company, the Supreme Court of California has recently held: that an obligation to furnish water for fire protection can only arise under an express contract between the parties; that under the ordinary relation of public service corporation and consumer, the only duty of the company is to furnish water as a commodity, and the right to recover damages for failure to supply water for fire purposes must be based solely on such special contract, and that there is nothing in the Constitution or legislative acts which imposes any obligation to furnish to a municipality or its inhabitants any special quantity of water or water for any particular purpose, except as an ordinary commodity. A water company may, however, make a valid contract to supply water for special protection, and will be responsible thereunder for any damages from a breach thereof.

In the U. S. Circuit Court, S. D., Ohio, in Mannington v. Hocking Valley Railway Company, the court says: A railroad company is a private corporation, but not in the strict sense of the ordinary business corporation, because it is charged with duties of a public nature, which distinguish it from the purely and strictly private corporation. In many respects it is a private corporation in all that the term implies; its foundation is private; it is organized for gain, and its strictly private rights are as much beyond legislative control as are the rights of the purely private corporation.

The rights of a locator of a mining claim on a forest reserve under U. S. statute June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. 34) are those of a locator on the public domain, under Rev. St. Sec. 2322; and such locator may by his location acquire a possessory title only, or, by complying with the regulations and paying the purchase price, may acquire the equitable title, or by a patent divest the government of all interest therein. United States v. Rizzinelli (U. S. District Court, Idaho.)

The Initial Showing of

New Spring Clothing

Will Receive the Enthusiastic Approval of Los Angeles Men

OUR first showing of Spring and Summer Garments for men reveals the highest artistic skill in the production of the season's styles. Our purchases for the season are the most extensive in our history—the pick of America's best makes have been brought to this store for your selection.

Every garment in this assortment reaches a point of perfection in fit, fabric and fashion never before attained—the stock offers men who would be well dressed an opportunity to select from all that is good and fashionable in clothes.

While all the staple colors and patterns are represented, the browns, grays and tans predominate. There is a wealth of new, fresh patterns—fine examples of the kind of clothes that good dressers want. In every detail of fit and finish these garments are truly remarkable. The keen treatment of shoulder, collar and lapel, and the perfect draping leave nothing to be desired.

We want every man to see these garments—to appreciate with us their beauty, their style and their value. Come tomorrow.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Receipts of eggs were among the heaviest ever reported in Los Angeles on a single day, 1060 cases of California stock. The price on local eggs naturally declined, going to 17 cents on case count and 21 cents on candled. There has been only one day of the entire week past that has not seen a drop in the market occasioned by the heavy receipts. A major portion of yesterday morning arrivals came from one of the coast towns, having been shipped in on one of the coastwise vessels. The shipment totaled 630 cases.

There were no changes in butter. Receipts were 25,197 pounds.

Offerings of cheese were light and sales few, the wet weather having rather killed any Saturday morning trading. Arrivals were 2577 pounds and the market on northern continued weak.

Potato receipts were 115 sacks. The demand was slow. No onions were reported in. The demand was fair. Bean arrivals were very small throughout the week. Only thirty sacks of sweets were reported in and prices are high with prospects of going to $5 during the week unless the rain ceases.

Movement of deciduous and other fruit has been very good during the week past, outside shipments having called for large amounts of stock. Apple prices are all on their way up. Citrus prices are staying unchanged and rather low.

SKYROCKETTING GAIN IN WHEAT.

FAILURE OF RECIPROCITY BIG NEWS FOR THE BULLS.

All Leading Staples Follow Pace Set by Fine Cereal and Closing Prices in Chicago Show Higher Quotations From Top to Bottom of List—Cash Corn Rather Slow.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 4.—Wheat closed strong today at the highest point of the week. The main reason was the defeat of all chance for immediate enactment of reciprocity. Last trades showed a net gain of 1⅛ to 1⅜@1½; every other leading staple on change finished also at an advance—corn, ⅛ to ⅛@⅝; oats, ⅛@¼ to ¼, and provisions, 2½ to 17½. May wheat ranged from 89⅜ to 91⅝ with the latter ruling at the end, a rise of 1⅜@1½, compared with twenty-four hours before. May corn ranged from 47⅝ to 48½ and closed ⅝@¾ net higher at 48⅜@48½. Cash corn was reported slow. No. 2 yellow finished at 46½@47. May oats varied between 30⅛ and 30⅝, with the close ⅛@¼ up at 30⅝. Improvement in provision prices came from the strength of grain, better call from the South and the relatively high quotations for lard in England. Pork at the end of the day had gained 7½@10 to 17½; lard, 7½ to 7½@10, and ribs, 2½ to 17½.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Cash quotations were as follows: Flour—Steady; winter patents, 3.90@4.35; straights, 3.60@4.20; straights, 3.80@4.00; bakers', 3.00@4.40; No. 2 rye, 85½@86; feed or mixing barley, 65@75; fair to choice malting, 90@96; flaxseed, No. 1 southwestern, 2.54; No. 1 northwestern, 2.67; Timothy seed, 11.75; clover, 15.00; mess pork, per barrel, 18.75@19.00; lard, per 100 lbs., 9.15; short ribs, sides, (loose,) 8.75@9.50; short clear sides, (boxed,) 9.50@9.75.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Early buyers found a little more cotton offering on the advance than they had expected and prices soon turned easier with the active months selling off to a net loss of 4 to 5 points and the new crop months making new low levels for the season. While the small mill failures reported are in themselves unimportant, these failures were nevertheless regarded as significant and as emphasizing the almost unendurable position in which unfortunately too many cotton manufacturers are at present placed to the high cost of cotton and the low prices to be obtained for goods. The prospect of an extra session of Congress is not helping trade and cotton manufacturers fear that with a Democratic House, complete revision of the tariff may be attempted. The movement of the old crop is on such a scale as to require explanations from those who believe in a crop of less than twelve and quarter million bales. The condition of the land for the planting of the new crop could hardly be better and as long as new crop prophets fail to furnish a stimulus to the market we can see nothing ahead but lower prices.

Logan & Bryan's letter says:

"The world's visible supply of cotton of American growth is slightly under 3,700,000 bales. The amount of old crop yet to be marketed about 1,500,000 bales making a total of 5,200,000 bales to last the spinner until he can get a new crop. One million bales of this should be set aside for speculative reserve centers leaving a net supply of 4,200,000 bales for actual spinners uses and of this probably 200,000 bales are not really spinnable cotton, being either linters or bolly's of little value. Four million bales would last until June 17, if the spinners taking averaged 260,000 bales per week as they did during the past seven days. This emphasizes the imperative necessity of curtailment which is inevitable. The one hope of the bear is that the next crop will exceed all previous records, but as yet he has for such a dream nothing more substantial than a decided inclination to increase the acreage, an inclination that has always and will always, exist as long as cotton is above ten cents. The labor sufficient to cope with the increased acreage is another problem and increased fertility of soil is a matter of experiment and education which a full decade cannot bring out."

have 26 Quarter Sections (4,160 acres) of the best land District.

Development is under way. Camp buildings and are completed and preparations are being made for for oil.

Analysis by Dr. Frederick Salathe, Ph. D., shows Paraffine base and high gravity, a refining oil worth barrel. This oil will never be marketed in compet asphalt base oils, but will always be in great dem purposes at top prices.

The development of the Kramer Oil Field will refining and industrial plants being established.

MR. JAMES WYNKOOP
Oil Editor Los Angeles Herald,

Makes the statement that Mr. R. C. Andre, General the North American Petroleum Company, "is a man one that he is sincere and that he knows the oil b from drilling to refining, and upon his rare judgment be willing to stake their capital."

This seems to be the opinion of nearly every man confers with Mr. Andre.

It is impossible for any man to go over the KRA DISTRICT without feeling convinced that the NORTH PETROLEUM COMPANY has one of the best young oil company in the business.

The fact that they have 4,160 ACRES makes unusual one for a speculative investment.

If you would talk with Mr. Andre, General Fiel would not hesitate to invest in THE NORTH AM LEUM COMPANY $100, $500, $1,000 or $5,000 for yo that the company will be one of the great oil compa We are offering a limited amount of the stock at this share. Cash or Monthly payments.

EXTREMELY DULL DAY ON 'CHANGE.

STOCKS MOVE SLUGGISHLY BUT WITH STRONG TONE.

London Prices for American Securities Closed Generally Higher and This Advantage Was Reflected in New York Market—Early Gains Lost on Extra Session News.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Extreme dullness prevailed throughout the stock market session, which was characterized at times by an undertone of strength. London prices for our securities closed generally higher and this advantage was more sustained at the opening of the local market. That the big banking interests are in no wise disturbed by recent developments was again attested today by the purchase for international account of $25,000,000 first mortgage 4 per cent. bonds of the Puget Sound division of the St. Paul Railroad. This announcement is of especial significance because of the recent weakness of St. Paul shares, accompanied by rumors of a possible dividend reduction. European advices report an increased abundance of money and easier discounts in London. London and Paris bankers are reported to have some more American financing under consideration, the details of which are likely to become public in the coming week. The stock market lost all its early gains in the final hour, when it became almost certain that an extra session of Congress would be called and new low records for the present movement were numerous. The bank statement was utterly at variance with forecasts. Instead of an expected gain in cash, the actual table showed a loss of $2,000,000. The actual cash reserve of the banks is now 27.70 per cent., compared with 28.04 per cent. last week. Bonds were fairly steady; total sales par value $1,376,000. United States 4s lost 1-4 per cent. on the week.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, March 4.—Trading on the curb was light today until near the close, when the market weakened. Giroux was the most heavily pounded, selling down to 6⅛, last sales at 6 3-16. The general list was featureless. The Boston market was extremely dull, with only fractional changes. The interest there was centered in the Calumet and Hecla merger. The following were the closing bid and asked quotations:

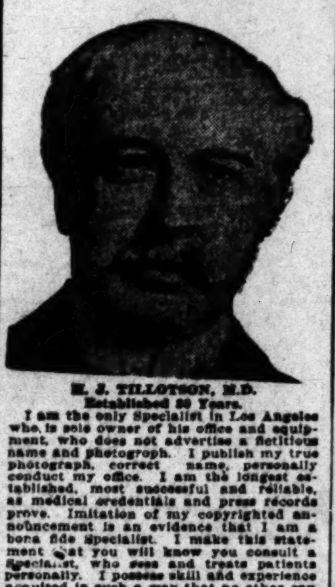
CURED IN FIVE DAYS

Hernia, Piles, Fistula and Varicose Veins



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 30 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. Imitation of my copyrighted announcement is an evidence that I am a bona fide specialist. I make this statement that you will know you consult a Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, ordinary doctors with questionable ability give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in One TREATMENT. Most Time-Saving. Most Natural. Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 to Any Charity as a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured Patients are My Testimonials, however, I do not make patient's Names Merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary, a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

Varicose Veins

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by one treatment.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

LIFE'S BLOOD STREAM.

The great clearinghouse of a person's body is the blood stream. Your blood cells are your bank account. Your only defense against disease is by and through blood corpuscles. My blood-making, blood-purifying remedies have been tried and proven. My blood-cell remedies nourish, strengthen and increase the blood cells and nourish the nerve centers. I want to prove to you at my expense that my blood-making, blood-purifying remedies give power to weak brains and life to nerve centers.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis I make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

Free Consultation

I offer not only FREE Consultation and Advice, but of every case that comes to me I will make a Careful Examination and Diagnosis without charge. Ailing persons should not neglect this opportunity to get expert opinion about their trouble.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

Before beginning treatment elsewhere, take my friendly advice and ask the doctor to tell you of his qualifications to cure you, and then be sure he shows you the proofs of his ability. Mere talk means nothing; promises and guarantees without ability behind them are of no value to you or any one else. After you are satisfied and begin your treatment it is up to you to see the promises are carried out. If you should be unfortunate enough to select the wrong doctor and find it out in time, come to me and I will be glad to do all that can be done for you.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you have have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases, and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis we make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Varicose veins do more to destroy human vitality than many other diseases put together. They sap up the strength of the body. You come to my office with your varicose veins, and you leave me an absolutely well man. One treatment is all that is necessary. Not weeks nor months of endless doctoring, but one single visit. I permanently cure you without the loss of time, no pain whatever, and no after trouble.

I will cheerfully donate $1000 to any charity if any statement in this announcement is not absolutely true.

FAIR EXHIBIT AT LAND SHOW

San Diego Exposition to Be Exploited Here.

Nevada to Send Delegation to Great Project.

Imperial Valley Preparing to Display Resources.

The Panama-California Expostiion at San Diego will take advantage of the splendid advertising advantages offered by the Pacific Lands and Products Exposition which opens in Shrine Auditorium March 18, to exploit the big 1913 fair. A relief map showing the exposition grounds and San Diego harbor will be a feature of this exhibit. Under the auspices of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, the Spreckels interests and representative men of the city, the land resources of San Diego county will be thoroughly exemplified.

It has been decided that the date of Nevada Day at the land show will be March 30. Gov. T. J. Oddie of Nevada and J. E. Stubbs, president of the State University at Reno, are co-operating in plans for displaying the recources of their commonwealth. Douglas White, industrial commissioner of the Salt Lake Railroad, is in Nevada in the interests of the exposition, and expects to arrange for several excursions of Nevada people. Clark county, Nevada, will, it is said, be especially well represented.

The Imperial Valley is planning to have one of the most attractive and comprehensive exhibits at the show. The expense of the display will be met by Brawley, El Centro, Imperial, Calexico and Holtville.

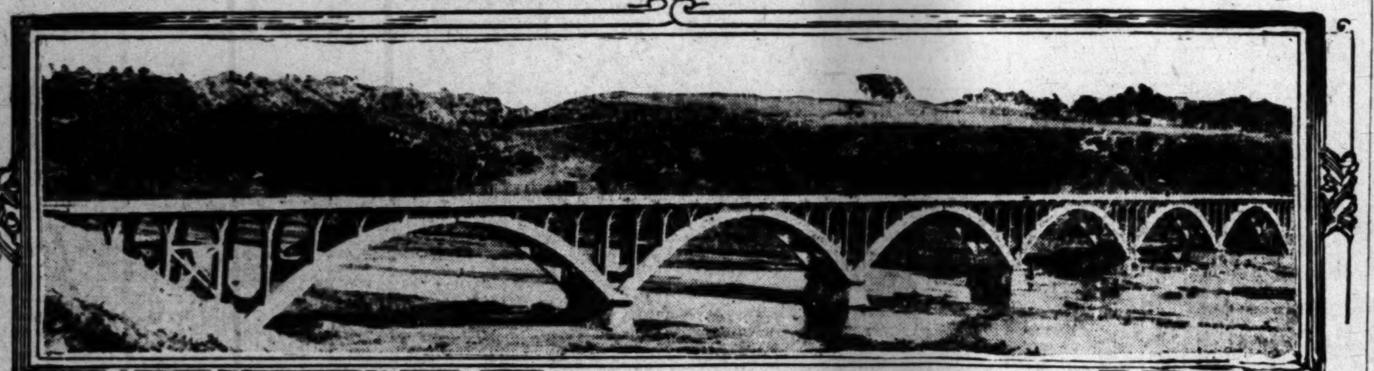
The largest individual space leased for the exposition, aside from that of the Pacific Electric Railway, has been taken by the Janss Investment Company. In its more than 1500 square feet, this company will exhibit to splenid advantage the products of the Van Nuys and Lankershim ranch holdings of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, Ramona Acres, Sierra Park, Yorba Linda, La Sierra Heights and other fine properties.

SPLENDID BRIDGE COMPLETED.

Reinforced Concrete Structure Over the San Luis Rey River at Oceanside Is Artistic and Stable.

OCEANSIDE, Feb. 24.—The Young Construction Company of Los Angeles has completed a 700-foot $20,000 reinforced concrete bridge over the San Luis Rey River at Oceanside, and the structure will be ready for travel as soon as the twenty miles of grading north of Oceanside and between it and the Orange county line is finished. This is expected to be brought about by April 1.

The roadway of the bridge, having an inside width of 24 feet, rests upon six arches, built upon as many piers, 60 feet apart. The abutment rests upon piling driven a depth of 30 feet, 28 piles to the pier, the concrete work forming the base being about four feet above the river bed. Each arch consists of four sections which were moulded upon the ground and lifted to place by the aid of huge derricks. Each section is 55 feet long, 24 by 18 inches, and weighs about 20 ton. The construction is such that the sections both at the top and at the bottom are locked. Resting upon these substantial arches are the reinforced concrete posts and sub-arches supporting the roadway. The height of the roadway from the river bed is about 30 feet. The bridge has an eight-inch coping supporting iron posts for the guide rails.



New bridge over San Luis Rey River at Oceanside.

The river banks at the approaches to the bridge are 60 feet and at the south approach the bank is so abrupt it was necessary to make a big cut in order to make the bridge accessible.

The bridge was built under the personal supervision of W. M. Thomas of Thomas & Post, engineers, Mr. Thomas being the designer of the structure. It is one of the few reinforced concrete bridges on the coast.

FINE DEAL CONSUMMATED.

NOTED GROVE CHANGES HANDS.

ONTARIO, March 4.—A big deal in orange and lemon land was consummated this week by Bradley & Enell, who sold for H. Thompson his fifteen-acre place at the corner of Mountain avenue and Eighth street. The consideration was $34,000. Mr. Thompson bought the place five years ago at a cost of $15,000. He has taken off an average of $7000 of fruit from it every year. The purchasers are John Evans of Pomona, and M. Gregg, a recent arrival from Ohio.

E. B. Van Wormer has traded his property at the corner of Third avenue and Ninth street, consisting of several well-located lots to H. C. Ritter of Santa Ana, for 160 acres of alfalfa land near Tulare. The consideration in the deal is given as $14,000. The lots disposed of are the ones which the city of Upland had in mind as a likely location for a site for a municipal building and small park grounds. They were offered to the Upland people at from [illegible] to [illegible].

The contract for the erection of the new concrete undertaking establishment for J. B. Draper has been let to [illegible] S. Willis. Work is to commence at once. The building will be at the southeast corner of C street and Laurel avenue. The cost will be over $9000.

BIG TRACT TRANSFERRED.

TRADE INVOLVES FINE RANCH.

REDLANDS, March 4.—That there is a great scarcity of property for sale is evinced by the fact that the real estate agents advertise quite as frequently for property in which to interest prospective customers as for customers for property already listed.

A local firm closed a $60,000 deal yesterday whereby W. K. Stoddard of this city purchased from J. H. Robinson of Long Beach, a 200-acre ranch south of the winery and between Redlands and San Bernardino. Half of the ranch is in alfalfa and the new purchaser will put the other half in at once. The place is also improved. Mr. Stoddard gave in exchange $17,000 worth of city property, the rest of the transaction being cash.

Ex-Senator Henry M. Willis has purchased from A. C. Denman, Sr., an eleven-acre orange grove in Bryn Mawr, paying therefor $20,000. The grove consists of fourteen old Washington navels in prime condition.

W. A. Sharp, of Clark, S. D., a recent arrival in Redlands has purchased eleven and a half acres of land at the corner of Alabama street and Orange avenue from W. H. Frink, paying $1200 per acre, or $13,800. Eight and a half acres are set to Valencias and three acres are in alfalfa. A seven-room house and some out buildings are also on the property. Mr. Sharp purchased the grove as an investment and in part payment he took a twenty-room house on Nos. 224-226 West Olive avenue. Mr. Sharp recently purchased another grove in the University section paying $1200 per acre.

J. L. Summers has bought of E. L. Hawes of East Highlands a twenty-seven acre alfalfa ranch, paying $250 per acre. The place is improved with a six-room house. As part payment Mr. Hawes took a two-story dwelling and three lots on Chestnut avenue, valued at $7500. E. P. Tuck and Dr. Howard Hill have sold a four and a half acre orange grove on New York street, near the Santa Ana wash, to William Singleton, taking in payment a handsome home on Cajon street, valued at $8000. The grove is valued at $5500.

J. L. Rife has sold to A. Leo Peel a 160-acre ranch in San Timoteo Canyon adjoining 320 acres already owned by the latter. As a consideration in the deal Peel turns over to Rife a half interest in a forty-two-acre piece of ground in the Santa Ana River bottom known as the Blakeley-Peel property. The property is set to 14,000 eucalyptus trees. One hundred acres in the San Timoteo Canyon piece is set to alfalfa and thirty acres is planted to grapes. The deal involves $16,000.

W. R. Cheney has added to his big ranch holdings in San Timoteo Canyon by buying the C. L. Fenton ranch. Mr. Cheney gave in exchange three houses and three lots in Los Angeles.

REPORT CONTINUED DEMAND.

MANY HOMES TRANSFERRED.

MONROVIA, March 4.—Realty men report a continuance during the week ending Thursday March 2, of the steady demand for residence property, which has been the salient feature of this year's business. No transfers of unusual note have been made, but the aggregate of small sales is indicative of substantial growth and varies but slightly from week to week. Local sales reported total $27,000, and are as follows:

L. B. Volmeer, to H. S. McKee, two lots, 100x150 feet, West Lime avenue, $1500; to F. O. Eager, two lots, 100x150 feet, West Lime avenue, $1500; to F. M. Pottenger, 50x150 feet, West Lemon avenue, $750; to F. N. Hewes, lot on West Lemon avenue, $750; to C. H. Anson, 50x150 feet, on West Lime avenue, $750; to John H. Bartle, 50x150 feet on West Lemon avenue, $750; to E. H. Rader, 50x150 feet on West Lime avenue, $750; to W. R. Neelands, 50x150 feet on West Lemon avenue, $750; to Monrovia Publishing Company, 50x150 feet, on West Lemon avenue, $750; to Monrovia Telephone and Telegraph Company, 50x150 feet, on West Lemon avenue, $750; to S. M. Osgood, 50x150 feet, on West Lime avenue, $750.

H. B. Gilchrist, acting for Prof. A. C. Pendleton of Los Angeles, sold to H. J. Caldwell, twelve acres, unimproved at the corner of Orange avenue and Fifth street, the consideration being stated at $10,000. The tract is in the extreme western section and extends to Arcadia east city limits. It is within Monrovia water and sewer districts. The purchaser will subdivide, and sell in half-acre lots. The same agent, acting for Tifal Brothers, sold to Mrs. R. M. Berriell, a bungalow on North Poppy avenue, for $2350; for Elmira Higgins, to F. A. Garcia, a cottage on South Magnolia, for $1000; for the Los Angeles Tulare Land Company, to H. G. Gilchrist, 50x150 feet, in the Orange-avenue tract, on East Lemon avenue, the consideration stated being $750.

Blythe and Beamon, acting for George A. Cushine, have to Joseph A. Fraulob, a bungalow on East Lime, for a consideration of $1800.

H. B. Gilchrist also reports the sale of thirteen acres in Rancho Puenta to S. Henricks for subdivision, the price paid being $3900; eighty acres in Kern county, to Prof. Pendleton, Los Angeles, consideration, $4800; ten acres in Kern county, to E. Higgins, Monrovia, consideration, $750; ten acres in Kern county, to J. Taylor, Monrovia, consideration, $750.

TRADES FOR CITY HALL.

IMPERIAL RANCH IS INVOLVED.

WHITTIER, March 4.—Attorney M. G. McCaslin consummated a deal here yesterday involving $18,000 when he exchanged his Imperial Valley holdings near El Centro for the City Hall building in Whittier, formerly known as the J. A. Hockett building, on East Philadelphia street.

The land entering into the exchange was five acres at El Centro just outside the present city limits. Mr. Hockett will subdivide the property into city lots.

This is the first real estate transaction in close-in business property in many months. Residence and ranch property have been particularly active lately; and this sale is encouraging as indicating future activity in business property.

BUILDING BETWEEN SHOWERS.

NEW HOMES IN ALL SECTIONS.

GLENDALE, March 4.—Between the showers Glendale is building up at a remarkable rate. Following is a brief summary of the building reported this week: Stuart M. Street has purchased two lots on Eulalia street and will start at once on a $3000 residence. The First Baptist congregation of this place will soon begin an addition to its church, to cost about $5000. W. G. Black is putting up a home of seven rooms on Park avenue, just east of Brand boulevard, on a lot which he purchased a short time ago.

Mrs. Mary Ayers is erecting a six-room bungalow on a lot just west of her home on Palmer avenue in the Ayers Vineyard tract. Mrs. Ayers will soon begin another home of this type on an adjoining lot. John Kirkham is constructing a five-room bungalow on Palmer avenue for an easterner. Mrs. Fannie Marple has just finished a six-room modern home on Palmer avenue near Central.

Messrs. Gerald and Ruben Kirkham are completing an office building at the corner of Palmer and Central avenues. Work is being rushed on the new $10,000 church which is being erected by the Presbyterians at the corner of Cedar and Fourth streets.

The Verdugo Pipe and Reservoir Company is laying a six-inch water main along Sixth street from the Verdugo road east to the Eagle Rock road. The work will be completed in about two weeks.

Henry P Johnson has bought from H. P. Shropshire four lots on the west side of Everett street, and will improve them at once. Ambrosini and Sipple have sold the eight-acre ranch at West Fourth street and San Fernando road belonging to Sophia Strehlein to Mayhew Carpenter, the reported consideration being $15,600. This tract will be improved at once.

MARKET HAS TONE.

MANY BUYERS IN FIELD.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 4.—The new year has started off with excellent prospects for a big real estate business, several good sales having already been made. Confidence in home property is causing many home people to make investments, which gives a strong tone to the market. The real estate men declare that the city has never had so many prospective buyers in the field, or so many looking for high-class residence property.

The following recent sales have been reported: Eugene Prescott to J. S. Pierce, 100x150 feet, with two-story frame residence, corner Fairview and Oxley streets, consideration not named. G. D. Roberts to William Bosbyshell of Los Angeles, lot on Electric avenue, between Oak and Huntington Drive, with eight-room, consideration reported, $8000. A six-room bungalow on Rollins street, between Fair Oaks avenue and Marengo, was traded in on the property. Mr. Bosbyshell bought this place for a home.

C. W. Gates, a wealthy cattle man has just completed a residence costing $18,000, at Buena Vista and Fremont streets. It is a two-story house containing fourteen rooms, with five large bathrooms. The exterior of basement and first floor is of cement, and above extending to the roof, shingles are laid in broken courses. The interior is handsomely finished in mahogany and oak.

Removal of Mash & McMillan.

Real estate and exchanges are now located in larger offices at 617, 618 and 619 Citizens National Bank Building. Increasing business necessitates this change. Remember, we can and will sell or exchange your property.

A CHALET BY THE SEA.

Overlooking beautiful Santa Monica Canyon, on a site 150x210 feet, at No. 236 Adelaide Drive, the Milwaukee Building Company is erecting for Isaac Milbank, a pretentious home, which will add considerably to the fame of the Palisades, as a section for beautiful residences. The same company designed the building, which is a Swiss Chalet, on simple lines, in which broad horizontal effects are given through heavy plain timber supports.

The feature of the exterior will be the sawed cedar shakes, which will be left natural and oiled. The grounds will be landscaped to cause a knoll effect. The house will contain fourteen roms, a large reception hall, and five bathrooms. The west rooms will all overlook the ocean.

BUYS FINE FRUIT RANCH.

Famous San Fernando Valley Orchard Purchased by New Yorker Who Will Manufacture Cordials.

An important deal in country property was concluded during the past week when the Citizens Investment Company sold to the Golden Gate Fruit Company of Alhambra and New York City the Orchardale ranch in the San Fernando Valley. The property, which lies just north of the great holdings of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, is famous for its fruit crops. there being on the place about 35,000 apricot and peach trees, all over twelve years old.

The ranch comprises 414 acres and the consideration involved in its transfer is reported to have been $135,000. News of the transaction was published exclusively in The Times of Thursday.

Tobias Miller, proprietor of the purchasing company, is a citizen of New York City, but has spent a great deal of his time in Southern California. It is his intention to erect on the site a factory of the manufacture of fruit cordials and beverages.

RESULT OF EXPANSION.

Automobile and Carriage Manufacturing Concern Secures Enlarged Quarters on the East Side.

Through the leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, George F. Pike & Co., manufacturers of carriage and automobile parts, have just secured a ten-year lease on the two-story brick building having a frontage of 100 feet on Towne avenue, just opposite the old City Market, facing on Central avenue and known as Nos. 317-19-21-23 Towne avenue. These new quarters give this manufacturing concern more than double the floor space now used by them in their present quarters.

Already repairs and alterations to the extent of several thousand dollars have been commenced on this building to fit it up as a modern plant for the new tennants, who are also spending considerable money installing new and up-to-date machinery. This property was formerly occupied by Rivers Bros.' Produce Company and is owned by T. J. Stephens, who has large property interests both in Los Angeles and San Francisco, between which two cities he divides his time. The total amount involved in the lease approximates $35,000 for the ten-year period.

RECORD-BREAKING LEASE.

Erection of Fine Office Block Assured by Ninety-nine-Year Rental Agreements on Spring.

If the new bill covering the tenure of leases in this State receives the Governor's signature, the first ninety-nine-year lease in the history of the Southwest will be signed within a short time. A contract for a lease has already received the signatures of both parties to the deal, and in the event the bill mentioned does not become a law, the term will be for fifty years.

The agreement is between Blanch B. Melsing, owner of 60x140 feet on the east side of South Spring street, between Sixth and Seventh, on the one hand and a local syndicate organized by Taylor MacDougal of W. B. Merwin & Company, on the other, and involves the property named. The ninety-nine-year lease, if valid, will call for a total rental of over $1,000,000, while the alternative fifty-year lease will involve a rental consideration of $500,000.

It is the intention of the lessees to erect on the site a fine office block of not less than six stories in height and of the most modern construction. This structure will, in all probability, be started within the present year.

The realty firm of Metcalf & Ryan handled the deal for both parties to the contract.

LAYING OUT NEW TRACT.

The tract known as tract 715, located between Western and Vernon avenues, just south of Florence avenue, is being laid out preparatory to being placed on the market by the Los Angeles Investment Company. The company intends building up the property with medium-priced homes. It will also place on the market eighty-six acres just north of this tract, together with a part of its holdings at Western and Slauson avenues.

The following sales are reported by the company: Mrs. Sadie J. Shelton, six-room bungalow, No. 1619 West Fiftieth street, $3200; Eugene P. Nollan, seven-room bungalow, No. 1632 West Forty-ninth, $4000; Joseph A. Oldaker, five-room bungalow, No. 1635 Yest Fiftieth, $3300; George E. ONLY FORTY ACRES LEFT.

Only forty acres out of the original 500 remain unsold in Ramona Acres, the San Gabriel Valley suburban property that has been pushed by the Janss Investment Company. It is expected that these remaining acres will have been closed out by the end of March. Banks & Fabling, selling agents for Ramona, report a total sale of $45,000 in the tract during the month of February. Recent purchases follow: Theodore Fulton, two acres at Hampton and Baltimore avenues, $3600; B. F. De Voe, one acre at Huntington drive and Avondale avenue, $1600; Fred Baden, one acre on Garvey avenue, $12,000; B. S. Dashing Damsels in Motor Togs Matched in Speed Contest.

On the left is Miss Ruth Bekins, the Lozier pilot, who can do eighty miles an hour on the straightaway, and facing her is Miss Beatrice d'Essling, who can drive the Apperson at a terrific clip.

Date Chosen.

LOZIER-APPERSON GIRLS READY FOR SPEED DASH.

Match to Be Held Thursday Afternoon—Miss Beatrice d'Essling Arrives With Apperson Car and Miss Bekins Comes Home From Baptist University to Practice for Match, Which Should Be a Hummer.

MISS BEATRICE d'ESSLING, the Apperson motor girl who is to race Miss Ruth Bekins in the Lozier, reached here yesterday morning on a special train and tried her Apperson car for a short spin. She is ready. The race is to be held Thursday afternoon, either on the Santa Monica road race course or at Ascot Park. Another track is also being considered.

Miss Ruth Bekins came home from Redlands University Friday and was out in her Lozier yesterday. She is willing to race any distance, but prefers a long race, at least fifty miles. She will use a toy-tonneau Briarcliff Lozier and agrees to drive in the race without a mechanician.

The Apperson toy-tonneau which Miss d'Essling will use is in the garage of the Leon T. Shettler. It is a nineteen-eleven model and will do a little better than seventy miles an hour. It is a wonderful racing car, but is not faster than the Lozier. Shettler prefers a short race and Miss d'Essling is willing to drive in five-mile heats to settle the match.

These two young women are to meet tomorrow afternoon to choose the course and to decide on the distance of the race. Articles of agreement will be signed at a conference.

Martin Bekins and Leon T. Shettler are to hold a conference tomorrow morning. While it will be left to the girls to choose the distance, both of these men will have something to say about the arrangements for the race.

Bekins wants as long a time as possible for his daughter to practice, and wants a long race on a track. Shettler has already decided that he wants a short race on a road.

CARS TUNED UP.

Tuned to the minute and ready for a dash that should thrill even the most exacting, two 1911 machines have been set aside for the race between Miss Bekins and Miss d'Essling, the two daring girls who are to meet in the motor match on Thursday. The Lozier and the Apperson can each make seventy miles an hour. Perhaps they could be persuaded to go a trifle faster if the girl driver steps a little harder on the throttle.

There is little to chose between either car. The machines are evenly matched. There is nothing to choose between either girl. Both seem to have plenty of nerve and both are willing to drive in a race that means high speed. The racing agreement is to be signed tomorrow and the terms of the contest will be settled at that time.

Here is the exact situation: The race is to be held Thursday; both girls have agreed to this; each has different ideas as to the length of the contest.

Beatrice d'Essling wants a five-mile race in which the match can be settled in heats. She feels that the Apperson would win in such a contest.

HAS THE NERVE.

Miss Ruth Bekins wants a fifty-mile race. She knows the record of the Lozier for these long distance events and feels sure she could win in a distance race.

Leon T. Shettler, the Apperson agent, prefers the shorter distance. He would be willing to have the race pulled off at Santa Monica, but he does not want a fifty-mile contest. His argument is a which his daughter will drive, prefers a long race. He wants the contest pulled off on a track like Ascot Park where the public can watch the cars every minute. He has a host of autoists with him who desire to witness the race every second. On Ascot a five-mile or a fifty-mile race could be held.

Miss d'Essling is confident. She feels sure of a victory, but is low-voiced and kind when she talks of the race. She wanted to know all about Miss Bekins. She has never driven a car in a race. She is just 19.

Miss Bekins is in her teens and is in college. She is also confident, and if you watch her you will get the impression that she will win. She has not driven the Lozier any distance and though she has sent other cars over many miles of road has never taken part in a race.

Here is Miss d'Essling's statement:

"I'm ready to race any distance. All I ask is that I am given a chance to practice for three days before the race. I'll be there when the starter is ready. Of course I prefer a short race, but if necessary, I'll drive fifty or a hundred miles. The short race looks best to me and I will be used to my car before Thursday."

Miss Ruth Bekins says:

"For my part I prefer a fifty-mile race. The Lozier is my favorite car but I have not driven it far enough to be sure of myself. I want all the time I can get to practice. I'll stay home from school and get ready for this race because I want to be at my best when I start. Believe I can win."

Up in the Air.

"AD" MAY NOT FIGHT MEMSIC.

CHAMP'S INJURED ARM THROWS FIGHT BUGS IN AIR.

McCarey Will Postpone Bout if Wolgast Is Hurt—Knockout Brown Logical Man for Local Scrapper. Match in Turmoil Until Definite News Is Heard.

The reported injury to Wolgast's arm in the fight with Brown in New York Friday night will not cause the cancellation of the date of the Wolgast-Memsic fight in this city, March 17, unless Wolgast's injuries prove to be serious.

This was the statement made last night by Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club.

In the event that the champion's bad arm proves to have been badly wrenched out of shape the fight with Memsic will be postponed until a later date. Having this match signed, McCarey wants to go through with it. His heart is so set on it that he will not put on a substitute card for St. Patrick's day if he has to postpone the big go. In the absence of any message yesterday from Wolgast McCarey surmises that he is not badly hurt.

come West for a twenty-round go with a tough one like Memsic. George has always had championship aspirations and from what the local bugs have seen of him they think he would have no trouble in beating Owen Moran, who would be many pounds lighter than Memsic. Powell is out of the question as he has gone back and Nelson is a dead one.

Memsic is said to be better now than he has been for months, and has already gone into training for Wolgast or anything that comes along. McCarey has not thought of any one but Wolgast, and is very anxious to have the local boy fight the champion, for if Ad should lose a decision here Los Angeles would have turned out another champion. At present there does not seem to be any boy in sight but Brown, who could make a hard fight with him.

Wet Day Game.

REGULARS BEAT YANNIGAN TEAM.

VERNON PLAYERS ENJOY STUNTS ON SOFT GROUND.

Patterson and McDonald Do Good Work as Does Gipe, the ex-Redondo Pitcher—New Bush Heaver May Be Put on Regular Staff. Country Trip on for Today.

Vernon Regulars, 4; Yannigans, 0. Seven innings.

Notwithstanding the storm yesterday morning the Vernon team had a short practice on their soft grounds and Hap Hogan suddenly decided in the afternoon to try a little friendly game between teams made up on the spur of the moment.

A temporary home plate was made in front of the regular one and the various bases were moved back into the field ten feet and the boys slushed around in the ooze for more than an hour and tried to play baseball. Hap Hogan declared the ground was "fine" but you can guess what it must have been after a day and night's rain on it, which was followed by more rain yesterday morning. At all events the boys played ball, or rather at it.

Carson and Schafer were the pitchers for the Regulars and Hogan caught, while for the Yannigans, Raleigh and Gipe heaved and Brown and Hasty caught, Hasty also playing first base at times. Roy Hitt played second, Stewart third, and Willett was shortstop. Nelson, late of the State League, was in left, Coy in center, and West of Pomona in right field.

Of course, under such conditions no high-class playing was possible, but at that the playing was interesting. Patterson at first for the Regulars, looks and acts like a live one, and the same can be said of McDonnell at short. Both men are husky and full of life and have a snap about their work that should make a hit with the fans. Stinson hit a double and Burrell and Carlisle cracked out triples. Hogan was well pleased with the work of Gipe of Redondo, and the young fellow need not be surprised if he is kept on the team. He probably will be if he shows as well as he did yesterday. Nelson and West also performed satisfactorily.

Roy Castleton, the pitcher, umpired the "game" and a small crowd of fans saw the play. There would have been a large number of spectators had the game not been decided upon on a moment's notice. The team is to go to San Bernardino this morning to play in that city this afternoon, providing there is no more rain this morning.

ROAD LEGISLATION.

It is probable that a radical change in road laws will be made by the Indiana Legislture, now in session at Indianapolis. So far, no good roads legislation has been passed, but the House committee on roads has drawn Exciting.

WON BY TWELVE INCHES, IS THE STANFORD RELAY.

Coleman of the Cardinal Beats Throop of U.S.C. in Final Lap—Dispute Over Result of Hundred-Yard Dash—Stine Falls in the Hurdles—Puritans Show Up Remarkably Well.

STANFORD 71 1-2 points—U.S.C. 50 1-2 points.

Running neck and neck with an even seven-foot stride, Tommy Coleman, the crack Stanford sprinter, and Waldo Throop, the Pacific Coast champion, came around the curve on the last lap of the half-mile relay at Bovard Field yesterday, and finished the thrill of the meet, Coleman forging ahead at the last few inches.

Dignified college professors rose in their seats and shouted and waved their arms as the two greatest 220 sprinters on the Coast finished the final race of the great track meet. Coleman had a slight handicap at the start, and for the first 100 yards he gained nothing, but forged ahead as Throop weakened toward the tape and won by a few inches.

Northern athletes proved their superiority, but the margin was so close that U.S.C. rooters have good cause to congratulate themselves. The score does not tell the story of the tournament. After the broad jump, which was the ninth event, the score stood 40 1-2 to 40 1-2. The Methodist athletes had held their opponents even for two-thirds of the meet.

Stanford, by a combination of class and good luck in the last five events, took the long lead which they held at the close.

Throop maintained his supremacy over his old rival, Coleman, in the century, but lost to the northerner in the 220-yard dash. Smitherum upset the expectations of supporters on both sides by breasting the tape in the hundred almost even with Throop.

Waldo led the entire distance and, according to the judgment of most of the spectators, his final spurt at the finish gave him the race. Smithson, judging the finish, however, declared Smitherum the winner by twelve inches. A lively argument ensued and the finish was finally declared a dead heat.

Capt. J. B. Franklin, referee, said that Throop won easily. His decision is only final when the judges cannot agree, however, and as there was only one judge of the first-place man there was no chance for disagreement. The protest on the part of the spectators was responsible for the majority of judges declaring the race a draw over the decision of Smithson.

Walter Hal, the U.S.C. half-miler, brought tears of joy to the eyes of the local 'varsity supporters when he slowly gained on Cramer, the Stanford runner, and finished with a two-yard lead. By some clever head work Hall kept his opponent on the outside lane as they ran neck and neck around the last 440-yard lap. He began to creep ahead inch by inch as they rounded the last curve.

Horine, the Stanford high jumper, after defeating the field in the altitude leap, established a new Coast record by jumping 6 feet 3 inches. The previous mark was 6ft. 2½in. This was the only new record made during the day as the heavy track made most of the marks slow.

Eight of the U.S.C. points were made by prep school boys. Ward, Earl and Watson of the preparatory department competed separate from the 'varsity, but Stanford allowed the combined points to stand as the final score.

"Dick" Stine, Cromwell's speedy hurdler, stumbled and fell when about won the race had he kept his face in front.

The two-mile race was all Stanford. Murphy, the Southern California runner, started some faint hope in the minds of the Methodist enthusiasts when he passed Ferguson and went into second place on the fifth lap, but his "pep" soon gave out and he finished a lap behind the northern runners.

Capt. Bellah, for Stanford, proved the greatest point winner of the meet. He took first place in the pole vault, and broad jump, making ten points for his side. The genial little captain keeps the best of feeling among his athletes. He was there among them before every event and was never heard to censure a loser.

The results:

The 100-yard dash: Throop (U.S.C.) and Smitherum (S.) tied for first; Coleman (S.) third; time, 10 1-5s.

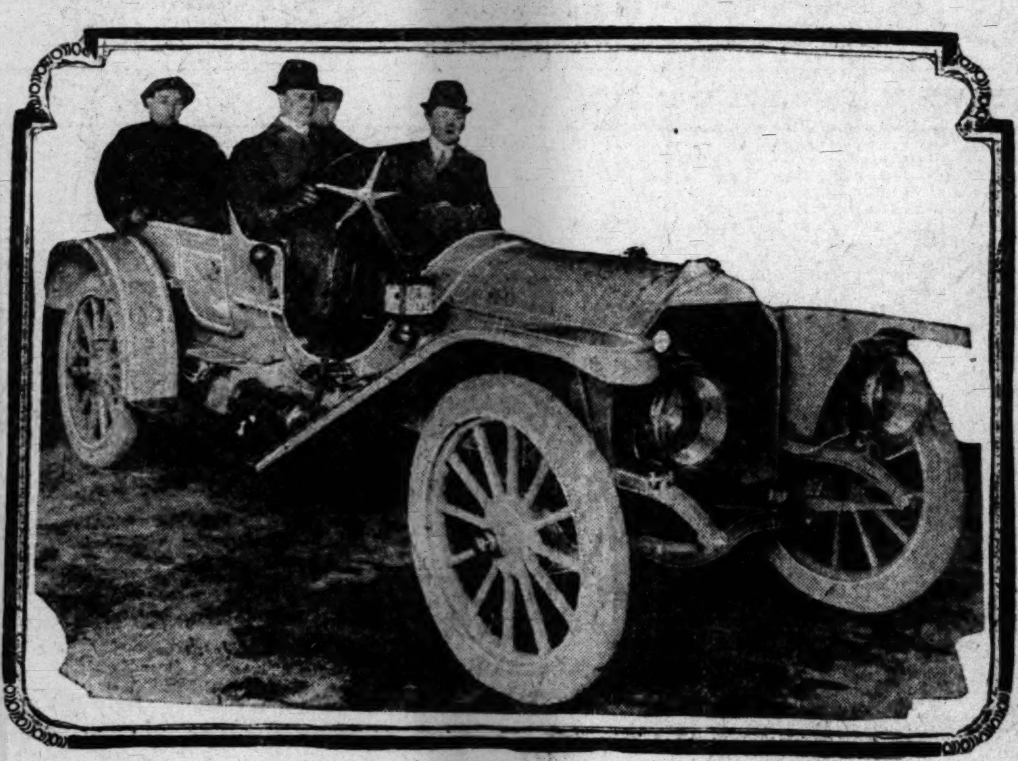
TOPANGO TRIP INTO THE HILLS.

"Times Pink" Tour Mapped Out in Kissel Kar.

Boulevards and Ranch Roads With Few Grades.

Motor Cars Skirt the Ocean for Several Miles.



Clyde Leppo in the Kissel Kar with which he mapped out Tour No. 3.

This car is the same model as the machine that won the Los Angeles-Phoenix road race and is just the motor for a canyon tour.

This is no time for a motor tour of any length. An effort has been made by The Times to choose a route which can be taken in comfort, even at this season of the year.

If today is clear, the roads should be found passable.

The tour to Topango Canyon is a thriller. Though it is more beautiful at this season of the year when the hills are green, the rains have swollen some of the streams and, to be frank, it might be well to wait a week or two.

The entire route can be made over county highways, ranch roads, macadam boulevards and paved street. It is picturesque, shoots through the hills, drops into a canyon and skirts the Pacific Ocean. When the sun comes out this is one of the best tours which The Times has mapped out thus far.

BY CLYDE LEPPO.

The tour to Topanga Canyon is one of the most interestinb that can be made at this season of the year. The road through Laurel Canyon is beautiful and the grades in the Topango are great. The highway along the Pacific Ocean is in splendid condition, and the rains have not hurt the roads. Of course the water is high in places through the Topango, but an automobile can make the tour all right.

We took our Kissel Kar, the same model as the machine with which Harvey Herrick won the Los Angeles-Phoenix road race. The Topango trip appealed to me, and the roads are in shape even now. We left The Times office at 9 o'clock in the morning. That is early enough to start. We drove out Sunset boulevard eight miles to the outskirts of Hollywood, and then entered the hills for the drive into Laurel Canyon. This is beautiful.

The grade is not steep. We made it easily on the "intermediate," and even if you have to drop into low gear it will be for only a short time. The Kissel was in splendid shape for a trip, and we sent her quickly through the hills.

After topping the Laurel Canyon grade we had driven only fourteen miles, and the car was in condition for a spin over the Encino highway. We shot past the Sheep Ranch and into Encino, but of course we were careful not to break the speed limit, twenty miles an hour on the county roads.

That Chalk Hill grade was easy, though you perhaps will have to change into intermediate; take it from me, if you are driving a Kissel you will not use the "low" on that hill. We reached Calabasas, twenty-eight miles away, ready for a drive through the Topango Canyon. We turned toward the ocean and entered the heart of the hills. The scenery cannot be beaten anywhere.

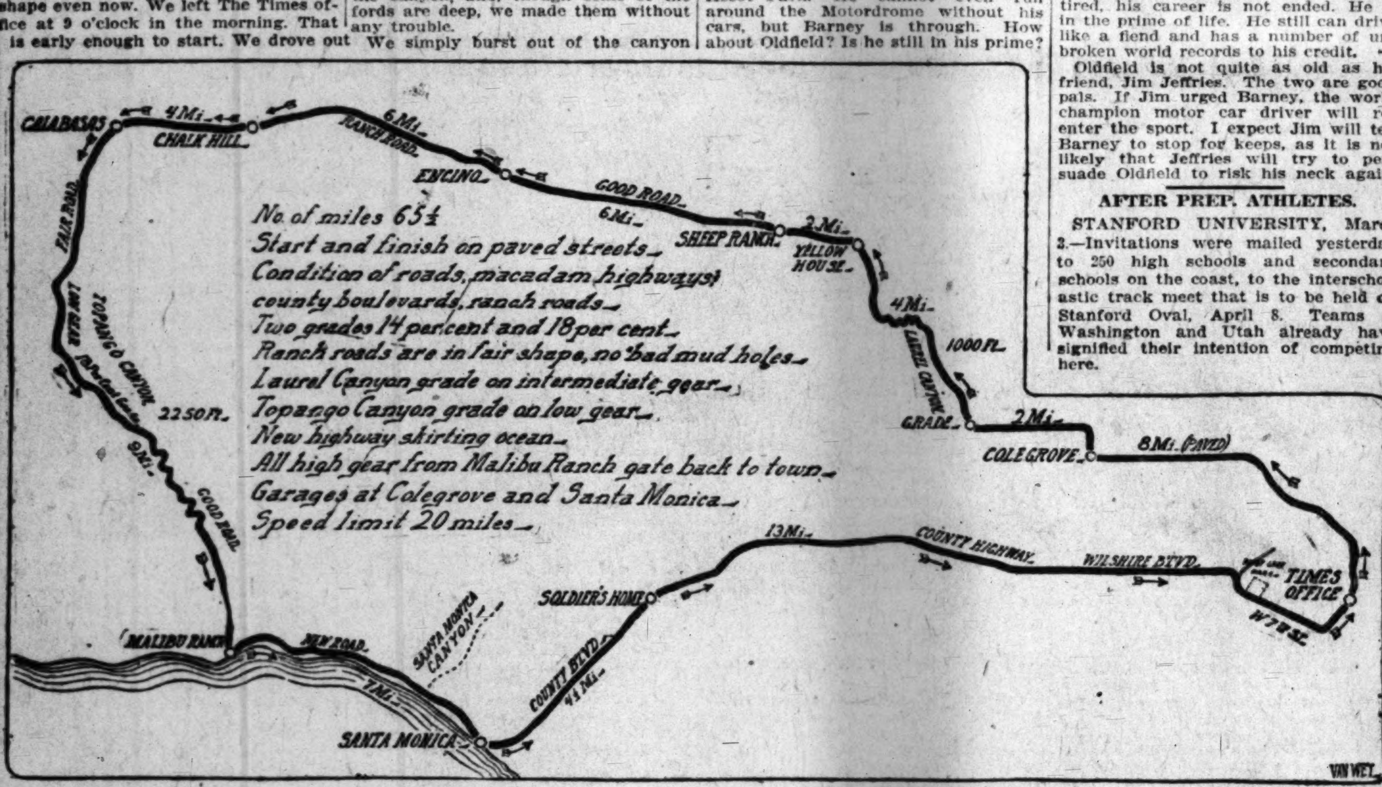
After leaving the Calabasas store, by the way, you don't go to the old Calabasas ranch-house, you turn at the store, where you can get gasoline if you desire. The drive then takes you to the steepest part of the entire grade. You must use your low gear here. The drive is not dangerous, there are no steep precipices, the road is fairly good, but you must take care.

Well we dropped into low gear and the motor barked away in great shape. She took that hill splendidly and we had no trouble making the climb.

When we rounded the crown of that high hill, the view of the surrounding country was immense and we declared the tour was the greatest we had ever taken. Then we began to drop down into the canyon. Here you need good brakes but we had them. It was no trick at all to reach the bottom of the canyon, and, though some of the fords are deep, we made them without any trouble.

We simply burst out of the canyon right into the ocean at the mouth of the Malibu. Then we had a great drive along the beach. That road is fine and its good all the way to Santa Monica. The beach looks pretty and the hills better than they ever have before.

We had enjoyed a lunch in the Topanga and the drive over the ocean boulevard was especially great. We reached the Santa Monica road race course and took Nevada avenue to Topango and the drive over the ocean over the new country highway to Wilshire boulevard and were back to our starting point before we realized the tour was over.



Hail to the Chief.

BARNEY OLDFIELD IS COMING HOME TO REST ON HIS HONORS.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Barney Oldfield is coming home. One of the most spectacular fights in motor history is over, at least for the time being. Oldfield has won. He promises to retire from the racing game for twelve Benz and the Darracq. Are you glad? months. He has sold the "Blitzen The world champion is coming home to rest on his honors.

Well, in a way I am glad it is all over, but sorry we will not have a chance to see Barney in action again. The cars are sold and Oldfield has plenty of money. I hope he will know enough to save it, but it is hard to tell. Barney is one of the most liberal men on earth.

The fight is over. Oldfield has just what he wanted. He is still an outlaw, but what does that matter? If he wants to race on foot he can go to Ascot Park. He cannot even run around the Motordrome without his cars, but Barney is through. How about Oldfield? Is he still in his prime?

There are those who claim Ralph De Palma can beat him. Well, I must be shown. It's a shame the two did not meet before Barney went out. It would have been a great race. I am inclined to believe Barney would have won. Ralph can go some, though, I must admit.

There is no greater drawing card in the sporting world today than a race between De Palma and Oldfield. Instead of racing, Barney proposes to open a cafe here in this city. Well, it will be opened on a grand scale, and I believe he will do well. Oldfield has the habit of making good.

Bill Pickens comes back with Barney. Bill is also an outlaw. He can engage in a footrace with Barney on Ascot Park, but it would not be thrilling enough, as Oldfield would win even more easily than he did when pitted against some of the would-be motor champs.

Though Oldfield has temporarily retired, his career is not ended. He is in the prime of life. He still can drive like a fiend and has a number of unbroken world records to his credit.

Oldfield is not quite as old as his friend, Jim Jeffries. The two are good pals. If Jim urged Barney, the world champion motor car driver will reenter the sport. I expect Jim will tell Barney to stop for keeps, as it is not likely that Jeffries will try to persuade Oldfield to risk his neck again.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 3.—Invitations were mailed yesterday to 250 high schools and secondary schools on the coast, to the interscholastic track meet that is to be held on Stanford Oval, April 8. Teams in Washington and Utah already have signified their intention of competing here.

Speedsters Are Matched.

DE PALMA AND TETZLAFF ARE TO MEET IN CENTURY TRACK RACE.

Ralph De Palma, champion track driver of the world, is to meet Teddy Tetzlaff, who won the last Santa Monica race with his Lozier road car in a 100-mile challenge match race at the Motordrome next Sunday. De Palma's challenge was accepted promptly.

De Palma issued the challenge, specifying that he would use his ninety horse-power Simplex with which he has made several fast records on the Del Rey track. When told of the defi made by his rival, Tetzlaff accepted at once and said he was only too willing to match his fast car against De Palma and his Simplex.

Both men agreed upon 100 miles as the distance and with a battle between these two fast machines it is very possible that the world's record will be shattered next Sunday. De Palma already has a national reputation as a daring pilot. Tetzlaff at the last and will give the Simplex a great run on Sunday.

The purse will be the largest ever raced for by two automobiles in the country. Manager Walter Hempel has agreed to give the men a large percentage of the gate receipts and considering the following of these two cars and the great interest the race is certain to create, the crowd should be the largest that ever gathered for an automobile event in California.

The two cars are scheduled to appear in some short events on the Oakland motordrome today and immediately after that will be shipped to Los Angeles for the final tuning up.

Tetzlaff says his car was never in better shape and if he fails to lower the world's hundred mile record it will be on account of bad racing luck. De Palma knows his car has plenty of speed and figures that it will be largely a question of driving ability. As neither car will be able to maintain the tremendous speed of ninety miles an hour without tire changes

Road Conditions.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY AUTO CLUB GIVES MOTORISTS TIMELY HINT.

The Automobile Club of Southern California wishes to warn all motorists not to take the coast route to San Diego. In its present condition it is impassable and dangerous. One party was lost for six hours and three machines were stalled in the mud all night on the coast road. In explanation of this, the following letter which Miss Sybil Geary received yesterday will give some idea of conditions:

"I have your letter of February 28 relative to the trouble which motorists are having on the coast road through the Santa Margarita Ranch.

"This is a condition of affairs which, of course, should be changed and I have given orders today that proper signs be placed along the road so that motorists may have no further trouble as to the road which should be followed through the ranch.

"One of the causes of the difficulty is that the farmers along the road were so anxious to cultivate the land occupied by the old road that they have plowed it out of existence and thrown the travel to the new road."

In making the run to Riverside, the best route has been found to be Stephenson avenue to Whittier avenue, to Pico station, to the river. Follow the river bank north to the El Monte and Pomona road through Bassett, Puente, Lemon, Spadra, into Pomona and from Pomona a choice can be made of turning south to the Chino road into Riverside, or north to Claremont and Upland on the Foothill boulevard to San Bernardino.

On the inland San Diego road, the going is pretty good at this time of the year, as far as Bonsall. Beyond Bonsall is the heavy adobe which is impassable, and motorists should cross from Bonsall to Oceanside through Del Mar to La Jolla into San Diego.

Going north, the club wishes to warn all motorists that unless they are familiar with mountain touring it is safer to wait in crossing the passes until the roads have had a chance to partially dry. The automobile club is routing all motorists through Hollywood over the Calabasas and Conejo to Santa Barbara.

Panama-Pacific Road Race. 168.8 Miles, 148 minutes, 28 secon

By winning for the second time in succession the Free-for-All in Panama-Pacific Road Race the Pope has proven to be one of the m consistent performers of any automobile made.

Road racing is the hardest test that an automobile can be put As proof of this read the reports of any of the big road races and the number of apparently good cars that fall by the wayside on acco of parts breaking. The Pope has finished every race in which they started. Proof positive of their durability.

While on this subject I would particularly call your attention the fact that we always have to race against cars with anywhere f 100 to 200 cu. in. more cylinder displacement than our car. No car our inches wants to race with a Pope.

It is a well-known fact that Dick Ferris could not get any ent for the class from 231 to 300 cu. in. in the last Santa Monica race, unless we agreed not to enter our 1910 Pope, whose engi small enough to get in this class. As an excuse some of our comp tors said: "There is no use of us entering our cars against that car give Bill Ruess a chance to make monkeys out of us." If Aut bile men regard the Pope in this way, don't you, Mr. Buyer, you had better look into this car before buying.

FARMER IS TRANSFORMED.

Regal Man Says Motor Car Has Worked Great Changes in the Rural Districts.

Automobiles have entirely transformed the farmer's life during the past few years, changing him and his announced my intention of 'coming back,' nearly everybody laughed at me.

Well, that only increased my determination to show the people they were wrong, just as they have been wrong about me many times before, and I began to get myself in condition. I think that I have succeeded. Anyway, I never felt better in my life than I feel now. I am willing to fight any family from an isolated unsocial group to an active, well-educated and up-to-date unit in the human society, according to Rudolph Schmittdiel, district manager of the Regal Motor Car Company at Chicago.

The well-to-do-farmer has come to consider an auto an essential part of his farm equipment. He can do his week's trading in town with a great saving of time and by means of it take advantage of the social life which the city has to offer.

There is lots of talk among real estate brokers and those who are in a position to know, about the "back-to-the farm" movement, and they attribute the tendency on the part of the city population to return to the ranches to the automobile, which has almost entirely removed the drudgery and disagreeable features of farming.

HOWARD TO BE IN OUTFIELD.

Butler of Eastern League Is Slated for Second.

Akin Seems to Be a Fixture at Third Base.

Crips, Rawlings and Deal May Be Kept on Team.

Ivan Howard, who has been on second base for the Los Angeles team for several years, is to play left field this season. Butler, who comes from Pittsburgh, in the Nagle deal, will be put on second base.

These are the principal changes announced by Capt. Frank Dillon of the Los Angeles team and the chances are that they will be permanent for the season unless some unforeseen thing occurs. Butler is said to be a cracking good infielder and if he makes good at second base he will be kept there. Howard is speedy and is what might be called a sure catch on fly balls so the outfield will be no hardship for him.

Dillon seems very confident that he will have a real team this year and as his infield will be as strong or stronger than it was last season he feels himself on Easy street. As at present planned the outfield will be made up of Howard in left, Daley in center and Bernard in right field and it will be pretty hard to beat that combination in this league from what the fans know at the preent time.

All three of the men are good. Howard hit .241 in 206 games last year as an infielder, and his batting should improve this year on the general assumption that playing the outfield improves a man's batting. Daley hit .262 and Bernard .257 last year and there is no particular reason or any at all why they should fall off this year.

The new man in the infield is Akin of Seattle and while he did not have a very good record with the Seattle team last season he has shown up very well here in the short practice the team has had and the genera to have a better throwing arm. He is a big, strong fellow and should run to his best form in the hot weather we have in this State in the summer.

Butler is apparently a good man. He played second and third base last year for the Fall River team in the New England League and in 116 games hit .266 and fielded .913. He had twenty-six doubles, six triples and two home runs and from the dope will fill Howard's shoes acceptably.

Dillon has not decided on first base yet and may have to play it himself this year. He figured on getting Conley of the Imperial League, but it seems this boy was sold to the Battle Creek team back in the Breakfast Food League. He is a good prospect for he hit about .400 last season. Deal, who is now working the bag in practice, may not be retained. He is a nice fielder, but does not appear to be much of a hitter.

Delmas will probably play short again. Rawlings is being tried out and shows much promise. He will probably be kept on the club, but will not be a regular on account of his lack of experience. Dillon figures that the kid will be a pretty sweet ball player by next year.

The catchers will be Abbott and Grindle and the main pitching staff will consist of Tozer, Delhi, Thorsen, Criger, Klein and Wheeler. Crips looks to be a good one and may be kept. Dillon said yesterday that he could get Bobby Keefe from Cincinnati if he needed him and that he could get other players from the Reus

Old-Time "Kid" Says All He Wants Is a Chance to Prove that He Can Come Back.

In reference to his proposed return to the ring Kid McCoy says:

"However, most of the American people are 'from Missouri' and they have to be 'shown.' Therefore, I am ready to 'show them.' So in order to convince the public that Kid McCoy is sincere and has 'come back' I am ready to take on the next best man in the heavyweight class, namely, Al Kaufman. I will sign articles to fight him any number of rounds, preferably to a finish, the fight to take place within the next sixty days, and I will bet $5000 that I defeat him. That is how sure I am that I am already 'back.'

"All I want is a chance. I have studied the heavyweight division thoroughly, and honestly I can't convince myself that anyone of them has the class that the public demands in a real champion."

With the Jim Stewart-Kid McCoy bout still within memory's reach this statement brings to mind those welsh rarebit dreams. Still if Selby really wants to come back—well, "on with the dance."

Jockeys Off to Europe.

A quartette of clever jockeys left New York for Europe last week, where they will perform during the coming season. The travelers were Vincent Powers, Fred Herbert, Willie Knapp and Mickey Miles. Powers and Knapp will do most of the riding. Herbert is much lighter than his companions and will be depended upon in the selling and overnight events.

Is Ardent Motorist.

RICH WOMAN LIKES WINTON.

Mrs. Pitcairn Has Two New Six-Cylinder Beauties.

Ships Her Car by Express and Drives Into Mexico.

Howard Outfits Big Red Car Which Is a Hummer.

Mrs. Robert Pitcairn of Pittsburgh, but now of Pasadena, one of the richest women of the world, has a stable of Winton cars which is equal to any in this entire country. She has the handsome six-cylinder beauties ready for a tour, with professional chauffeurs also ready to shoot away over the roads.

TOURS THE STATE.

From the heart of the Crown City to the end of the State Mrs. Pitcairn has toured since coming to California. She goes wherever and whenever she pleases and always takes her cars with her. One of her most daring trips was made recently to San Diego when the roads were impassable.

Those who had tried to drive over the slushy highways told her not to venture into the mud. Mrs. Pitcairn wanted her car and determined to take it to San Diego. She secured a suite of rooms at the Hotel Grant and telegraphed Manager Holmes that she was coming with her motor car. A garage was secured, but those who knew of the proposed trip wondered how the Winton would arrive.

Imagine the surprise of the motorists in San Diego when the car was whirled in by express. The Winton arrived as soon as Mrs. Pitcairn and she had a chance to go wherever she pleased and could use her own car. The prominent Pittsburgher had pulled off a novel stunt and had won.

There was plenty of mud, but not too much to keep the widow of the former prominent railroad man from going where she pleased. She drove to the State line and saw the earthworks of the Mexicans. If she had desired to go to Ensenada or even farther Mrs. Pitcairn would have had her wish gratified.

This well-known woman is accompanied by a retinue of relatives and friends, a family physician, maids in waiting, and two of the dearest little children, Susan and Elizabeth Crabbe, whose mother, Mrs. V. L. Crabbe, is certain her darlings are the best motorists on earth. Mrs. Pitcairn agrees with her.

When the Pitcairn family starts it takes two Winton six-cylinder seven-passenger machines to carry them. Mrs. Pitcairn only insists on one thing: She must ride in the handsome new 1911 seven-passenger red limousine which she purchased recently from W. D. Howard, the local agent.

ONE OF THE BEST.

This car is one of the beauties of the season. It has all the accessories one can think of and then some. William Howard superintended the outfitting of this special car, and it is a prize winner. It has won a place in the heart of the wealthy widow, who is an ardent motorist herself.

Mrs. William Rees, a daughter of Mrs. Pitcairn, is one of the jolly tourers who enjoys a drive in the big "six." She is ready to go any time and is always happy when out in the Winton. She spends her rainy days planning tours for when the sun shines. She has some outings that should prove of especial interest, mapped out already.

Mrs. Pitcairn owns two Wintons. There is a strong possibility that she will purchase a third machine. She looked at a car Wednesday and was about to purchase the machine. When she buys, Mrs. Pitcairn simply says, "I want that car."

That is always sufficient for Howard, who agrees with the Pittsburgh woman. He at once begins to equip the car, fixes it up in shape, hires a chauffeur, and the machine is driven up to the front of the handsome Pasadena home, and Mrs. Pitcairn is satisfied.

Mrs. Pitcairn went out on a shopping trip Saturday. It was a merry party that left the house in the big motors. Of course the machines did not need cranking. The motors started without any coaxing and the three cars, one of them driven by Howard, whirled away from the Crown City home for the downtown spin.

Two of the most delightful members of that touring party were Susan Crabbe, and her sister, Elizabeth. Susan is the baby. She is growing into a real motorist in the California sunshine, and she does not mind the rain. She just loves to ride in the front seat.

Her sister, Elizabeth, who is the older, is more sedate, though she knows just how to have as rollicking a time as Susan. The two are a happy pair and the buzz of the Winton motor is music in the ears of the little tots.

SHAFER HAS NOVEL PLAN.

Former Glide Agent Is to Handle Long Line of Machines and Has Backing of Many Motorists.

W. A. Shafer, treasurer of the Automobile Association, has organized a company to sell automobiles and has established offices in the H. W. Hellman building. His plan is unique and he has arranged to handle several of the big lines and a number of cars in second hand deals. He is no longer connected with the Glide agency but believes he has something which will prove popular among the automobile fraternity.

For twenty years Shafer was a prominent hotel man in the East. He has been connected with the automobile industry for a number of years and made a success of the Glide agency. He now is branching out into a larger field and has prospects which appear to be excellent for selling a number of machines.

A full list of all the cars now on the market is to be kept by Shafer. It will be possible to scan these and if a used machine is desired, Shafer will ascertain the price and make the deal. There is a new field which automobile dealers are apparently glad to boost.

GETS AN AUTOCRAT.

T. A. Livesley of Salem, Or., who is spending the winter with his family at Hollywood, has just received a handsome "Autocrat" which is one of the niftiest Oldsmobile machines sold by the Howard Automobile Company. It is painted a rich golden brown and nickel-plated throughout. The "Autocrat" arrived with a carload of Oldsmobiles including a "Limited" and a "Special," both 1911 models, which are among the most attractive on the local market. After touring the southern

LOZIER MAN SAVES MONEY.

COST OF MOTOR CAR UPKEEP DOES NOT FRIGHTEN HIM.

Tires and Gasoline the Biggest Bills, But That's Not the Worse of the Deal as Machines Are Cheaper to Operate Than They Ever Were Before and Are Built Better.

"Economy in running expense," is the watchword of the modern automobile manufacturer, according to G. A. Emise of the Lozier Motor Company. Speaking of the changes which had been brought about in this respect during the past few years, he said:

"Initial cost was once a small part of the expense of maintaining an auto. The buyer found, to his sorrow, that the up-keep proved the real expense. Many men of moderate means who figured they could afford a machine were forced to dispose of it after the first season, due to the great drain caused by the repair and supply expenses.

"Today these conditions have been greatly changed. Economies of comparatively recent date make it possible for a man of even moderate means to own and maintain an automobile.

"Tire troubles have been the greatest bugbear of expense as well as annoyance. Many owners will agree that they are the one drawback to the otherwise unalloyed pleasure of motoring.

"Tire manufacturers have pretty well agreed that the great percentage of tire troubles originate from two causes: first, overloading of tires, and second, insufficient inflation. There was a tendency on the part of manufacturers to save as much material in tire construction as possible, and the result has been an overloading which was disastrous to the rubber.

"The latest tendency in this respect is to make the tires a trifle larger than the regular size calls for. The result is a greatly increased mileage. Heavy passenger touring cars are giving service of 5000 miles and upwards on one set of tires.

"Gasoline is another item of expense which has been greatly reduced. The first cost is greater than previously, it is true, but improved carburetors have reduced the waste to a minimum. In the official test of the Lozier fifty-horse-power, six-cylinder touring car, seven passengers were carried a distance of 17.1 miles over country roads with one gallon of gasoline.

"Perhaps the greatest economies effected in the case of the man who must figure closely, is the chauffeur's hire. A few years ago very few had the courage to attempt to maintain an automobile without employing a professional driver. The average owner considered it beyond his power to master the mechanism, and the complicated parts justified him in this regard. The simplicity of construction in recent years has entirely done away with this drawback.

"General adoption of demountable rims, quick-detachable tires and air bottles for inflation, together with a much simpler mechanism, has made the care of the machine only a slight inconvenience. Private garages have come to be a part of every well planned house, the same as the stable was a necessity previously."

RENAULT MAN IS HERE.

Henion Takes Agency for Handsome Foreign Line and Fast Car May Be Entered in Big Road Race.

Rene J. Marx, manager of the Pacific Coast Renault Freres selling branch, is here and has established a Renault agency. Space has been secured at No. 1124 South Olive street, and C. C. Henion has taken the agency for the handsome line of foreign cars. Marx agrees to dispose of fifteen Renaults before the end of the present year.

This record would be a proud one, nected with the industry since automobiles first became practical. He has one of the handsomest lines ever brought to Los Angeles.

Henion is in charge here and already has a demonstrator on the ground. He is planning to bring a number of handsome machines from the factory and there is a possibility that the Renault will be seen in the Santa Monica road race this year. The car is one of the fastest machines built and the factory promise to quit racing for a period expires in July. This may mean that a handsome Renault will fly over the Santa Monica course in a great speed contest.

DIAMOND TIRES WIN.

Diamond tire manufacturers are congratulating themselves on the showing made by their rubber goods at the automobile shows this winter. At Chicago 100 cars were equipped with Diamonds, while the next nearest competitor furnished 65. New York Madison Square Garden show had 69 Diamond equipped cars, with 54 by the next best. The Palace show in New York made nearly as good showing for the Diamond Company. Philadelphia show included 43 sets to 31 by the next competitor. In the Los Angeles show the proportion was 47 to 29. At Cleveland, Diamonds lead by over 300 per cent.

CHOOSING PET NAME FOR CAR.

SCHACHT CAR MAKES REAL HIT WITH LOCAL STAR.

Ruggles Has Brain Storm When Trying to Choose Appropriate Title for His Pleasure Car Which He Thinks Is About the Finest Thing on Four Wheels.

When Charles Ruggles became the proud possessor of a Schacht touring car recently he decided that it was not official until he had a pet name for it.

So the young actor asked all his friends for suggestions and all his fellow-members of the Burbank Stock Company contributed. Still Charles Ruggles was not satisfied. We wanted something distinctive as "Blitzen Benz," or "Black Bess," or something snappy.

His fruitless search for a name soon became a matter of common gossip along the Rialto and yesterday he received the following letter, written in a dainty feminine hand:

"Does 'El Corsairo,' or its English equivalent, 'The Jolly Roger,' appeal to you? Most of your neighbors will think you a pirate for possessing an auto unless you invite them joy-riding occasionally.

"If you wish to be literal you might term it 'La Cuita,' for unless you are a machinist you will without doubt find it 'a care.' Or, being a man, you are quite likely to choose 'El Diablo.' Why not call it 'Lucifer,' or the Italian form, 'Prince Lucio.' Would suggest, however, that you call it 'sudden death.'"

Notwithstanding all these ingenious suggestions, Ruggles is not satisfied and from the experience he had on the road to the Players' Country Club this week he thinks he ought to have a name that will suggest the ability to plough through unlimited mud and water.

He was showing off his new car to Misses Suzanne Willa, Viola Barry and Marguerite Loverick of the Burbank company and they insist that he found every rut and rock and chuck-hole on the entire route. Ruggles's sole reply to their chiding is, "I got you there and back, didn't I?"

VAN DYKE DELIVERY TRUCKS.

Los Angeles built motor trucks are to occupy a large place on the local market within a few weeks when the F. L. Moore Company, which makes Van Dyke delivery cars, has completed the equipment of its new factory. Van Dyke delivery cars during the past week have been delivered to Keniston & Keniston, Newberry & Co., B. C. Shearer, C. Ogier and Barker Brothers.

Going Some.

MAKES LONG TRIP FIRST.

FORD CAR ON INITIAL JOURNEY GOES MANY MILES.

Sixty-Year-Old Purchaser Buys Ford Car and on First Run Sends Twenty-Horse-Power Car Almost Five Hundred Miles Through the Rain, Mud and Slush to His Home.

Four hundred and sixty-five miles through rain and hail, over the muddiest kind of roads, with only two hours' instruction as to how to run the car, was the experience of P. A. Mabee, a sixty-year-old resident of Odessa, On.

It was a Ford car which Mabee bought second-hand from Paul Taylor of Windsor. Taylor advertised the auto for sale and Mabee answered the advertisement by mail and later followed it up in person. After looking the machine over carefully, he purchased it.

When asked what he expected to do with his new machine, he answered that he would drive it home at once. Taylor tried in vain to talk him out of this decision, as he knew the old man had never driven an automobile before. The Odessa man stood firm, however, and after being given a few instructions as to how to operate the levers, he started on the long road home.

Four days later, after battling with mud, hail and rain, the old gentleman reached the end of his journey, completely exhausted, both physically and mentally. He acknowledged after he had recovered from the effects of the hard drive that it was a bigger proposition than he had figured. Speaking of his experiences, he said:

"That I was not wrecked and possibly killed was an act of Providence. I have seen how experienced drivers were helpless with a skidding car. Once my machine skidded and struck for a deep ditch. The sight of that ditch will never leave my memory. I checked the machine just in time and saved the day, but it was a miracle."

Mabee said he learned more about automobiles in those four days than he expects to pick up all the rest of his life. The little Ford stood up well under the trip, however, and pulled out of ruts at times when it seemed impossible.

HOW TIRES ARE TREATED.

Drop in and See the Rubber Man, Urges W. D. Newerf, the Goodyear Company's Agent.

"Tires should be removed and after a thorough cleaning be treated to soapstone and wrapped when not in use for any period of time," says W. D. Newerf of the Newerf Rubber Company.

By a little care along this and kindred lines he claims the life of the rubber can be lengthened and dollars saved. Among other suggestions he said that the automobile owner should get the habit of dropping into see the rubber man occasionally for suggestions, the same as he would consult a physician. The makers and distributors of the goods are always well up on any new economies or points of interest and it would be worth while for the owner to take advantage of the knowledge.

G. W. Nerian of this city claims he has a record set of tires on his Overland car at the present time. He uses Goodyear No-Rim-Cuts and has already registered 16,000 miles on the poor country roads of Illinois, Indiana and Oklahoma. The set apparently is good for a good many more thousand miles.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 3.—An eight-team baseball league has been formed among combinations of the fraternities and clubs on the campus and a short series of games is to be played during the remainder of this month. If the plan proves successful the schedule will be extended.

THE HELM.

I consider the most dangerous hat can happen to a man in a to have something go wrong he steering gear. Under almost her circumstances a driver can gs in an emergency if he is nough that will save him, but en steering gear renders him for it is seldom possible to he brakes and bring the car to before it is ditched or before it nething.

most dangerous drive I ever my opinion, was on a one-sixth mile board bicycle saucer at Passaic, N. J., a few months ago. Covering a one-half mile or three laps in forty-three seconds was lively work and while I was not in the least frightened at any stage of the game and did not lose my head, plunging up the steep bank at the turns gave me cramps in my stomach and caused an unpleasant nausea the like of which I had never before experienced.

As far as eliminating danger is concerned, I am strongly in favor of the idea of the contest board being strict about granting driver's licenses to any except men who have proven their ability to drive. I do not say this because I happen to have been successful and want to keep others out of the game, but a number of accidents have been caused by inexperienced men piloting fast machines and I think that too much care cannot be taken along this line.

AUTO BRIEFS.

Providence, East Providence, Pawtucket and Fall River have ordered motor fire apparatus.

One part of the plan evolved in connection with the revival of the French Grand Prix race is the reduction of the entry fee from $1000 to $500 per car.

In oiling the little roller on the breaker bar, it is not necessary to flood the breaker box of the magneto. Applying the oil with a toothpick about once a month will give satisfactory results.

In order to help Fairfax county, Va., continue its highway improvement work, the Georgetown Citizens' Association of Washington, D. C., has contributed $50 and urged the merchants in the District to add to the fund it started.

The races scheduled today on the Motordrome track at Oakland, Cal., were originally set for January 21 and 22. Unforeseen difficulties caused several postponements and the meet seems to have met with a deal of hard luck.

The total registration of motor cars in New York State has already passed the 60,000 mark, showing that the registration is well up with that of last year, and that, with spring deliveries, will greatly exceed it.

Many manufacturers of automobiles are now said to favor another Glidden tour and that sixty cars can be had if that competition is held again. The general impression was that there would be a national tour of some sort, but that the name of Glidden would not be associated with it, and the trophy which was the cause of so much dissension last year would not again be offered. If the manufacturers want another Glidden tour, the chances are it will be held. The runs are dependent upon the support of the makers of cars, and what they say they want controls what will be done. The Glidden tour has caused misunderstandings in its history and probably will again as often as it is held. There is still litigation pending because of the Glidden tour of 1910.

A noticeable feature of the motor shows throughout the country this season is the attendance of Governors and other State officials. Heretofore mayors have mostly formed the center of official attraction, but the increasing demand for good roads and sane motor laws has enlisted the interest of State executives.

What is believed to be the first instance of an automobile speeding case heard in a juvenile court has occurred in Baltimore. Charged with driving a car twenty-two miles an hour in Druid Hill Park, a 15-year-old boy was arraigned by the police. The case was dismissed on payment of costs.

TOURISTS WOULD FLOCK HERE.

Driver of White Gasoline Car Thinks Our Chances Are Good for One of the Greatest Seasons.

"Thousands of eastern motorists would flock here in the winter time if they could only be made to realize the beauties of a trip among the Southern California orange groves and foothills," said John F. Nugent, a Pittsburgh business man who recently returned full of enthusiasm from such a trip in his White gasoline car.

Acting on Nugent's suggestion and using the pictures he took while on the trip, the McCarty-Parker Auto Company, local agent for the White cars, is getting out a booklet which the management expects to distribute through the East by means of the various White agencies.

Contrasting the eastern winter with the Southern California season, Nugent referred to a trip through the New England States which he made last year.

"I started away from Pittsburgh in my White car, going by way of Gettysburg, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. I intended to go up to Portland, Me., and then back into the moose country for a hunting trip. The wretched autumn rains came on, however, and after running for days with the mud almost up to the hubs, we finally gave it up and stuck to improved highways. We made the round trip of 2000 miles nearly all in the rain."

The White Company recently completed a test covering thousands of miles of the worst highways to be found in the East with its torpedo 40-horse-power Touring Roadster. Mountain climbing over goat trails and up the rocky beds of mountain streams was included in the test, the object being to pick out any possible weakness or fault in the machine.

"Master of the Roads" is the name given the torpedo model, and from the way it stood the test trip this name seems appropriate. The car is equipped with tool boxes, large gasoline tanks and water-tight furnishings, so that it is expected to be especially attractive for long tours.

A bill is now before the Pennsylvania Legislature providing for the condemnation and acquisition, at a cost not to exceed $2,000,000 to the State, of toll roads for the use of the public, abolishing tolls thereon and providing for the repair and maintenance of the roads so acquired.

"Regal 20"——$900

Motorists Everywhere Are Talking About This Advertisement. Watch for the Next One

Because—This is The First 1912 Car to be Announced. It is setting a new pace for automobile manufacturers and dealers—The Regal leads this year.

Because—This is the first of a series of advertisements that will be published, simultaneously in over 450 cities in the United States and will be read by millions of people, and will contain valuable information about the automobile industry never before disclosed to the public—almost unbelievable—but true.

Because—This advertisement tells about a car which is new—a car which is distinctive—a car which is the pioneer underslung car at a popular price.

Because—The Regal "20" at $900 is without competition. No other car equal to this has been produced at the price.

Because—This advertisement contains news about an organization which up-to-date has been conservative in exploiting its products until it was sure it was right and had the capacity and organization to satisfactorily and persistently care for the demands of its customers

Everyone knows that the automobile business has had a mushroom growth, and that the average automobile factory has presented a scene not unlike that in a newspaper office just before the paper goes to press. It has had all of the wild excitement—all of the feverish haste and all of that disregard for expense that always accompanies any rapid development. High-priced automobiles were the result. The owners paid the bill.

We have for a long time been studying this problem. We desired to eliminate the most important faults in the automobile manufacturing institution of today. We found several sources of waste. First an immature design, and second an immature and hasty method of manufacture; third and most important, an extravagant overhead expense. All of these we knew to be abnormal and consequently we set about to correct them. We believed that our success in the motor vehicle industry as in others in which we have engaged, laid in giving our customers the best value and service we could for their money.

For five years we have been studying the automobile conditions in the United States—through all of our representatives, we have received daily reports. We know for a fact what the real conditions are today. Consequently the cars which we have designed and are manufacturing and selling, we know from actual canvass of the owners and prospective owners are what the people want.

Everyone wants the most up-to-date design—the best workmanship—the most value for his money and a guarantee of good service after the car is in his hands.

We are satisfied that in this series of advertisements we shall be able to prove to you conclusively the truth of these statements. We are the first to make an announcement of a 1912 car—a car which we have been thinking about—designing and testing for over two years—a car which we know represents the most modern engineering and manufacturing practices—a car which in value has never been equaled either at home or abroad. It is in all respects the result of a knowledge which we have gained from actual experience.

We have always been the pioneers in setting the price and our "20" which is illustrated above meets in value anything which we have offered before, and competition has failed to produce its equal.

The Regal "20"

Price, $900

Price includes Dual ignition system with magneto. Complete gas and oil lamp equipment with generator, jack and tools. Wheel base 100". Tires 32x3½". Brakes—4 in number. Internal expanding and external contracting, acting directly on hub drums. Engine cast en bloc. Cylinders—4. Bore—3¾". Stroke—4½". Three speed and reverse selective sliding gear transmission. Road Clearance—10".

WHY THIS CAR IS DISTINCTIVE.

The Regal "20" is the first underslung car which has ever been sold for less than $4,000. The underslung construction is an expensive type to build—that is the reason. Most manufacturers, like most individuals, don't like to adopt new things unless they are forced to. We have taken the lead because we know that ultimately, cars of this type will embody this construction.

This type of construction is built on sound mechanical principles—there is no question but that it makes the most stable car—the center of gravity is lower—making a straight line drive possible, which, of course, means less loss of power between motor and wheels. The car has less tendency to skid—it holds the road better—there is less side lash on the springs and tires—it makes a very safe car to drive, one which can't turn turtle, and yet with all these advantages the road clearance is still as great as that of the overhung type. Besides the underslung construction lends itself most happily to that long, low body which has become so popular.

The Regal "20" is a car with $4,000 advantages and looks, which sells for $900, and this is the reason why it will pay you to not only read these advertisements, but to go to our nearest dealer and look the car over. Don't take our word for what we have said about it. Have the dealer demonstrate it to you.

We have never employed large-salaried men to write our advertisements.

We believe facts and good cars speak for themselves.

We have never entered into any mergers.

We have never had any Wall St. brokers on our payroll.

We have never attempted to exploit our company as a stock proposition.

All we have done is to make the best cars that could be made and sell them at a price as low as we possibly could consistent with a fair, legitimate profit.

Our overhead expenses do not exceed 5 per cent.

And yet we have an organization through which we can give you—the purchaser—a thoroughly satisfactory service.

Consequently the money that you invest in a Regal car represents actual value in materials and workmanship—you get real value for your money.

Read what a well-known trade paper says about underslung suspension—Motor World, Jan. 26—"Probably the greatest arguments which can be advanced in favor of the underhung suspension, aside from the attractive appearance it presents, are the low center of gravity and large wheels which are made possible. Underhanging also eliminates to a great extent the tendency to sideway by reason of the fact that the bulk of the weight of the car comes almost in the same plane as the springs which can have no appreciable lateral movement. The adoption of the underhung system by four prominent manufacturers goes to show that it must be reckoned with."

A "LIVE ONE" AT 11,000

Redlands, Cal., January 14, 1910.

The Regal car purchased of you early in 1909 has been run now something over eleven thousand miles, and I have never been delayed or stopped on the road a moment at any time on account of the car. I have never had any expenses whatever in upkeep. I have only had four punctures in the entire time and the original tires are still in use on the car. The car runs just as quiet and smooth now as the day I got it, and the motor pulls just as strong. I have never even had to clean a spark plug or grind a valve. The car is almost noiseless, runs smooth and pulls the hills strong, is light on tires and rides comfortable, and is satisfactory in every respect.

Mexico-Pueblo Contest.

PACKARD FINISHES FIRST BUT CHALMERS WINS NOVEL RACE.

THE remarkable feature of the annual Mexico-Pueblo race which was pulled off in December was the fact that the Packard "30" press car which started after all the other cars were under way, finished the run in time to greet the winners.

The Packard went over the same course as the other autos and passed racer after racer, forging ahead of the Chalmers, which won the contest, just a few miles before the finish.

Ham, the driver of the Chalmers, drove the distance of 99.2 miles in 3 h. 14 m. over one of the sandiest and roughest courses possible. The White car finished second and Buick third. These were the only cars to finish at all in the class A.

The Packard machine left Pueblo at 9:24 a.m. At 9:45 it passed the Metz. Two minutes later the White was seen stalled on a hillside with the driver vainly endeavoring to remove a broken spark plug.

A few miles further the Protos was passed, temporarily disabled with a broken steering wheel. The Buick was passed as it laid up a few seconds with a punctured tire.

The Chalmers remained far ahead, only distinguishable by an occasional cloud of dust, until close to the finish when the press car slowly crept up and passed it.

The roadside for miles was lined with spectators as this is classed as one of the most important races in Mexico. The course was hilly and crooked and has a long record of wrecks and accidents to its credit.

ROUND TRIP IN BUICK.

Nifty Little Redbird Skims over Rough Roads on Long Trip to Lighthouse.

From San Francisco to Point Reyes lighthouse and return, one of the hardest trips that can be found in California, was the recent record of one of the little Buick "Redbirds," the successor to the "White Streak."

According to the lighthouse keeper this run has been attempted many times but only accomplished once previous to the run made by the Buick. That time a high power machine was used. The little car carried three passengers which is one more than the machine was built to accommodate. Speaking of the trip, C. A. McGee who drove the car said:

"Every stop we made we were advised to turn around and go back as the road ahead was impassable. Mountain ranges and streams were crossed with comparative ease, and everything went fine as long as the road lasted could be imagined. Sometimes the little car sank in the mud up over the hubs. At other times it would climb up over rocks steeper than a stairway.

"Many grades of 25 and 35 per cent. were scaled. To add to the discomfiture of the party, which included Jean Brown of the Howard Automobile Company and a San Francisco press representative who acted as official observer, it started raining immediately after leaving Iverness. Deep ruts and narrow ravines were crossed by jumping the wheels on one side of the car across and then following the ditch to the end.

"The last mile was made through sand hills where traces of a road could be seen just often enough to enable the driver to follow it. The entire run was made without an accident and the little car behaved perfectly."

NEW SHOOTING RANGES.

Schuetzen Park Facilities to Be Enlarged for Small Caliber Target Practice.

Extensive plans for the extension of facilities for marksmen are under consideration by the officials of the Shooting Section of Los Angeles Turnverein Germania, commonly known as the Schuetzen Club.

The plans include the installation of such targets and ranges and promotion of such events as will meet the tastes of expert marksmen with pistol, revolver, shotgun or rifle.

Schuetzen Park is equipped with 200-yard and 500-yard rifle ranges, and butts, and has additional grounds which would furnish ideal short ranges, suitable for small caliber rifles and side arms. It is proposed to install such ranges and targets as will afford practice in small weapons for the national and international competitions, and fixed and running animal targets for practice with hunting rifles.

Standing deer at 100 yards, and running deer, foxes, hare, etc., at varying distances with appropriate contests and prizes for honors attained at each, are to be provided.

Capt. Chris. Krempel and Manager James Meyer are said to have favorably considered the plans involved, and propose early installation.

MAN WHO MADE HUPP IS HERE.

Low-Priced Car Advocate Brings a New Electric.

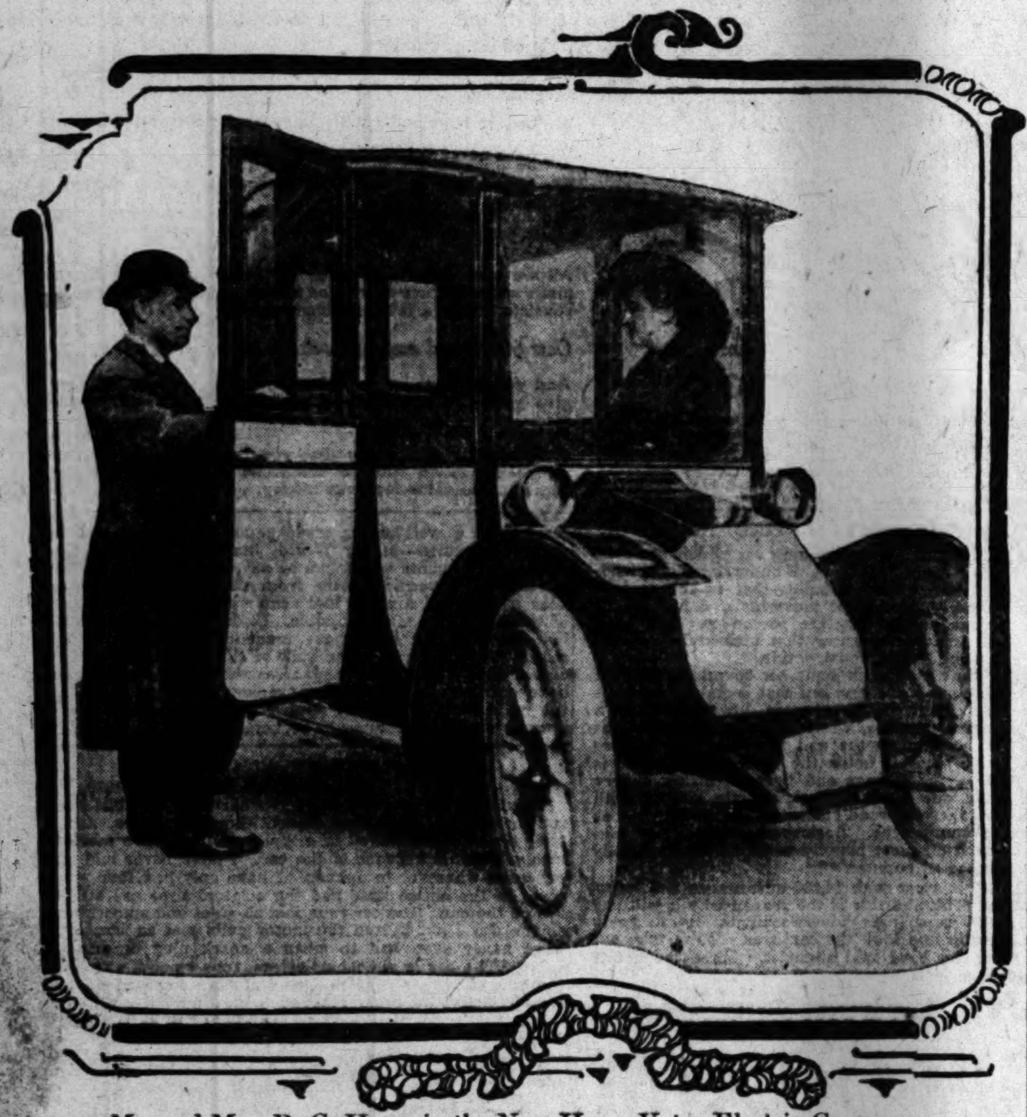
Tours Through the Mud When Told to Stay Home.

Another Sensation Which He Is Ready to Spring.

R. C. Hupp, president of the Hupp Motor Company, is here with Mrs. Hupp, to enjoy a tour. He has with him the first Hupp-Yates electric ever brought to Los Angeles. It is a beauty, but Hupp, is best known as designer of the Hupmobile.

One of the surprises, or rather jolts, which Hupp received on his first tour here in a Hupmobile was when he paid the bill for gasoline. He is used to spending about, well we can't tell you exactly how much, a gallon. He paid 25 cents here. He could have bought almost three times as much at home.

This made an impression on the Hupmobile man who is fair and square and is interested particularly in the low-priced car. He made a great sensation less than three years ago, when the Hupmobile was first turned out.



Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hupp in the New Hupp-Yates Electric Coupe.

This handsome machine was designed and built by the man who is touring Los Angeles with the new model.

It was the low-priced hit of the year and proved to be a runabout with which you could go anywhere. A mileage of twenty-five miles to the gallon did not surprise the Hupp man. He wanted to do even better.

Then he at once took up the question of the cost of gasoline. He began to purchase the gas at wholesale and installed a 3000 gallon tank. He poured the gas into the big receptacle and paid a startlingly low price. So low, that the automobile men would rejoice if they could secure the fluid here for the same price.

Then he began to work on his handsome car and an economy test, which surprised the automobile world was pulled off. For the first time in automobile history it was possible to get from twenty-five to thirty miles to a gallon of gasoline. Of course, the cars sold fast. That was to be taken for granted. It was the sensation of the year and several economy contests were started.

This year, Mr. and Mrs. Hupp decided to come to Los Angeles and look over the local territory. They were greeted by N. C. Nason, the agent for the Hupmobiles and are having a jolly good time. Both are guests at the Alexandria and whenever the sun shines are taking in the roads of Los Angeles county.

Hupp is used to doing things and he sprung something the day after he arrived. He was anxious to try out the Hupp-Yates, an electric, which he has designed and for which he is making great claims.

Though he was told repeatedly that this is no time to take tours, even in an electric inclosed coupe, Hupp determined to drive out into the country. He went and his wife went with him. His first tour was over The Times pink tour route to Venice and back. It was a novel sight to see an electric far from the city streets bowling over the country highways.

The first two days Hupp made 100 miles and was not satisfied. He has driven to Pasadena several times and is still planning other tours. The Hupp-Yates is making good every minute and he says the machine will do anything that any electric ever built has been able to do.

Hupp is accompanied here by J. O. Harris, outside salesman for the Hupp Motor Company. After leaving Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Hupp and Harris will go to San Francisco and then to Portland and Seattle, leaving for the East over the northern route.

RATE OF PRIZES.

FISK TIRE RECORD RUN.

Franklin Man Covers Many Miles Without Changing His Tires and Du Mars Is Glad.

H. F. Dunn, president of the Fisk Rubber Company, is due here tomorrow. He will be met by C. O. Du Mars, the local agent, who has a record to show the Fisk man. Dunn is coming from San Francisco, but will make only a short visit. Affairs here are in such shape that he will be tendered a report of which he can be proud.

One of the novel records to which his attention will be called is that of J. T. Osgood, owner of a Franklin car, who has driven his machine 27,009 miles on one set of Fisk tires. This is a remarkable showing and is something of which Du Mars is proud. He is not sure that it is safe to brag about such a record, however, as he fears other Fisk tire users may desire to go just as far on their tires.

The Franklin man called on Du Mars and told him he had one complaint to make. When the local Fisk man inquired the trouble the Franklin man said "I'm kicking because I've still got some of the original air in my tires."

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

The two taxicab companies of Louisville, Ky., have combined.

An Automobile Owners' Club has been organized in Philadelphia, with a interest in the Louisville automobile been opened.

The city fire department of Seattle, Wash., has ordered two more motor cars for fire captains.

In cold weather, it is always best after starting the engine to allow it to run a while before starting the car.

Prying the spring leaves of the spring apart and applying a little oil will do much to prevent rusting and consequent breakage of the spring leaves.

Automobile trucks will carry the mail from the central postoffice to the remote carrier stations in Minneapolis, beginning July 1, if plans now being formulated are carried out.

Ranchers of the Nookaack Valley, near Bellingham, Wash., have pledged half a million dollars in money and land toward financing a roadway between Bellingham and Skagit, a distance of fifty miles.

Tires which are removed from the rims should be wrapped in paper and stored in a cool, dark place. All rust should be cleaned from the rims and the inside polished with graphite or stove polish to prevent further rust.

It has been said that George Robertson might again be seen at the wheel of a racing car in competition, and in the near future, too. It is unlikely, however, that he will participate in any long-distance road or track contests, as his right arm is still limp as the result of the accident he met with in practicing for the Vanderbilt Cup race last fall.

Two more cars have been entered in the 500-mile International Sweepstakes scheduled to be run at the Indianapolis, Ind., Motor Speedway on Decoration Day, May 30. Up to the present time nine cars have been named for the big contest.

State Senator Drexler of Sussex county proposes to put a stop to "joy riding" in Delaware, if possible. He has introduced a bill providing for a fine of $100 or a year's imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, for tampering with an automobile or making use of it without the consent of the owner.

A movement has been started by motorists of Kalispell, Mont., to have the country roads from Columbia Falls to Belton, the gateway to the Glacier National Park, improved for the rapid passage of automobiles, and the aid of the commissioners of the National Forest Service will be asked. The Kalispell Chamber of Commerce will aid in the movement as one means of inducing more tourists to travel to the park. Thirty miles separate Kalispell and Belton.

Farmers are taking a great deal of interest in the Louisville Automobile show, which will be held at the First Regiment Armory in the Kentucky city Calls the Turn.

BANKER MAKES BIG PROPOSAL.

OFFERS TO PAY THREE HUNDRED FOR DEMONSTRATION.

Norman W. Church Knows the Car and Accepts Proposition Which Results in a Sale After Two Rides in the Handsome Nineteen-Eleven Model.

George H. Young, a banker of Bay City, Mich., who will soon start on a tour of the State in a new Stoddard-Dayton, is typical of the eastern tourist who becomes a Southern California motoring enthusiast. It took him just three days' sight-seeing in the south to get the California microbe and buy an automobile.

Young, with his family, is at the Alexandria. He desired to purchase a car, but wanted to see the city first, and noticing that the guests at the hotel were being taken out daily in cars of different makes, he inquired if they were rented machines. He expressed much surprise when informed that the majority of them were being given demonstrations. He immediately resolved to secure a car.

Appearing at the Stoddard-Dayton salesroom next day, Young informed Norman W. Church that he wished to buy a machine.

"I don't know whether the Stoddard is the car I want or not," said Young. "And I do not mean to let your men drive me all over this part of the country in demonstrating it. I think I can find out in a week whether or not it is the car for me. You give me a good driver and I will pay you $300 for a week of demonstrations."

Church knew his car and gladly accepted the offer. On the third day the phone rang and Church was asked if he would apply the $300 rent on the purchase price. In a few minutes the sale had been made.

Young is a typical motorist. He whizzes about the country for the delight he gets in the scenery and the picturesque sights. He says he is going to see the inside of California, and has engaged a driver to take him to every corner of the State.

GARVEY FINISHES LONG TRIP.

Newerf Rubber Man Home Again After Jaunt Almost Around the Globe.

James Garvey of the W. D. Newerf Rubber Company of this city has just returned from a twenty-month trip through Europe and United States, establishing agencies for the Newerf Company.

The trip covered over 36,000 miles and during that time he sold a half a million Twitchell air gauges. The Los Angeles products received plenty of advertising from Garvey's transactions both in Europe and this country.

Comparing trade conditions in the United States with those abroad he said that Americans are far in advance and that he noticed throughout the East that California stood well up in the opinions of those who did a national business in any department of the automobile industry.

see that the eastern papers say Hal Chase is a changed man since became manager of the New York hlanders. A lot of us would be nged men if we got a salary of $6000 ear and didn't have to get up at clock in the morning to catch the car into town or to milk the cow.

gains in Bureaus.

e truth now comes out that Lord s of England paid a marriage bu- a good fat fee to find him a rich in New York. He finally hooked Vivien Gould and Pap George is tickled over the hooking that he quit the railroad business and is g to Lunnon to go into English ty. First thing we know he will some fakir to trace his ancestry to William the Conqueror, the finished pirate, free-booter and up man of early English history. yet some persons declare that fighting makes them sick in their achs!

mont's Defense.

gust Belmont, a rich New Yorker breeds race horses, denies "with e vehemence I can command that race course is but a gambling in- tion. Our turfmen and breeders not gamblers and many of them ot bet at all." In the first place s affidavit man probably sent out stuff, and in the second place t the only "breeders" I ever saw don't bet on hoss races are the that lost all they had that day e previous race.

dule of Fines.

nager Cohn of the Spokane team ecided to fine his players $20 each e first time they are drunk; $50 econd time, and $75 the third Guess this fellow must be figur- getting back all the money he out for salaries. This is a mean, nasty scheme and an injustice to ball players.

Some One Got Stung.

Not being able to keep Barney Oldfield from making barrels of money as an outlaw racer, the A.A.A. is said to have bought his machines for $50,000. As this sum is three times what he asked for them in Los Angeles, it looks as if some one got stung on the deal. Barney can now easily buy a new 300-horse-power Benz, which Moross himself tried to buy from the Benz people, but couldn't.

Old-Timers Benched.

One good thing about the arrival of the spring training season in baseball is that it will do away with the old stale stories of how they used to play back in 1867. These are as painful as Sullivan's stories of how he used to fight. A kind-hearted public provides old ladies' homes for such grave diggers.

Masterson's Mistake.

One Bat Masterson, a gambler of the old days, who has turned author for certain eastern papers, had a very expert idea some days ago that Sam Langford would meet a very tough proposition in Bill Lang. If this Masterson will read the accounts of that battle he may learn that the toughest proposition Langford had that night with Lang was to bite his left ear off without drawing blood. He might have done this, but he didn't stop long enough after the fight to try it.

Appear to Be Cowed.

As Gotch has succeeded in beating about all the "Lions" in the wrestling game, including the Russian, Swedish, Finnish and Scandinavian, it might be well for some of these fellows who are strong in the back and weak in the head to call themselves Cows instead of Lions. We might not expect so much then.

ANAMA-PACIFIC ROAD RACE PLEASES POPE-HARTFORD MAN.

LLED with the spirit of what was is greatest race of the season Bill Ruess yesterday told the story e Pope-Hartford victory in the for-all Panama-Pacific road race. ives full credit to Bert Dingley is more than ever in love with the 1911 Pope which cleaned up the in the big event.

th watch in hand and with the aid . D. Newerf Bill kept the time by on every car in the race. The -Hartford looked like a winner in the event though the National Mars at the helm was a strong nder. At every turn Bill marked ime carefully and kept his eyes on ars as they swung into the stretch.

BY BILL RUESS.

t was a great race. The Pope- ord won just as I thought she . I kept the time and have every efully marked. There is no ques- and the only difference in my time the official time was two seconds. Dingley drove a great race with eatest car in the world under him. yed every minute of the big e Pope turned the fastest lap. over the list carefully. It was ed by men who know how to time. We watched each car. I ot do the work alone as it would been impossible for one man to e the timing. I knew every time came around just where he stood. easy to see that he would win. he big stock event I figured the a winner. Bert had a wonderful e but his tires gave out and he orced to stop too lonp. He lost inutes in one lap. He was up t good cars and was forced to at top speed all the way. Some brushes with the National six- er were hair-raisers.

n it comes to driving Dingley is ods. He knows how to handle pe and best of all the Pope- rd responds every time he jams t on the throttle. That car would st from under him and he had ll on speed.

I went to the race. It was mismanaged, though, and it's a wonder somebody wasn't killed. When Fleming in the Pope struck that bale of hay he hurled it 300 feet and it struck a spectator and almost buried him. Bert is a better driver than Fleming. He was the best driver in that race and that is saying a whole lot as some of the top-notchers were there.

I have no kick coming and no complaint to make. The Pope-Hartford won on its merit and we are satisfied to take what we have won. Of course I would have liked that St. Francis trophy but we were fairly beaten and we have no holler to make.

Spectators crowded out on the course and it took a nervy driver to control his car and keep from smashing into some man or woman who was anxious to watch the cars. The course was not properly patroled and the cars at times were driven through lanes of spectators. Once when Bert stopped to change a tire the crowd almost prevented him from starting again by pushing their way on to the course in front of the Pope-Hartford.

NEWERF IS HAPPY.

"Bill" Ruess was not the only happy automobile man on the row last week when Bert Dingley scooped everything in the free-for-all at the Panama-Pacific road races in going at a speed of sixty-six miles per hour. The Pope-Hartford was equipped with Goodyear tires and the Goodyear people figured they had won a victory as well.

Both William Ruess and Bert Dingley, who drive the winning car were loud in their praises of the tires supplied by the Goodyear agency. The Mercer car which carried off the small car event of the day was also equipped with Goodyears.

The results of the last year's business were extremely gratifying to the Goodyear officials. The sales reached $8,500,000. Already the factory has secured contracts of 64 per cent. of the automobile manufactories in the United States. With this lead the 1911 sales seem likely to surpass the record of last year.

MOTOR VEHICLE LAW.

A comprehensive motor vehicle law is to be introduced to the Legislature of Minnesota. The bill is backed by Minneapolis automobile men and is taken from the statutes now enforced in several Eastern States where traffic is heavy. Among the most important provisions embodied are the raising of the license fee from $1.50 to $2, and the compelling of owners to display license tags on both front and rear of the car. It is specified that non-residents who remain in the State for more than thirty days must obtain licenses.

MOTOR AS A LUXURY.

The Fiscal Court of Jefferson county, Ky., in which Louisville is located, is in a quandary. Several months ago the court purchased a Packard touring car from the Miles Auto Company. Suit was brought by one of the magistrates to prevent the sale, on the ground that the car was an unnecessary expense. The Court of Appeals has upheld this view and the car will have to be returned, although it has been used for some time. In the same connection the Court of Appeals decided that the Fiscal Court could purchase electric fans for the county court house, thus describing them as necessities, while the motor car is rated a luxury.

STANFORD FRESHMEN EXPECT TO BEAT RIVALS ON TRACK.

Intercollegiate Contest Two Weeks Hence Probably Will Be Last to Be Held in North—Good Performers Are in Ranks of Opposing Forces—Cardinal Sprinters Fleet.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 3.—The freshman intercollegiate track meet, which is to be held on Stanford oval two weeks from tomorrow, promises to be more closely contested than any similar event for several years past. The California "babies" have usually thrown the hooks into the Cardinal yearlings, but hope for a victory is entertained in the Stanford campus this year on account of the large number of good track men that are in the freshman class. The meet will be the last between the freshmen of the universities if the recent ruling of the Stanford faculty is carried out. Yesterday the list of eligibles, including the names of forty athletes, was sent to California. The team will be chosen from these men, who are about half the number of "babies" were tried out for the team.

The Stanford band will be strong in the sprints, distances, pole vault and weights. In the other events there is little chance of winning many first places. Ted Geissler, Ward Dawson and "Curly" Olmstead of Los Angeles are the best bets of the local freshmen. Geissler and Dawson are strong in both sprints and there are two or three other boys who are fleet. Olmstead ordinarily would be good for first place in the hammer and shot, but he will be pitted against Rice, a phenomenon from Chico High School, who is the huskiest "fresh" at either university. Last year he made an exceptional showing here in the invitation meet. He tried to enter Stanford last fall, but failing to meet the entrance requirements, went to California.

In the pole vault the Stanford freshmen will be represented by Boulware, who has been coming within two or three inches of twelve feet. In the distance runs, Reeves of San Bernardino has been making good time. Gard of Glendora has been running the mile in fast time.

The following-named men were reported to California as being eligible for the meet: C. B. Barnett, H. J. Borde, W. D. Bower, C. L. Boulware, A. C. Chiles, C. C. Close, A. G. Gage, A. C. Dimon, H. W. Dawson, E. F. Ellis, A. R. Edwards, B. M. Green, E. P. Geissler, L. J. Gamble, W. M. Glass, C. G. Gilbreath, R. E. Hartley, J. R. Hoffman, A. G. Halm, H. G. Hayes, F. Gard, C. W. Knight, K. F. Kauffman, P. B. McKee, P. L. Naiver, C. E. Olmstead, C. S. Powell, F. W. Reeves, J. W. Richdale, R. E. Roberts, H. W. Stammer, W. W. Simmons, C. R. Swanson, W. E. Smith, V. M. Smith, E. A. Wells, E. BEER AS GASOLINE.

Yorkshire, Eng., has found a process of de-alcoholizing beer, making it non-intoxicating, is of interest to motorists, because the alcohol which is extracted from the brew, it is said, can be used as a substitute for gasoline in automobiles.

Danny Shea Likes Los Angeles. Kittie Brashear Preparing to Go to Vancouver—Jess Orendorff Starts for Kansas City for Training Practice.

COME BACK HERE 'N DO THAT AGIN ?

Kittie Brashear, manager of the Vancouver team, intends to go to the Northwest League next Tuesday.

Pitcher Charley Hall of the Red Sox intends to remain here until the Regulars return to Los Angeles and is to go East with that team.

It is stated in all assurance that the St. Louis teams have worlds of confidence this year. It's a good thing they have. That's about all they showed last year.

Doc Moskimon is still with the Red whether or not he will play this season. He is a real pitcher and might be used to advantage by some team.

Abaticchio of the Louisville team should get out of baseball for he is one of the toughest men the reporters and type setting machine men have to handle in the business.

The advent of the Boston Red Sox has demonstrated to the local baseball world what a terrific lot of good men there are in the country that have no chance to get on the regular team.

Jess Orendorff, who has been sold to catch for the Kansas City team this season, started for the East yesterday morning. The many friends of Orendorff hope he will make good back there.

From the showing made by the Boston Yannigans in the opening game in this city some lower class clubs will have a lot of good players to fall back on this year. They make up a pretty nifty bunch.

The Minneapolis team of the Association will have about the same players it used last season. Cravath of course will be kept and Rube Waddell is expected to fill the vacancy made by the absence of Hughes, who won thirty-one and lost twelve games last season.

Danny Shea, the Seattle catcher, is still in town and may not go to his club. He does not have to report for practice for several weeks but does not want to return to the club if he can get out of it. He is satisfied with the salary offered but thinks that he has been in the Northwest League long enough, having played there six years.

Umpire Bill Evans says baseball fans are harmless. If he really thinks this he might ask Frank Chance about the time the New York hoodlums bounced pop bottles off his head last year or even ask Umpire Finney about the experience he had at the Vernon grounds last summer one Sunday morning. They are harmless as long as they don't slug you.

Some of the National League boosters are saying that Sec. Heydler is in a class by himself. That's exactly what the American League thinks about Ban Johnson, what the Southern League thinks of Kavanaugh, what the Eastern League thinks of Barrows, and so on down the line. The trouble with this hero worship is that none of these thinks give the class they have an idea their heroes are in. It might be D as well as A.

Like Knights.

SHIN GUARDS AND ARMOR OF THE MODERN CATCHERS.

OLD baseball men do not believe in this modern foolishness among the big league catchers of wearing enough armor to make a good imitation of an old time knight, says Coach Haggerty of St. Vincent's College, now of Buchtel College, of Ohio. This is what he further says on the question:

It's ridiculous to go to a base ball park and see the catcher wearing shin guards. Is it not enough to make the old "has beens" get the sideache when they behold such a spectacle? In "ye olden times" the receiver wore no mit or mask, or protector, but little by little these articles came into use, and no one thought to ridicule such steps, but in this day of brains and speed the shin guards act as a hinderance to the activity of the game.

In the first place, it slows a man up considerably, and secondly, it tends to make the wearer cautious of the unprotected part of his anatomy. Perhaps one might think that the catcher wears guards to prevent being hit by a speedy ball, but rest assured, the majority that wear them do so to protect the legs from the spikes of such men as Evers and "Ty" Cobb when sliding home.

Who was the foster father of the pet scheme? Can you guess? No less a personage than Sir Roger Bresnahan, now manager of the St. Louis National League team. He made his first appearance at the league park, Los Angeles, in March, 1907. The bleacherites thought it was one of those Broadway jokes, but as Roger wore them during the entire game it made all the fans curious.

Different catchers have adopted them since then, till now it's a fad, but you can count all the "nervy" catchers in both leagues on one hand that use them.

A man should be competent to touch the runner sliding home as does the second baseman get his man sliding into the keystone sack, and do it gracefully. There is no need of blocking the man and holding him away with your body or shins, Mr. Catcher.

Even in football the heady player discards the shin guard for the sake of speed. Why should not the baseball player advance along the same lines?

The fans will side with me when I say that it gets tiresome when at a game to have to wait until the catcher puts on his mask and protector. Well, stop and think, how you would feel when at a close game between the Cubs and the New York Giants, to have to wait until Big Chief Meyers buckles on his leg armor. Yes, it's tiresome.

At one game last season in Chicago, McGraw sent out a sub catcher so that Matthewson might throw to him, and kept the battle waiting while the Indian catcher was putting on his shin guards.

There is another element besides delay that must be eliminated before the society people will ever venture to witness the professional ball game without transgressing the laws of etiquette. That element, to be brief, is "dirty work," which is altogether too prevalent, not only on the professional field, but I am sorry to admit, is found to some extent on the college diamond.

The presidents of the different leagues frown upon all sorts of vulgarity. Now, why not put the ban on whatever tends to pollute the game, no matter in what shape or manner it may be found? The shin guards is an aid to him who tries to block a man from the home plate; one who otherwise could make it before the ball reached the catcher's mit. From this blocking, too many accidents occur, both to the catcher and base runner. There should be a penalty attached to this kind of work. I would suggest that the runner be called safe on every such attempt by the catcher.

The day of brute force is over in baseball. People pay their money to see baseball as it should be played, clean and honest. They desire that the games be won on their merit.

It's for the umpires and league magnates to consult the wishes of their patrons if they want to make professional baseball a game worthy of the patronage of the elite.

One step in that direction would be the elimination of all material that insures protection for the wrong doer to the slightest degree. Hence, it's up to the catcher to take some nerve tonic and discard shin guards.

ROAD APPROPRIATION.

Three million dollars is a large amount of money to be expended on highways at any time, and especially when it represents the investment of not an entire State, but of one county. Such is the appropriation which is giving to the county of Los Angeles one of the most complete and splendid highway systems in the world. For nearly three years the movement to secure the money to construct a series of improved roads throughout the county, toward the mountains on the west and north, and toward other coast cities along the Pacific, has been fostered by the motorists and the fruit growers of that wealthy section. ING'S GAMBITS CHESS TOURNEY.

ierce Heads Percentages of Games Played.

ilbert and Holt Are Tied With Equal Figures.

harlies H. Whipple to Play With Local Club.

BY C. F. PIERCE.

The king's gambits chess tournament of the Chess and Checker Club f Southern California has proceeded o a total of 650 games, with Pierce n first place on 38 games won and 4 ost, while Gilbert and Holt are tied or second and third positions with 1½ won and 12½ lost, each.

Fletcher has returned, expecting to lay his games as rapidly as possible, and if Peterson, who is carefully oaching for this event, can bring up is schedule, the tourney may be rought to an early conclusion. Both layers now have percentages not far ehind fifth position, but must hold he average through a considerable umber of games to retain their hances in the whole schedule.

The fight between Holt and Gilbert or position was of special interest n Friday, the day starting with the ormer one game ahead in wins and ne less in losses. But his difference f two games was neutralized by the defeat of Holt at the hands of Lee in a king's knight's gambit, and the win by Gilbert from Fletcher of a hard and closely-played ending in a ieseritzsky gambit, Fletcher overlooking a subtle method of winning at e last moment, yielding victory, instead, to his opponent.

Lennan won a knight's gambit from ee, and the latter divided honors in wo games at the same opening with ianna. Richardson won a novel ienna gambit from Lee, and Pierce ok revenge on Barnett by announcing checkmate in three on the nineenth move of a crisp Allgaier.

AN EXPERT WELCOME.

A live wire has been added to the cal chess circuit in the person of harles H. Whipple, Jr., son of Paymaster-General Whipple of the United tates Army, who has just arrived rom Germany and joined the Chess nd Checker Club of Southern California, announcing himself as a competitor in every event promoted by the lub.

Mr. Whipple, while convalescing, assed four and one-half years in resden, where he met most of the erman masters and first-rate players the various chess clubs, and took art as competitor in the Hamburg auptturnier, or main tournament, of ast year, which contest created two asters. His chess lore is fresh and p to date and, backed by his genial ersonality, forms a welcome addition o club chess ranks.

Mr. Whipple has traveled widely, round and about the globe, and pronounces Los Angeles the most progressive and advanced city on earth. He as directed his family to join him ere for permanent residence.

SAN SEBASTIAN TOURNEY.

The success of the young Cuban-merican, Capablanca, in holding the ad in the masters' international chess ournament at San Sebastian, Spain, rom the first round up to the latest eports, which include the seventh, is articularly gratifying to his friends n this countrty, who have from the irst predicted his success in an international contest.

The competitors in this event include

Europe, are trailing in the wake of this youth of 22.

Capablanca's draws with Tarrasch and Duras, both men of the highest renown, indicate that he is fulfilling the promise made to his counsellors in New York, that he would play safely and avoid his temperamental assaults upon safe positions, which he usually carries successfully, but which are fraught with danger to the score against the most mathematical players the world has ever known.

Capablanca meets Schlechter in the ninth round, which is expected to be the crucial test of his generalship, as Schlechter lately played an even match with the champion of the world, and is considered the hardest man to defeat of all tourney players living. The Cuban will have a bye in the eleventh round, which will give his competitors an opportunity of closing up on his score by one game, but Tarrasch follows with a bye and the next round, which will thus early eliminate his apparent advantage, and leave their scores standing upon their respective merits. As the tourney consists of fifteen rounds, the last half is yet to be reported.

The San Remo, Italy, gambit tournament has been postponed until next year by its director, who announces his expectation of making a more comprehensive contest than would have been possible at the present season.

CARDINALS TRY SPRING RUGBY.

LARGE SQUAD OF FOOTBALLISTS TURN OUT.

Informal Work Being Conducted in Order to Give Men Opportunity to Learn Fine Points of the Game. Innovation Expected to Give Good Results.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 3.—Spring football practice, the first that has been held at Stanford for many years, was begun yesterday afternoon. "Benny" Erb, '12, captain-elect of next year's team, is to have charge of the squad. The work will continue until the middle of April and the men will turn out twice a week.

About thirty players were on the field yesterday and it is expected that within a week the number will have increased to fifty. Hard work is not to be undertaken. The practice has been instituted for the purpose of giving the men an opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with the details of the English game. Little coaching is to be given and the practice will be made as interesting and informal as possible.

Several games with outside teams are being arranged and it is expected that at least one game a week will be played.

The institution of spring practice is a result of considerable agitation after the defeat of the 'varsity by California last year. For the last two years the Californians have displayed a better knowledge of the game than has the Stanford team. The blue-and-gold men have had an immense advantage over their rivals on account of their ability to play a more finished game, the reason for this being that they were better versed in the fine points of rugby. It is believed that spring practice will go a long way toward remedying the shortcomings of the Stanford teams of the last two years.

Several 'varsity football men are engaged in the various branches of spring sports and will have little, if any, time to engage in the football practice. However, a large number of men will be able to take advantage of the training season and—the results undoubtedly will be evident when regular practice is begun next fall.

Coughanour, Vyskocil, Kossuck, Dahlkamp, Schamburg and Schneffe, Ling, Nageleisen and Killalay Are a Few to Chew on—Pugs not in it with National Game Handles.

What's in a name? What? Well, it might be cursorily mentioned that there's a big lot in some names, both in the number of letters and in the vowels, diphthongs and consonants. Viewing the perennial question from that standpoint, allow us to submit a few given publication in J. H. Farrell's latest bulletin of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues.

First come corrugated handles such as these: Clyde Jarnagin, R. H. McWhirter, Joseph Vyskocil, John Weisenstein, Albert Coughhanour, Leonard Woodyatt, Ferd Kossuck, G. C. Thrailkill, Oscar Dahlkamp, Will C. Schamburg, L. Nageleisen, D. A. Favreau. Ye gods! enough. Guess we haven't a few tongue throttlers in this national game?

You may josh about One-Round Hogan, Knock-Out Brown and Cyclone Johnny Thompson and such esteemed gentlemen of the prize ring, but who will gainsay that these illustrious names have more distinction about them than a cosmopolitan list beginning with Guy Featherhoff and Ransom McManus?

Which for you, S. Gordon McDuff or Battling Kelly? Or would you rather come when the manager bellows William Stump or Sam M. Guss in preference to Fighting Dick Hyland? Have it your own way.

Oh, what romance weaves itself about such genteel monakers as these: Samuel G. Fritz, Lige Wooley, Pembroke Finlayson, O. M. Bagwell, Cleon P. Kilburn and Percy Ling. What a fine team could be composed of L. E. Wisdom, Merle D. Spaid, W. R. Rudisill, Bud Moe, Harry Killalay, A. H. Schneffe, Glade Warrick, Melvin Legates and Arthur Chirpich.

And they call baseball the great American game!

MARVELOUS ATHLETE.

Muldoon, the Famous Old Wrestler, Says That Hackenschmidt is a Perfect Physical Man.

William Muldoon, once one of the greatest of wrestlers, saw George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," for the first time the other night, when the great foreign star wrestled an exhibition bout at White Plains, N. Y., near which place Muldoon has his famous health resort.

Before Hackenschmidt went on the stage he gave the famous old-timer a half hour in private, demonstrating to Muldoon his remarkable development and physical perfection. Muldoon went over the "Lion" thoroughly, and at the close of his tests, mild as they were, the veteran expressed himself as being of the opinion that "Hack" is the most marvelously developed and about the nearest to being the perfect man of any specimen he ever saw.

"Hackenschmidt is the embodiment of everything that is wonderful in physical development," Muldoon said afterwards. "He fairly astonished me because I was utterly unprepared for what I saw. I naturally expected that I would find just merely a strong man, like a great many of the foreign athletes that come to this country.

"But this man is vastly different. There isn't a single portion of his tremendous frame that doesn't show the highest culture. And this development is not of the hothouse type, either. It is there to stay and to get results. I ished now that he has met with such tremendous success everywhere. I would like to see him in some real good contests with men that might make him extend himself.

"I haven't seen much of Frank Gotch, but I feel sure that he would have to be at his very best and a really great man to hold his own with the 'Lion.'"

The suggestion from Hackenschmidt to Gotch that they make a match for next Labor Day and post big forfeits right now to guarantee that they will both be there on that date, appears, like all the other suggestions, to have fallen upon unhearing ears in the Gotch camp. Inasmuch as Hackenschmidt must be in Russia in May for a big family reunion there, as well as to attend to his personal affairs, which have been turned upside down by his tour in this country.

"We have been in America since November 10," said Jack Curley the other day in discussing the situation, "and during that time never bothered Gotch at all. We indicated that if he came out of retirement that Hackenschmidt would at once claim a return engagement with him. But Gotch has had nothing for us but the most unkind words.

"There is but one match that could be arranged at the present time for which the public is crying. That is a match between Hackenschmidt and Gotch. The 'Lion' has beaten all of the others easily, hence a return engagement with the 'Lion' is what they want to see. We have been anxious for it right along, but Gotch has failed to reach terms.

"Now, when we propose wrestling the first thing next fall he scoffs at us. But we are going to let it go at that. As I have said before, there isn't a chance in the world of making the match for this spring."

AITKIN NOW A SALESMAN.

Pilot of National Racer Joins the Business End and Is Making Good Selling Cars.

Johnny Aitken, the famous National motor car racing pilot, has recently passed up the racing department for sales branch of the big industry. Aitken is a good business man as well as daring driver, and is taking to the sales end of the business like a duck to water.

He is entered in the 500-mile Sweepstakes race at the Indianapolis motor speedway for Decoration Day, but aside from this will probably not be seen on the track again. It was with a great deal of reluctance that Johnny saw the National squad leave for the Pacific Coast recently.

Aitken has tried to retire from the speed career several times, but each time was unable to withstand the call of the "speed mania."

GRAND PRIX RACE.

Maps, photographs and other data in connection with the proposed Grand Prix race in France will be brought over from Europe this month by W. J. Morgan of New York, the American representative of the French club which is promoting the race. Several American drivers are expected to enter the contest.

TOURING LAWS.

There is still hope for the adoption by the New Jersey Legislature of a more liberal motor touring law. A new bill, practically a copy of the Edge bill, which was defeated by the Senate, has been introduced in the House and is said to have good prospect of passage. It allows foreign motorists to use Jersey roads without paying a license fee.

Murray, the slashing slugger of ants, arrived in St. Louis yesterday, en route to Marlin Springs, Tex., to join his club. Murray spoke in terms of highest enconium of Jimmie Austin, who comes to the Browns from New York this season.

"On the ball he played against us in the post-season series last fall, Austin is the best third baseman in the world," said the red-headed outfielder at the Planters yesterday. "We have some hitters on our club, and believe me, they hit in that series. Well, sir, you would not believe me if I were to tell you of the wonderful stops, pick-ups, catches and throws Austin made day after day. I hit a few at him myself that I thought would burst through a granite block, but he picked them up as if I was handing him ripe cherries, and threw me out before I left the batter's box. He also hit like '40' in the pinches. It may be that he was showing a mere flash, but to me he looked like a finished third baseman. He did not strike me as a heavy or natural hitter, though he got hits in plenty, and when they were needed, too. But of his ability to field and run bases there can be no doubt. He is a finished infielder. He seemed to be the life of the team when it played against us, and great man as Chase no doubt is, he did not cut the same figure as Austin in the games with us. Everywhere I go I hear praises of Austin, and let me tell you, New York did not look with favor upon the loss of him."

Enters Big Race.

FLYING DUTCHMAN LEARNED TRICKS FROM HARRY HARKNESS.

JOSEPH JAGERSBURGER, "The Flying Dutchman," who has just entered the 500-mile International Sweepstakes race for a purse of $25,000 over the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Memorial Day, was at one time mechanician for Millionaire Harry Harkness, who recently gave up auto racing for aviation.

Jagersburger coached and rode with Harkness when he established the famous record up Mt. Washington in the "climb-to-the-clouds." He also rode with Harkness when he established the New York to Boston record of 251 miles in 6 hours and 34 minutes.

Harkness was largely responsible for Jagersburger coming to this country, as the latter is an Austrian and received all his automobile schooling in Germany. Since coming here he has taken part in some of the greatest races in the country.

The last race in which Jagersburger participated was the Fairmount Park event in Philadelphia last fall. The car which he handled was the property of and was to have been driven by Edward Schroeder, the millionaire owner of "Dixie No. 2," America's most famous racing boat. Schroeder had an accident three days before the race when he ran into a telegraph pole. He agreed to let Jagersburger drive his machine if he could fix it.

By working three days and nights the Austrian was able to put it in shape in time to start in the race but without getting any time to practice. With this handicap he made a remarkable run and finished third in a contest in which thirty-two cars started.

Besides being a fearless driver, Jagersburger has a reputation of being one of the best motor constructors in the country. His training in the Mercedes factory at Cannstadt, Germany, gave him experience with the best mechanics in the world and he is considered one of the best experts in this country.

HAPPY NEBRASKA HUNTERS.

Sportsmen May Be Able to Shoot Quail in That State if New Law Is Passed.

Hunters over Nebraska will once again be able to shoot quail in this State if the new bill now being considered is passed by the Legislature this session allowing the birds to be hunted from November 10 to November 25, a fifteen-day season. Another of the rulings which is just as important is the law forbidding anyone to shoot from blinds or over decoys on any river of the State.

Hunters and fishermen are also to be licensed, $1 being charged resident sportsmen and $10 for non-resident hunters and fishermen. This money will be turned over to the State game and fish wardens and an additional $8000 is also asked for the fish hatcheries.

Laws making it unlawful to kill squirrels at any time and providing for unlawful methods of fishing, such as with nets, or more than five hooks to a line in all public waters are up for consideration. A law making it lawful to use a seine or net by permission of the chief deputy game and fish commissioner to take hickory shad, white buffalo, suckers, carp and squaw fish out of the water has been passed at the present session, a were also various minor rules as to the possession of game and fish and the protection of game and fish from unnecessary killing.

COLLINS' FOG FOOLER.

Red Sox Southpaw Develops New Puzzles Which Have Won the Respect of Catcher Bill Carrigan.

Ray Collins, the Red Sox southpaw, has developed a whizz-dinger of a swat puzzler called the "fog fooler." The good looking University of Vermont mounder has been working on the new ball ever since he arrived at Redondo.

According to Bill Carrigan, the Sox back-stop, the Collins' masterpiece comes up softly and stealthily like the fog at early dawn, dissolves before the noonday sun, and passes the batsman at a given point between his nose and belt. The said swatsman never sees it at all, any more than the mariner can observe a fog when it is not. This fog ball should certainly bring home the kale to Collins. Nothing to it.

MOTOR SENSE
(No Nonsense)

My Interview With Dad

"Say Pa! Goin' to get an Auto?"

"Certain sure son, cause we want to go a-spinnin' these fine spring days. Johnson over 'cross the street says the hills look great in their new spring clothes—all green lace and poppies."

"Well Pa! Listen! Don't go and pay out good coin 'till you see that car they can't overheat. The one that'll climb anywhere—like Mount Wilson—or Strawberry Peak—why, it went up Mt. Lowe last week! Something an auto never did before.

"And say, Pa! They guarantee you ten thousand miles of driving without its costing you one cent, so it must be a mighty good machine or they couldn't do that. Better go see it Pa."

"All right Jim, I'll do it. What did you say they called it?"

"Why, it's that White Gasoline Torpedo, Pa, at the corner of 11th and Flower Streets, and they call it 'the Master of all Roads' so it must be a 'corker,' eh?

"And Pa! Don't forget! The Agents for the White Gas Car are mighty good sports—they will treat you right—after the buy as well as before. They're the McCarty-Parker Auto Co., Incorporated."

The Tires Used by 64 Makers of Cars

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires have been contracted by 64 leading motor car makers for their 1911 models. These patented tires outsell our clincher tires six to one, now that the price is equal. They cut tire bills in two.

The No-Rim-Cut Tire

Ordinary Clincher Tire

This is the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire, which trebled our tire sales last year—jumped them to $8,500,000.

It has become the sensation. Every man who knows it wants it. Millions of dollars are being saved motor car owners by the use of No-Rim-Cut tires.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires have no hooks on the base. They don't need to be hooked to the rim.

Your removable rim flanges are set to curve outward when you use these patented tires. So the rounded edge comes next to the tire. One can run this tire deflated for 20 miles without the least sign of rim-cutting.

The hooks are unnecessary because we have invented an unstretchable tire base. Into the base we vulcanize 126 braided piano wires. As the tire is inflated these braided wires contract. They hold the tire to the rim by a pressure of 134 pounds to the inch.

No hooks are needed—no tire bolts are needed. Nothing can force a No-Rim-Cut tire over the flange.

We control this feature by patent. It gives us the only practical tire with an unstretchable base. It is the only safe tire which isn't hooked to the rim—the only desirable tire which can't rim-cut.

Here is the clincher tire—the ordinary tire—fitted on the same rim. The removable rim flanges must be turned to curve inward—to grasp hold of the hook—to dig into the tire when deflated. This tire can be ruined in a single block if you run it flat.

10% Oversize

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are made 10 per cent oversize. The hookless construction allows that Yet they cost no extra price.

That means 10 per cent more air—10 per cent more carrying capacity. It means, with the average car, 25 per cent more mileage per tire.

Fully 19 in 20 tires are overloaded—beyond the elastic limit. It is done by the extras—the top, glass front, gas tank, extra tires, etc. Also by overweight passengers. Most of the blowouts are caused by this fact.

We give you these oversize, No-Rim-Cut tires without any extra cost. The two features together cut tire bills in two. Each motorist should prove this fact.

Up to Donovan.

RED SOX CUBS UNDER A TEST.

Wondering What Fate Has in Store for Them.

One Month of Culling Out the Undesirables.

Those Likely to Make Good With Speed Boys.

BY LOU GUERNSEY.

"Who'll be Who" in the Red Sox line-up when Patsy Donovan and his men trot out on their home grounds in Boston, April 12, in the opening game with Jimmy McAleer's Washington Senators?

This is the sizzling question of the moment not only in Redondo but in the Bean City, where tens of thousands of ball fans are wondering how John I. Taylor's recruited "phenoms" are panning out on the sun-kissed fields of California.

Forty-five players coasted-to-coast within the Red Sox de luxe special train, each and every one of the twenty-five recruits bolstering his hopes to dizzy heights, and the old boys wondering whether they were to give way the coming season to some likely youngster.

The Red Sox carry twenty-five players during the season, which means that twenty out of the forty-five will either be sold, farmed out to a minor league club, or unceremoniously expressed back to their homes in the bush and cactus country.

Anxious mothers and fathers of the youngsters are daily gulping each news morsel from the training camp at Redondo to find out how "Harry" or "Bill" is prospering in big league company. If the boy makes good it may mean the lifting of the mortgage from the old homestead, or a college education for one of his young brothers or sisters.

Busher fans and ball bugs are keeping close tab on the "pride of Hankville," hoping that he develops into a star. They are sitting 'round coal stoves today chewing Navy plug and telling each other how Bill shut out Rubeville with two hits on last Fourth of July. They "figger" that he will set the major league on fire with his speed and outshoot.

They little realize that ten chances to one "Bill" is slated for the greased skid, and that fatal spiral dips are the order of the day in baseball circles at this time.

The slaughter of the innocents will commence in three or four weeks, and hundreds of hopeful and ambitious youngsters will find themselves on the train headed homeward, with a little slip of paper marked with the big letters, "Release," on it.

It's rather difficult to get an intelligent line on the status of the Boston players at the present writing. It is impossible to judge a ball player in a few days, and sometimes it takes a year or two before a definite line may be had on a youngster's playing ability.

THE PITCHERS.

On the mound it seems certain that Joe Wood, Ray Collins, Ed Karger, Charley Hall, Ben Hunt, Frank and Charley Smith will wear Red Sox uniforms the coming year. Busick looms up as a likely twirler, and may be retained by Donovan. Dale is sure to go, and Pierce, Stanfield and Bedient will probably follow suit. Tom O'Brien shows up well in the box and should make good. He is the most promising of the recruit slabsters. Moser, McHale and Killalay are on the ragged edge, from all accounts.

Bill Carrigan, John Kleinow and Tom Madden are the old catchers. Nunamaker and Sheehan, new catchers, look awfully good, and may nose out Kleinow and Madden. Kleinow didn't do very well last year; his hitting was miserable. Madden is lazy and fat, and will have to hustle, according to Taylor. Williams and Thomas will probably be "farmed" out to New England League clubs.

Jack Bradley and Engle will fight it out for first base. Jake Stahl will be missed by the Sox this year, although Bradley and Engle have shown considerable class in the practice games. Bradley should hit .275 and Engle even better. Engle is rather short and that is quite a serious drawback for an initial sacker.

On second it looks like Larry Gardner, last year's second station man. Gardner is a classy fielder and fairly good swatsman. Herman Priepke, a recruit from Marietta, Ga., is after Gardner's job, but Larry isn't doing any worrying at present. George Hollis, another second baseman, hits like a house afire, but hasn't shown especial class in the field. He played with Charleston, W. Va., last year. "Heine" Wagner, captain of the speed boys, will dig 'em out at short. He is fast and a good hitter and besides he's captain, which counts for something.

AFTER HEINE'S PAPER.

Yerkes, a Southern leaguer, is after Heine's place, and while he fields well, he is weak at the bat. Undoubtedly he will be "farmed" to Chattanooga where he played last year. They want him back.

Harold Janvrin, the eighteen-year-old "find," is giving Purtell a hard rub for third-base honors. Purtell is a cracking good fielder, but is pitifully weak with the big stick and if Janvrin develops into a swatter he will undoubtedly play regularly at third. Donovan will keep his claws on Janvrin, whatever happens, and he may be "farmed" for a year in order to gain experience and knowledge of the game.

Speaker, Hooper and Duffey Lewis will compose the outfield, unless Perry or Riggert step in and beat the old trio to it. Riggert is a clever fielder and very fast, he is a fair batsman. Perry is big and fast and a good sticker, but lacks the "noodle."

Farrell, a new outfielder, from Charleston, hasn't shown any class and will probably wear a Southern league uniform this year. Jack Thoney, John I. Taylor's $10,000 beauty, has a bum arm. The "Bullet," as he is nicknamed, may try for first base. He would make a good one if his pegging whip was O.K. He is the fastest man on the team and a corking good fielder.

Myers, the long, lanky, first baseman and utility man from San Diego, may be held another year. He was with the Sox for several weeks last year. Richard Nebinger, a third baseman, is a good sticker, but doesn't field in Janvrin's or Purtell's class.

So Mr. Recruit prepare thyself for the slippery slide—it's coming to you and you might as well make the best of it. It's rather hard, to be sure, to pour cold water on your ambitions and hopes, but it's all in the game, and besides you can have just as much fun hittin 'em over the bush lots, as if you wore Red Sox on your shirt front and traveled in palatial cars.

Lowell Automobile Club has been assured by the contest board of the American Automobile Association that it will get a sanction if the application is made officially. That Lowell seriously intends to hold such a contest in September is evident. State Senator Hibbard of Lowell is fathering a bill in the Legislature to allow the holding of speed events. The bill provides that the Mayor and Aldermen of Lowell and the Selectmen of Tyngsboro may, after a public hearing, and subject to such regulations concerning the closing, use and control of highways as they deem necessary, grant permits to persons to drive motorcycles and automobiles in speed tests or contests during specified times and upon specified parts of any public way or ways in their city or town during any three days between September 1 and October 1. The bill provides that no highway shall be closed and there shall be no practice or speed tests on Sunday. In the past Lowell has held successful auto racing events. In 1908 and 1909 the road races on the Merrimac Valley course were successful.

HAS EASY DELIVERY.

Oscar Jones Pitches as Good Today as He Ever Did and Never Had a Sore Arm.

Oscar Jones has the easiest delivery of any pitcher in baseball, in the opinion of the majority of players, who have been wintering here. That Oscar is not a big league pitcher is not the fault of his arm. It has never been sore in Jones' life. His free overhand delivery and the perfect balance he maintains while throwing, brings the least strain possible on his arm, and the full force of the swing of his leg and the motion of his body is brought to the aid of his arm.

Oscar has been pitching all over the country. At one time he received a try-out from the Brooklyns in the National League and for a while made good, but the twirler sacrificed effective pitching to care for his salary wing, and so the heavy hitters got next to him.

Jones is pitching as good as he ever did, but he is not of the caliber to keep up with the best of them these days. In addition he has been unlucky, and in the last few years has lost many games by a run or two. As he has not always been a winning pitcher, he has not been able to remain with the league leaders, and though his twirling has been good he his been on the short end of many close battles, largely because he had a second rate team behind him.

It is a pleasure to watch Jones work, whether he wins or loses, as his beautiful delivery is restful to the eye, after seeing other batters contort themselves and half jerk their arms off in shoving up the spit-ball and other quick-breakers.

Oscar has been doing good service in the winter league.

CONNIE MACK PESSIMISTIC.

Predicts That the Race Will Be Very Close and Interesting in the American League—Looks Dark.

[Philadelphia Record:] Those who are figuring on seeing the Athletics repeat, both in the American League pennant race and in the world's series next fall, may be surprised to learn that Connie Mack predicts a very close and interesting race in the American—this year. He points out that he was extremely fortunate last season in dodging serious injuries to his players, and also in having strong substitutes to put in the game in the place of any player who became ill.

Connie thinks his substitute list will be as good as ever this year, but he is already borrowing trouble in regard to possible injuries, such as deprived the team of the services of Strunk during the greater part of last season. Mack thinks he sees some teams that will be pretty hard to beat, particularly those at Chicago and New York, for he figures that both the White Sox and Highlanders will be much stronger than in 1910. The Cleveland and Boston teams seem every bit as good as last year, and the Tigers still look like a first division team.

Those who know the Athletics' manager best are not surprised at the view he takes in the matter, for Mack is not the sort of man to be beaten because of over-confidence. He rather leans to the other extreme and may not be expected to talk confidently until the pennant has been actually won.

With the outfit in charge of the Phillies things are different. They are already getting ready to nail the National pennant to the mast, to hear some of them tell it, although the wiseheimers of the game seem loath to give Philadelphia a better position than fourth or fifth in the race.

The work of the new pitchers will about decide the final standing of the club. If the new blood pans out as Manager Dooin seems to expect, the teams that beat the Phillies should Champs Look Well.

M'CREDIE HAS GOOD PLAYERS.

Mac Believes His Team Will Win Pennant Again.

Three Outfielders Show Up in Fine Shape.

Koestner, Steen and Seaton Form Pitching Nucleus.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA MARIA (Cal.) March 4.—With one or two exceptions the men on whom Walter McCredie will depend to bring another pennant to Portland this year have reported here. The Beavers trained here last year, and the early conditioning experienced at this place so impressed McCredie that he decided to bring his team here again.

The Portland players have not been so fortunate as last spring, for it has rained almost constantly, though during the afternoons they have had a chance to practice for an hour or two, and this has helped to get the players hardened and afforded the opportunity of working the soreness out of their limbs occasioned by the exertions of the first two days' training.

That he will have as good if not a better team than the one which won the pennant last season, Manager McCredie is positive in his belief. He has an exceptionally good outfield in Krueger, Ryan and Chadbourne, the second-named being the only gardener to start last season with the Portland chieftain, and the other two are assuredly better players than were Speas and Ort. Chadbourne is a new man to the Pacific Coast League and he will remind the fans of Carlisle in speed and action on the bases, while he bears a strong facial resemblance to Pitcher Harkins, who was with Oakland last season.

However, it is not only the improved outfield which causes McCredie's optimistic view, for the Beavers are strong in the other departments.

Back of the bat McCredie has three first-class catchers in Walter Kuhn, Tommy Murray and Jack Bradley. Kuhn is a California boy who played with the Fresno team in the outlaw league for several seasons, and who has been granted permission to play with Portland by the National Commission. Kuhn is one of the most promising youngsters who ever wore a Portland uniform. Kuhn is fast and aggressive, and can hit the ball as well as Gus Fisher, which may assure him of a regular berth.

AGAIN IN LINE.

Tommy Murray, the gingery little catcher who has been with Portland the last two seasons, is again in line, and should prove as popular a favorite as he was last season. Murray is a first-class catcher in every particular, for he does not fight his pitchers all the time, as some of the other backstops in this league, and Tommy is also a fairly good sticker.

The man on whom McCredie will depend for the brunt of the catching this season, however, will be Jack Bradley, the young backstop secured from the Cleveland American League team, who will not report to Portland until about April 15. Bradley is taking a course at dentistry at the Western Reserve College in Cleveland, and has been granted permission by McCredie to finish out his term, which extends to April 1.

As for the Portland pitchers, this problem is much the same as which faced McCredie last spring. He then had Jesse Garrett as the only tried and true pitcher of a staff of something like geles star, will, of course, be one of the regular twirlers, for he is an experienced pitcher of considerable ability, and when he reports, which will be in a few days, he will get into shape rapidly, as he spent most of the winter at Los Angeles. Braden and Griffith, two other twirlers are, as yet unknown quantities.

Bill Rapps and Tommy Sheehan will be found at first and third, respectively. Sheehan will have the advantage of being in first class shape to open the season, while Rapps, whose legs bothered him last season, is physically perfect right now. Both men anticipate a good year.

Second base and shortstop are the positions to be fought for on the Portland team. Neal Ball, if he reports, will undoubtedly fill one of the jobs, while Roger Peckinpaugh and Bill Rodgers will fight it out for the other berth. As yet, it is impossible to get a line on which of them will take the job, for no infield workouts have been held so far. Both are fast men and good batsmen, which would indicate that both will be retained, and one of them will play utility roles in the event that Ball reports, as McCredie is confident he will.

McCredie is desirous of winning the pennant again, for he opens a handsome new baseball park in 1912 and his ambition is to fly the flag at the new park. If he fails he will be beaten by a better club, and that club will have its work cut out to trail the Beavers of 1911.

BIG IMPROVEMENT.

This year McCredie has Bill Steen of his famous trio, and Big Six promises to be even better than last year. Tom Seaton, twenty pounds heavier than at any time last year, is on hand in perfect physical condition, and in actions, deportment and pitching he is a different Seaton entirely. Where he formerly displayed a lazy streak, he is now the most industrious player in the camp. Seaton looms up like a new phenom, and McCredie is well pleased with his work.

Of the new men on hand, two California lads are showing great form, while a third is coming fast. The first two are Jack Russell and Al Arlett of San Francisco, while George Sanchez, the third Californian, is a Los Angeles lad and has not yet been worked out. He is a tall, rangy young fellow, and has supreme confidence in himself. With such a spirit Sanchez is quite likely to demonstrate enough ability to secure a regular berth with the Champions.

Russell looks like a cinch. He is husky, and possesses plenty of steam and good curves. He is also some sticker, as he has demonstrated in the practices so far held. The big fellow looks good, and his weakness, if he has any, has not yet been determined. Arlett is also a likely youngster, and McCredie may hold all three for some time.

Of the Easterners just joining the Portland team, Archer, the southpaw, and Fullerton show up to best advantage. While he is hardly a Vean Gregg, Archer shows enough class to warrant the prediction that he will be one of the regular Beaver twirlers. Fullerton is built like Frank Browning, of the Seals, and despite his small stature has the goods.

Long Tour.

MILES OF MUD. ON LONG RUN.

Buick Conquers the Adobe on Trip to Mexico.

Jack-knife Curves Are Not Hard for "White Streak."

Jack-knife Curves Not Hard for "White Streak."

H. W. Day, a real estate dealer of White Salmon, Wash., who with his wife, has recently returned to his home after a three months' tour of the Pacific Coast in his Buick "White Streak," in a letter to the Howard Automobile Company gives an interesting account of the journey.

He declares that there is absolutely no doubt of the practicability of a trip from Portland to Old Mexico by automobile, and that the automobilists should realize that only a small portion of the pleasure of touring through new countries is to be had from traveling on railroad trains and that the real joy of touring comes through the use of the automobile.

"We left Portland in the rain," writes Day. "Had good roads until we reached Cottage Grove. From that point through the Cow Creek Canyon the roads were heavy in many places, and the axles dragged in the mud. We crossed the Siskiyou Mountains November 6 in three hours and a half. The roads were steep but the roadbed hard and in good condition. The toll charge for keeping up this road is well expended.

GREAT RUN.

"From Dunsmuir, Cal., through the Sierra Nevada Mountains we found narrow grades with jack-knife curves. These roads are not dangerous if one drives at a slow speed and keeps his machine under control. It is important to keep the horn in working order in order to give timely warning to teamsters and other travelers in order to effect passings on steep and narrow grades.

"In California we found that each culvert has a railing on either end of it usually painted white, so that tourists can readily discern the culverts before striking them. This is entirely contrary to the custom in Southern Oregon as they have no rails at the ends and ofttimes we found a raise or drop of six inches in running on and off the culverts.

OVER NEWHALL.

"From Redding, Cal., to San Diego we took the valley route, passing through Sacramento, Fresno, Bakersfield and over the Newhall grade into Los Angeles. From San Diego we made several trips into Old Mexico, but on account of the uprising did not go far into the interior.

"We returned to San Francisco via the coast route through the adobe in the rain. Our Buick seemed almost human at times, and did great work in mud up to the axles when it was impossible to pull more than a foot or two at a time, then speed up the machine and keep on until we were on solid footing again.

"Out of the 3887 miles we covered on the trip, there was not over 100 miles that we could not run on the high speed. Our entire expense for new parts on the trip was $18.65. We used an average of one gallon of gasoline to eighteen miles of road distance, and on level roads made over twenty miles. We shipped the machine home from San Francisco, as it was impossible to make the Siskiyou Mountains, which are covered with snow. The Buick is ready to make another such trip."

NEW WORLD'S RECORD.

The world's record in the half mile fell when "Long John" Devine of Notre Dame made the distance in 1:57 3-5, two-fifths of a second less than Melvin Sheppard's mark, fulfilling expectations that he is the greatest half-miler in the world.

Philbrook smashed the gym record in the shotput, and Fletcher equaled the world's record in the high hurdles, starring with the highest number of points.

Wasson, champion intercollegiate broad jumper of the country, was bested by Williams, who has been coming to the front in this event. Roth, former Notre Dame athlete, failed to place in the broad jump for the I. A. C.

RACING CENTER.

An effort is being made by the Automobile Trade Association of Philadelphia to have that city designated as one of the racing centers in the circuit which is being formed throughout the country. Sanctions will probably be asked for for Memorial Day, Fourth of July and Labor Day, for track races, and for a fall date for the annual Fairmount Park road race.

Ought To Know.

UMPIRE'S JOB BETTER NOW THAN OF OLD—FOG FINNEY.

UMPIRES have been called the "backbone of baseball" Only once in the history of the game has an umpire been found guilty of crooked work, and that was many years ago, when the gambling element threatened to kill the game for all time. Nowadays, no matter how the fans may roast an umpire, nobody seriously believes that the official is dishonest. At the same time there are many ball players who will not admit that there was ever a first-class "ump."

Now and then in back-lot or in minor baseball an umpire may pull off a crooked stunt for financial gain but such is not the case in major league ball. Umpires, as a rule, are old-time ball players who not only played the game for the sake of money but for the sport of the game as well.

Things have changed so much from the old days when the indicator men were driven out of the game with shattered nerves caused by the actions of the players and narrow-minded fans. The day of pop-bottle throwing and dirty remarks from the bleacherites is ended. The real fan won't stand for it, neither will the players.

Talk about the friendless umpire is played out. The umpires have more friends today than the ball players have. So popular is the once thankless job at the present day that President Lynch of the National League, in making up his staff for the coming season, had to turn down sixty applications for the two vacancies on the staff.

An umpire must possess great courthings up if he has made a mistake. He will just chalk it up as an error of judgment and let it go at that. He should be master of the situation at all times and prohibit any back talk of any description from the players or managers. Once he lets the players know he is "boss," he will experience little trouble.

"Umpiring never was and never will be a cinch," says "Fog" Finney, the old Coast League "ump" who handled the indicator in the opening game between the Red Sox and Angels at Washington Park. "You simply can't please everybody, and hence you please nobody. It's better now than in the old days, though, goodness knows, it will never be a parlor job to umpire a ball game. I am not in favor of deathly peace and quiet on the field; I wouldn't give a cent for a manager who didn't object if a palpably wrong decision was given against his team in a close game. The fans like life and activity on the field and admire the fighting spirit.

"Players and fans on the Coast are gentlemen and I have had very little trouble. I try and treat the boys the best I know how, and do the best I can; they seem to realize it and seldom complain or make a fuss. I let the players know I won't stand for any talk-back stuff and if they start it I warn them and they keep quiet. Umpiring is a pleasant job when you're asleep, that's about the only time."

Ad was yet sucking away at the That farm is now their home, e champion purchased it with the received from one of his earliest fights.

LAX AT SCHOOL.

ast attended his first school in s now known as the Barry dis- Clam Lake township. The cham- ttended the school but did noth- re. He was there with the rest tow-headed youngsters when tolled for 9 o'clock, but the trouble he had was to remain until the next bell. It was his bition to attend a city school— to Cadillac, several miles dis- and to mingle with a bunch of ids. After his first summer in ntry school was half over he lowed to go to the city.

this purpose he had two dogs, d Jack. One was a rabbit hunt- nd; long, lean and cadaverous. e other was a Scotch collie dog; mane, long pointed snout and n as sin. But they made an am. With them Wolgast made time coming to the city in his summer time and sleigh in But seldom was he late, the ntics from home to town being n remarkable time.

ionally the champion would lose his lunch. Each time this occurred the team of dogs—mainly the hound—would get an excellent taste of the rawhide. Somehow the animals seemed to snoop into the private box under the top cover of the vehicle and pry out the edibles. So thought Wolgast until he accidentally ran up on a couple of his classmates leaving the cart with his lunch in their hands.

Two minutes afterward there wasn't much lunch or much Wolgast to be seen. The two fellows whipped the champion to a standstill, as he often expresses it. But later on he got even with the fellows. One by one he managed to catch them and in turn he gave each one full pay for the pain and humiliation they had made him suffer when he discovered them stealing his lunch.

Then it was that Ad's teacher took him in hand. She took him in both hands and her lap. Today Wolgast, after passing the school teacher on the streets, will turn about after she has passed and gazing at her, remarking: "There's the only woman outside of my mother, who ever licked me." Regarding this particular school teacher the same can be said by many young men who at the time of attending her room thought the same as Wolgast.

After leaving school Wolgast could not board out home with his folks. That fact was made plain to him from the start, although he was but a young kid. Old John Wolgast, his father, was a hard working farmer, who had left the cigar business because there was not enough money in it at that time to keep a family the size of the Wolgast aggregation together. So Ad, becoming a youngster in his stage of life, went out to hustle for himself.

Selling some weekly magazines on the streets, blacking boots, running errands and similar jobs succeeded in bringing to Wolgast enough money with which to keep soul and body together. A few weeks of this sort of nomad life had its effect upon the Dutch kid, and he found his way back home. He was willing to work out there on the farm. It was hard, but he was at home with the rest of the kids and the older folks. The domestic life again palled upon him and again he returned to town.

"Wanted, a kid to black shoes, sweep out and do errands."

That was the sign that greeted Wolgast's eye and which was about the first thing that struck him after reaching town that day. He applied. He was accepted.

LIKED THE GLOVES.

There proved to be a great difference to the champion in fighting barehanded and with his hands protected by gloves. He liked the gloves immensely, and with his first money to spare he bought a pair. They were his constant companions, and upon them he wrote every name of the different fellows he had met and vanquished in the tame bouts in the gym. It was about at this point that Wolgast's parents objected to his becoming a prize fighter.

His mother and father declared that cigar stripping was a far greater and more honorable calling than prize fighting. They showed him the error of his ways should he continue in the boxing business, and when all else failed they ordered him home. But the authorities were needed to get him out to the farm.

He gained the support of Johnny Sheridan, and while turned down at first by the local sports, he kept on taking up with any of the youngsters who cared to stand up before him. In the meantime he still kept on working, having recovered the old job at the barber shop, where he was constantly under the tutelage of the little Irish barber.

In 1906 Wolgast, accompanied by Sheridan, went to Petoskey, 100 miles north of Cadillac, where he had his first fight before an outside audience. His opponent was a negro. But he was glad to get a chance outside, so he never objected. That was the last colored fight he fought.

The fight only went six rounds, official time, and Wolgast was pronounced the winner. He had knocked the negro out. This victory gave him added condence in himself and in those who desired to see him get to the top of the ladder. His next fight was with Young Nelson in Grand Rapids, Mich.

This battle went three rounds when Wolgast scored a clean knockout on the Grand Rapids youth, who was rated as pretty good in that city. In this fight, as well as others following, Wolgast displayed the cool-headedness which has been a valuable factor in his ring career.

The next round Wolgast won on a clean knockout. It was the stepping-stone to his fight with Young Kilrain in Grank Rapids on August 3. This fight was won by Wolgast, but he registered no knockout punch.

MAKES A NAME.

Young Wolgast's battling was now the byword up in Cadillac. All the local sports were back of him. He never failed admirers, and a great future was predicted for him. Before the year 1907 had rolled around Wolgast fought nine more fights. Of the nine he won seven on knockouts, and the remaining two fights were awarded him on winning by points.

In 1907 Wolgast fought twenty-one fights. Of these he won seven on knockouts, six on points, was awarded six draws, one no-decision bout, and was awarded one fight because of a foul.

In 1908 Wolgast won five out of seventeen fights on knockouts and seven on points. Four fights were no-decision affairs and one was a draw.

That there was championship timber in the "German Wildcat" was recognized by everyone. After a few fights in Michigan Wolgast went to Milwaukee, and fought there and near there for a long time. It was because of that that the larger city lays its claim to him, but Wolgast himself disproves this.

Wolgast was 22 years old this month, and has been engaged in active fight

"Captain" McRae is looking after Memsic's end and Abdul-the-Turk is chief of the massage department.

Memsic is doing very little boxing but passes most of his time on the road and punching the bag. He goes rabbit hunting nearly every day and takes long strolls over the hills in the vicinity of the camp.

A few eastern fans claim that Wolgast has gone back and cite the knockout Brown-Wolgast matches as an illustration of the waning powers of the lightweight king. The champion is better in long battles. He doesn't get warmed up until seven or eight rounds have rolled by and is essentially a long distance pugilist. While Wolgast is not altogether a scientific scrapper, he is far from being slow or awkward when in action and has a wallop in either hand that seldom fails to make his opponent wince when he puts one over.

Manager McCarey is arranging two good preliminaries to precede the big bout.

Fight Career.

ABIE ATTELL TOOTS CORNET.

Chapters From the History of Fighter.

Tough Kid on the Streets of Frisco.

Other Boys Tantalized Him Into Fighting.

Thirteen years ago Abe Attell was one of a family of twelve children—seven boys and five girls. His father was dead. The wolf was sometimes at the door, but Abe's mother, by endless sacrifice and peerless courage, kept the little flock together. One day Abe got a chance to enter the ring. He won easily. The night Abe carried $15 into his humble home there was rejoicing in the Attell family, says the New York World.

Abe Attell, featherweight champion of the world, is the wonder of wonders of the prize ring. He has seen champions of all classes come and go during his career, yet today he stands supreme—practically invincible at the head of the featherweight division, and few are they among the lightweights who can defeat him.

Within a period of thirteen years, during which he has been fighting, Attell has cleaned up more than $200,000. No matter what happens now, he is beyond want for the rest of his life, and the members of his family, living in San Francisco, are all in comfortable circumstances, thanks to the earnings of Abe.

Attell's story is one of success from the start. Some fifteen years ago Attell was a scrappy, almost incorrigible kid about the streets of 'Frisco. No school would keep him more than a couple of weeks at a time. His mother, left a widow with a family of twelve when Abe was only 5 years old, could do nothing with her third youngest. He was a constant source of trouble to her and so it was that during his school days, giving up all hope of ever making anything of the boy, she shipped him off to Los Angeles to the Whittier State School, and under the eye of an uncle.

HE TRIED TO BE GOOD.

It was like doing time for Abe, away from home and his schoolboy fights, and he soon realized that good behavior would mean a quick return to San Francisco. Meanwhile his uncle had become impressed by Abe's change of temperament and decided that a musical education would be the proper thing for Abe. Much against his will Abe was sent to a music teacher and was soon blowing his head off into the mouthpiece of a cornet.

When his enforced stay in Los Angeles ended, in fifteen months, Abe was quite a musician, and even today plays the instrument well. He has one at home now on which he blows out all the popular tunes.

Abe hadn't lived down his reputation as a scrapper when he got back to San Francisco. He found that several of the youngsters he tried to beat up in impromptu fights on the streets had gone into the amateur boxing game and were making a big success of it. One in particular, Kid Lennett, whom Abe used to lick every recess hour, had won ten straight fights.

ATTELL INDUCED TO FIGHT.

The other boys soon goaded Abe into fighting, too, and Alec Greggains, who was then promoting four-round bouts, induced Abe to match himself with Lennett. Abe ran home to ask his mother, but she put her foot down decisively and said "No." Abe went back and told Greggains that his mother wouldn't let him fight, but by that time the printing was out and the card in bold letters announced Abe Attel vs. Kid Lennett, four rounds. Again Abe rushed to his mother and showed her the printed card.

"The boys are all calling me a quitter. Please let me fight, mother," Abe begged.

The mother finally consented reluctantly and away went Abe to fight. He won in two rounds and got $15, which he carried home as fast as he could.

In those days it was a lot of money in the Attell household. There were thirteen mouths to feed and every dollar counted. A second fight soon afterward netted $15 more, and then Abe, satisfying his boyhood ambition, got a job as messenger boy. He was soon nicknamed "The Fighting Messenger Boy," and in several little scraps won a lot more than he earned as a messenger. His mother always got the money. One day, Eddie Toy, who is now fighting around New York, suggested that Abe take a trip East with him. The idea was big to Abe, and with his car fare, borrowed from his mother, he and Toy found themselves in Denver two days later.

Abe soon got a fight there with Kid Buck, the "Newsboy's Pride," and won in jig time. This fight brought him his first big money—$60. He won several others fights after that and was sending money home regularly. Finally he was matched with George Dixon, then the champion of his class. When the news reached San Francisco it created despair in the Attel home. Telegrams and letters were sent to Abe in Denver begging him not to fight Dixon. His brothers thought it was almost suicide to think of fighting Dixon. "I paid no attention to the pleadings from home, but went on with the match," said Abe. It was a ten-round draw.

"Then I was somebody," said Abe. "Young Corbett was the big noise in Denver at the time and soon I became his sparring partner. He had beaten a lot of good men and I was tickled to death to be in his training camp. Meanwhile Corbett was dickering for a match in the East with Terry McGovern.

"'If I beat McGovern,' said Corbett to me, 'I'll come back and give you a match.' Corbett beat McGovern all right, but he never gave me a chance."

As Abe said this he looked as if he had missed something great—the chance of a lifetime.

Despite the throw-down by McGovern's conqueror, Attell kept plugging along, winning fight after fight. He has had almost 150 up to date, and the only decisive knockout registered against him is that scored by Tommy Sullivan of Brooklyn, in 1904. Most of Abe's winnings up to the time he was married five years ago to Elizabeth Margaret Egan, a San Francisco girl, went home to his mother. Today his mother owns three houses in Frisco; his brothers are in the loan business and doing well. In addition Abe himself owns a house and lot in Los Angeles, which he paid $10,000 for five years ago, after he beat Frankie Neil. The property is worth $18,000 now, and the house rents for $70 a month. His wife has two pieces of valuable property in Frisco, and Abe has $45,000 of the $200,000 he has earned with his fists stowed away.

ALL THE CHILDREN LIVING.

There hasn't been a single death in the family since the father died. All are live and happy. Abe's mother is 65 year old, but has all the life and activity of a woman of 35, according to the little champion.

Abe gives a lot of credit for his success during the last five years to his little Irish wife. "She has kept me on the straight and narrow path, and I have had no time for dissipation. I have known her twelve years. She went to school with my sisters out home.

When Attell talks about dissipation he doesn't include drinking or smoking. He never did either, and about his only bad habit was gambling. He used to love to play the races, and up to a year and a half ago he had won and lost fortunes on the race tracks. He says he hasn't made a bet on the ponies since 1908 at Saratoga. Now he plays cards, just social games, now and then, but no big stakes ever figure in the play.

Talking of his fights, Attell says his hardest was with Battling Nelson at San Francisco in 1908. It was a fifteen-round draw and Nelson was in his prime then, and although he outweighed Attell the little featherweight stood toe to toe with him and exchanged wallops from start to finish.

DOESN'T PICK LEMONS.

Attell dislikes criticism and he says that for years too much has been expected of him as the champion. He doesn't like to be regarded as a picker of "lemons." "If I fight a so-called lemon and fail to knock him out," he says, "I am accused of pulling. The other fellow gets no credit for being a good man. If I knock out a man in two rounds, the papers say, 'Attell picks another lemon.' It's awful hard on a champion."

Attell explains the rarity of knockouts these days by saying the present-day fighter employs a style vastly different from the old-timers.

Attell realizes he can't go on forever, and it was for that reason he has decided to retire and go into some business at the end of the year.

OLD "PARSON" NEAR HIS END.

ONCE FAMOUS SPORT BED-RIDDEN IN NEW YORK.

Has Enough of the World's Goods to Keep the Wolf From the Door Until the End—Thinks John L. Sullivan Would not Last Long Today if He Was in His Prime.

Lying on a bed in a small room on the third floor of the Hotel Albany in New York, unattended save for visits now and then from friends of other days, is Parson Davies, known through the world for forty years or more as a sportsman fair and square. Twenty years ago Parson Davies figured prominently in the news of every big sporting event. He saw all the big fights, knew all the fighters, and was regarded as an authority on pugilistic doings. Today he is comparatively forgotten, except by the old-timers. As he says himself, he quit to make room for the younger generation, and the younger generation has literally swallowed him up.

Fortunately the Parson is not down and out. He is not basking in the lap of luxury, although he might well be, yet he has enough to keep the wolf from the door and is not complaining. "I have managed to keep out of debt. I am pleased to say, and everybody I had dealings with is satisfied, and so am I."

LIKE A VOICE FROM THE PAST.

It's like going back a lifetime to sit and talk with the Parson of the old days when he managed at different periods such men as Charley Mitchell, Jake Kilrain, Jim Hall, Jack Burke, the Irish lad, Joe Choynski, Tommy Ryan and Peter Jackson. In those days the Parson was mixed up more or less in the show business. He toured the country with Mitchell and Jack Burke, managed John L. in the famous show, "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands," and had Peter Jackson out in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"I don't know whether the fighters of today are better than the old-timers," he said, "but there certainly are more of them. The present-day crop have more chances, get good money, have lots of training, and men to wait on them. They don't have to undergo the troubles and anxiety as they did years ago, when good purses were scarce, still where can you get better men than Dixon, Gans and Jackson? These are three old-timers; they're dead, all honorable men. Think of all the years Dixon stood it, and how quickly his successor, McGovern, dropped out.

JOHN L. WOULD NOT DO.

"John L.? Yes, he was a good man, but if he were in his prime today he wouldn't last long. He never fought as good men as Jackson or Jeffries, and look what a little fellow like Charley Mitchell did to him in France."

Peter Jackson was Davies' ideal fighter. He will talk for hours about the big black and his fine qualities.

"I managed Jackson for five years. I had him when he fought Corbett that famous 61-round draw. What a night! I watched it for fifty-four rounds. It looked then like it would last a week, so I went out to go to sleep. Jackson should never have fought that battle. He was a cripple. He was thrown from a buggy four weeks before the fight, and was badly hurt. I tried to have the fight postponed, but they wouldn't have it, and Peter said, 'I'll go on with it,' and he did."

JOHNSON THE BETTER MAN.

"They made a great fuss about Jeffries being licked by Johnson, didn't they?" he asked. "And why? Jeffries always had everything, and today has plenty of money. He never did anything for anybody. The best man won, and he ought to get all the credit. Five or six years ago the result might have been different, but the men Jeffries fought then were all a lot smaller than he. He beat old Jackson when Peter had one leg in the grave. Peter got about $600 or $700 out of that fight, enough to bring him home to Australia, the only home he ever had, where he died in a couple of months. No, I never saw Johnson. I don't like his way of doing business. He'll probably suffer in the end."

The Parson has seen little or none of the local boxing shows. He can't get around without help, and without Kid McCoy or, as the Parson calls him, 'Dr. Selby, he would lie in bed continuously. The Kid manages to get around daily to cheer the "old sport" up. He dresses him at times and gets him down to the hotel's cafe, where the Parson can sit and talk with old friends and see people passing.

HILL CLIMBERS.

The Worcester, Mass., Automobile Club has petitioned the American Automobile Association for the reservation of June 10 to 17 for the annual hill-climbing contests of the club on Dead Horse Hill. This will be the sixth annual event of the kind held on Dead Horse Hill. Last year Caleb Bragg, then an amateur, at the wheel of a Fiat, negotiated the hill in 58 seconds, which is the record.

MARATHON AT STANFORD.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 4.—The annual Marathon race on Junior Day, March 24, promises to be one of the leading athletic events here this year. Each class will be represented by twenty-four athletes, each of whom will run a quarter of a mile. Medals are to be given to 'varsity men and novices making the fastest laps.

This Car Has Everything You Want

Chalmers 30 Touring Car with Bosch Magneto Prestolyte and Lamps $1750

WHAT better car can you want than a Chalmers "30?" What more can you buy with any amount of money? You could buy a seven-passenger car, or you could buy more power.

That is all. If you want a seven-passenger car, all right.

As for more power, you can get it, if you want to pay for it, but you do not need it on any car not carrying more than five.

This car won the 1910 Glidden Trophy in competition with cars twice its price and power.

It has power enough to pull through streams, through swamps and through sands.

It has speed enough to make every control on time; it has as much speed as any one can use.

And in addition to endurance and reliability you cannot buy more beauty, either of line or finish, than you can get in the Chalmers "30." No car, no matter what the price, affords more delight than the Chalmers.

What more do you want, then, in a car than you get in the Chalmers?

THE LEXINGTO

There is, perhaps, no surer indication of culture and a discriminating taste than the desire to possess a car whose beauty of symmetry and finish distinguish it from the more ordinary models and this is especially true of the Lexington cars.

Lexington cars have not only passed successfully through the experimental stage but have, also, emerged from the crucible of public criticism with honors and have created a new and distinct type of popular priced care.

Allow us to demonstrate the Lexington, which will convince you that it is the most flexible and easiest riding motor car built.

Who Pays the Freight?

THEY SEE END OF A CITY LINE.

Railroads Threaten to "Put It in Chancery."

Traffic Managers' Views on Municipal Project.

Transportation Men Declare It Impracticable.

The three great transcontinental lines threaten to "put in chancery" the proposed municipal railroad between Los Angeles and the harbor if it is built.

The railroad heads have already decided, it appears, not to oppose the construction of the city line, but after it is built they aim to make it an outcast among railroads.

This is to be accomplished, according to the railroads' threats, not by direct opposition or rate cutting, but paradoxical as it may seem, by a strict interpretation of the traffic laws.

F. A. Wann, general traffic manager of the Salt Lake, stated yesterday that the railroad men of the country would welcome the construction of the municipal line for the good reason that the traffic troubles and rate entanglements would be a lesson brought home. The railroad heads who have been struggling with the rate problem for decades, and who have faced interference from Federal, State and city governments, say they see in the proposed road an opportunity for a superb object lesson. And they threaten that the lesson shall be thorough.

The railroad will tap at each end a great and rapidly-growing volume of transcontinental and inter-oceanic traffic. It wil be directly in the path of what is destined to become one of the greatest arteries of world shipping. At one end it will reach the city's port, which is growing by leaps and bounds, and which will see the ships of the seven seas sail majestically within her gates and discharge loads compared to which the famous cargoes of the East Indies will be bargain counter remnants. At this end it will reach the heart of a city which has astonished the world with its progress, and which is destined to create millions of tons of traffic annually.

Yet the consensus of opinion of the railroad world is that this line will pine and waste away in the very lap of a traffic luxury which is worth a king's ransom many times over.

SIGN THAT TALKS.

"Railroads are business corporations, and business men are shippers, and the sign of the rate card reigns supreme," say the railroads' transportation experts.

As a rival line the railroads say they do not consider the municipal project. They are free with their statements that the railroad will cost $3,000,000 or or even more, and that it will lose 150 per cent. during the first year of its operation.

They declare that it will originate no tonnage; cannot deliver the goods to any point which could not be reached and better cared for by a good delivery truck, and that the shipper will realize the fact that his political desire to assist the new road will be swamped in the charges for switching and transfer which he will have to face every time he endeavors to use it.

They point to the cost as the first item. They take figures from investment of their own, apply them to the municipal railroad, and say a city has never yet been known to purchase a thing as cheaply as a private corporation, or an individual. They ask first about a terminal in Los Angeles, from which the freight and passengers can be handled. They say that it must be convenient, and that as property is now valued here it will cost $500,000 to secure even a moderately convenient site. The same terminal difficulties will be encountered at San Pedro, and the two terminals with proposed facilities to handle hundreds of freight cars each day and thousands of passengers will cost an even million of dollars, the railroad men assert.

They then ask about the roadbed, and grant that the right-of-way can be secured for a nominal price. The roadbed, with rails, ties, ballast, etc., when figured from data obtained in construction of the present lines between Los Angeles and San Pedro, is staggering. They say several bridges and trestles which run up into the thousands will be needed, and also point to the fact that the United States government requires that a bascule bridge costing at least $250,000 must be built at the entrance to the port.

The men who have purchased electrical equipment for railroads and who know the lowest prices assert that the electrical locomotives necessary to handle freight trains cost at least $10,000 each, and that six of them will scarcely suffice to keep the tracks from rusting. The freight cars which the road will require will number 250, and they have heretofore cost about $1000 each, with no bargain prices quoted thus far. The passenger cars now operated on the Pacific Electric cost in round numbers $8000 each.

HOW ABOUT FREIGHT.

The municipal line will crumble from dry rot, the railroad men say, because it cannot accept freight for shipment outside of Los Angeles without accepting the lowest percentage of the tariff charged, known as the local rate, and giving the bulk of the charge to the road which has the long haul, and that it cannot accept through freight from any line without paying out of its own pocket the switching or transfer charge from the railroad delivering the freight to its own station, or charging it to the shipper. The latter proposition resolves itself simply into a higher rate to be charged for all freight carried over the municipal road which it receives from any other railroad.

CITRUS SHIPMENTS.

It is the dream of the citrus growers of Southern California that on the completion of the Panama Canal they can send their oranges, lemons and grape fruit direct by water to Europe and the Atlantic Coast. The municipal road will be compelled to stand by with its hands in its pockets and watch this rich business flit by in the cars of the companies which first pick orange shipper is, to have the fruit carried to San Pedro by the municipal railroad. It would mean a transfer or switching charge tacked on to the cost of sending it through on one line.

Thus, railroad and transportation men figure, it would be with all of the tremendous volume of business which originates in Arizona, Nevada, and the interior of California, and which will naturally seek the outlet to water transportation here. The great trains of products of the soil, mines and forests will thunder by straight to San Pedro, and the tracks of the municipal road will not carry one, these corporation men maintain.

As to the incoming freight by water, the municipal railroad will fare little better, the same interests contend. The liners which drop into the great sea ports on the far side of the world for their cargoes will accept those destined for Los Angeles, and to accommodate the shipper, and to escape an extra charge, will bill them straight through to this city.

SAY THEY'LL CARRY IT.

When the ships reach port they will have thousands of tons of cargo for interior California, Arizona and Nevada. The municipal road will be unable to handle it without the extra transfer charge here, and the present steam lines which reach the interior of the continent from San Pedro, say they will carry all the freight.

The railroads say they will also take the portion of the cargo billed to Los Angeles city from the ships, as it would be manifestly impossible for the vessel to back out of the new slip where the through freight had been unloaded and be warped up to the municipal wharf to unload the remainder.

The transcontinental lines which have their own rails into San Pedro, say they will make a very low rate from the harbor to the city, not as a competitor of the municipal road, but in order that they will get the cream of the freight intended for the interior of this and adjoining States. Then a condition will arise similar to thatwhich the Hawaiian-American line has brought about at San Diego. The steamship line has obtained the rate of 15 cents between San Diego and Los Angeles, or exactly the same as between San Pedro and Los Angeles, not because the Santa Fe can carry the freight at a profit, or that there is an agreement between the Salt Lake, Southern Pacific and Santa Fe in regard to the rate, but for the fact that the Santa Fe wants the local freight from San Diego to the interior of the State which is not billed through from the consignee to the consignor, and is willing to carry that billed through to Los Angeles direct at a low rate to get the Hawaiian-American boats to stop at San Diego, and not at San Pedro.

Thus, it is contended by the two transcontinental lines now entering San Pedro, they will carry all freight billed direct and through to Los Angeles at a minimum rate that they may get the cream of the traffic on through shipments to the East and to the interior.

CANNOT FIND HER HUSBAND.

Wife of San Jose Man Sues Los Angeles Woman for Thirty Thousand Dollars, Alleging Alienation.

An action was brought in the Superior Court yesterday by Edna Black against Nettie E. Bryson, for $30,000 damages, for the alleged alienation of the affections of the plaintiff's husband, William B. Black. It is further set out in the complaint that the defendant is worth at least $75,000.

The Blacks were married in San Jose in November, 1897, and it is charged that he deserted her in June, 1906. It is also alleged that Black has been constantly with the defendant in Los Angeles, and that the latter was able to exercise her wiles on Black by promising that when she died she would leave him a large sum of money. In 1906, the wife says, her husband went to San Francisco, where he filed an action for divorce against her, but when she put in an appearance he dropped the suit.

Mrs. Black also declares that she is unable to ascertain where her husband is staying, and that as late as Thursday last she asked her to tell where he was located and the defendant refused the information. The couple have one child, a daughter, Nevone. The defendant is understood to be unmarried.

FORGER GUILTY, STOLE FOR LOVE.

VERDICT RETURNED AGAINST REALTY OPERATOR.

With Fraudulent Note and Mortgage He Obtained Money to Spend Lavishly on His Honeymoon. Woman Who Became His Wife Stays by Him in His Trouble.

In the presence of his young bride, to procure money for whose honeymoon he had forged a note and mortgage, Lee E. Bigler, a realty operator, was found guilty of a felony by a jury in Department Eleven of the Superior Court yesterday.

The fruits of the offense were partly expended in enjoying the first few days of wedlock in the most fashionable resorts on the Coast and then the couple came back to this city. Bigler could not have returned with a light heart, for he soon awakened to the fact that he must exert all of his wits to keep from being discovered.

Bigler's career as a forger, which was revealed in the trial, although he obtained only a small amount of money, outrivals that of any of the jugglers of deeds who have been convicted recently, after they have perpetrated swindles which have netted them neat fortunes.

So far as the officials are able to learn he never sought to commit more than the one swindle, but additional forgeries were made by him in an endeavor to keep his crime from the world. The evidence lends to the inference that he was also making an honest effort to clear himself of his offense, but met with a reversal of fortune which shipwrecked his financial hopes.

The young realty dealer apparently fell from grace because he permitted his heart to rule his head. His business did not furnish the means to permit him to marry Marjorie Blake with whom he was in love. Until this time there is no record that he ever broke the law.

He must have been financially desperate when he placed an advertisement in the newspapers stating that he desired to borrow $750 and would give ample realty security. James L. Logan answered and was subsequently victimized of $738, which he advanced Bigler.

As security for the loan, Bigler gave a note and mortgage on property at No. 519 West Eighteenth street. He forged to the instruments the name of Mrs. Ella S. Locke, who owned the lots. The deal was put in escrow with the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. When the check was issued, it was made out to Mrs. Locke. Bigler forged her name to it and obtained the cash.

He drew the money from the bank on the morning of June 25, 1910, and in the afternoon he and Miss Blake left for Santa Barbara. They arrived too late to get into the Courthouse, but the clerk was taken to his office in an automobile. The ceremony was performed in the evening.

Bigler took his bride to the Potter Hotel and paid for their entertainment with the money he had wrongfully obtained. After they had tired of their outing, they came home, the bank roll having been much depleted.

Bigler immediately set to work to straighten out the trouble into which he had gotten himself. He purchased the mortgaged property from Mrs. Locke in the name of C. W. Wetherbee, a dummy. He paid $100 down and agreed to pay $15 a month. Apparently his idea was to get the legal title to the lots and in this manner be prepared to assume the mortgage when it became due.

He fell into arrears on his payments and Logan hunted up Mrs. Locke and demanded payment of the interest on the loan. She was surprised at learning of the existence of the mortgage and an investigation was started. It resulted in Bigler being arrested.

He had transacted some business for Mrs. Locke and was in possession of some receipts from her. In the hope of clearing himself, he altered them. One of them was made to read so that it gave him authority to mortgage the property and the other showed that he had paid her $500 of the money he received. The alterations were not clever enough to deceive the trained eyes of Asst. Dist.-Atty. Ford, who used this as a clinching point in presenting the case to the jury.

All in a Lifetime.

FROM MILLIONS TO MANICURING.

Hard Fall of a Kansas City Man's Divorced Wife.

Former Society Leader Now Works for Living.

Victim of Burglar, Dr. Hyde, and Inexperience.

The former wife of M. G. Heim, the Kansas City multi-millionaire brewer, mother of two of his children, and the mistress of the Heim mansion on Benton Boulevard there, is now out of money, homeless, forgotten by her former friends, and working for her living as a manicurist in Los Angeles.

The descent from wealth and social prestige—Mrs. Heim was one of the leaders in Kansas City society—a retinue of servants and the management of a home which is one of the show places of Kansas City, has been attended with romance and thrilling adventure for Mrs. Heim. There was a love affair with Dr. Bennett Clark Hyde, later convicted for the murder of Col. Thomas H. Swope, Kansas City's multi-millionaire philanthropist, and an attempt upon her life shortly after her divorce.

With her divorce, which she obtained on the grounds of cruelty, she got $75,000 alimony from Heim, all of which is now spent. She owned several thousand dollars worth of diamonds and these, too, are gone. Mrs. Heim was compelled to pawn them one at a time, and when the money was spent she at last sought refuge in local manicuring parlors.

DIDN'T VALUE MONEY.

"I didn't realize the value of money," she said, yesterday. "I never had to work for it, and was never taught its value. I might have put my small fortune out at interest, but I never thought of that. I just kept spending it until it was gone. Now I am compelled to work for a living, and see life from its seamy side."

Three days after her divorce, Mrs. Heim was attacked in her bedroom at 2 o'clock in the morning by a burglar who had forced his way through a window. She was unmercifully beaten on the head with an iron rod, and that she was not killed was due to a "rat" which she had left in her hair on retiring that night. She also protected her head with her hands, which today show scares made by the iron weapon.

"I begged him not to kill me," said Mrs. Heim. "I promised that if he would spare my life, which he seemed determined to take, I would give him my diamonds. I gave him my diamond brooch and two diamond rings. My other jewels I saved from him. He asked me where they were and I told him they were in a safety-deposit vault, but they were in a closet in my room. My screaming had aroused next door neighbors and the man became frightened and ran out of the house. If it hadn't been for that, I believe he would have killed me."

A few weeks after this attack, a diamond sunburst valued at several thousand dollars disappeared from her home. The detectives of Kansas City made a determined effort to find it, but were unsuccessful. The burglar who attacked her was never found.

DR. HYDE'S VICTIM.

About eighteen months ago Mrs. Heim became acquainted with Dr. Hyde, at that time one of the most prominent physicians in Kansas City. He made love to her and proposed

DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED.

And When Revolver Woman Was Handling Went Off Husband Got the Bullet in the Leg.

With a revolver which she didn't know was loaded, Mrs. Frank W. Lyons of No. 411 West Forty-ninth street, accidentally shot her husband yesterday morning, the bullet causing a compound fracture just below the right knee.

Lyons is a traveling salesman for a San Francisco disinfecting company, and when he returned home a few days ago his wife told him of a burglar scare in the neighborhood. She kept a revolver in the house, but it had never been loaded, and without telling her, Lyons put cartridges in the weapon to have it ready for use.

In a spirit of fun Mrs. Lyons picked up the gun from a stand in the room, and before Lyons could warn her, she pulled the trigger, inflicting a wound in his leg. He was removed to the Clara Barton Hospital, where the injury was treated by Dr. J. J. Stewart. He will be confined to his bed for several weeks.

CHILDREN'S PLAY MOVES ALONG.

DAILY REHEARSALS HELD FOR "WAN O' THE WOOD."

Two Diminutive Ponies Purchased for the Forthcoming Production. Some of the Wee Folk Who Will Participate in Young Local Girl's Fairy Drama.

Rehearsals are now being held daily on the first act of "Wan o' the Wood," the dainty fairy play by Miss Florence Willard which is to be the first offering of the Children's Theater movement.

This production, as has been announced, will be made at the Hamburger Majestic Theater on an afternoon about April 1, under the auspices of a group of Los Angeles public-spirited women, and the direction of Frank C. Egan and Alfred Allen.

The cast of principals has not yet been fully announced, but among the small and eager people who will have real roles are Marjory Morgan, No. 1114 Angelena street; Mildred Heinze, No. 5024 Conlin avenue; Zearl Montevecte, No. 2503 Michigan avenue; Percy Glenn Goddard, No. 800 East Twenty-seventh street; Rose Hony, No. 4640 East Hollywood Place; Lucille Hutton, No. 1308 East Fifty-fifth street; Curtyne Englar, No. 1133 West Fortieth Place; Riena Graf, No. 126 East Tenth street; Katherine Wendell, No. 1455 West Twenty-ninth street; Alta Berry, No. 1910 Ingraham street; Leila Darby, No. 3425 Mercer street; Margaret Bentel, No. 1607 Milan street; Mabel Raynard, No. 537 West Fifty-seventh street; Natalia Sharp, No. 539 South Hope street; Clella Van Pelt, No. 3917 South Olive street; Anna Jacsek, No. 2231 Sunset boulevard; Helen Eddy, No. 355 Mariposa street; Consuela Henley, No. 1206 West Sixth street; Laurena Gross, No. 2118 South Seventh avenue; Anna Bradley, No. 1369 East Fifteenth street; Gladys Bromley, No. 204 East Thirty-second street.

Two diminutive ponies, which the management believe the very tiniest in Los Angeles, have just been purchased. These wee equines are now the exclusive property of the Children's Theater, and are brought in twice each week to get them "play-broke" before any of the real scenic rehearsals commence. They will have important assignments, and will be the leading animal actors of the spectacle.

The work of making the 100 and more costumes needed for the children is a task which is already taking a great deal of thought and planning.

THE REASON

The Times carries such a tremendous volume of advertising is that in no other city in the country can an advertiser get such quick and satisfactory results, and so completely cover the field, by advertising in one newspaper.

When you want to buy or sell anything, when you require business or domestic help, when you seek a position, when you wish to rent your rooms, or when you have property to sell or exchange READ THE TIMES CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

For the week ending Saturday, March 4th, The Times printed 2534 more agate "Liners" than the aggregate of the four other Los Angeles newspapers combined, and 7095 more than its nearest local competitor. Month after month, year in and year out, The Times prints more advertising than any other paper in the world.

Stolen Knowledge.

OPEN SHELVES TEMPTATION.

Booksellers Victims of Many Classes of Pilferers.

Easy Access to Books Makes Purloining Handy.

Lot of Devcies for Getting Off With Treasures.

Do you yearn to possess a new family Bible, a set of Blackstone, or the latest society novel without paying the price? If so, you will do well not to take them surreptitiously from a bookseller's shelves when the dealer is not looking. A number of light-fingered folk have been trying to do that lately in Los Angeles, and come to grief.

The mildness of the Southern California climate furnishes for the Los Angeles book dealers a problem that their Eastern brethren have to consider only in a minor degree. The long stretches of warm, clear weather enable them to exhibit their books on open shelves in front of their shops, while across the Sierras the snow in winter and rain at other seasons of the year make an indoor display practically the only one possible.

Thus it is that many a book, lying temptingly in the open, strays from its place, sometimes never to be found, often to get the taker into trouble. This is the way it happens; a man picks up a volume, turns to look at it, glances toward the shop, sees no one; the passing crowd surges about him, and in a moment he is gone, with the stolen article under his coat.

Then a clerk, who has seen the theft from between rows of books piled in the window, hurries out, taps the transgressor lightly on the shoulder, and hales him back to judgment.

DIFFICULT TO CATCH THEM.

It is not only volumes placed on display out of doors that are abstracted. In most of the stores there are many cases of books standing about, among which patrons are allowed to walk freely and choose what pleases them most.

Within doors the dealer must be always on the lookout. His customers are much more secure in their peculations here, because they are hidden by the shelves, and their problem is only that of concealing the article until they have left the store. Many dealers exchange books for a small fee; and it is difficult always to remember, when a patron walks out with a book in his hand, whether he had one when he came in.

Just as the types of people differ, so do their motives in stealing. Some thieves are needy and desperate; they pilfer and sell the books to buy food or a night's lodging. Some are able to pay, but steal from a misguided thrift; others take books on the impulse of the instant, hardly knowing why they do it.

There is another class and quite numerous, too, that walks off with books because there is a desire to finish reading them. These persons either do not have the price or do not care to use the money. Sometimes books have been taken out without a thought of stealing them. When the fact dawns on the unconscious purloiner, he or she has been known to return and pay for them.

TRAPPING THE THIEVES.

In self-protection the booksellers of Los Angeles have an understanding with each other to aid in the detection of thieves. When a dealer misses a volume, he telephones a notification at once to all the other stores in the city, and the petty robber is arrested, if he tries to dispose of his prize. In the same way the dealers receive notification of lost books from the public library authorities and the school librarians.

Instances of book-thieving are often highly interesting in detail. A prominent bookman was busy one day in the back of his store, when a ministerial-looking man walked off with a five-volume set of Blackstone. The dealer at once notified all the other shops, and early the next morning the thief was caught at a shop on the other side of the city, where he had gone to dispose of the books.

With much sang froid he claimed to have bought them of a stranger in a hotel lobby. He was searched, and his clothes were found to be bulging like a smuggler's with hose, tooth-brushes and small tickets, asserted by him to be cafeteria checks, but later identified as price tags taken from small articles he had stolen. He had rented two rooms in the city, far apart, owed money in both places, slept during the day, and pilfered at night.

A CLEVER WOMAN.

Another culprit was a handsomely gowned woman who had stuffed French novels into her hose and the bosom of her dress. She was found to be living at a big hotel, and her husband, a man of wealth, squared the account by paying for the novels and adding a substantial sum in settlement for other books she had taken from the same store.

A woman with two children picked up a dictionary from an out-door shelf one day, and had not gone a hundred feet up the street before a clerk stopped her.

"Aren't you going to return that book, madam?" he asked.

"I'm taking it to show to my husband," she retorted coolly.

"But where is your husband?"

"Oh, there on that corner," she replied, indicating a place half a square away.

She was invited to return to the store and wait for her husband there. After half an hour passed in uneasy watching, she was observed to clutch the arm of a man passing by and to whisper in his ear. The man seemed to be mystified. Then he smiled, came into the store, bought the dictionary, and they went away together, with the children trailing behind. The clerk is still wondering whether he was her husband.

COUNCIL IS WHOLE THING.

Citizen Calls Special Attention to Charter Amendment Number Five.

Attention of The Times has been called by a citizen to the proposed charter amendment No. 5, wherein it relates to the creation of a Public Service Commission, to consist of three members, who shall serve without compensation, except the president of the board, and yet are shorn of every vestige of authority and made amenable to a two-thirds vote of the City Council. Upon the adoption of amendment No. 5, the present Water Commissioners will become the Public Service Commissioners, and shall serve until their terms expire and their successors are appointed by the Mayor. This citizen writes:

"The article distinctly stipulates that men appointed to the said position shall serve without pay, and must be selected because of their ability and fitness for the work. They necessarily will have to be men of public affairs and men of wealth, broad and independent, and if they are such, they should certainly have judgment enough to handle any financial problems in connection with the city's water and power, without being subjected to the dictation of City Councilmen, who may or may not know know anything about finances.

"They cannot fix the water rates, except by approval of the City Council; they cannot buy or lease property, except by permission of the City Council; they are not permitted to control their own finances and set aside the necessary sums for the payment of bonds and interest, but this function is transferred to the doubtful financial ability of two-thirds of the City Council.

"Proposed amendment No. 5 further provides that the Public Service Commission shall be divided into two bureaus, one in charge of the water and the other in charge of power and light, and both are hedged about by the same humiliating restrictions, prohibiting the commission from doing anything more than routine business, without submitting their proposed action to the City Council.

"Now, how does any sane man imagine that three broad, independent, wealthy men can be found in the city of Los Angeles who would be willing to accept so much hard work and responsibility, without compensation, to find themselves constantly at the mercy of a half-dozen Councilmen, who have been selected haphazard, according to the votes they could muster, and who will receive $2400 a year for their services?

"Any citizen may verify these statements for himself, by examining articles 192 and 193, of the proposed amendment No. 5, and I trust all will take time to do it. Throughout the whole list of proposed amendments, the same thing runs, making all the commissions absolutely subject to the City Council. This is what blocked their final adoption by the Revision Committee. The Council had to be given this sop of power before they would vote for the amendments to be submitted to a vote of the people."

HE'S MUDDLED ON CHILDREN.

Count of "Hers" and "Mine" and "Ours" and Some Dead Proves Too Complex for Darkey From Monrovia.

Joseph Martis, colored, of Monrovia, is in as bad a predicament as the old lady of Mother Goose fame, who "had so many children she didn't know what to do." Martis was given a preliminary examination yesterday morning before Justice Summerfield on a charge of failure to provide for his minor children.

"How many children have you?" asked the Justice.

"Lawd, Jedge, I hardly know," said Martis. "You see, I—"

Well, Your Honor, I had three when you have?"

"Well, Your Honor I had three when I married my present wife, and she had had three. Then we had three more, an' that makes a lot. A couple died, but I have an awful job scratchin' to take care of the rest."

"What is your business?" asked Justice Summerfield.

"I'm an orange picker, Jedge, but I can't work now, because its raining."

"I suppose your work would be shoveling snow if the sun was shining," said the magistrate. "You will be held to answer in the Superior Court for failure to provide."

PAROCHIAL MISSION.

Rev. Robert B. Gooden will conduct a mission in St. Athanasius Episcopal Church beginning at 7:30 o'clock tonight, in which he will be assisted by the rector of the parish, Rev. C. T. Murphy, Jr. Meetings will be held each evening for one week, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The work of standardizing supplies is nearing completion. Early in the school year, Supt. Francis appointed a committee upon this work, of the principals and vice principals of the high schools, with Mr. Housh as chairman. Ten sub committees were appointed by Mr. Housh and the Herculean task was begun. At the foundation lay the necessity for making an effort to unify the courses of study in the various high schools, to decide which studies should be required in all of the schools and which should remain optional with each. It was determined to make physical training universal and to accord to it such credit as given to other required studies. Stanford accepts this as an accredited study at present, and it is quite probable that the State University will do so by another year. It was also decided, after consideration of the Superintendent's inquiry upon this point, that a library of stereoptican slides and photographs, for use in all the schools would be most beneficial. The last committee to survey the work of standardizing was that upon printing and no one can imagine, unless given some insight into the matter, what an enormous task this has been.

Principal Housh, of Los Angeles High School last week visited the schools of Riverside, and at the same time attended the Universal Peace Conference at that place.

"I was somewhat surprised," said Mr. Housh, "to learn that the new Polytechnic High School which is under construction at Riverside, is to be devoted exclusively to the instruction of boys." To those who are believers in co-education, this looks like progressing backward—but possibly it is not; it is, however, extraordinary in the public school to thus separate the education of the sexes.

Rev. Brougher, of Temple Baptist Church addressed the student body of Los Angeles High School, at an Assembly Call on Monday last. "Dr. Brougher has a way," said one of his auditors, "of making his hearers laugh heartily and while this is in progress, he drives home a startling truth more sharply perhaps than he could have done by people in any other mood." His subject was "What's Under Your Hat."

Pres. Goyette of the Student Body, reports progress upon the design for the school pin, so long under contemplation and now nearly a realization. The Student Body turned over to Mrs. McDowell, the entire proceeds of the lecture recital given by her to that body. The sum amounted to nearly three times that which was agreed upon. This generous act upon the part of the organization was certainly highly appreciated.

Miss Ray Harrison, of the Art Department of Los Angeles High School, has sold to a current magazine, three cover designs for which she received a neat sum. Miss Harrison is a student in Mr. Sterrett's Poster Class.

Miss Palmer's botany classes are rejoicing over the completion of the new lath house, the cloth house and the laying out of student gardens, at the rear of the grounds at Los Angeles High School. There will be about 100 gardens in all and in addition to the work done in these and in the houses, the botany students will have the entire care of the Campus. Pursuant to the practical study of fruits and trees, Miss Palmer has sent to Fancher Creek Nurseries for a collection of the fruit most commonly grown in California, in each instance sending for the ordinary variety and also for the Burbank improvement, in order to compare them. When the tool house adjacent to the lath and the cloth house is completed the botanists will feel themselves very well equipped for their interesting research into the mysteries of plant life.

As an outgrowth of the absorbing interest in the study of Economics at Polytechnic, an Economics Club has been formed by those students who could not get enough of this interesting subject in regular study hours. The club organization was completed on last Tuesday evening and the officers elected as follows: President, Philip Morgan; vice president, Jos. Beeson; secretary, Wm. Clarke. Prof. Hunt of the Economics department of U.S.C. addressed the newly formed club. The meeting took place at Polytechnic where it will be held twice a month.

The Senior Ionian has adopted a plan of grouping its programmes about a central subject and this time economics was selected as the theme. The programme given on March 1 was as follows: General Heading—The Economy of The Nations. I. Music: Lady Rose Waltz, Gladys Phelps and Mabel Colf, Mr. Miller; II. The Commercial Crisis of the United States, Robert McMasters; III. Public Utilities Commission, Harry Schornick; IV. Reading, But I Go On Forever, Jack Wells; V. On Monday next the new bungalow lunch rooms at Poly will be in operation.

On Tuesday the Gym Classes will give an entertainment for the benefit of the Student Body. The Pyramid classes will give a demonstration at that time.

Two Poly High School boys, Edgar Walker and Carol Crockett, gave an aviation party last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Etta B. Walker, No. 2940 Harvard boulevard. The rooms were decorated with biplanes and monoplanes suspended from wires. The center piece was a miniature replica of a Curtiss biplane, and above the table were hung twelve red, blue and green balloons. The games were invented especially for the occasion. One of them consisted of attempts on the part of the blind-folded players to pin an aviator in his proper place on the design of a dirigible balloon hung upon the wall. Another was a story of an elderly couple's visit to the aviation meet at Dominguez; many of the sentence endings, however, being left blank, and these were supplied in turn by the different players in rotation as the story was read, producing many laughable and extraordinary results. The prizes were a hard-wood miniature aeroplane concealing a box of bon bons, and a metal monoplane watch fob. All the decorations, favors, place cards, etc., were designed to carry out the idea of the party, and were all designed and made by the two hosts of the evening.

Those present were: Grace Greenlee, Gipsy Richardson, Berryl Deyoe, Wanda Eldredge, Lela Allen, and Bert Miller, Tom and Fred Lockard, Edgar Walker and Carol Crockett.

Dainty refreshments were served, and dancing concluded the evening's president of the Student Body; Edward Gettius, vice president, and Harold Marton, secretary. The school does not seem to take kindly to the woman suffrage idea, since all the young lady candidates were defeated.

The staff of "The Poinsettia," the Hollywood High School paper, has been decided upon, the editor, assistant editor, manager and assistant manager elected by classes, the other members by committee. Karl Wagner '11, is editor; Esther Fry '12, assistant editor; Leslie Somers '12, manager, and Gorden Stephens '13, assistant manager. Other members of the staff are: Vada Reynolds, Willis LeMott, Murray Morgan, Ruth Hoegee, from the senior class; Florence Isaacs, Eva Linton, Harold Shugart from the junior class; Beverly Bandolph and Meredith Goodwin, from the sophomores, and Lloyd Dorsie from the freshmen, Miss Elizabeth Wood of the faculty has supervision of the annual.

Dr. A. E. Winship, editor of the Boston Journal of Education, addressed the assembly at Hollywood High School on Wednesday. The students listened to the distinguished educator with deep attention. On the platform with him were Dr. Snyder, Mr. Bettinger and Mr. Adamson, editor of the Pasadena News.

Arbor and Bird Day will be observed in Hollywood High School on Tuesday when Mr. Tracy of the faculty, who is an authority on birds, will talk to the students on that subject and will oversee the planting of trees on the grounds.

The editorial staff of "Black and Gold," the publication of San Pedro High School, intends making the paper better than ever this year. The annual is under the management of the junior class, which has elected the following officers: Vol. Lucas, editor; Gladys McMullen, assistant editor; Warren Allee, business manager; Grace O'Leary, social editor; Minnie Dalen, activities; Mary McLaughlin literary; Helen Darling, music; Agnes Oswald and Robert Hammum, joshes; Evelyn Stevenson and Robert Long, art; Martin Yturralde, boys' athletics; Lida Smith, girls' athletics; Stanley Livingston, senior class; Ellen Jorgensen, junior class; Grace Darling, A sophomore class; Grace Grundell, B sophomore class; Gladys Nelson, A freshman class; Clinton Rechturg, B freshman class.

Wednesday afternoon the San Pedro High School boys defeated the champions of San Diego county by a score of 4-2. After the game the two teams were given a banquet in the High School lunch house, Miss Ludwig with the assistance of some of the girls acting as hostess. The lunch room was tastefully decorated in blue and white, the San Diego High School colors. Short speeches were made by Mr. Keinholz, the coach, and Mr. Yturralde, the captain of the team.

The High School glee clubs are much in demand at social affairs of San Pedro. Last Tuesday the Girls' Glee Club sang for the Women's Club, and on Friday for the Parent-Teachers' Association of Barton Hill. On Tuesday the Boys' Glee Club will sing at a special programme to be given by the Woman's Club.

Martin Yturralde has been elected to fill the vacancy upon the Self-Government Committee caused by the resignation of Stanley Livingston.

On Saturday morning the principals of the high schools, the physical directors and managers met at the room of the Board of Education, to form a city high school athletic league.

On Washington's Birthday the Thirtieth-street school won the cup in the grammar-school relay race.

On Tuesday evening last, the Parent-Teacher Association of Belvedere School District listened to Mr. Denis E. Bowman, for several years Superintendent of Schools in Waterville, Me., who spoke on "Education Old and New." Pupils of the Belvedere school gave a pretty flag drill, and the First-street school orchestra rendered a concert at the beginning of the exercises which did great credit to the musical work of the city. At the close of the meeting T. W. Williams addressed the association, presenting a resolution against the bill at present before the Legislature, providing for a Bureau of Health and Development, which was adopted, after a somewhat stormy debate.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Ill-Mannered Smokers.

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] While the smoke discussion rages, here goes:

My wife and several of her lady friends almost invariably get a headache and nausea when compelled to inhale smoke on the cars. And although I smoked for years and quit because of its ill effects, the character of smoke I am sometimes obliged to breathe on cars even turns me ill. If smoking is allowed you can't make a distinction between a good Havana and a villainous weed or a sixty-horse-power-stench old pipe.

The way men and boys insolently blow smoke in the faces of delicate women and children and babies is certainly a tough reflection on our alleged civilization and chivalry.

W. F. THORNE.

No. 610 Grant building.

LOS ANGELES, March 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In this morning's issue of The Times, there was published a letter on "Special Privilege." The party states that smokers are selfish, not decent, and are forcing the odors of tobacco upon the fellow-passengers. Now it may be possible that our friend has not observed the ordinance which permits the smoker to smoke on the front platform only. Most every smoker has observed that rule but the women and men who do not smoke will invariably ride on the front section.

There are times when tobacco is obnoxious to myself, but I can always find a place where the smoke won't bother me.

Upon whose part does the selfishness lie when non-smokers crowd the front section.

It has never been known of a woman to ride in the smoker of a train, when there is room in another coach for her.

Why is it she cannot take the rear or inside of the car?

I ask again—where does the selfishness lie? A. B. TYLER.

Keeping Up Our Roads.

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Are we going to do anything to maintain our good roads?

Every motorist knows they are going to pieces.

Some time ago I was told of a certain road where a pile of crushed rock lay near a chuck-hole, but for lack of a man to transfer the rock to the hole, the latter steadily increased in size.

But I can beat that. Yesterday, a gang of street cleaners were at work on a badly-rutted street, cleaning the gutters. The natural supposition would be that as they removed the dirt from the gutter they would throw it in the holes from which it had washed, thus effecting at least a temporary relief

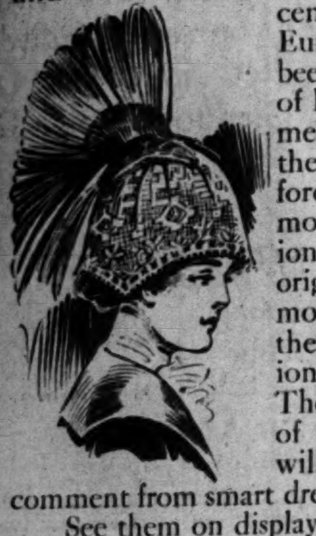
The Helmet Hat



The latest novelties in feminine headwear are reproductions of antique armorial designs. They have been copied directly from French, Spanish and Italian helmets of the XV and XVI centuries. The museums of Europe and America have been ransacked by designers of hats, for ideas and styles of mediaeval helmets. As usual the "Ville" with its keen foresight in providing the most advanced ideas in fashions, is first in showing the original of these unique models. Never before have there been such martial fashions in women's headwear. These helmets are made of straws and laces, and will elicit much enthusiastic comment from smart dressers.

See them on display in Broadway window.

We are also showing the latest interpretation of the French designers in other Spring styles, from the universally becoming small turbans to the large and picturesque dress hats.

This is amusing, in view of the many legal processes they have invoked in four years. Another ground for an appeal, in their estimation is the belief that no crime was committed because the Supervisors had no authority to grant the overhead trolley. If they use this argument they will have to admit that Ruef did give the Supervisors money, which he has denied all along.

There is rumor of war over where the fair should be. Mass meetings are being held nightly and the neighborhood orator is abroad in the land. The friends of Golden Gate Park are largely in the majority. They feel greatly strenghtened by the open advocacy of M. H. de Young, proprietor of the Chronicle. He favors the park as a site because of its accessibility and because the permanent buildings of the fair should be on public land, [illegible] now worrying over the site. After that is settled they will have to choose a director-general. Nearly every able-bodied citizen feels that he is capable of filling the job, but he is doubtful of convincing the men who have the authority to make the section. Then there is the collection of the $7,300,000 which was so gaily subscribed when it looked as though New Orleans might win.

Judge Lovett, president of the Harriman lines has made a favorable impression here. He discussed only the doubletracking of the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific. All attempts to sidetrack him on any other topic failed. He assured us that he stands ready to help out on expositon matters even to the extent of spending $75,000,000 on another track. He had nothing at all to say as to a terminal station in this city.

Miss Lydia Poirer addressed the Laurel Club on the subject of outdoor life for girls [illegible] dressing and eating. Now it is being arranged so that they can even eat in the open. This is good news about Santa Clara county, but if people stayed outdoors altogether in the weather we have had here for the last week, it would mean plenty of work for the undertakers.

Chief Probation Officer Hatch has been asked to resign because his sins have found him out. They were committed some years ago, but that made no difference. He had reformed and promised to sin no more, and was an excellent example of probation methods. Some other fellow wanted his job, however, and now he will have to go elsewhere and keep from being found out.

Local merchants deserve credit for being resourceful. Last week they had a great to do over articles that were made in California. Everybody was urged to buy them and nothing else. There is no record that sales were in- [illegible] beautiful spring openings. Nothing is on the tapis next week, and perhaps we may be allowed to take a week off.

William Wolff, a salesman for Hirsh & Kiser, wishes to divorce his wife Mabel, because R. G. Duncan wrote her thus: "Yes, talking to you on paper is some consolation, but it does not compensate for the loss of opportunity to look into your eyes, hold your dear form in my arms, feel your sweet lips in kisses that are freighted with heaven's honeyed dew, and hear you murmur, 'I love you.'" Mrs. Wolff is fighting the case in court, alleging condonation.

THIS MAN BITES A POLICEMAN.

TULARE, March 3.—Ed Vickers can thank his lucky star—also Judge DeWitt—that today he was merely fined $100, instead of being convicted of felonious assault and sent on a trip to San Quentin.

Vickers was arrested Sunday night, February 5, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. On the way to the jail, with a companion, Frank Fraser, also arrested for disorderly conduct, Vickers viciously assaulted Officer Wheeler, in the struggle biting him several times about the body and finally escaping. Vickers's description was sent out through the country and he was finally arrested in the north- [illegible] that of felonious assault to that of simple assault, and offered to plead guilty. After a consultation with Officer Wheeler, Judge DeWitt reduced the charge and gave him a fine of $100. Vickers paid the fine and was discharged from custody.

THROWN FROM BUGGY.

Mrs. M. G. Halterman was the first victim of the street repair and sewer work being done in this city, when yesterday afternoon she was thrown from her buggy while driving down town from her home on North A street, sustaining painful injuries which will confine her to her bed for several days.

Mrs. Halterman was alone in her buggy, and being somewhat nearsighted, she drove into a partially opened trench. The shock threw her out over the dashboard of her conveyance, the IMMUNE.

When Senator La Follette stings William H. Taft he worries the President about as much as a bull is worried by a gnat.

NOT MUCH TO STOP.
The Seattle police have started a war on the seers in their city. The revelation business is so limited that it's a wonder anybody has the heart to stop it.

BUT SOON.
Some of the State legislators already regret their vote for John D. Works. The rest of them will have both time and opportunity to repent their share of responsibility for the Senatorial misfit.

NOT A DEMOCRAT.
Democrats are singing the praises of George Washington, not knowing perhaps that one of the very first official acts of President Washington was the signing of a protective tariff bill. But, oh, dear, George was not in favor of direct legislation or any form of a mob democracy.

LET THEM WALK.
The usual attempt to pass the French spoliation claims was made in the closing hours of Congress. It is a familiar performance; every Congress for years has witnessed the spectacle. The friends of the bill tried to travel in the omnibus, but the House made 'em get out and walk alone, as they should.

HARRISON'S MISTAKE.
When Carter Harrison is not in politics in Chicago he spends his time in Pasadena. Mr. Harrison is now up to his neck in Chicago politics and consequently will not be able to spend the spring months in Southern California. It seems to us that a man makes an awful mistake to get himself into that kind of a fix.

A BACK ONE.
Richard Olney, who will be remembered as a member of the Cleveland Cabinet, cites the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850 to show that the Panama Canal should not be fortified. But a great deal has happened since 1850, and the Massachusetts statesman shows an evident inability to keep up with the band wagon. Olney is already back. Let him keep seated.

THEY CAN'T AFFORD IT.
No matter what Prof. Ernst Daenell of the University of Kiel or any one else may say to the contrary, there is not the slightest danger of a war between England and Germany. And the reason why is they can't get the money. Each of those nations now owes more money than it can ever pay. War is no longer a matter of a King losing his temper or of the desire of a syndicate to grab a little more territory. It is, on the contrary, simply a matter of dollars and cents.

SOME FUN AHEAD.
The good sport assured the country at large when the returns from last November election showed that the Democrats would return to power in Congress is to come sooner than anybody had hoped. An extra session has been decided upon, and in less than another month the alleged disciples of Thomas Jefferson will be in action at Washington.

We believe we can assure our readers that the dispatches from the national capital will be well worth reading when Champ Clark takes Uncle Joe Cannon's chair and the Bourbons sit once more in the saddle. The Democratic party is incapable of statesmanship, but it is always good for a whole lot of fun.

THE LOVED AND LOST $500,000.
A poet says "it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." But the closed-shop laborites of Los Angeles and the jawsmith triumvirate in San Francisco do not indorse the sentiment. They loved, oh, with what passionate affection they loved the $500,000 that Samuel Gompers might, could, would or should have sent them, with which to maintain "a general strike" in Los Angeles. To Tvietmoe, Gallagher and McCarthy it meant more joy rides in autos, a fresh supply of Pommery sec, plenty of terrapin and canvas-backs, and a new outfit of peroxide blondes, and to the closed-shop laborites of Los Angeles it meant such debris of the financial feast—say 12 to 15 per cent. thereof—as should not be swiped by the triumvirate.

And now Gompers—"may the dogs howl above his father's grave"—writes to the Bay City labor leaders that the labor unions of the East will be unable to send $500,000 or any other sum to inaugurate or maintain a general or any other kind of a strike in Los Angeles. He says that the Tubal Cains and beer-bottle corkers of the City of the Angels must fight their own battles and act as taxidermists of their own polecats. His attitude towards the labor unionites on these far Pacific shores is that which Louis the Eleventh assumed in his advice to his successor. "Honor the church, my son," said the dying monarch—"but give it nothing."

The Times regrets this eleventh-hour welching of Gompers. Even so much of that promised $500,00 as should have escaped the "having" disposition of the San Francisco labor bosses would have helped some. It would have cheered the young hearts of the Los Angeles bar-keepers and established a fresh line of credits for the thirsty sons of Lintoll.

Oh, Samuel Gompers, why did you leave us!
Why of needed cash bereave us?

ZEE, THE STAR-DUSTER.
Ladies and gentlemen, please direct your lorgnettes, binoculars and spyglasses on Mare Island, Cal. The small object you see sitting under the dome of the observatory is Prof. E. J. J. Zee, N. S. N.—Zee the star-duster.

In the most modest and self-effacing manner imaginable, Prof. Zee has solved the great problem of all the ages, namely, how this old gray earth on which we live came to happen. Having made the discovery he springs it on a busy world through a few lines in an Associated Press dispatch, so that it causes no excitement. The people read what he said and went right along trading in flour and hams and things and buying shirts and neckties just as though somebody had merely announced a new divorce case in the Superior Court at Reno. It all goes to show how blase we have become and how nothing can thrill us any more.

Here we have been plugging along for a couple of thousand years reading the Bible and taking it for granted that God made the earth in six days. Others of us, not having been properly brought up in an orthodox atmosphere, have been chasing along with Darwin, Huxley, Newton, Tyndall and Prof. Baumgardt with the idea that the earth was an offshoot from a meteor or something.

But now comes Zee of Mare Island. "You have all of you been worrying under an error of the mind," says he. "Our earth is made up of matter once existing in our nebula," he says. And, continuing, he states:

"In my researches in cosmical evolution it is shown that the heavy bodies drift toward the sun and the centers of attraction, while the finer dust, such as the particles in the tails of the comets and in the solar corona, is driven away from the sun by the action of repulsive forces. This finest dust gathers together in space and forms nebulae while the coarser dust, like meteoric stones, adds to the masses of the sun and planets. Thus are worlds built up by the aggregation of cosmic dust, all of which was originally expelled from the stars by the action of the repulsive forces."

Was there ever anything plainer or more easily understood than that? Moreover, was there ever anything easier to believe?

The strange thing about all matters of a scientific nature is that it takes us so long to find them out and to get at the truth. True, many of the greatest scientists of late years, including Lord Kelvin, the greatest of them all, weakened a little in their old age and fell back in a senile manner on the frayed theory that all this wonderful globe on which we live and have our being must have been the work of an All-wise Creator; that its rivers and mountains, its seas and lakes and the animals, and especially man, could not have come into existence in any conceivable way except as the result of the edict of God. But now we know better. Zee shows conclusively that the earth is simply a thing "made up of matter once existing in our nebula."

The solution of minor problems that have baffled us for so many ages and aeons should now prove comparatively a matter of child's play, so to speak. All that need be done is to proceed on the line of reasoning so successfully adopted and put into operation by Prof. Zee of Mare Island.

What is man? some one may ask. Get the Zee line of thought and you will answer at once that man is made up of matter once existing in our nebula. Isn't it plain to be seen? Of course we knew all along that we are dust and that to dust we must return, but we didn't know what kind of dust it was until Zee showed us.

DUE TO VIGILANCE.
Once more the efforts of Lissner, Tvietmoe and McCarthy to chain Los Angeles to the car of Juggernaut Johnson have been baffled by the vigilance of The Times. Early in the session of the State Legislature a constitutional amendment was introduced to create a "State Board of Public Utilities," consisting of five men—only one of whom should be a resident of Southern California, and all of whom were to be appointed by the Governor.

By this measure it was proposed to turn over to the State Board of Public Utilities all the power now vested in the municipal authorities of counties and cities to fix the prices of water, gas, electric light and power, telephone and telegraph service, street-car fare, and all other public utilities owned by private corporations. To this was added a clause giving the Board of Public Utilities a like power over public utilities owned by municipal corporations. It was designed by this measure to give Lissner and his crew complete control of the Owens River aqueduct.

The Times discovered the plot and denounced it so vigorously that the constitutional amendment proposed by Senator Burnett came back from the committee "with pencil lines drawn through those sections which placed public utilities owned by municipal corporations under the control of the proposed commission."

But although the project of seizing the Owens River aqueduct was abandoned, the conspiracy remained in existence "to place the management of public utilities owned by private corporations" in the hands of the plunderbund whose members were seeking to create a "State Public Utilities Commission."

The Times thereupon in its issue of January 22 printed an editorial exposing the plot to compel the people of Los Angeles and other counties to surrender the right to fix the charges of their local public-service corporations to a meddlesome State commission living in Siskiyou, Sacramento and San Francisco. On January 28 The Times said editorially:

"Gov. Johnson announces in substance that he favors control and regulation of all public-service utilities by State commissioners appointed by himself . . . because his appointees would be purer, wiser, better and less corruptible than those selected by the ignorant, corrupt and degenerate voters."

Lissner then sought to reinforce his project to extirpate municipal government, by obtaining a letter from Senator La Follette of Wisconsin indorsing a State commission. The Times thereupon on February 4 courteously suggested that possibly the people of Los Angeles were better informed as to the kind of local government they needed than Senator La Follette. These articles of The Times were followed by others. Marked copies were sent to members of the Legislature, and, as a result of the exposure of The Times, coupled with the efforts of public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles, the Liss-save their faces by a measure providing that the people of any county or city may themselves vote to relinquish local control of their public utilities to a State board.

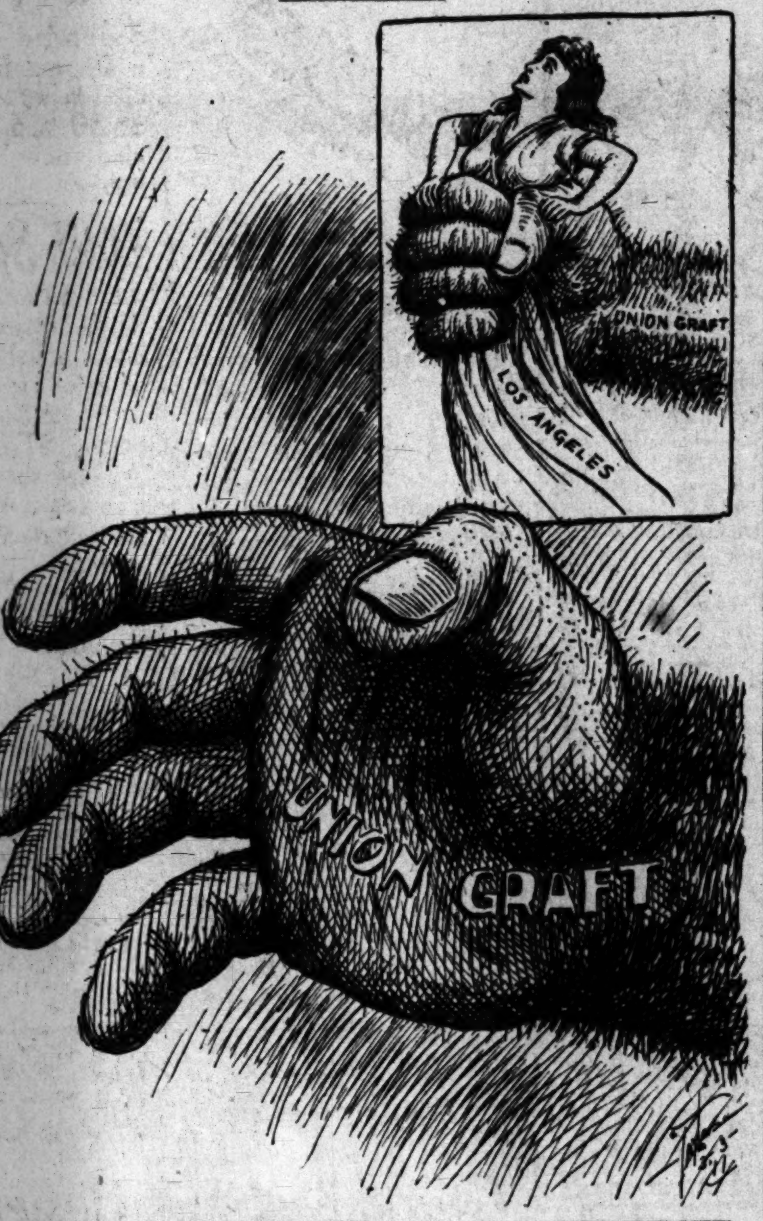
Such an amendment to the Constitution would be a ridiculous farce. If Lissner should live until a majority of the people of Los Angeles vote to surrender the management of their affairs, and the control of their public utilities into his hands, he will reach an age that—to quote Abraham Lincoln—"would make Methuselah seem like a baby in comparison."

What it Would Like to Do.



WASTE OF CHARTER-TINKERING.
"Patch-work" and the making of "crazy-quilts" in the old days was the favorite occupation of grandmothers sitting in quiet chimney corners. Los Angeles having fallen into a sewing-circle method of city government, it is proposed now as a biennial pasttime for the busy, progressive citizens of a great metropolis. Monday will be the next "Patchwork Day" for the city charter.

Who is demanding these patches? The Good-Government organization is suspiciously lacking in enthusiasm. Its official statement is to the effect that the amendments are not satisfactory and will need amending next year, but it is too late now to change them and, as an election has been called, "we better adopt them." Boss Lissner has shown no symptoms of becoming an enthusiast needlewoman. He is opposed to putting on a power patch where the cloth is perfectly good—one of the chief features of Monday's election.

The Finance Committee of the City Council, composed of some of the ablest business men in the city, has issued a warning that Amendment No. 5 will unfavorably affect the financial interests of the city. Membtrs of this committee venture to suggest that Los Angeles is deserving of a good new charter and that it will not be to the credit or benefit of anyone to send the city forth with patches calling attention to the worn spots in its present pood garb. They declare that the fifteen amendments should be defeated.

What is proposed by Amendment 1, for instance, is to take a large piece of "crazy work" and put it on so that it will cover up any deficiencies as to style or material anywhere in the charter robes—a ridiculous proposition. It will be impossible to adopt any part of Amendment 1 without adopting all of its clauses which refer to a score of provisions in the present charter and muddle, hopelessly muddle them.

One of the aims of the proposed amendments is to get as many legislative ordinance embodied in the charter as possible. The idea of a simple charter defining the powers of the legislative and administrative officers of the city is ignored. It is the apparent aim to tie up the city by charter ordinances so that the ideas of a few schemers who wrote these amendments may be grafted upon future administrations.

Every sort of innovation seems to go these days, and there is a likelihood that the charter amendments will carry; but The Times does its duty by the people in calling attention to the folly of the annual or biennial patching system, making the charter every year worse, and the need of a new, simple organic law for the city along modern lines providing for efficient and economical government. The waste of the taxpayers' money under our much-tinkered charter, with two officers doing the work of one and no suitable apportionment of municipal duties and responsibilities, is appalling. The fifteen proposed amendments will only make confusion worse confounded. Let us have a brand new charter!

UNIONITE DEFEATS.

More and more the Federal courts seem to be occupied with actions to restrain the acts of trade unions to compel the adoption of the union or closed shop by manufacturers and contractors. A suit of this character, involving complicated questions, is reported under the title Irving vs. Joint District Council United Brotherhood of Carpenters et al., 180 Federal Reporter, 896. Plaintiffs are copartners, engaged in the manufacture of fine interior woodwork, which they erect in place anywhere throughout the United States. Objections to jurisdiction against the brotherhood were sustained on the ground that it was a voluntary, unincorporated association, and could not be a citizen of any State. The bill was, however, sustained as against the individual defendants. The proofs went to show that the business agent of defendant brotherhood had ordered the men employed by complainant on a cathedral to stop work on the ground that the materials were furnished from an open shop. Threats were also made that if non-union work should be resumed all union men of all trades would be withdrawn from work on the building. Other instances of interference with complainant's rights were shown, and Judge Ward ordered the continuance of a restraining order.—[Case and Comment.

Organized labor at New Orleans has felt the restraining force of the Sherman anti-trust law, by a jury in the United States Circuit Court returning a verdict of guilty against members of the New Orleans Dock and Cotton Council charged with conspiracy to interfere with foreign commerce.

The Dock and Cotton Council has about 50,000 members. Every bale of cotton or load of lumber or other freight passing through the port is handled by none except the members of unions affiliated with the central body. It was argued by the government attorney that when these men conspired to strike two years ago and tie up the port they interfered with interstate commerce. The convicted men are James Byrnes, former president of the council and at present State Labor Commissioner of Louisiana; Philip Pearsaw, former president of the local Coal Wheelers' Union, and U. S. Swan, former president of the Longshoremen's Union. Sentence was deferred.

The employees of the John J. Latterman Shoe Manufacturing Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., quit work some months ago, owing to a labor dispute, but last week they returned to work without having accomplished any purpose for which they went on strike. "An increase of pay was one of the things asked," said Mr. Lattermann. "We acceded to that. Then other matters arose and finally there were people who wanted to run the business for us. Of course, we could not allow that. A condition of the re-employment of our former workers was that members of the new labor union, known as the Independent Workers, should resign. Fifty of these 'workers' resigned and matters are now going on as usual."

The Poet Philosopher.

I do not want to buy a sheep, a hay rack or a ham; I only ask that I may keep my way just as I am. Yet people think they know my needs, and try to sell me junk; and that is why my bosom bleeds, and why this life seems punk. The agents stop me on the street, they hammer at my door; they run me down with tireless feet, they threaten and implore. I do not want to buy a whale, a circus or a prune; to have no salesmen on my trail would be a priceless boon. I hate to hear men talk of sales, of profit and of loss; they send me dodgers through the mails, and hope I'll come across; they throw big posters on my porch, and also in the yard; when I go out to smoke a torch, it jars me pretty hard. I do not wish to buy a tree, a warthog or a snake; if salesmen would but let me be my heart would cease to ache. And when I do go forth to buy, with wads of shining cash, I'll hunt up men who never try to sell Vegetarian Logic.

The vegetarian fiends never get weary of warning us against the festive cutlet and the sportive beefsteak. Their argument, however, never seem convincing.

I remember reading a book some time ago by Upton Sinclair in which the dangers of the pork chop were luridly set forth.

Now, Sinclair is the most tolerant and broad-minded food faddist I have ever encountered. One day he is strong for sauerkraut and klabber. Another day the tomato holds him thrall. Later, he foregoes the tomato for zweiback and cold tea.

His book was written during his anti-meat crusade. And Mike Williams, the poet, was held up as a glowing example of what the avoidance of beefsteak would do for one.

The argument of these two vegetarian gentlemen, boiled down, was merely that they had gone without beefsteak for a long time and survived; and that, therefore, if you wanted to survive, you must go without beefsteak. The fact they might have eaten beefsteak and still survived seemed not to occur to them.

Another food faddist by the name of Buttner, has just issued a book called "A Fleshless Diet," from which I cull the following gem of logic: "Dr. Harris, a vegetarian, at 80, ride his bicycle man's lrife was savred by a herbivorous

In a thoughtless moment this might be slipped over on the dyspeptic as a point of logic; but on meditation the thought might occur to him that maybe if this Harris had lived on lamb chops and porterhouse he could have gone on roller skates to Edinburgh in a forenoon.

In this same book we are told how a your friend had indulged carnivorous-diet. But here again we might ask ourselves if said dyspeptic, provided he had eaten veal cutlets and gravy, might not have been almost immortal today, instead of being merely alive.

Whenever you meet one of these turnip eaters and he informs you that he feels as sportive as a four-year-old, don't let his meatless optimism cause you any pangs of regret as you pour the Worcestershire over your New York cut. For the chances are that if your friend had indulged carnivorously he would have been as sportive as a three-year-old, or even as a two-year-old.

A Word on Suffrage.

There seems to be a great deal of unnecessary discussion about the suffrage question. The matter isn't so difficult to analyse as the economists and sociological professors would make out.

If there is one thing good old nature demands, it is balance. Have you ever noticed how in a family where the woman lacks the maternal and domestic instinct, the man will develop the characteristics she lacks? He will tend the baby, make his own bed, and get the pottering habit.

And have you ever noticed how, in another family where the man lacks the positive virtues and forgets which and to indorse checks on, the woman will gradually turn into the manager, wear flat-soled shoes and keep the accounts?

It is the same way with a nation. The balance has to be kept. Where either sex falls short, the other sex adjusts itself to make the complement.

That's all suffrage really is. The American men are a lot of goslings who have devoted themselves so long to business that they no longer attract women. If you don't believe this, watch how the women act when a foreigner—especially one from a Latin race—comes into the room where there are American men. The ladies immediately drop their native product for the virile foreigner.

American men are the slaves of American women. They haven't even enough vitality to permit themselves to smoke on street cars for fear of offending some corseted shopper.

The American man is merely a husky old maid with an over-developed commercial sense.

Naturally, in a country where the men are incapable of coming through with the necessary masculinity, the women have to supply the deficiency. Wise old nature preserves the units. This is why we have so much suffrage agitation in America. The women are unconsciously trying to keep the scales balanced. They are assuming the masculine characteristics.

In a nation of she-men there must be he-women. So don't blame the suffragettes.

In countries where the men are men, the women are content to be women. Especially in the eastern countries where the masculine vitality is highest, there are neither women's culture clubs nor political equality leagues.

The Spread of the Siren.

There seems to be a suspicion going the rounds that there once lived sirens who had an almost supernatural influence over men, and that they differed somewhat from the hobble-skirted ladies of today.

But be not beguiled by these historians. In the days when the sirens were supposed to have lived, the men were the decorative sex. It was they who painted their cheeks, wore giddy and alluring clothes, and sprinkled their chests with perfume. The possibilities of feminine charm had not then been sounded.

When a few wise ladies got their pretty Grecian noses together and decided to bedizen themselves, there was something doing.

Kohl, senna, perfumes, trinkets and coiffures were immediately brought into use by them. And when the Greek warriors saw these fascinating creatures it was all off with the male profession. Their seduction was almost too easy to make it worth while.

The Greek gentlemen, naturally enough, called them sirens, and attributed to them unearthly powers of fascination, and insisted that their abodes were enchanted spots.

But this, of course, is absurd. In those days the sirens were scarce. Even Ulysses got tangled up with a seductive dame by the name of Calypso, and nearly broke the heart of his wife, who was foolish enough to sit at home spinning while he was cutting up on the island of Ogygia.

Today, the sirens are the rule and not the exception. Consequently we have come to look upon them as commonplace creatures. But really there is no difference between the charming peach of today, with her blond curls and her clinging hobble skirt, and the Lorelei who ensnared the foolish gen-

CARTOONS IN VERSE.

THOSE LIVELY STREETS.

[NOTE—It is becoming daily more difficult for the pedestrian to thread his way through the crowds and vehicles of downtown Los Angeles.]

What to Do.

The country is dressed in new green,
The orange trees, loaded, bend down;
Yet these beauties languish unseen—
There are too many people in town.

The ocean now smiles in the sun,
Yet no bathers go there to drown;
The beaches are not over-run—
There are too many people in town.

The streets are all crowded for fair
And most any kind of a clown
Can see they'll soon use the air—
There are too many people in town.

Now, when the crowds are so bad,
Quite a help is that tight hobble gown;
'Tis the only relief to be had
When we've too many people in town.

Oh, when will the crowds scatter out?
I think of it oft with a frown;
I give it up; yet, without doubt,
There are too many people in town.

Our Hero.

See, the conquering hero comes,
Raise the flags and beat the drums;
Crown his brow with wreath of bay,
Sing a merry roundelay.

Is he recent from the wars,
Bearing honorable scars?
Or from death did he deliver
Some one drowning in our river?

These deeds, good and noble are,
But this man was braver far;
Two times in a single day
He has safely crossed Broadway.

A Dangerous Journey.

When John went "Back East,"
We made never a fuss;
We knew he'd come back again
Safely to us.

And Mary to Europe
Once took a big trip;
Without any sighing
We packed trunk and grip.

But when father remarked
He was going downtown,
We all of us trembled
And mother broke down.

For we knew if he tried
To cross Spring street or Main,
'Twas likely we never
Would see him again.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Legislative Committee of the Council gave a hearing yesterday to petitioners who are asking that the ordinance governing street venders be amended to allow the blowing of horns and ringing of bells.

At the City Hall.

SHALL FISHMAN WIND HIS HORN?

DEMAND FROM HOUSEWIVES ON BEHALF OF VENDERS.

Ask the Amendment of Ordinance to Give Privilege of Ringing Bells and Blowing Bugles in Front of Houses of Bona Fide Customers Only—Under Advisement.

It seems to be largely a question between fresh fish and late sleep—this proposed amendment to the ordinance regulating the calling of wares by street venders in Los Angeles. Mrs. T. B. Herndon Innes appeared before the Legislative Committee of the Council yesterday to urge that housekeepers be given a chance to buy their supplies fresh from the wagons.

"We cannot answer calls at the door all day long," pleaded Mrs. Innes. "We want these men who bring us supplies to ring a bell or blow a horn so that we will know when they are going by."

"How about the Chinaman?" was Uncle Jerry Andrews' reply. "He never makes a sound and yet he sells his goods."

The amendment proposed limits the size of the bells that may be rung to four inches in diameter and the horns that may be blown to four inches across the bell end. The vender must not go up and down the street making a noise but may stop in front of a customer's house and announce his presence.

Mrs. Herndon Innes proved to be a crafty pleader for the venders. She beamed on all the members of the Legislative Committee and told them they looked like men who had enjoyed the advantages of home cooking. The necessity of providing a change of menu should appeal to them. How should the busy housewife place upon her table the best in the market if she did not know when it was passing by her door.

Some of the troubles of a vender also were aired. There is the woman who tells him never to ring the front-door bell, not to come up the back steps and get them muddy, not to call when he is not wanted and never to come again unless he can come regularly. There are several hundred venders and they have organized to suppress all unnecessary noise but to gain if possible the right to announce their presence when they stop in front of a house.

The man who works at night and sleeps in the daytime was represented by Council Clerk Dave Carroll. Not that he ever works at night or sleeps after seven o'clock in the morning, but he has several friends who do. He thought the lychnobites ought to be given some consideration. Carroll doesn't often resort to words of quite such pure Greek derivation but some time a fish horn must have got on his nerves.

Mrs. Herndon Innes offered, if her petition was insufficient to convince the Council, to go out again and get the names of 100,000 housekeepers and thus to overwhelm all objections with the strength of this popular demand. Mrs. Herndon Innes was bred in old Kentucky and is not a quitter. The Legislative Committee showed a disposition to deny the petition for amendment but she watched them so closely they didn't have the courage and took it under advisement for another week.

EXPRESSMEN WIN.

GAIN NEW PRIVILEGES.

The Legislative Committee yesterday decided to recommend that expressmen be allowed to stand on Hill street, Los Angeles street and the cross streets east of Main where they can secure special permits with the consent of property owners. The ordinance which removed all express wagons from the congested districts not only cut off a number of expressmen from long established trade but proved an inconvenience to some of their regular patrons. They made a strong representation that the granting of special permits where there was no objection on the part of property owners would work no harm.

At the Courthouse.

LOSES FAITH IN CULT AND SUES.

WOULD ANNUL HER MARRIAGE TO CONSUMPTIVE.

"He Believed That There Was no Such Thing as Tuberculosis," the Wife Said—Decision in the Case Suspended Until Affidavit of Reputable Physician Can Be Obtained.

A story with many sad features was disclosed in the annullment suit brought by Pearl Martin Maccracken against Brooks Maccracken, heard by Judge Conrey yesterday and submitted.

The ground alleged for the annulment was that Maccracken was physically unable to enter the marriage relation, but the testimony disclosed a situation not common in trials where such charges are usually made.

The Martins and Maccrackens were neighbors in the East, and in January, 1907, the couple became engaged. At that time Maccracken was attacked with what afterward proved to be tuberculosis, and in December, 1908, fearing that he would never recover, the engagement was broken.

Meantime, Maccracken attempted to secure freedom from the disease and went to Albuquerque and El Paso. While away from the sweetheart of his youth, he embraced the faith of the Christian Scientists, and as the wife put he, "he believed that there was no such a thing as consumption, and that his condition could be improved if he believed in the tenets of the cult."

He not only was converted to that idea, but he succeeded in inducing his old sweetheart to also accept it, and, although at the time of the marriage his condition was so bad that he could not speak above a whisper, they both implicitly thought that the disease from which he was suffering could be [illegible] idea, and amid her tears she declared that she no longer accepted the doctrine of the Christian Scientist teachers.

On May 21, 1910, while they were yet enmeshed in faith in the doctrine, and implicitly believing that consumption was only a matter of theory, they were married. Maccracken at that time was living in this city, but the father of the wife, F. T. Martin, who lives on Rampart street, testified that after the ceremony, the girl came home and her husband went to a hotel, the latter afterward going to San Bernardino. It did not appear where he is now.

The father said he had no objection to his daughter marrying Maccracken, except on account of his physical condition, that morally and mentally he was a very bright young man. "We knew nothing about the wedding until after it was over," he said. "But he could not speak above a whisper; he always claimed that he would be better," added the father.

Judge Conrey was much interested in the case, but no decision was given, the attorney being instructed, if possible, to secure an affidavit of some reputable physician as to the truth of the generally accepted condition that must prevail in order to secure a divorce or annulment under the allegations made in this case. The wife testified that she had never lived with Maccracken as his wife, on account of his physical condition as it related to the inroads of tuberculosis.

Reasons.

COUNCILMEN-BUSINESSMEN OPPOSED TO AMENDMENTS.

THE STATEMENT ISSUED by Councilmen Washburn, Gregory and Stewart, setting forth the reasons why the proposed charter amendments should not be adopted, has called forth many replies which have all failed to contravert its arguments.

The Times has already printed an outline of this statement, but as it is brief and to the point, and has attracted very general attention, it is herewith published in full:

COUNCILMEN'S STATEMENT.

In view of the decision which the voters of this city will be called on to make at the election March 6, when proposed amendments to the charter will be submitted, we believe it is a duty we, as city officials, owe the public to set before it facts which caused us to vote against submission to the voters, and justify the belief that the adoption of the proposed amendment No. 5, so far as it relates to the water power and harbor departments, will unfavorably affect the financial interests of the city of Los Angeles.

When the city acquired by purchase the plant of the old Los Angeles Water Company, the political situation in this city was very bad; the physical condition of the plant was equally bad, and the city faced the necessity of practically rebuilding it.

In view of these abnormal conditions, an amendment to the city charter was proposed and adopted, which provided for a water commission, giving it very extensive and unusual powers. The funds were to be kept entirely separate and were to be used exclusively for the benefit of that department. An excellent commission was appointed and the administration of the department has been conducted by a board of such character that these unusual powers do not appear to have been abused.

When considering a revision of the charter, however, it would seem wise to get our great municipal revenue producer into normal procedure so far as finances are concerned, and to apply such legitimate checks as will prevent a future board of perhaps a different composition from reckless, or worse, handling of the millions of dollars coming into their control; and yet, when the Charter Revision Committee recently presented to the Council its draft of proposed amendments, the same extraordinary provisions were inserted as to the Water Department, and similar provisions were reported as to the Power and Harbor Departments. It was provided if any money remained at the end of the year in one or more of these three departments, notwithstanding the unlimited power conferred on these departments to expend, it might be transferred to the General Fund of the city.

The Council struck out this provision in so far as the water department is concerned, and for no apparent reason other than an insistence by the water board so to do.

The effect of this change, taken with other provisions of the charter, effectually prevents any financial advantage accruing to the city except that money may be taken from the surplus of the water revenue fund, if any there may be, to pay the installments of principal and interest, as they become due, on the water bonds, which extend over a period of thirty-six years. No provision exists whereby a surplus revenue can be used by the City Council to assist in relieving the burden of taxation nor be invested in bonds or securities for the benefit of the city. The water board has suggested furnishing water to the San Fernando lands, from which they expect to derive between four and five million dollars as a bonus, if such course shall be adopted. Such money, if received, and in common with other funds, could not be availed of for the general benefit of the city.

Furthermore, the city of Los Angeles, as it existed in June, 1907, obligated itself to pay the principal and interest of the $2,300,000 bond issue, as well as the preliminary issue of $1,500,000, and being a mortgage of about 16 per cent. on the present assessed value; about 8 per cent. for principal and 8 per cent. for interest.

It is expected by the ordinary citizen that after the aqueduct is completed and revenue obtained therefrom, that the future payments will be met from the water revenue funds. In the meantime, a direct tax is being levied each year to meet the payment of interest and provide the sinking fund for principal, as required by law. The present tax rate is $1.45, of which 50 cents is on account of the aqueduct. This tax levy, increased by the additional amount required for interests as bonds are issued, must be levied this year and next. At that time the city will have raised for these purposes more than six million dollars. Under the proposed amendments none of this money can ever be recovered directly or indirectly, as the money could not be used for anything except charter purposes, to-wit:

(h) None of the money in said water revenue fund or coming under the control of said board, in connection with the operation and management of the waterworks of said city, shall be appropriated or used for any purpose or purposes other than the following, to-wit:

First—For the necessary expenses of conducting the business of said department pertaining to water, of operating and maintaining the waterworks, and of making all current and ordinary extensions, betterments and repairs.

Second—For extraordinary improvements of and betterments to the property, works and systems of supply and distribution of the department of public service pertaining to water, including the purchase of necessary lands, water rights and other property.

Third—The payment, as above provided, of the installments of interest or principal, or of interest and principal coming due upon outstanding waterworks bonds.

We believe the amendment faulty by reason of the unlimited power which it gives the commission in charge of these departments over which no sort of veto power exists. Not even the Council, who are charged with the financial affairs, can intervene.

The principles of the initiative and the referendum are very rapidly being adopted all over the United States, and promise within the next few years to become almost universal. They are not intended to hamper the governing bodies in the proper and legitimate exercise of its duties, but they are intended to give the people the ultimate right to initiate new legislation if its servants refuse to do so to annul objectionable legislation.

This amendment takes a step backward and the people thereby deprive themselves of the right to interfere with any expenditures which these commissions may see fit to make.

A general summary of the situation as it will exist if the amendments are adopted is as follows:

(a) The expectation of the people that when the aqueduct is finished some profit can be obtained that will compensate in some measure for the risks they have assumed will not be realized.

(b) The $6,000,000 which they will have contributed by direct taxation will be entirely lost.

(c) The aqueduct debt cannot be reduced by purchase of our own bonds. It can only be paid as it becomes due in equal payments during the next thirty-six years. The time could easily be reduced one-half even with very low water rates and with an enormous saving of interest.

(d) Unwarranted powers are conferred on the commission having the harbor and power departments and continues those of the water department at a time when in our opinion they may be properly reduced.

(e) These three great revenue-producing departments will have excess funds which they can expend without restraint, while the other departments of the city are starving.

(f) We need a new charter, not amendments.

(g) The section should grant Council permission to pass ordinances, not cumbering the charter with ordinances covering all matters pertaining to the governing of a city.

(h) These amendments at this time are ill-advised and will not permit us to get a new charter in two years.

(i) There is great danger of amendment No. 5 carrying, as special efforts will be put to carry it, while amendment No. 8, which alone makes any surplus funds in harbor and power departments available for general uses of the city, may lose because no special effort will be put forth to carry it.

WANTS FREEDOM.

GETS IT—WAIVES ALIMONY.

Howard A. Kline, formerly manager of the Broadway Physical Culture Club, was defendant in a divorce action instituted by Helen L. Kline, and heard in Judge Conrey's court yesterday. The wife got a decree on the charge of desertion.

The plaintiff is an employee of the Home Telephone Company in Pasadena, where she supports herself and their child. The Klines were married in 1906, and he left her in May, 1908, returning in September of that year, and remaining with her but one night. He returned temporarily at her urgent request by telephone.

The wife said that her husband told her he was tired of being tied up to one woman, and desired his freedom. Judge Conrey in granting the decree, desired to give the plaintiff alimony, but she said the mother of young Kline had promised to assist in her support if she did not ask for alimony. The mother said the boy is a wayward son, and he would leave the State if such an order was made. The court was not inclined to let him escape so easily the task of supporting his wife and child, but it was stated that it was no business of the court to insist upon alimony if the plaintiff did not desire it.

CLERK DIVORCED.

CHARGES DESERTION.

Lester L. Bristol, a clerk employed at the Westminster Hotel, was granted a divorce from Alice K. Bristol yester-

Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara, his wife conducted a hair-dressing parlor at that hostelry. They were married. In 1908, while the Seattle Fair was in progress, Bristol went there to engage in business, but his wife refused to go with him. He then returned, and took a position with the Virginia Hotel, Long Beach, but she would not join him.

Bristol testified that he could give no reason for the conduct of his wife, but another witness said that Mrs. Bristol had told her that her husband was not congenial, that she could not look upon him except as a big boy, instead of her husband.

In granting the decree, Judge Conrey said: "Were there any children." Bristol quickly replied: "None on her part," and everybody in the courtroom snickered.

He hastened to explain that his wife would not have any children.

INJUNCTION WANTED.

WATER SERVICE SUIT.

The Conservative Realty Company, brought suit yesterday in the Superior Court against Hugo Abrahamson, Sam Eherlich, F. C. Wright, W. Van Dahlen and A. F. Doke, to prevent tapping of the company's water service pipe.

It is alleged that the defendants, with the exception of Abrahamson and Eherlich, prior to December 1, 1910, were customers of the plaintiff who furnished them water; that the defendants, except these mentioned, did not live within any city limits where the water rates were fixed by the Board of Supervisors. On November 1, 1910, the plaintiffs fixed the water rates in that territory at 15 cents per 1000 gallons, with a minimum charge of $1.25 per month, to go into effect December 1, 1910. Pay was demanded of the defendants, except the two named, for water used in December, 1910, and January, 1911, and refused. The water was then shut off. It is alleged that with intent to defraud, Wright, Van Dahlen and Doke opened the service cocks, and have continued to use the water without paying for the same.

Abrahamson and Eherlich have never been customers of the plaintiff corporation, but Abrahamson is the owner of a tract within the territory supplied by the water system of the plaintiffs, and has sold sundry lots to various persons. Eherlich is agent of Abrahamson, it is said, and threatens to open every service cock within the tract. The plaintiffs ask that the defendants be restrained from carrying out their threat.

NISBET CASE. The disbarment proceedings in the case of Henry W. Nisbet, charged by the Los Angeles Bar Association with embezzling funds intrusted to him by clients, was called in Judge Monroe's court yesterday. It was shown that the accused was confined to his room by illness, and after the court had read the complaint and heard some of the evidence a citation was issued for Nisbet to appear next Friday and answer the allegations.

NONSUITED. Judge Monroe yesterday nonsuited the action brought by W. H. Robinson, better known as Willie Robinson, by his guardian, against the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, for the recovery of $5000, alleged to be due on account of injuries received by being struck and run over by an auto owned by the company and driven by one of its agents.

County Clerk Lelande and Chief Deputy Sparks headed the clerical contingent of the office of the County Clerk yesterday in caring for the host of pensioners who desired certification of their vouchers. More than 1500 papers were disposed of before the noon closing. The Inferior Courts.

TRAIL OF BLOOD REVEALS SPREE.

CRIMSON DROPS BETRAY A GIN MILL PATRON.

Officer Who Sees the Red Spatters Along the Sidewalk Follows the Marked Way, Which Leads to Rooming House and Further Discovery.

A severe nose bleed resulted yesterday morning in I. Zalaya appearing in Police Court on a charge of drunkenness. He was released on $10 bail, pending the remedying of the ailment, and he will appear again tomorrow.

Patrolman Meyers noticed a trail of blood drops on the South Main street sidewalk yesterday morning and, thinking that the person who left it behind might have been in a fight, he followed it block after block until he arrived at a rooming-house on Commercial street.

In his room the patrolman found Zalaya nursing a bleeding nose. Meyers thought it best to take him to the Receiving Hospital, but soon after starting, he discovered that Zalaya was intoxicated, so he took him to Police Court instead.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

DEPUTY ASKS TRIAL.

Guy Patterson, the deputy constable who was arrested Thursday on a charge of having entered the home of Mrs. Mary Shaw on Ruth avenue and having insulted her while she lay ill in bed, pleaded not guilty to a charge of disturbing the peace in Police Court yesterday morning. His trial was set for the 21st inst.

The complaint against Patterson was made Thursday by William Hudson, a son of Mrs. Shaw, and her first husband. Hudson declared that the trouble originated over a small dog which belonged to the Shaw family running about in Patterson's yard. Patterson was partly intoxicated, Hudson said, when he created the disturbance with which he is charged.

EGG DEALERS RELEASED.

DATES OF TESTS LACKING.

Ira Collins and John Escolinas, charged with violating the pure food law in labeling storage eggs "fresh ranch eggs," were released by Police Justice Chambers yesterday morning.

When the evidence against the men was told the court, it was not shown when the tests of the eggs had been made. The court said that inasmuch as the eggs that might be properly classed as "fresh" one week might become "storage" the next and there was no evidence to show that Collins and Escolinas had tried to sell the inferior brand for the better, he would not hold them.

TO JAIL NEXT TIME.

WARNING IN CRUELTY CASE.

With a warning that if he is arrested again for a similar offense he will be sent to jail for thirty days, William Bryce, a plumber charged with cruelty to animals, was released under suspended sentence by Police Justice Rose yesterday morning.

Bryce was said to have driven a crippled horse unfit for work. He was arrested Friday evening while on the way to Venice with some plumbers' supplies. Officer Fullerton, representing the S.P.C.A., made the arrest.

H. R. Parks, charged with vagrancy, changed his mind about wanting a jury trial yesterday morning and pleaded guilty. He was sentenced to sixty days in the City Jail. Parks was arrested about two weeks ago by Patrolmen Glenn and Stevens. He pleaded not guilty and thought a jury ought to decide it. The date of the trial was set for about the middle of June. Parks thought it over several days and decided he would do better to plead guilty and get credit for his time.

STATE FEDERATION BANQUET.

Secretary Parson of the Federation of State Societies says that the States banquet, to be held at Hamburger's on Friday evening, March 17, will be the "greatest banquet ever held in the world," and that the number of plates will be limited to 3000. The tables will be arranged as the States are located on the map, and it will be easy for guests to find their former home. Rev. F. M. Dowling will be toastmaster, and Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks will be one of the speakers.

Brass Beds-- That Are Brass
---They Ring Like a Bell

We invite special attention to our own hand-made springs and mattresses.

¶ The "California" believes in calling a spade a spad a brass bed a brass bed—a veneered brass bed a veneered brass bed.

¶ At the "California," a brass bed means a bed that is made of genuine brass tubing through and through—and not a bed made of iron tubing merely covered with a thin sheeting of brass.

¶ To the eye the difference may not be apparent— in the long years of service—and in the satisfaction that comes from a knowledge of thorough genuineness—there is no comparison at all—for one is genuine, and the other is not.

¶ A genuine brass bed lends to the bedroom an elegance a richness, a beauty peculiarly its own—and the measure of its service is a lifetime.

¶ The "California" shows the most comprehensive and distinctive line of genuine brass beds in Los Angel —every bed carefully chosen because of its characte and worthiness, and every bed priced at the lowe figure for which any store can possibly sell equ quality.

¶ We also sell veneered brass beds—but we sell them f what they are—at prices consistent with their value As an example of the "California's" exception values, we offer a splendidly built veneered brass be with two-inch posts for $12.50.

¶ We cordially invite you to come and see our display of brass beds, whether you are ready to buy or We want you to know when you are ready to buy— where you can buy best to your own advantage.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

Gov. West of Oregon added to the gaiety of lawmaking during the recent legislative session by vetoing about [illegible] of the measures sent up to him for approval, a record which the Portland Oregonian says "surpasses the achievements of any of his predecessors and probably has not been equaled by any Governor of any State at any time in American history." Some of [illegible] may have been "attended by circumstances of flippancy and [illegible] on the one hand, and of partiality and favor on the other, as to [illegible] the people of Oregon to stand [illegible] at his ruthless abuse of so solemn a duty and function as the executive veto power," as the Oregonian [illegible], but at the same time the taxpayers of Oregon will not criticise the Governor's action, for a Salem dispatch to the Oregonian says that among the [illegible] were appropriation bills amounting to [illegible].

Congressman Hobson of Alabama, sleeping or awake, sees future war with Japan, as a man afflicted with [illegible] tremens sees snakes, gets little sympathy from the New York Sun, which says: "Back to nature and a burly to insure him complete rest and meditative moments. He should be provided with a corncob pipe, some plug tobacco, and tackle for lifting catfish out of the muddy waters of Lubbub. The people of Pickens county should be warned not to mention Japan to him."

Mayor Seidel of Milwaukee, who was elected as a socialist, did not allow the city laborers to have a vacation on Washington's birthday. Every city employee was at his duty the same as any other day.

Ex-Gov. Haskell wept. So says a Kansas City paper anent the recent visit to that city of the late executive of Oklahoma to attend a dinner of the Young Men's Democratic Club. Senator-elect Reed of Missouri referred to Mr. Haskell as having dared to raise his hands to strike a blow at predatory wealth for which the special interests had been mustered to persecute and prosecute him. "When that reference was made," says the Kansas City Star, "the tears came into ex-Gov. Haskell's eyes and he leaned forward and covered his face with his hands during the remainder of Mr. Reed's speech."

The Michigan Legislature recently took a vote on its choice for a Presidential candidate, and President Taft for Beveridge. Eight of the nine Democrats in the Legislature voted for Harmon and the other one for Champ Clark.

Gov. Dix of New York, Democrat, evidently does not believe he is under much obligation to Tammany Hall, as he has repeatedly refused to appoint to State offices candidates known to be indorsed by that political organization. "There is as yet no split between the Governor and Tammany Hall," says the New York Herald, "but relations are not so cordial as they were." A very delicate way of putting it.

State Senator Albert C. Clark of Chicago believes in asking openly for anything he wants. When a bill giving the legislators $5 per diem was up for advancement to third reading, Senator Clark urged his colleagues to drop their modesty. "I don't understand why the members don't brace up and ask for their rights," he said. "I want to say that you are not receiving too much pay. Far from it. I'm in favor of fixing our salary at $3000 a year. Another thing, gentlemen, I want my pay in full as soon as we convene, instead of waiting until sine die adjournment."

The Kansas Day Club, not to be be-figure in Republican politics for many years. Before becoming proprietor and editor of the Wichita Beacon he was owner and editor of the Ottawa Herald for a number of years and attained considerable prominence in the Kansas newspaper world. At one time he ran against Chas. F. Scott for Congressman from the Second District and made a strong race.

Six of the eight candidates for the mayoralty of Chicago have already spent in the aggregate about $70,000 for campaign expenses, and the end of the campaign is yet some distance away. Being Mayor of Chicago must be a lucrative job. Or maybe it's the honor of the thing that counts for so much, says the Topeka State Journal.

Martin W. Littleton of Brooklyn, Representative-elect from the First New York Congressional District, has shied his castor into the legislative ring where a stubborn contest is being waged over a successor to Senator Depew. Littleton makes a formal announcement that he is a candidate for the Senatorial election. He is going to make a direct appeal to the people for support.

The graft investigation in Queen's cost of the grand jury, making the cost each day more than $200. Sixty-two indictments were found as the result of the investigation, which are still to be tried.

Attorney Charles Erbstein of Chicago has sent to Gov. Deneen a bill for $13 for damage to his sensibilities because the State Executive compared his defense in the recent trial on the charge of jury fixing to the defense made by Senator Lorimer before the Senate. The $13 figure, Mr. Erbstein explains, simply is his idea of the value of Gov. Deneen's word. The State executive, he added, couldn't damage anybody's reputation more than $13 worth. So there you are!

A Washington dispatch says: Representative-elect William La Follette of Washington is giving the door-keepers of the House a great deal of trouble. Mr. La Follette arrived in Washington about a week ago and immediately sought the floor of the House, where he will perform in the next session. At that time he wore a bushy black beard and a black mustache, and the door-keepers, after he had announced his identity, figured that they could recognize him a mile away at any time. Last Friday, just after the in the chamber. He was about to throw the stranger out when the man produced his credentials as William La Follette, member-elect from Washington.

Today Mr. La Follette appeared at the main door, clean shaven and tried to get in. He was stopped and again had to prove that he had a right to the floor.

"Mr. La Follette," said the pestered door-keeper, "how many more times are you going to do this?"

"I'm all through," replied the member-elect. "I find that whiskers are considered unsanitary in Washington."

FACTS FEATURES AND FANCIES FOR WOMEN.

BY ~ Olive Gray.

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: All one really needs for health and beauty is an ample supply of fresh air, rightly directed exercise, sunshine, food and water. The latter both internally and externally, for bathing is quite as essential as drinking. The effect of proper exercise is not by any means limited to the muscles, but it acts upon the vital organs as directly as would massage, awakening thorough circulation and removing all impurities, thus making way for the free secretion and assimilation of digestive juices. A clear complexion and scintillating eye attest the fact that all is well within the body.

About 5 o'clock p. m., comes the iress parade, on Broadway. It is then hat the handsomely clad so predominate as to seem all in all. The ex-reme of fashion is then displayed by hose returning from the matinees, or topping en route from the afternoon eception or call, just to walk along ind see each other in their finery, or o taste an ice or a "lover's delight" t some sweet shop. From now intil after 6, Broadway is a de-ight. This is its hour of charm—the hour that lingers always in the mem-ry. When threading crowded ways in ar, foreign lands, this hour will be to ou the familiar strain of "Home, weet Home" that lures your thoughts oward the Angel City. To feel your-elf an integral part of this happy, urrying, pulsing, delightful, vital tream—ah, it is to live! What if the nultitude be too great for the side-valks to comfortably contain and you re obliged to wait to cross the treets? What if you are jostled and umped, pushed and brought to a full top at every alternate step—you are ot alone; and it is all a part of that bounding life that flows here, like ood red blood in full veins. This is Broadway in its daily gala hour.

Soon it will be en fete for the great Jnited Fashion Show. If the street is elightful now, at its daily promenade, vhat may we expect when it makes a oint of dressing up and entertaining? The Fashion Show will present Broad-ay in her reception robes, bedecked o receive her guests both local and rom abroad. She will filch for the vent, the beauties of fairyland; will luck for her fair brow the blossoms rom elysian fields; will snatch the tars from out Orion's belt to light the estal feast. Then shall we half ex-ect the pavements to turn to gold nd the paradise birds to break forth n song, for it will be truly a heavenly lace.

or the Young Girl.

I was interested in looking at the ew spring styles in frocks for misses nd small women, at one of the high-ass Broadway stores. This house has, oubtless, the largest stock of ready--wear, handsome gowns for young eople in the city. From the most sim-e of white material, trimmed plainly edgings and insertings, to elaborate-ornamented costumes for the com-g-out party or the ball at the sea-n's height, the range is complete.

Even the miss of 1 or 13, so difficult fit and to dress prettily, will here d something which will enhance the ther awkward, undeveloped form, d lend a certain style to that age ich is so problematic. There is noth-quite so appropriate for the young l as white, after all—and it can be de more or less dressy, by the man-ement of the trimmings. I noticed ine net trimmed with bands of filet e in the patterns of a spider web, ich was most effective. It made a ck pretty enough for any occasion, d yet not too grown-up, for the little s. I must say, that as a rule, I nk the ready-to-wear garments for le girls are too "old" in their make l garniture.

little dancing frock of blue net, ed with a band of blue ribbon and simple tunic of dewdrop net, was rming; as was also one in apricot pe meteor draped with brown chif-and enhanced with bands of brown e exactly matching, and a network fine silk braid laid over the lace d. This was of course for the more anced young lady; although it did look as elaborate as it sounds and harmony was perfect.

beautiful coat of white cloth was nmed in huge white buttons—al-st placques, of white edged with p blue. Smaller buttons to match lined the seam at one side of the lined the seam at one side of the k, from waist to skirt hem, and a e sailor collar of the same shade noire silk lent a very chic air. An-er coat of ciel blue was finished h a huge collar in black satin. The nt lines in skirt are unfailingly pre-ed and the long shoulder is as om-esent as during the past season.

he white, sheer frocks have a cer-fullness, created by ingeniously n frills of dainty embroidery or , but the slender outline is still pre-inant. witnessed a charming little in-nt, the other evening. Two tiny s were walking along Broadway their daddy when as they ap-ched the ladies' furnishing store ch has its name blazoned in lights he sidewalk, they espied the wink-electrics and with a shout they ted toward them, threw them-es sprawling upon the pavement began to shout as they clutched he elusive fire. "Oh, daddy, hurry! ry! Come quick and help get " They hopped about on all fours excited little crickets, laughing so rily that they soon had a happy ience of which they were in-iously unconscious. Every one hin the radius of those childish es was laughing heartily—save one old grouch who viewed them so mnly that I found myself really ing any one who could not enjoy nchanting a spectacle.

Own Lines.

ne of the big Broadway establish-ts has just issued a booklet setting h the many and varied brands of ls and importations of fabrics h it has placed under its own e. As an accompaniment or an il-ration, the windows are filled with nples of these lines. There are s, hose for women, misses, children corsets, table damask, stationery, paints, enamelware, rubber goods, certain kinds of groceries and drugs. This house prides itself upon the number and variety of its special lines controlled under its own particular brands.

For Readers.

One of the Broadway stores has instituted a Readers' Club. It costs but a dollar to join and half this amount is refunded when you withdraw your membership, if you ever do. Then you may have the very latest fiction for one cent per day, the minimum charge being that of a letter postage. So, if you are fond of reading, there is an opportunity to revel in it at a minimum cost.

The Jingle Gangles.

"Yes, I'm scared about the street crossings," acknowledged the woman from the country, as she stood on the edge of the sidewalk, dreading to plunge across. "It isn't so much that I am afraid of getting killed by street cars, automobiles or motorcycles, but the screeching of those whistles that the policemen blow makes me nervous."

Appropriate.

One of the chief delights of being an actress must be that of having things named for one. Powders, pastes and creams as well as gowns and hats are christened for stage favorites; but the most appropriate that I have [illegible] the Garden perfume. It really bears the whole name; but "Mary, Mary" is as sweet as her Garden. The head of the house handling this perfume here in Los Angeles, tells me that it is very popular.

As for millinery trimmings, the feature adopted with so much fervor last year of combining color notes has been abandoned for more softened effects—say, two tones of a certain color with a color contrast.

The little accessories of a woman's gowning, hats, scarfs, veils, shoulder capes, muffs made of satin, chiffon and lace, are of material matching the gown, and seem of more importance at this moment than the gowns themselves.

Want Space, Too.

SAY THE 'PHONE MOVE IS PHONY.

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS TO ALSO REACH EDITORS.

Intend to Demonstrate That All California Is Not for Votes for Women and They Propose That the Heads of Daily and Weekly Journals Shall Be Informed of Fact.

All California is not for suffrage and the editors of the State are to be apprised of the fact. Los Angeles women are to convey the information. It was announced at the headquarters of the Southern California Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage yesterday that they will write to every editor in California insisting on a division of space with the suffrage Press Committee.

For one thing they will ask every editor to read Mrs. George A. Caswell's paper to the Legislature carefully, and to make editorial comment upon it.

The ladies opposed to suffrage cannot bear to think of the innocent country editor in the hands of the subtle Press Committee of the suffragists. They refuse to sit idly by and see the country newspaper "get off on the wrong foot" simply because some sweet voice penetrates the sacred recesses of the editorial sanctum by way of the telephone wire to demand valuable space about anything so trivial as votes for women.

Mrs. Otto Neher yesterday admitted that women have no responsibilities of their own. They have nothing to do, she said, but keep their houses, manage their servants care for their children and look after the comforts of their husbands. What to do with her time is a constant puzzle, she said, to the woman with a family to sew for and to cook for. At the same time some of them feel a ridiculous reluctance about taking up the cares of State.

Mrs. Neher had read the press dispatches of Friday morning about a fist fight on the floor of Congress between two Representatives Thursday, and she could not help wondering if women would really make forceful Congressmen. She knew that some women make good bread.

There are even women who make good wives and mothers, but she was afraid that the type of women she knew and liked would not make good Congressmen, especially the kind that fight on the floor.

Many letters encouraging the ladies in their opposition to suffrage are finding their way to the headquarters of the association. One of these was received yesterday from a business man who said that from all he knew about politics it is not a woman's game, and he preferred to let his mother, sister, wife and daughter remain in the decency of their homes, while he represented them with the ballot.

The Votes for Women Club is holding a public meeting every Monday night, and is being addressed by some of the most able men in the city. One week from tomorrow the club will be addressed by Col. Tom Fitch.

Public meetings are held every Saturday afternoon at Choral Hall by the Political Equality League. The meeting yesterday was to consider proposed marriage. Mrs. Heim accepted and they selected the home in which they were to live. He induced her to give him $4000 with which to purchase the home, but it was never bought, and he showed no intention of carrying out the marriage agreement. Mrs. Heim demanded back her money which was refused. She told her troubles to Hon. E. E. Porterfield and to Joseph J. Heim, her former brother-in-law, president of the Home Telephone Company in Kansas City and director in several banks, and they helped her.

"All this time," said Mrs. Heim. "Dr. Hyde was making love to Frances Swope without saying anything to me about it. Part of the money I gave him to buy our home with, he used to buy her a diamond engagement ring. That throws a little light on the character of Dr. Hyde which was not brought out during his trial.

"Judge Porterfield and Mr. Heim went to him and demanded the return of the money and he told them he didn't have it. He said he would get it in a few days, and he did. That is, he got part of it. About $700 of the $4000 never was returned to me."

Dr. Hyde is now under a life sentence for the murder of Col. Swope.

TRAVELS WHILE CASH LASTS.

Mrs. Heim then left Kansas City. She traveled about the country with a maid, spending her money freely, and arrived here without funds. She is making just enough money to supply her daily needs.

Elizabeth Heim, her daughter, recently married Arthur Staiger, one of the best-known clubmen of Kansas City. Her son, Joseph Heim, is in the navy.

Mrs. Heim is still a handsome woman. The effects of her daily toil have had no visible effect upon her. She has beautiful auburn hair and large dark eyes, and has lost none of the personal charm that made her a favorite in Kansas City society a few years ago.

Her former husband, beside his brewery interests, owns Electric Park, Kansas City, considered one of the finest amusement places of the kind in America.

Valuable Item for Men

Health and strength hitherto unknown will be felt surging in rich red blood through the arteries and veins, and life's greatest ambitions may be realized as never before, if the following special treatment is followed by those men, and women, too, who are stricken with that most dreaded of all afflictions, nervous exhaustion, accompanied with such symptoms as extreme nervousness, insomnia, cold extremities, melancholia, headaches, constipation and dyspepsia, kidney trouble, dreaded dreams of direful disasters, timidity in venturing and a general inability to act naturally at all times as other people do. Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health and all the happiness accompanying it, the following home treatment is given. It contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs whatever. Mix it at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction.

The treatment is simple, thorough and correct. Leading druggists supply the main tinctures, extracts and essences in one-ounce bottles, ready to mix. Get three ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound, mix with one ounce compound fluid balmwort, and stand two hours. Add one ounce compound essence cardiol, and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime.

The ingredients are used for various prescriptions.

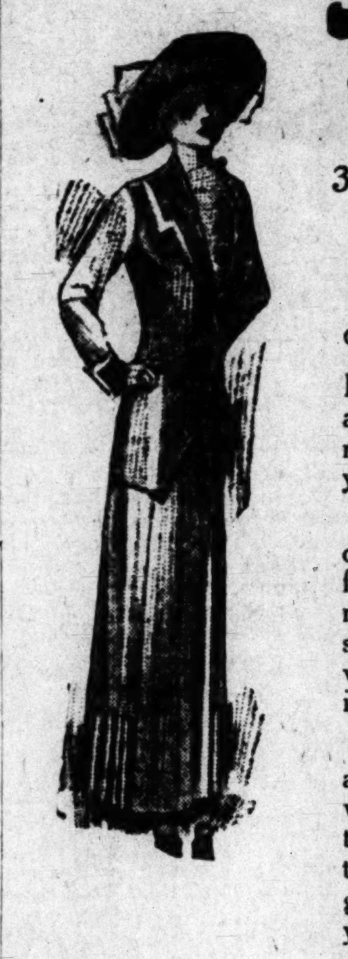
J. J. HAGGARTY



Supremacy in Value-Giving, of which each department partakes

It is the aim here, and the accomplished aim, to have every article in this entire establishment represent the Ultimate in real value at its price. "A high aim," you say. Indeed, yes, but one not impossible, as we have proved.

Occasionally, to be sure, some particular line of garments does not quite come up to our expectations. It is necessary for us in many cases, to sell garments for far less than the manufacturer expected them to bring, for far less than other stores offer them, in order to maintain our reputation for real values which has been long in building and which becomes increasingly precious every day.

And so in this store, whether you seek a waist at $1, or a skirt or a coat or a suit, or an imported evening gown whose price will run up into three figures, you may rest assured that our entire business experience, our entire buying ability, the whole policy of the store are bent on offering you the greatest values in the particular article which interests you, that you have ever found.

Suits in Which Extreme Smartness Is Joined to Widest Variety

And please remember that nowhere in the store is our exceptional power to save you money better demonstrated than on our attractive second floor. We fully realize that to the woman contemplating the purchase of a spring suit, the appeal of the dollar is justifiably strong. Where she can get the most for her money, there will she rightly buy. And so it is our object to see that every suit in the store presents a bargain at its regular price which you cannot possibly duplicate elsewhere in the city.

At $15

You will find an interesting line of suits in the newest styles and in the best fabrics to select from. And we pride ourselves particularly upon the line of correctly designed serges in both blue and cream at this price. To obtain a serge suit of distinct merit at such a figure must of necessity appeal to you as a splendid buying opportunity. These are of authoritatively stylish cut, and are lined with Skinners' satin.

At $19.50

You may have your choice of scores, yes, literally hundreds of the most exclusive new mixtures, many of them novelties which have not before been found in ready-to-wear suits, which have been quite confined to the show rooms of the best custom tailors. The new granite and onyx weaves will appeal to you strongly, if you are a lover of beautiful gray shadings, and, of course, you can have an almost unlimited choice of striking models in serge, both blue and cream, and including many of the fine stripes so eagerly sought by discriminating women.

At $25

You can have, as the manager of the department says, "most anything" in fabric, in design. Perhaps the most noteworthy additions to this line are the TROUSER SUITS which we show in both blue and cream serge as well as in the prettier novelty weaves. A description of the skirts you may find at the top of the next column. But it would be unfair to omit to state that these suits are among the most practical and modest garments that Fashion has produced in many a year. And in case you tire of the trouser effect, it is a simple matter to alter the skirts so that they will become regular plain-tailored styles, without the slightest hint of the trouser in their make-up.

The Popularity of the Cream Serge Dress Cannot Be Denied

It seems as though this spring they had been selected as the favorites of women all the country over. From the Atlantic to the Pacific they have met with the most widespread appreciation, and they have well deserved it. The best examples of this, as of all new styles, you will find here. From the severest of the plain tailored models to Empire styles with Dutch necks and collars and cuffs of Irish lace, or perhaps with elaborately braided, embroidered or beaded shawl collars and revers, there is no style that you cannot see at this store. And you'll find that the new shade "American Beauty," as beautiful a color as you have ever seen, enters very prominently into their trimmings. Their prices—$17.50, $21.50, $25, $29.50 and up.

Burbank.

LIVELY TOWN TO INCORPORATE.

CAN PUSH DEVELOPMENT BETTER WITH ORGANIZATION.

Meeting Held and Committee Appointed and Date Set for Mass Meeting of Citizens to Discuss the Various Details of Becoming a City—Pretty School Grounds.

BURBANK, March 4.—Burbank is taking another step in the direction toward which she has set her face. With the electric railway an assured fact, a number of the citizens consider that the next thing to be desired is incorporation, and they are taking prompt measures to secure it.

Last night a meeting was held in the W. H. Wood building. A fair representation of citizens and business men were out, and they showed that incorporation was what they wanted, and that they considered the time was ripe.

D. S. Nickerson presided and C. E. Salisbury acted as secretary. The purpose of the meeting was preliminary. The proposed boundaries were determined upon, and committees were appointed. The meeting was adjourned until Monday night, when the people in the proposed district will be heard from in a mass meeting held for that purpose. At this meeting it will be decided whether the matter of incorporation shall go before the people for a vote.

The proposed boundaries take in an area of approximately four square miles, so that the small ranches, up and down the valley from foothill to foothill will be included as well as the nucleus of business houses and town proper that cluster on the San Fernando road. Burbank has more than double the number necessary to incorporate, and the growing spirit of progress that has succeeded "her long sleep," will sooner or later demand the incorporation which is so necessary to her dignity as an influential community, and the transaction of business to her own advantage.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The bonus fund collected by the Electric Railway Committee has been accepted by the Pacific Electric Company. The maps and estimates are in the hands of the engineering department, and it assured that actual construction work will commence within thirty days.

The students of the Burbank Union High School have chosen March 17 for their Arbor Day celebration, which is to initiate the campaign they are planning for beautifying the school grounds. The High School site is one with excellent possibilities, and the young people have been enthusiastically working for its development.

The public is invited to their Arbor Day ceremonies, when a number of trees will be planted, and their plans be made known to arrouse further interest and bring civic pride to the rescue.

FUNERAL OF AGED VETERAN.

Remains of George W. Scott Laid Away With Honors Befitting on Old Soldier.

POMONA, March 4.—The funeral of George W. Scott, who died at his home here yesterday from pneumonia, was held this afternoon from the Davis Hanson chapel on East Second street, Rev. Dr. Lamport of Trinity Methodist Church officiating. The deceased was a Civil War veteran and came here from Illinois eighteen years ago. He was a member of Vicksburg Post of this city, which organization had charge of the funeral service at the cemetery. Mr. Scott had many friends here and is survived by a widow, two daughters, Miss Maud Scott and Mrs. Mabel Hurtt; a brother, and a sister residing in the East.

The Epworth League of the First Methodist Church held a St. Patrick's social in the church parlors this evening. A musical and literary programme was given by Misses Ethel McComas, Adah Rogers and a mixed quartette. Games were played and the refreshments and green decorations were reminiscent of St. Patrick.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Mrs. E. J. Hardy of Iowa City, Iowa, has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Walker.

Miss Mary McKinley of Redondo is the guest of her parents here.

The funeral services of Mrs. A. J. Gould, formerly a pioneer resident here, who died at her late home in Los Angeles, were held here this afternoon and interment was made in Pomona Cemetery. The deceased is survived by her husband, a daughter, Miss Anna Gould, and a son, J. Porter Gould.

Mrs. Edmund L. Wood, who died here Wednesday morning, was buried from the family home, No. 310 West Fourth street, this afternoon. Mrs. Wood was the mother of Miss Zelma Wood, a teacher in the local schools, and of Herbert Wood of Laramie, Wyo.

During the past two weeks the fish storage house of R. C. Anderson on West Fifth avenue has been burglarized of sixteen gallons of fresh oysters, and the officers have been unable to catch the marauders.

The dog poisoner is busy here. Several residents of the northeast part of the city have lost valuable canines over the poison route in the past week, and the owners of well-bred dogs are organizing to catch the poisoner.

BANNING.

BANNING, March 4.—Close observers predict that ere long the summer resorts in the mountains of the San Bernardino and San Jacinto ranges will become popular as winter resorts. The mountains are being visited by scores of enthusiastic tourists because of the wintry conditions prevailing there. It is pointed out that the famous resorts in the Alps with their ice and snow are fully as well patronized in winter as in summer and it is believed the same condition will exist in Southern California in a few years.

Slowly but surely the Indian Department is preparing to put the Mission Indians of Banning on their own responsibility. Thousands of dollars have been expended for them for an irrigation system, disputed land titles have been settled, and

SURE TO BREAK A SEVERE COLD.

WILL OVERCOME ALL DISTRESS FROM A BAD COLD OR THE GRIPPE IN JUST A FEW HOURS.

Folks in Los Angeles Who Really Want to Get Rid of a Severe Cold or the Grippe Can Expect No Curative Results from Quinine, Says This Well-Known Cincinnati Authority.

The most severe cold can be broken, and all grippe misery ended after taking a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel all the disagreeable symptoms leaving after the very first dose.

The most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress vanishes.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

CHILDREN'S PLAY.

has been working industriously on the other acts, and has inaugurated many extensive changes in them.

While the bulk of the play is in prose, Miss Willard has incorporated a number of passages of blank verse.

The scene of "Wan o' the Wood" may be said to be reminiscent of "Peter Pan" in its expression of the eternal spirit of youth, the freedom of its fancy and its unbounded imagination, though in no other respect does the play approach Barrie's lovely fancy, as the plots are entirely different.

A number of pretty and somewhat difficult dances are called for in the action of the piece, and the youngsters are being drilled for these by Mme. Mathildita Ferrando.

As has been stated before, the Children's Theater plans are not being carried on for financial profit or personal exploitation.

If there are profits, they will be either devoted to charity or to still more elaborate productions, say the producers. As to contemporary glory, the producers feel that if they succeed in making any of their small actors locally notable, and instill some of the spirit of art and the love of literature and the finer things of the stage into expanding minds they will have attained a reward greater than manual or typed applause and monetary profit.

WARM CAMPAIGN OVER BONDS.

Fullerton School District Which Includes Placentia in Throes of Peppery Contest—Site Is the Sticker.

FULLERTON, March 4.—The acute stage in the fight over the proposed issuance of $60,000 bonds for the Fullerton Union High School district was reached Thursday night, at a meeting of citizens of Placentia, opposed to the present site, and citizens of Fullerton, who are for the authorization of the bonds. The outcome was favorable to a compromise which may carry the bonds, though there is yet very determined opposition.

The people of Placentia are not unwilling to bear their burden of taxes, but announced unalterable opposition to the present site, which is near the Santa Fe tracks. Noise of train and lack of room for playgrounds are two reasons given. On the other hand many opposing the site are against a proposed merger with Anaheim to build a Union High School on a new site, between Fullerton and Anaheim. They are willing to vote for the bonds, if a five-acre tract on North Spadra in Fullerton is chosen.

It was agreed at the meeting that the best plan to be followed by those against the merger of the districts, to vote for the bonds with the understanding that if they carry, a fight will be started for a change of location.

To call an election for a change of site will require the action of two-thirds of the heads of families in the district and a two-thirds majority of all the qualified electors will be necessary to change the site and sell the old one on which is a two-story school building, costing about $15,000. If the bonds fail to carry Saturday, it is stated that the merger plan will be urged by Anaheim people.

What Shakespeare Meant.

Prof. Brander Matthews of Columbia, in one of his brilliant addresses on the drama, said of an unimaginative and prosaic dramatist:

"He it was, I am sure, who in his youth, on being asked in examination what Shakespeare meant by the phrase, 'sermons in stones,' wrote in reply:

"'When passing by a tombstone, you may learn the name and the dates of birth and death of the departed one, and also, from the inscription a valuable moral lesson from his or her life. Walking along a road, you may see from the milestones the number of miles to the nearest town, and thus acquire geographical information. Heaps of stones by the roadside indicate that repairs are to take place, and so inculcate a lesson in neatness.'"—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Original Neal Three Day Drink Cure

Marvel not at the assertion that a positive cure is effected in three days. Pay no attention to those who decry and scout this fact, but visit the Neal Institute at 945 S. Olive st., Los Angeles, Cal., and satisfy yourself. You will be more than welcome, as publicity and co-operation are courted, not shunned. Go a skeptic, if you must, and depart convinced beyond a shadow of a doubt that the Neal Treatment cures the liquor habit, and accomplishes this marvelous work in the above stated time, just three days. Go, men and women, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, and witness the reclamation in actual progress, and read the letters received daily from patients who have taken the Neal Treatment, and have blessed the hour they learned of this marvelous cure instituted in Los Angeles and other cities, through the instrumentality and philanthropy of Senator Bruce. Con- near their very doors, a cure which will reinstate them in the ranks of true manhood and sobriety and bring them to a contemplation and realization of all that is good and pure and true and worth striving for in the journey through life to the happiness beyond.

Many patients are brought or sent to the Institute by their family physician, and some of the foremost practitioners of the community and elsewhere, co-operate in the public work of redeeming poor lost humanity. There is nothing sectarian or hidden in these labors. The doors of this Institute are never barred, visitors come and go at any hour and find a hearty welcome from the management upon their arrival, whether they come as patients or investigators.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO ASSASSINS.

Mafia and Camorra Societies' Victims Everywhere.

Few Italians Escape the Claw of Secret Bands.

'Atrocities of the Black Hand Known Here, Too.

How much money may be levied in Los Angeles monthly for the support of which are believed to be levying blackmail from victims in Los Angeles and every other cosmopolitan city, never hestitating to kill if it will serve their ends.

the Mafia and the Camorra societies of Italy, with branches and individual membership all over the United States, it is impossible to ascertain. Every Italian ditch digger in this city is asserted to be paying more or less tribute to ex-convicts of these criminal orders, most of whom are from Sicily, Calabria and Naples, but all such contributors are sworn to secrecy and it would be death for them to speak.

Perhaps not a dozen Italian ditch diggers in the United States escape the payment of tribute money to organized assassins, according to the police. These desperate secret societies can levy a tax upon thousands of persons with perfect security because they have formed a vast conspiracy of silence, known as the Omerta, into which nearly all Italians are initiated, whether they are admitted to membership in one of the black brotherhoods, or are only made victims of the plunderers.

Los Angeles has a large colony of Italians, and the horrors of the Black Hand are not unknown to them. August 29 last, the residence of Nikola Giardina, at No. 153 South Avenue 21, was blown up by a dynamite bomb at 2 o'clock in the morning. It happened that Giardina's family was passing the night in Long Beach, otherwise its members would have died the victims of the Black Hand, and perhaps of the Camorra. Giardina's former residence at No. 2208 Enterprise street was destroyed in a similar manner by the same society on November 4, 1907.

SEND AGENT FROM SICILY.

In the beginning of 1910, an attempt was made upon his life by his own cousin who had come here from Sicily as an agent for one of the Black Hand societies. He tried to kill Giardina on the day of his arrival, and when Antonio la Pinana sought to interfere, Pinana received the knife thrust himself, and was dead within an hour. The assassin escaped.

From that time until the complete wreckage of his dwelling, those who were attempting the undoing of Giardina kept up a stream of threatening letters which were signed both by the Black Hand, the Bridge of Death, and the dagger of the Camorra—an outgrowth of the Mafia. Some of these letters demanded money. Two placed the sum desired at $1500. Giardina ignored them all. Once he was fired upon from ambush. Five leaden messengers were sent his way, yet each sped wide of the mark.

The assassins then directed their intimidating letters at Giardina's wife. They threatened both herself and her children with death if she did not persuade her husband to send them money. She believed that the letters were from an old lover whom she had spurned, and even when a house had been wrecked by bomb and flame, she clung to the belief that her discarded suitor had set the deadly Black Hand ruffians upon her husband for revenge.

The Los Angeles police do not believe in the existence of the Black Hand society as an order, but think that the Black Hand has received so much advertisement as an omen of death that individual criminals who wish to resort to blackmail and those who are bent upon assassination, use the symbol as the most powerful available threat. In many cities the theory entertained about the murders and robberies committed in the name of the Black Hand is that both the members of the Mafia and the Camorra use it as one of their open symbols.

THE MAFIA'S ORIGIN.

Originally the Mafia society is supposed to have been organized by patriots of Italy who wanted to liberate their land from the French. Another theory is that it was organized several hundred years ago in the face of great tyranny from which the masses suffered intolerably. Whatever the original motive of organization might have been, by the time the society served its first purpose many unscrupulous persons had learned its secrets and resorted to its power for extortion and the visitation of vengeance.

Perhaps the Night Riders of the Kentucky tobacco fields, the White Caps and Blue Bills of the Tennessee mountains, and the Molly McGuires and Ku Klux of the Blue Ridge in Georgia, are American corrollaries of the spirit which first inspired these organizations abroad. All of these societies degenerated into pillage and murder.

In recent years the Mafia has been identified with anarchy, and it would be interesting to know whether any member of this body of assassins has joined the Mexican rebels from the Junta at No. 519½ East Fourth street, in this city.

Besides having many Nihilists, who are refugees from Russia, Los Angeles known as the T'ien-Ti. The Triad Society is known as the High Binders. The Boxers are members of the Hung League. The Tong wars always grow out of these organizations. Both the Hung League and the Triad Society were originally organized on good principles, but both have become villainous and if a Chinaman finds the secret symbol of either of these organizations upon his door, he usually commits suicide, knowing himself irrevocably marked for death.

SECRET FRENCH ORDER.

By the way, one of the strangest orders of assassins in the world was organized long ago in France and still has members throughout that country. Its name in English is Brothers of the Coast, the initials of its French name being L. F. D. C. Its secret symbol is a combination of the letters A and D, meaning Anti-Dieu, or Against God.

The head of this society is known only to the second chief officer. Its symbol is tattooed on the arms or breast of its members. There is a Nihilist society in Russia which also brands its members for life by a tattooed sign. Nothing has ever taken place in the criminal annals of Los Angeles to suggest a local branch of this league of criminals.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

Babbling gossip has it that Job Harriman, attorney for the Mexican rebels secreted in Los Angeles, is to make the race for Mayor on the "Jaundiced Party" ticket, sometimes called the socialist brotherhood of man. Be that as it may, Job rose up early in the morning the other evening at a red gathering in Temple Auditorium and slipped over a triple-ka-jinks on Stanley Wilson and Fred Wheeler, the sewing machine kids, who have been grooming their vote-getting steeds for several months preparatory to entering the Mayoralty Derby classic event this summer.

The eloquent, and heretofore patient Job, arose in his wrath at the gathering of the heel-stamped mob insurrectos and saying a few empty things in a most agreeable manner informed the W & W "no-dust twins," that he had picked himself to make the Mayoralty fight for the local followers of Marx and Emma Goldman and that if they possessed all their Chinas they would assume "squatavou" postures in the extreme rear.

Harriman incidentally mentioned the fact that Wilson polled several hundred votes when he ran five years ago and Wheeler lost to Alexandre, which was enough to put the Apache sign on him as far as running for "hizzoner" was concerned. A majority of the chimerical dreamers present vociferously applauded Harriman's fungus coated remarks and several reds with facial fenders "down to here" yanked out their red stained handerkerchiefs and waved them frantically in the stuffy El Rope atmosphere.

Wilson arose and assumed a Brutus like attitude. He prefers the Brutus style to the Websterian. It was several moments before his silver tongue peeled forth golden red notes of a very reddish hue. In a Chesterfieldian manner he told his auditors that he would not make the race this year—as business interfered—and he always believed in business before pleasure. A couple of snickers got loose and made their rounds of the room and Wilson sat down with a thud. Wheeler arose, fire in each eye and papers in each hand. He raved and recited and raved some more and he chased—oratorically if you please—imaginary enemies and dark dank traitors 'round the hall. But to no avail. He determined to put the brakes on his ravings when he felt himself skidding and he threw a couple of packages of verbal soft soap at his hearers in order to start their sympathy wells to flowing, but nothing doing; it didn't "take" as his listeners were unaccustomed to soap in any form. Wheeler sputtered some more and then his gasoline ran out and he sat down near Wilson, that's all.

Any way it's the one best bet that Harriman will represent the Socialists at the head of the ticket this year. He has been seeking a niche in the hall of fame ever since he started reading Emma Goldman's "Queen of the Reds," and Doc Reitman's thriller, "Hoboes Make the Best Citizens." Four or five hundred Socialists are to make the race for the Council if they can raise enough money to scatter their petitions broadcast. The reds are more than hopeful for success in the coming election—they are absolutely confident. Take 'em away!

You cannot judge a horse by the harness but you can judge a city charter by the patches. The civic patriots and constitutional lawyers who are anxious to make the charter resemble a crazy quilt will tell you that if the good citizens of this municipality fail to adopt the amendments the city will go to the bow-wows for good and all time. The would-be menders of the charter frankly tell you that two or three of the amendments ought not to be adopted but they fail to tell which ones. There is scarcely any doubt but that all of the proposed amendments will pass. Not one voter in ten has the least idea what the amendments are about, but hundreds will vote merely for the sake of voting. Elections have are "in bad" with the Good Government organization because they oppose the adoption of amendment No. 5. This is the amendment dealing with the water and power department, the harbor department and other departments concerned in the controversy. The "solid three" maintain that if the amendment carries the Aqueduct Water Commission will continue to have unusual powers and absolute control of the revenues derived from the Owens River water. They declare that the taxpayers who are assessed for the aqueduct are not given a fair deal.

The Mayor and other Councilmen favor the adoption of the amendment. The Good Government Executive Committee held a meeting recently and heartily indorsed all of the amendments. There is little concerted opposition to the passage of the patches and undoubtedly they will be adopted tomorrow.

The regular Republican organization will not indorse any candidates for Mayor or the City Council in the coming primaries. A majority of the regulars favor keeping in the background until the voters choose the men to make the final race in December. Alexander is sure to receive the indorsement of the Goo-Goos. He wants a second term, and while many Goo-Goos would like to turn the bewhiskered Mayor down they realize he would run independently and therefore split up the reform forces. Martin Betouski and John Topham have been seen recently flirting with Miss Mayoralty Bee. Either one would make the race if he were sure of support from Good Government quarters. Clarence Taggart, the button-busting Tax Collector, announces that he is not a candidate for Mayor, but is for George Alexander, first, last and most of the time. Taggart's friends persuaded the haughty Collector to inform the breathless public that he would not enter the city derby. Taggart was obdurate for awhile, according to strong subterranean rumors, but finally wilted when told that he would not be a candidate for City Tax Collector this year if he persisted in nursing the Mayoralty drone.

The "hard boss" has sent a ukase down the line that all employees under the present city administration must get out and hustle in their respective precincts for the coming primary campaign. Hundreds of deputies and clerks are quietly campaigning and organizing their allotted precincts under the guise of advocates for reform and good government. Some play the church end of the game, while others of the sanctimonious clan do duty in the ranks of the booze interests, all called "to arms" under the leadership of the gang that advocates longer terms in office and increased salaries. The Goo-Goos from the inception of their organization have played both ends against the middle and tried to run with the hares and chase with the hounds. They will wake up some day and find that it is impossible to carry voters on both shoulders.

Deputy City Attorney Smith and Attorney W. Baird are seeking appointments to the Superior bench. Smith already has his petitions out.

TRAINED NURSE OF LOS ANGELES UNFIT FOR DUTY TWO YEARS CURED BY TELECONI TREATM

Food Absolutely Would Not Digest—Walked the Floor Night After Night for Eighteen Months.

The proof is here of Teleconi's great success with the stomach and nerves, and fortunately it comes from strong quarters, one able to know exactly before and after her Teleconi experience. A trained nurse, without hesitation, tells a most remarkable story of suffering, but more wonderful still is the story of her cure.

Elizabeth Duer, living at 3517 Central avenue, a trained nurse of ten years' experience, graduated from the hospitals in Philadelphia, and a resident here for four years, turns from drugs to the Teleconi drugless method because it was a question of saving her own life. Her own words tell best the story of her success. But one has to hear her repeat her experiences to appreciate what this has meant to her, and it is a story you do not have to go hundreds of miles to hear, although to a sufferer it would be worth the trip.

The writer, hearing of her cure, got on the car and went to her old address on Forty-ninth street and found her hard at work moving to Central avenue, and in her actions there was no sign of former invalidism. When the subject of the call—her cure—was stated, her face grew radiant and her eyes and whole expression told the story as no mere words could. "Yes," she said, "Teleconi cured me of stomach trouble, nervousness and insomnia."

and was engaged in my work continuously until two years ago, when I had to quit because I was no longer able to give the proper care to my patients. I have lived in Los Angeles four years. My health began to fail six years ago, but struggled on, working when I just felt so miserable that every day would be my last. It is hard to tell you all that I have gone through with, but in the beginning of my breakdown my stomach refused to digest my food, then my nerves commenced to bother me so that I could not sleep. Until I began to improve under the Teleconi treatment I had walked the floor nights for eighteen months because I was so nervous. I have never suffered so much pain, but when my heart began to be affected from gas forming in the stomach, I lived in constant dread and was afraid to be alone anywhere. Often when I tried to go up town I turned so sick on the cars that I would have to get off and walk, and in walking my heart would flutter so that I would have to stop and take hold of something to keep from falling on the street. I was not able to do a thing around home and felt that I had become a burden to my friends on account of my helpless condition. But you see what I am doing today, and I have been full of ambition to work ever since the seventh Teleconi treatment. My appetite has returned, my flesh and strength are returning, my heart does not bother me now, my stomach takes proper care of my food, I am sleeping restfully and regularly every night now, and it all seems too good to be true.

Fooled Doctors, Cheated Undertakers.

Dying Six Weeks Before, This Colorado Man Found the Teleconi Way to Health and the Banquet Table.

(From the Denver Post.)

Six weeks ago W. E. Gillespie, a prominent land owner and wholesale lumber dealer of Greeley, Colo., was prepared for death. The doctor informed him that there was no hope for his recovery, his attorney was called to his bedside and his will was prepared and signed.

Last evening the writer attended a banquet at which Mr. Gillespie was not only an honored guest, but a very active participant. Here are some of the things he tea that he drank. Pretty fair for a dying man, was it not? And as he left the banquet table he laughingly remarked: "I am going it that strong every day now it has not hurt me yet."

Mr. Gillespie had been in ill health for years and had spent months in a hospital. When the doctors had done everything for him that their skill and experience could dictate, they advised his wife to take him home to die.

The change in Mr. Gillespie's appearance has been fully as great as in his appetite and his ability to assimilate good things to eat. Two months ago he was gaunt, wrinkled, yellow, stooped, his step lifeless and his eye dull. Apparently the doctors were right—he was marked for the grave. Now he walks erect, with vigor in his step and the love of life in his eye and voice. He attends to business, makes frequent trips to Denver and looks and acts like a different man.

Malaria Was the Foundation.

Mr. Gillespie dates his failing health from a season spent in the lumber camps in the swamps of Arkansas many years ago. He but the disease gradually pulled him down until his liver was clogged and his digestion a wreck. When he could not longer digest strong food he rapidly became weaker.

Constant pain in the stomach worried him, and every bite he swallowed gave him great agony. Much of the time his stomach refused to retain any food at all, which further weakened him. Then he read of similar cases which had been cured in Denver, and came down to investigate. He was convinced of the truth of the stories he had read, and enrolled for a course of treatments himself.

The result was magical. From the very first the pain in his stomach was eased, his appetite returned, he was able to eat solid food and retain it and in three weeks he was well on the way to health.

Mr. Gillespie was so grateful to the man who had restored him to happiness after he had been given up to die that he readily gave his story to the press, that others might benefit by his example. But results most unexpected to him followed this publicity. The Post circulates all over the United States, and he began to get so many

SAYS IT'S CASE OF "COLD FEET."

DEFENDANT JANTZEN TELLS ABOUT LAND DEAL.

Man Charged With Trading Securities in Property He Did Not Own, Makes Statement in Which He Says Complainants Were Sore Because He Wouldn't Trade Back.

That the three Englishmen who caused his arrest did so because he was not willing to trade back when they had become dissatisfied with the deal was the explanation made by Christian Jantzen yesterday afternoon in the City Jail, where he is held in default of $10,000 bail. Jantzen is charged by Herbert B. Shephard, George Jude and C. P. Hurdich with having traded them securities on land in the Middle West which he did not own for a 640-acre ranch near Fresno valued at $85,000.

Jantzen, after consulting with his attorney, F. McD. Spencer, gave his version yesterday. He charges the men with whom he made the deal with unwarrantably prosecuting him.

The defendant has been a resident of Los Angeles twenty years. Hurdich, who is now in England, has lived in the southern part of the State several years and is one of the best known cricketers. At present he is captain of the Southern California Cricket Team. In the last few months he has become greatly interested in the growing of raisins and, it is said, was planning previous to the time he joined in the land deal with Jantzen to bring to California about eighty English boys to be taught how to grow raisins.

"They told me they were perfectly satisfied with the deal but after I had put about $3000 worth of improvements on the land, they suddenly became dissatisfied with it and wanted to trade back," Jantzen said. "As soon as the deal had been completed I went to the ranch and began to improve it. I set out orange trees and planted a lot of grain. The Englishmen brought over about twenty English boys and sold them ten-acre tracts of land on which they are going to grow raisins.

"This latter plan did not work out to suit me and wrote to Hurdich in England that I would not consent to take any more boys. Then they got mad.

"Before this deal was made I told them what some of the property I had to exchange was and they had two months in which to investigate. At the end of that time I asked them if they were satisfied and they said that they were. The deal was then made.

"When I first took over the ranch I was told that there was a mortgage of $36,666 on it, but I later found that there was a mortgage of $45,000. Then I wrote to Hurdich to stop sending the boys from England. We had another talk and they wanted to trade back and I refused.

"They told me to trade back or they would have me arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses and I told them to go ahead. I'm here," he concluded.

When Jantzen was arrested on the ranch, which is twelve miles from Fresno, Friday night he seemed very much surprised but did not make any objections to accompanying the detectives when they showed him they had a warrant for him. Detective McNamara was sent by the local police to bring him to Los Angeles.

"I didn't know Jantzen and when I got to the ranch I thought I was talking to one of the hands," the detective said. "He was hard at work with a spade when I asked for him. When I told him I had a warrant for him he seemed quite surprised but said if I would wait until he could put his tools in the shed he would come back with me."

Jantzen was arraigned before Justice Reeve yesterday morning. The complaint lodged against him by Herbert B. Shephard, acting for Hurdich and Jude, as well as himself simply recited that Jantzen had exchanged lands which he did not own and some bonds of an Ohio oil company for a valuable ranch owned by the complainants and that the latter did not know that Jantsen did not own the property he traded in.

The case will be taken up by Justice Reeve next Tuesday when a preliminary examination will be given Jantzen.

PUBLIC NOTARIES TO BE WATCHED.

LAX METHODS RESPONSIBLE FOR NUMEROUS SWINDLES.

Common Practice, It Is Said, to Acknowledge Papers Without Seeing Party Who Makes Oath—District Attorney's Investigation of Fraud Leads to Drastic Measures.

That the majority of the large realty swindles and manipulation of deeds and mortgages which have been discovered in this county in the last decade have been made possible by the laxity of the notaries, is the averment of members of the District-Attorney's office.

With a view of making it as difficult as possible to get valid acknowledgements to fictitious deeds, the county prosecutors will keep close watch over the notaries.

It is a common practice among them to take acknowledgements without seeing the party who is making the oath. In this way they are liable to be imprisoned, as well as having their commissions revoked.

L. E. Bigler, who was yesterday convicted of forgery, found it possible to manipulate a mortgage because his stenographer, Miss Emily G. White, who is a notary, acknowledged the signature of Mrs. Ella S. Locke without having seen her.

The attorneys realize that Miss White was innocent in the realty transaction, but she violated the restrictions of the law and made possible a swindle.

Victor C. Henry, who was recently convicted, forged notarial seals. He was, however, an exception to the general rule. He desired to get married and was already spoused. In order that he might better play a double matrimonial game, he forged a divorce decree and had a seal of a Nevada Superior Court made.

For several years a Long Beach notary was known to make no inquiries when a paper was brought to him and he was asked to acknowledge the signature. Through his failure to keep his oath, crooked deals were pulled off. Prosecutions were instituted and the commission revoked.

The condition has become such that the crusade of the District-Attorney against perjurers, who are alleged, in many instances, to have defeated justice.

JURISTS, EDUCATORS.

Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver says: "Beware of the eminently respectable citizen with the immaculate personal habits. Beware of the man who has no small vices. Beware of the person in public life who neither smokes, chews, drinks nor beats his wife. A good many small vices," he said, "are not necessarily sinful nor indicative of sins that may be hidden. On the contrary, an absence of the small vices is a psychological evidence of character weakness, rather than of austerity."

Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme Court has never found the profession of jurist a remunerative one. When he was married in 1856 he ship and also his deanship of the graduate school, the same to take effect at the end of the present college year.

Judge Greeley W. Whitford of Denver was accused by Margaret Miller before a legislative committee, of having received from her a package containing $3000 four days before the sixteen striking coal miners were imprisoned for contempt. At once the judge appeared before Judge Carlton M. Bliss and asked for a grand jury investigation of the accusations, not only because his own reputation is at stake, but because the good name of the bench of the judicial district is attacked.

Prof. Wilfred H. Munro, for twenty years professor of history at Brown University and a well-known figure in historical circles in Providence and Rhode Island, has resigned his professorship in the university to take effect on September 1, 1911. looking for Cruelty, spelt C., the very quintes- women's clubs, boys. There you will find it in its most subtle and lingering form.

This may appear a somewhat drastic statement to make in relation to our mothers, sisters, cousins, affinities and aunts, but it is true, nevertheless, and this is how I verify it.

We all know, or we ought to know, that the most important thing in life to woman is the subject and discussion of clothes. Every other interest pales beside it, even that of love. Love is a side issue; dress is the paramount one and is ever in her thoughts.

Now, every woman has her own opinion on the subject of clothes and dresses herself accordingly; which is a blessed thing for the dressmaker, milliner and department stores; and she resents deeply any unsolicited or tendered advice as to what she ought to wear or how she ought to wear it. We men are different, you know; we like to be told that our suit doesn't fit and that our hat is a fright. We are sensible. We thank the other fellow for the information and pass along, thanking our stars that we don't look such a guy as he does.

Well, to return to our baa lambs. There is one lady—who is rather pretty, by the way—who is a particular busybody in this respect and who belongs to one of our most prominent lady clubs. They are all of them the most prominent and exclusive, so you will have to guess the one I mean.

Well, things would not have been so bad, it appears, if this lady—we will call her Mrs. A.—that is the first letter of the alphabet and is obviously the first one handy—if this lady was in any way qualified to tender advice on the all-important subject, but it seems that that is by no means the case; her club sisters having described her to me as "the tackiest woman in town," whatever that may mean. Sounds pretty awful, though, doesn't it? The tackiest woman in town!

Well, this tackiest woman in town—Mrs. A.—was making herself so officious with her constantly-tendered advice to her club sisters that they at last concocted a scheme whereby they could turn her irritating failing to their own unbridled amusement. They elected to make her the arbiter of fashion.

Think of it, boys! Think of it! The arbiter of fashion and, at the same time, the tackiest woman in town! Could anything be more Gilbertian?

They persuaded her to give an address on the great, important subject before the full meeting of the club, and she bit!

She gave it and it was a full house. Talk about your S.R.O. signs! There wasn't standing room.

She came gloriously arrayed and ascended the platform. She turned herself about; she pirouetted; she talked herself hoarse and drank mighty sips of water in the most approved oratorical manner; she showed and explained every flounce, pleat, button, hook and frill, and went further and more technically below the surface than becomes the clubman to chronicle.

Did her sisters jeer? Did they hoot, now that they had got her where they wanted her? No, sirs, they did not. They were far too cruel for that. They cheered and encored her to the echo! They burst their gloves with clapping and bit their tongues to keep themselves from laughing.

But, behind her back! Oh, dear; oh, dear! What don't they say behind her back!

And they are keeping it up. Just think of it, fellow-clubmen; they are keeping it up! She is still the arbiter of fashion, and still the tackiest woman in town! Can anything be more cruel than that?

To the inveterate drinkers and lovers of French brandy, who are gradually imported into the United States is the original product of Fresno county, California, will come as a disagreeable surprise. Such is the fact, nevertheless.

In 1886, the writer went, as a youth, to learn the French language at Cognac, the so-called famous home of the French brandy industry, and spent two delightful years in the picturesque old town on the banks of the Charente.

For some years before the phylloxera had been at work on the vineyards surrounding Cognac and the pernicious parasite had succeeded in laying to waste all the land within a twenty-mile radius, with the result that the brandy industry of the district would have to come to a standstill if some of the big growers and distillers had not called in the aid of their brethren in the trade in the Western Hemisphere.

Vines were brought from the fields of California and elsewhere and planted in the affected soil of Cognac, but the phylloxera had secured such a hold on the land that they became quickly inoculated and the land was then allowed to rest and has been practically resting ever since, or has been planted to other vegetation than the brandy-producing grape.

California brandy was then brought into play, and every week the writer saw many carloads of Fresno brandy being unloaded at the freight depot in Cognac and has seen it reshipped to the United States, and elsewhere, after having been blended and branded as genuine Cognac brandy.

One or two of the Cognac distilling firms have large and flourishing vineyards near Angouleme, about twenty miles from Cognac, but the brandy secured from these vines is carefully reserved for the connoisseurs of the European continent and very little, if any, finds its way across the Atlantic.

In 1907, the writer spent some months with a relative, who was manager of one of the largest vineyard estates in Fresno, California, and there had the pleasure of seeing enormous shipments of brandy sent off to Cognac, addressed to a prominent brandy firm in that town, whose liquor is, by the way, the most widely known and advertised in the United States and England, and which is returned, after careful blending and branding, as genuine French "Cognac."

Now, the ordinary lover of this insinuating liquor will "top off" his well-ordered dinner at a cafe, or his club with a petit ver of brandy and will give strict injunctions to his waiter that he must have genuine "Cognac," no doubt mentioning the brand preferred, and will turn up his nose with disdain at any proferred brand that bears a California label. He will pay a double price for his so-called "Cognac" and will flatter himself that he is "wise" in doing so.

Where the Pins Go.

By a series of experiments conducted on his estate a French investigator has discovered that pins go the way of all flesh and are resolved into dust. Hairpins, which the experimenters watched for one hundred and fifty-four days, disappeared at the end of that time, having been resolved into a ferrous oxide, a brownish rust, which was blown away by the wind.

Bright pins took nearly eighteen months to disappear; polished steel needles nearly two years and a half; brass pins had but little endurance; steel pins at the end of fifteen months had nearly gone, while their wooden holders were still intact.—[Harper's Weekly.

Members of the twenty chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star in this city, have planned a great charity ball for the benefit of a fund to build a home, to be known as the Southern California Eastern Star Home. There are in all ten counties, including Kern and San Luis Obispo, seventy-two chapters and 10,000 members, and all are to be asked to take part in the movement.

The ball will be held in Shrine Coliseum, May 29, and it is expected that a great many tickets will be sold to friends of the members, and with that object in view, the committee has had 25,000 tickets printed, which will be sold at 50 cents each. To accommodate the many guests who do not care to dance, provision for their entertainment will be made in other directions.

Many of the chapters already have sent in orders for tickets, indicating that there will be a large sale outside the city. Dr. T. J. STEADY STEPS ON LAST MARCH.

Soldier and Scion of South Slowly Failing.

Has War Claim for Millions Still Pending.

Beggared by Federal Victory But Still Loyal.

His head as erect and his shoulders as square as they ever were in the trenches under Sherman's guns at Savannah or at the head of the flying column that drove the Ku-Klux Klan from Southern Georgia, Col. Edward C. Wade is marching unfalteringly forward toward the end of his long journey in Los Angeles. Now in his eighty-first year, the veteran Republican of the South has for weeks been confined to his bed at No. 623 North Boyle avenue, his surroundings but faintly reminiscent of the time when he was one of the very wealthy merchants of the Savannah of ante-bellum days.

With him is passing one of the few remaining original war claimants scion of an old and once wealthy Georgia family and a picturesque figure in reconstruction days, who is slowly failing at his home in this city.

against the United States government, as well as one of the largest. His own damages, sustained through the destruction and confiscation of property on Sherman's march to the sea, amount to between two and three millions of dollars. But, though he was practically beggared by the victorious Federal campaign of Atlanta, the reborn Union had nowhere else in Georgia so staunch a supporter through the days of the reconstruction, when Republicanism and treason were synonymous words in the South.

Ostracised and made social pariahs in their native city, the Wades—of the "Virginia Wades that never seceded"—were taken by the courageous old colonel to a safe retreat in the far southern part of the State. Then, though his office was maintained only at the price of eternal vigilance, Col. Wade went back into a hotbed of unsuppressed southern sympathy and for thirty years served his country in capacities so dangerous that no other would accept them—Collector of Internal Revenue and United States Marshal.

Armed to the teeth and with a posse of deputies always at his back, Col. Wade patrolled practically the entire coast line of Georgia from Savannah to Jacksonville, and the island country from Macon to Quitman, in Brooks county, where he had sequestered his family. When the Ku-Klux outrages of Southern Georgia made life and property alike unsafe through all that country, Col. Wade was put at the head of a Federal detachment of troops which for five years waged almost unceasing warfare against the terrible secret society of the South. It was through his efforts, chiefly, that the backbone of the organization in Southern Georgia and Northern Florida was broken.

As Collector of Internal Revenue, to which department of service he was appointed immediately after the war by his uncle, Benjamin F. Wade, then pro tem. president of the Senate, his duties were scarcely less dangerous. He served for three years as chief deputy under Col. Alexander Wilson and then as head of the district under Grant. In different capacities, he served the Union through the administrations of Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, and for two years under Cleveland; always in the South where, to quote his own words, "United States officers were as popular as rattlesnakes, suh!"

The old fighter's earliest recollections are seated among the Cherokee Indians of mid-Georgia, with whom he spent nearly all his boyhood. At 18 he secured a clerkship in a Savannah commission house which dealt largely in cotton and other inland products in addition to supplying slaves to the plantations from Charleston south.

In twelve years the young merchant amassed a fortune. He was twice offered the mayoralty chair of Savannah but refused it because of the political aspect of the times, to which he refused to subscribe. He was made an Alderman, however, and served the city in that capacity for six years.

When the war broke out he stood stubbornly for the Union, in spite of the social ostracism and bodily peril which it brought him. Though he stood to win more, through his large holdings of cotton and land, by Confederate success than by Federal, he remained firm in his allegiance. Twice he paid substitutes to serve for him in the ranks of the conscripted. Forced at last to join the [illegible] before Savannah, [illegible] reluctantly [illegible] the surpound, together with large holdings of other sorts of merchandise. The entire lot was confiscated by Gen. Sherman, sent to New York and sold. Wade's plantation, on the outskirts of the city, was wrecked and stripped to the bare soil. He was ruined but he was still loyal.

Following his retirement from government service during Cleveland's first term, he re-embarked in business in Savannah, though without notable success. In 1897 he sold his holdings and removed to California, whither two of his sons had preceded him. These, E. M. and L. M. Wade, are assayers, of No. 318 East First street.

His oldest son, Edward C. Wade, Jr., is a lawyer of Las Cruces, N. M., where also live the third and fourth generations to bear that name. Another son, Charles Wade, is employed in the Pension Bureau. A brother, Benjamin Wade, is an internal revenue officer of Atlanta. Col. Wade's wife, Sarah Harrison Wade, a grandniece of William Henry Harrison, is now resident at Indianola, Fla.

LOTS OF WHEELS TURNING 'ROUND.

YOUNG LOS ANGELES INVENTOR CROWDS EDISON.

Thirty-eight Devices in Ten Years Include Patent Railway Rails and Ties, Horse Bonnets and Footwear, Anti-Crime Contrivances, Automobile Sleighs, Etc.

It appears that when Thomas A. Edison ceases to be active in the field of usefulness, Los Angeles may be in a position to furnish his successor, in such wise that the business of contriving useful devices for making easier the business of living may go along without interruption.

The prospective candidate for the roomy boots of the wizard of Orange is William T. Cody, a young steel worker of No. 501 East Fifth street, who shows symptoms of becoming as prolific of mechanical contrivances as Edison ever was. He is only 27 but he has been at it, he says, since he was 17. In that time he has entirely or partially perfected thirty-eight inventions, all of which he thinks are of very considerable importance either as improvements on existing devices or as entirely new ideas. Patents have been applied for on some half-dozen of these and all of them, according to Cody, have been declared patentable. He expects to apply for letters patent on the rest as soon as he can interest the necessary capital for carrying them through. In the meantime he keeps busy.

Even while he was riding the range after the festive Texas longhorn his inventive lobe was busy with an adjustable horse shoe which can be taken off the animal at will, for roughening, re-setting or other purposes. He is also the inventor of a new kind of horse-millinery which he says will entirely supersede the present poke bonnets affected by equine kind. Whether the animal is moving or standing still, the new hat is so constructed that there is a constant draft over his head.

The invention upon which Cody is now engaged and in which he hopes to be able to secure backing is a new kind of joint for railway rails. He asserts that he can entirely do away with the old-style fishplates and in their place produce a joint that, though allowing for expansion and contraction, will be as strong as a continuous rail. Not only will it never give or spread, says Cody, but, in the event of the ballast being washed from beneath it, it will support a train for at least 200 yards of washout.

Cody is also the inventor of an automobile sleigh which he claims will go up and down hill at the same speed as a wheeled motor, a concrete refrigerator to do away with the necessity of cold storage by ice, a fire alarm box that will prevent false alarms being turned in by the simple device of a trap to grab the arm of such ill-intentioned persons, a safety safe which automatically prevents itself from being tampered with by means of a trap which blows the casual safe-cracker to smithereens before he can accomplish his fell purpose, et cetera, et cetera. He prides himself particularly upon a railroad tie made of non-rustable steel and which, while possessed of the same tensile strength as a steel tie, has all the vibratory quality of one of wood—according to his belief.

Truck Farming In Southern Califor

A truck farm in Southern California, properly managed, means ready money, a life of comparative ease and an opportunity for the children such as no other part of this broad land can offer.

It is the truck farmer's paradise.

He can work in the open every day of the year.

There is no "close season" in Southern California.

There is always a market at good prices for his products.

The amount of land necessary in Southern California for profitable truck farming is so small—from two to ten acres is plenty for a beginning—that the man with only a few hundred dollars and a wife and family to support can expect to make a good living from the sale of his first year's crop.

Celery, tomatoes, egg plant, peppers, strawberries, onions, lettuce, cucumbers, etc., bring in cold hard cash—net from $150 to $1000 an acre yearly income.

Every member of a family can help on a truck farm. The more children in the family to help with the berry picking the better. They can soon adapt themselves to other work on the farm, such as the raising of chickens and the shipping of eggs and broilers to market. If the head of the family desires to remain at his employment in the city the wife can supervise the whole.

Children of the men and women who, a generation ago, left the farms are returning to the country, taking up small tracts of land and living better and more comfortably than they did in the large cities.

Country life in Southern California is not barren. The farmer has telephones, electric lights, daily newspapers, good schools, good churches, automobiles and other comforts which city people cannot have because of the expense of living in the cities.

MONTANA PIONEER PASSES AWAY IN LOS ANGELES.

Engaged in the Fur Business in the Sixties and Was Known and Highly Esteemed by the Indians—Settled at the Only Town Between St. Paul and Village of Portland, Or.

Charles W. Price, who died at his winter residence, No. 1924 South Figueroa street, last Monday, was one of Montana's best-known pioneers. The funeral on Wednesday was attended by almost the whole colony of Montanans, and the bearers, Dr. F. A. A. Alkinson, W. K. Floweree, George Overfield, O. H. Churchill and George Frields, were all intimate and lifelong friends of the deceased and his family. The interment was in Rosedale Cemetery.

Mr. Price was born in [illegible] sixty-eight years ago, and was educated at Westminster College in that State. He removed to Fort Benton, Mont., in 1863, when that place was the only town between St. Paul and the village of Portland, Or., and entered the employ of the I. G. Baker Company, which had bought out the American Fur Company. Thereafter, so long as the buffalo lasted, he managed one and another of the company's branch posts on the Missouri and Milk Rivers. The Blackfeet, the Crows and Gros Ventres, with whom he traded for many years, all loved and honored him.

In 1880 Mr. Price went into the cattle business with Charles E. and W. G. Conrad, Montana business men, and later bankers and capitalists of Great Falls and Kalispell. Their "Circle" brand of cattle within a few years increased to many thousands of head, ranging the plains of Northern Montana, and the adjoining province of Alberta, Canada, and the owners realized large fortunes from the sale of the increase. Later, Mr. Price took over his partner's interests in the business, and at the time of his death was sole

MANY MEXICAN PATRIOTS.

They Outnumber the Reds Twenty to One in Los Angeles, and Offer to Fight for Their Country.

Los Angeles contains twenty Mexican patriots to one revolutionist. The patriots want President Diaz to know that the Mexicans of this city are not all anarchists, and they refuse to sit still while a few revolutionists give them a bad name as a whole.

In the last two weeks scores of able-bodied Mexican men have notified Senor Lozano, the Mexican Consul in this city, with residence and offices at No. 950 South Olive street, that they are holding themselves in readiness to go to Mexico and fight for the government at short notice.

They are willing to enlist in the Mexican army any day that President Diaz or his officers issue a call for volunteers. They are ashamed that the enthusiasm and noise of a handful of traitors should misrepresent hundreds of loyal citizens, and they are willing to back their patriotism with rifles if their country needs them. Some have even volunteered to enlist in the regular army of Mexico until the present petty disturbance is at an end.

The services of these men cannot be accepted, as the Mexican government has issued no call for volunteers in the republic or out of it. The regular army of Mexico is perfectly capable of dealing with the situation, and it has really been the mercy of Gen. Diaz and his hope of bringing peace without unnecessary bloodshed which has prevented him from stamping the revolution and the revolutionists from the face of the earth long before this, the local patriots say.

"How did you get along with him?" asked some one, when the bold one returned.

Looks Like Hand of Trust in Auction Change.

Di Giorgio, the Silent, Figures Prominently.

Suspicion Is Aroused by Recent Deals.

Is the United Fruit Company fastening its tentacles upon the producers of California, both in the deciduous and the citrus deals? This is one of the most important questions that have come up in the fruit world of this State in years, and has been occasioned by the sale of the controlling interest in the Earl Fruit Company to one very smooth Joseph Di Giorgio, who in a recent visit to Los Angeles, refused absolutely to talk of any of these things. His brother, who followed him, was just as reticent and non-communicative.

Di Giorgio is probably the heaviest stockholder in the Pioneer Fruit Company as well as in the Producers Fruit Company, which next to the Earl Fruit Company rank as the chief apple packers and handlers of other deciduous fruits in California.

Associated in his recent California acquirements are Hugh E. Connolly and James R. Fanning, who, with Di Giorgio, are the owners of the Connolly Auction Company of New York, and who are dominating factors in a number of auctions in other cities of the East.

Until recently one of the oldest and probably one of the original auction companies of New York, the Fruit Auction Company, held the account of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange which is acknowledged as the prime factor in the citrus market of the United States, controlling as it does at least 65 per cent. of the California crop.

SUDDENLY SWITCHED.

[illegible] four months ago the California Fruit Growers' Exchange account was [illegible] switched from the Fruit Auction Company to the Connolly Auction Company. There was no intimation of [illegible] change given any of the big dealers in New York and it was a real surprise when the news was announced.

And now comes the connection of the United Fruit Company, sometimes operating under the name of the Fruit [illegible] and commonly known as "the banana trust," which, with its $60,000,000 capital, is looked upon as the Standard Oil of the fruit world.

Di Giorgio, who has never openly admitted the fact, has a number of years been known as an agent of the so-called trust. He was organizer of the [illegible] Fruit Company, which started [illegible] "bust" the United Fruit Company in 1910. That his intentions were [illegible] and that the company remained independent for a while has generally [illegible] acknowledged.

PICKED BY "TRUST."

[illegible] energetic worker, a good fighter, Di Giorgio was picked by the [illegible] as an able assistant. He and the Atlantic Fruit Company were absolutely absorbed by the United Fruit Company, although retaining the same name. He was reported as receiving a salary of $10,000 a year in those early [illegible] which since has been greatly increased. In a lawsuit in one of the [illegible] courts witnesses stated that directors of the Atlantic Fruit Company were also directors of the United Fruit Company and vice-versa.

There have been many other independent banana concerns organized, some of which tried to show the United Fruit Company as a trust when they had [illegible] crushed into a mere semblance of [illegible], but none of them save the Atlantic Fruit Company has ever survived. It goes on importing millions of [illegible] of bananas each year, getting them from the same territory as the United Fruit Company and distributing without the least opposition through the United States.

These and a number of other incidents firmly establish Di Giorgio as one of the controlling factors of the United Fruit Company, and his sudden activity in California fields is looked upon as boding ill for the few independent shippers who are forced to compete with the finest marketing organization in the world.

[illegible] Di Giorgio, brother of Joseph, [illegible] at the Alexanderia last Tuesday. [illegible] was in attendance at the Western [illegible] Convention, held in Sacramento during the latter part of February, and while in that city as well as in Los Angeles he was in conference with officials of the [illegible] Fruit Growers' Exchange.

When approached on any subject, Di Giorgio in a very suspicious manner [illegible] that he was averse to turning [illegible] publicity to recent operations [illegible] brother in California. He [illegible] a few insignificant in[illegible] the State, but made no mention [illegible] purchase of controlling interest [illegible] the Earl Fruit Company. [illegible] that at least $500,000 was [illegible] this interest.

LOST HEAVILY.

[illegible] Joseph Di Giorgio secured [illegible], as well as where all of [illegible] financial backing has been [illegible] from in a number of big [illegible] has been entirely a matter of speculation, which points back to the United Fruit Company. Twelve [illegible] ago he was an Italian immigrant [illegible] on the docks of Baltimore. [illegible] organizing the Atlantic Fruit Company, he was never given a [illegible]. His company for several [illegible] was scarcely a paying proposition [illegible] when he went into the Sicily [illegible] deal. In this he is reported as [illegible] lost into the hundreds of thousands.

[illegible] all of this money has come [illegible] is hard to conjecture, save [illegible] the channels of the United Fruit Company, which a number of [illegible] shippers believe has secured [illegible] hold on the fruit packing in[illegible] of California.

[illegible] representatives disclaim all [illegible] of Di Giorgio's connection [illegible] exchange. "He is one of the [illegible] of the Connolly Fruit Auction Company and our account was [illegible] to this company from the [illegible] Auction Company, because the [illegible] has more push and better marketing ability," said one of the officials [illegible] exchange.

[illegible] newly appointed representative [illegible] Fruit Company in Los Angeles [illegible] D. Thompson, left Sacramento at practically the same time [illegible] Di Giorgio left Los Angeles [illegible] East. Whether or not they met [illegible] in regard to carrying on [illegible] in the local markets is a [illegible] for conjecture. It may be sufficient [illegible] to state that Thompson is considered one of the ablest managers in the commission business and he [illegible] phenomenal success in [illegible] other big business interests [illegible] practically control the market [illegible] lines of products.

LICENSE NOT SATISFACTORY.

Telephone Company Flatly Refuses to Put Up Required Amount and Suit Will Be Filed.

VISALIA, March 3.—City Attorney Miller is preparing the complaint in an action which is to be filed by the city against the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, in which it is alleged that the corporation has refused to pay its city license of $25 per quarter.

It is asserted that this bill for the license has been presented to the local officials of the company and to the head officials in San Francisco and that thus far tney have refused to pay it.

While nothing definite in reply can be had from the officers, it is stated that in some city of this State, a test case is to be made of the license laws, and from the present indications it would appear Visalia is to be that city.

License laws in Visalia have been a matter for constant dispute and in addition to the action against the telephone company, the local draymen added to the collection of complaints when a representative of the Draymen's Association appeared before the City Council and asked the officials to reduce the license for their occupation from $3 per quarter to $10 per year. It was also requested that the payment of one license be sufficient no matter how many teams were in use by individual owners.

ILLEGAL REGISTRATIONS.

A step in the investigation of the alleged illegal registrations incident to the special city election just held, was taken last night at the Council meeting, when Dist.-Atty. Frank Lamberson appeared before the city officers and after the vote had been formally canvassed, asked that an order be made of record, turning the ballots, tally sheets and registration lists over to the custody of the Superior Court. In the presence of several witnesses these records were thereupon placed in envelopes, seals were liberally plastered over the packages and the lot was then turned over to the attorney.

County Superintendent C. J. Walker, in turning over his office to Supt. Buckman, who has been prevented from assuming his duties through illness, has filed an interesting resume of school work during the past eight years he has been in the office. Quite the most significant item of his manuscript, is his statement that in the period named there have been erected fifty-two new school buildings. The total of the county now includes 111 grammar and primary schools, and seven high schools, and during the eight years, in 44 per cent. of the districts there have been additions to and changes in the housing equipment, in addition to the new buildings erected.

During the same period there have been issued school bonds in the whole county for the sum of $562,161.53, in addition to about $300,000 which has been raised by special taxation, making the total sum expended for school work and equipment slightly less than one million of dollars.

SHE RIVALS "LUM" ON INDIANS.

Woman in Government Service, With Headquarters at Santa Fe, New Mexico, and Her Studies of the Red Man's Traits.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Of the many distinguished women connected with the government ervice in every line of science, inustry and art, Mrs. Mathilda oxe Stevenson holds an hodored lace, not only because of the revrence in which her husband's memry is held, but because of her own aithful and successful work in the eld of American ethnology.

Mrs. Stevenson has devoted nearly hirty-five years to the scientific inestigation of the Indians, making the unis her especial study. Several ears ago, she published a massive olume entitled "The Zunis," the most aluable contribution to this branch f Indian lore, and the standard and uide of all who will pursue the subect still more minutely. For more than wenty years, Mrs. Stevenson spent onths among these children of the orest, and by winning their confience and inspiring their respect she ained admittance to their secret fraernities, and holds the record of beng the first white admitted to these ysterious rites. She has embodied ll these experiences in her book, and, n addition to this monumental work, lso has written many brilliant monoraphs on the religious ceremonies of he pueblo, or village-dwelling Indins of the Southwest.

During the greater part of the ear, Mrs. Stevenson lives on a anch about twenty-five miles from anta Fe, N. M. Here she studies ndian lore, and then systematizes reults in her reports to the Bureau of thnology. Just now she is passing few weeks in Washington, but will eave here the first of March for hat she calls "study in the field."

Mrs. Stevenson possesses a fund of ntertaining information about the arly days of the government's scienific ventures. She is a daughter of he late Alexander Hamilton Evans, brilliant lawyer of Washington in he antebellum days, and she is a irst cousin of Rear-Admiral Robley vans.

The Bureau of Ethnology is a branch f the Geological Survey, and as early s 1879, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson went nto the Zuni country of Western ew Mexico, on the first scientific exibition of this kind even sent out by he government. They lived for several years among the Zunis, and of his part of her life, Mrs. Stevenson as many interesting things to tell.

THE ZUNIS.

"The hostility of the Indians towards the scientific pioneers has been favorite theme with some writers, nd I have frequently read the most lood-curdling accounts of their behavior to Mr. Stevenson and myelf," says Mrs. Stevenson. "The ruth is we were treated most kindly rom the first. The Zunis are among he most fascinating of the Pueblo ndians, and they possess the noblest ualities. They did not for some time ermit us to witness their secret ervices, and they were chary about parting any kind of knowledge out themselves, their beliefs or hat they consider sacred traditions their tribes. But, by degrees, by ving among them and gradually winng their confidence and respect, we l get the most valuable information. have always taken issue with those ho think that anything is gained by inking to the level of Indian civilizaon. To dress like an Indian and live ke one immediately lowers the reect they feel for you. Acting on is, we lived in our own way and ied to introduce civilization among em. For instance, the religious rites at we were permitted after a time attend were then performed by the ght of the firewood, or a slender per dipped in grease. There was not lamp in the Zuni village when we rived. Mr. Stevenson furnished em a fine bright one to swing over e altar, which, while pleasing to the dians, served us also by giving a tter view of the altar during the remonies. Afterwards, when the ople wanted lamps for their homes, e gladly furnished them, and this ded us in getting their confidence d becoming familiar with their tra-tions.

"In my book I have faithfully rerded what I know to be the true ligious cult of the Zunis. Many inent scientific men have taken ise with me and contended that I had aced this crude race of red men on e same high spiritual plane as the cient Greeks. My reply is that I ve placed them just where I found em. I have never accepted any inrmation about their creed unless it s verified by three different witsses. My plan has been to question e priest, then a warrior or leader of e people, and than an inferior memr of the tribe. When all three gave e same version I embodied the owledge in my book, but never othwise. But I must confess that the milarity of the religious poetry of e Zunis and the Greeks made a deep pression on me throughout my rerches. Anyone who has read Rusn's exquisite book, 'The Athena of e Air,' cannot fail to see that the lated red man of the American fort has as high and poetical a conpt of the Deity as the noble race of llenes.

THEIR GODS.

"The Indian are reverent lovers of ture, and their gods are all more less connected with natural phenmena. The Sun-God is the great ity, but the sun, which gives light d heat and sends fine crops and all od things to the earth, is a great ing, who is minutely described. He s in grand majesty behind the sun, hich we see and which is his shield. e could not permit his countenance to seen by the children of men. The oon is typified the age of man. The etry. In the various changes of the oon is typified the age of man, the ender shaft of the new moon is fancy. Then the disc increases, and at is yuoth. Full and brilliant is is aturity, and then it declines to eeping age, then to infancy again, e second childhood before all mortals to their long sleep. The change is rought in the moon by the veil of e supreme deity, greater than either n or moon, which means the breath life. This supreme god veils the oon according to its changes. The unis consecrate the new-born child the Sun-God, and the infant is held toward the deity while priests ay that it may live its span of life infant, youth, man or woman, and en go back to infancy, then to sleep wake and be born again. Then the upreme diety is invoked to grant the w-born babe the breath of life that may live its span and be reborn in e Elysian fields."

Mrs. Stevenson, about ten or twelve ars ago, succeeded in getting a comete set of masks such as the Zunis ear during one of their most solemn remonials, the Council of the Gods. ese masks are exhibited in the Naal Museum, and are one of the only during the sacred rites. After negotiations extending over ten years, Mrs. Stevenson got permission for two young priests to come to her tent, a long distance from the village, and during stealthy moments at night in secret to construct the duplicates of the sacred head-pieces. There are twelve of these, and they are made with an infinite variety or religious detail. Feathers, skin dyes, everything, are prepared with religious services and with solemn prayers. Mrs. Stevenson has some entertaining views on the christianizing of the Indians.

NOT REAL CONVERTS.

"After my years of residence among them," she says, "I am convinced that no Indian of the old type ever becomes truly a Christian. They may subscribe to the forms and lead as edifying a life as the most orthodox, but down in their heart they cling to the gods of their fathers. The Indians are spiritual and poetic, but they seem to feel the paucity of just one God. They decline to give up their many deities around which are clustered the legends of centuries. It is my opinion that they simply add the Christian God to the long list, they have gotten from their fathers. I have found that their religion aids them to conquer their passions and to lead clean lives in many ways. Of course, their love of intoxicants is the besetting sin, and, if the opportunity to get liquor could be removed, it would create a new era. But this theme has been threshed out so many times and by so many publicists that I have no illumination to shed on it.

"One very interesting point about the Indians is their knowledge of plants and herbs. We read that Lister is the father of anesthetics. I can prove that the Indians in various parts of the Southwest knew the power of certain plants in the manner in which Lister first used them centuries before he was born. The Indians knew narcotics before Columbus had crossed the ocean, and their skill in vegetable dyes certainly rivals the fame of Tyre and Sidon, the most ancient emporiums from which dyed stuffs went forth to the world. I regret to say, however, that in the matter of dyeing they are fast contracting shiftless habits and now use the spurious kinds that flood the eastern market."

RENEGADE GETS ANOTHER VICTIM.

BODY OF MAN FOUND WITH HIS SKULL CRUSHED.

Coyotes Had Eaten Flesh Until Identification Was Impossible—An Empty Purse Near the Remains Indicates That Robbery Animated the Foul Deed—Deer Starve.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 4.—The body of an unidentified man, believed to have been murdered, has been found five miles south of Bouse, just across the Colorado River. Coyotes had eaten the flesh to the bones, excepting a portion of the lower limbs. The man's skull had been crushed by a blow from a club. An empty purse lying near indicates robbery as the motive. It is surmised that the deceased is a victim of the renegade, Queho. The remains have been taken into Bouse, and the coroner notified.

DEER STARVING.

That the heavy snows are causing suffering among the deer on the mountains is the report brought here today by Robert Harrow, who has just returned from Bear Valley by way of Victorville. He states that several deer have been taken into barns by ranchers, who found the little animals perishing in snowdrifts. He states that the lions and other beasts are slaughtering the helpless venison as never before.

Her personal property she left to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Louise E. Suddick of De Sota, Mo.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup and saves you about $2 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a pint bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guiaicol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"SKY PILOT" PREACHES TO THE LUMBERJACKS.

Picturesque Services in the Minnesota Woods.

"You can search me." "Go ahead." "All right." "Let her go for half an hour or so, anyhow."

Such were the greetings given the Sky Pilot when he asked permission of the Minnesota lumberjacks to hold a short gospel service acording to the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The preacher had walked several miles, carrying songs books and a Bible in a sack over his shoulder, and had arrived after supper at the lumber camp which was twenty-five miles from the nearest town and in the very heart of the northern pineries. It was Saturday night. The long log building, called the "bunkhouse," was nearly filled with the hundred men who had finished their evening meal in the cook shanty. They were happy, for the morrow was Sunday, a rest day, and for some the "wash" day.

Suddenly the loud talking ceased, and all eyes were centered on the door, where stood, for a moment, the missionary. The next minute he is inside the bunkhouse. He surmises that all his tact is necessary to secure consent to preach a sermon that night. The men are unusually excited/ the noise begins again, and the voice of the clergyman is drowned in the babel. The men are good natured, but nevertheless the preacher has to almost shout out his request for their consent to hold a brief service. Lifting his voice higher than their united efforts, he secures their attention by singing a song, and the loud talking ceases.

"I am a preacher," at which many smile, "and I want your permission to hold a song service and preach the gospel. I have some song books."

Then comes another babel of voices, some lumberjacks strongly protesting that a stag dance had been arranged for that very evening in that very bunkhouse.

"Well, friends, give me a little time before the dance."

After a little more diplomacy, the men shout: "Let her go for half an hour or so, anyhow."

Unpacking his song books and replying in happy, jovial manner to such sayings as, "Well, preacher, you've struck a tough crowd tonight. Look out for that fellow—don't give him a song book—he can't sing any more than a jackrabbit," the preacher distributes the books. The men begin to clear their throats by coughing. Some spit out their tobacco, and they are ready for operations.

"Go ahead, preacher," one cries, and soon they are nearly all singing or trying to sing, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

They sing it loud and well. In the crowd are several well-trained voices, tenor, bass, baritone, and all seem to know the hymn and enter with zest into the singing.

"That't good, men," says the sky pilot. "Let's sing No. 96." A few moments of throat clearing, and the rude building is filled with the strains of "Throw Out the Lifeline." It seems to have a message to them, and intensity is given to the song.

By this time the men are fully aroused and they ask for another song. "All right, boys, turn to 158," and a buzzing noise is heard as they find "America."

"Don't be afraid of straining your throats, boys, or hurting the roof. Just get full steam on and go ahead."

They "let her go," and the words so sweet and precious to every American surge through the rafters and out into the high pines and beyond. "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." The next song is "At the Cross." This subdues them, and they ask for more, so the following are sung: "Bringing in the Sheaves," "Sunshine in My Soul," "Are You Washed in the Blood?" Then the preacher gets tired and strikes the tune on a low key.

"Wait a minute, boys, I'm too low." "Then get on the wood pile," somebody calls. The preacher smiles and pitches the hymn in a higher tone and the song proceeds.

"Let us pray," and the preacher can hear his own heart beat as he tenderly carries these men and their burdens and joys to the Father. Thus he prays:

"Heavenly Father, our Father, we come to Thee as children. If we have strayed away from Thee bring us back; if we have forgotten Thee we know Thou hast not forgotten us. Thou art our Father and we are all brothers. Help us to love Thee and each other. Thy Son loved us unto death, help us to love Thee even until death. Bless our loved ones, keep them and keep us under Thy almighty wing and save us with an everlasting salvation. Amen."

Then the men join in saying the Lord's Prayer.

After prayer all is subdued, and the Bible is opened and read. How those men listened to the words—that Book they reverence and love.

The text is: "Whether he be a sinner or no I know not; one thing I know, whereas I was blind, now I see."

A man was born blind and Jesus gave him sight. The preacher described this scene. The men are intensely interested, and the missionary tells of men spiritually blind, who do not see the love of God until Christ opens their eyes. In joyous tones he tells of his own conversion, gives some incidents about others, tells of men who were drunkards, men who were once worse and were made self-respecting men by the man Jesus Christ. At the name of Christ Jesus the hushed reverence is greatest.

"Men, give yourselves to God through Christ," he pleads.

Another hymn is heartily sung and than the meeting is closed. "Don't go yet; let's have another song; the dance is off;" some of the men shout. So there is another session of singing, and for the last song they sing to the tune of "John Brown's Body" the sacred song, "Glory, glory, hallelujah! His truth is leaves there are many hearty responses, "Good night, preacher; come again." This sky pilot thought and still thinks that the lumberjacks are not half so bad as many people assert, and not half so bad as some who talk about them. They average up in morals with most communities.

Some of the lumberjacks look upon the preacher with "holy horror," as a thing to be admired, but to be severely left alone and of no earthly use to them. Yet the sky pilot walks from ten to twenty miles through the woods from camp to camp, sometimes becoming lost for hours in the dense woods, to preach to these men. Often he speaks three times at three different camps on the same Sunday. He carries on his back a large sack or knapsack containing song books and Bibles and sometimes papers weighing nearly a hundred pounds.

He eats with the lumberjacks, sleeps in their bunks, and is often away from his family for five months. He has all the privations of the lumber camps on paltry pay with little thanks. Near Akeley there are twenty camps, each containing from eighty-five to 125 men, a total of more than 2000 men.

Some lumberjacks come and go, but many stay in the woods all winter. The camp consists of the office, in which the contractor or logger, the clerk, the foreman and the scaler often sleep, besides doing their business. It is the headquarters of the whole camp. It is also a miniature store, where the men can buy socks, mittens, rubbers, medicines, tobacco and snuff for cash or credit. This office is a rough wooden building in two parts, one part for business and the other for sleeping. This is also the telephone office and the postoffice.

The preaching place is the bunkhouse, sometimes 125 feet long and about forty feet wide. Can I describe this place as we sung "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

It is the men's quarters, and around the sides were three tiers of bunks, in which the men sleep at nights or rest in the daytime, and in which on Sundays they write letters. These bunks are made of pine boards, four feet wide and about six feet long, with hay for bedding and heavy woollen blankets for covering. Each bunk accommodates two men. The six men were accommodated in the three bunks over each other.

In the center of the place were two heavy steel stoves, each fully six feet long. Near these were planks forming a long table for writing purposes, on which were magazines and papers. This table was used as a reading desk. This camp was in charge of the "bull cook," who sweeps it out, makes the beds, allots the men to their beds or bunks and keeps the fire hot. He also gets up first in the morning and takes the luncheon into the woods when the men are too far from camp to come home for the midday meal. He hews wood and carries water for the cooks, and is the butt of all the jokes, jibes and pranks of the men in camp. His vocation seems a thankless job. Yet this preacher found one of these men who loaned us his lamp and asked us to sing "He's the Lily of the Valley," and he sang joyously.

The cooking camp is a long wooden building, with long, narrow tables, on which are the tin plates and cans and iron knives and forks for the use of the lumberjacks. The cooking staff consists of a cook, a second cook, two cookees and the "bull cook." The cook is lord of all he surveys, and his salary is $80 per month or more and his board.

The lumberjacks get from $30 to $40, the clerk $45 and the scalers $90 monthly.

PASSING OF NEW THEATER.

GREAT NEW YORK INSTITUTION'S HEAVY LOSS.

Endowed Drama Will Give Way to Opera and Dance, It Is Said—Discussion of the Reasons for the Failure of Drama Put Upon Non-Commercial Basis.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

It is said that the New Theater of New York has lost $400,000 in two years, and that the costly edifice will not be used for the present company after this season.

There are many speculative plans. Slight remodeling of the house, and its use for the opera comique performances of the Metropolitan—whose directorate has always controlled the New Theater—is considered. The Russian ballet, which has gained a real foothold in New York, may find a permanent home there.

Thus passes the principal "high-brow" playhouse of the world.

The loss of nearly half a million dollars would scarcely give pause to the billionaire directorate, it is almost needless to say, if the theater had a real standing among the people.

But without any doubt at all, the theater has signally failed of its purpose; the establishment of a beacon-light of intellect and progressiveness among the dramatic institutions of the United States.

Why?

One could give reasons to fill two columns, but perhaps a significant human analogy may be drawn.

Why does the silver-spoon baby, born to the purple and winged to the heights on every device of wealthy imagination, so often sink into innocuous desuetude while the child of poverty, beaten down at the start by adversity and repeatedly overthrown by the same foe whenever it attempts to rise, at length gains its feet and soon leaves every competitor behind?

The fact remains that the ignorant, unwashed and inartistic manager who is base enough to run a theater for his living, in the end outclasses the high-collared, virtuous and entirely well-meaning theorist whose genius is based on ideas he got out of books or in dreams.

It is life which makes success, and human nature is so constituted that nothing but experience and continued necessity will draw out the best in a man.

The degreed young gentlemen who are endowed usually wind up in vain experiments or profound squabbles as to the legitimacy of Shakespeare's wife on her mother's side, while the humble manager who fondly thinks that Maeterlinck is the name of the new treasurer is the winning turtle in this hare-and-tortoise race.

All of which is not a discouragement of art in the box office or education in the managerial chair. Heaven knows the American theater needs both, and —thanks be!—it is beginning to get them.

—o—

Here and Elsewhere.

I am fully aware that we cannot dismiss this subject of an endowed theater by making a flat statement that only the commercial theater is successful.

It is too bad that America cannot have one great playhouse, at least, into which the commercial element doesn't enter.

The peculiar qualities and thought-trends of American life seem to me responsible for the conditions noted.

They have municipal and governmental theaters in Europe, and some of them are successes.

Undoubtedly we could have a successful endowed theater if it were run on just the right principles.

But what are those principles?

Who is going to show us just how to run it?

The fact that America is pre-eminently a commercial country, and that we have grown up with the commercial standard either consciously or unconsciously applied to everything, has seemed to militate against the endowment of any art more materialistic than music.

The unlucky young men who have attained gray hairs trying to make the New Theater a great popular success have at least shown future generations a few things which must not be done.

They meant well; they failed with honor.

—o—

Bee's Twin Puzzle.

L. E. Behymer has a friend in Yuma who is rejoicing in a pair of new twins.

One of the twins arrived on this sphere at 11:57 the evening of February 28, while the other came along tardily at 12:08, March 1.

"Now"—says the puzzled impresario —"how in the world will those kids celebrate their birthday in leap-year, or, in a word, on February 29, 1912."

—o—

Played Horse.

"What"—said a solemn assemblage of newspapermen to Oliver Morosco, the day after the return of himself and John Cort from San Diego—"did Mr. Cort do on your southern tour?"

"Let me see," returned the manager, also solemn, his hand to his brow in profound thought.

The scribes held their collective breath; and it was hard to hold, for it was powerful.

"Going and coming," said Mr. Morosco, "Mr. Cort ran two footraces with me, gave our wives an exhibition of walking around the room on his hands, played a variety of practical jokes on a group of assorted bellboys from the Coronado hotel, chased a calf down a country road with his machine, barked like a seal when in the Pacific Ocean, ate as many meals a day as possible, and at last fell down while trying to do a flip-flop on the hotel lawn."

So much for Napoleon at play.

—o—

Warde.

In these days of modern play successes, which run for three to five years, the theatrical star has little conception of the amount of study and work which the stars of other days used to go through before they were considered capable. Frederick Warde, the best living type of the actor of the school of yesterday, has the complete text of all the better-known plays of William Shakespeare engraved upon his memory, as well as a host of other plays and classic writings. Since he became an individual star in 1886, Mr. Warde has mastered the principal roles in the following dramas: "Henry IV," "Timon of Athens," "King Lear," "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Taming of the Shrew," "The Lion's Mouth," "Francasca da Rimini," "Salammbo," "The Lady of Lyons," "Gaston Cadol," "Runnymede," "Iskander," "Julius Caesar," "Othello," "Richard III," "A Winter's Tale," "The Tempest," "Virginius," "Damon and Pythias," "Galba, the Gladiator," "Richelieu," "Alexander the Great," "Belphegor, the Mountebank" and "The Duke's Jester."

Even this, however, does not fully represent his repertoire, for previous to embarking upon his stellar career, he appeared in many productions with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, John McCullough, Charlotte Cushman and Adelaide Neilson.

—o—

Sartorial Note.

Heretofore the notable but divergent elegancies of Lewis S. Stone and Artha Byron Beasley have been thought irreconcilable.

Both were complete in attire, of 1912 model and matinearly irresistible. But there was acute differences.

The human Farnkenstein who combines the originalities of both has at last made his appearance.

If either Mr. Stone or Mr. Beasley misses articles of apparel of any description, we recommend that he get outa search warrant for Beanie Walker.

In the past two months Mr. Walker has been accumulating the joyous raiment of both of these famous gentlemen. Now, when he walks abroad, he disports the eBasley cravat, the Stone hat, the Beasley gaiters and the Stone coat—and it is rumored that beneath his silken exterior may be found a Dave Hartford shirt and a pair of Charles Ruggles galluses.

Shining Exception.

"The Bachelor's Baby," the one shining exception to the line of miserable failures exuded by eminent actors, when they try to write plays, approaches the Mason Operahouse.

I would not say that Francis Wil-why "The Campus" has broken all stock records? This dozen of characteristically illogical reasons may not wholly account for its success, but certainly pulchritude has gone a long way. Walter De Leon's melodic comedy is in its third month at the Grand Operahouse.

The Week.

"ARCADIANS" AT MASON.

WARDE IN SHAKESPEARE AT THE HAMBURGER MAJESTIC.

"The City," First Time in Stock, by the Burbank Company—Belasco Revival of Favorite "Road to Yesterday"—"Campus" Continuance Vaudeville Programmes.

Tomorrow night at the Mason operahouse "The Arcadians" will receive its first Los Angeles hearing. It is not unlikely that this play will be able to add the eulogy of this city's theater-goers to its list, which includes praise from New York, London, Chicago, and other cities thus far visited.

In London at the Shaftesbury Theater, the play ran for over two years, a run similarly scored in New York City. It is quite singular that the company presenting the play in the West is almost the identical one that was seen at the New York theater, and when in Los Angeles, it will have completed the first lap of its transcontinental tour, which as routed, will be the longest tour ever played by so big an organization. Besides the array of principles, Mr. Frohman has not overlooked the chorus, and realizing the importance of them in the musical comedies, he paid particular attention in the selecting of the members of "The Arcadian" chorus.

Among the principal members of the company are Gilbert Childs, in the role of Peter Doody, the jockey. He is the same player who was seen at the don and was imported by Mr. Frohman along with several other members to appear in the piece in America. Johnny Osborne, who has the role of Smith, or Simplicitas, as he is called after his dip in the "well of truth" by the Arcadians for falsifying, proves himself a comedian of attainments. The vocal stars of the company are Ruth Thorpe, Alice Russon and Moya Mannering.

Frederick Warde, who is one of the best-known exponents of the Shakespearean drama in this country, will open a week's engagement at the Hamburger Majestic Theater tonight, when he will present a special production of Shakespeare's most popular tragedy, "Julius Caesar." This masterpiece has not been seen in this city in some years, but it has a story that is familiar to every reader and student of history, and contains so much beautiful sentiment, philosophy, poetry and action, that it appeals more to the general theater-going public than any of the great bard's other plays. Mr. Warde has been identified for many years with the character of Marc Antony, but on this occasion will be seen as the noble Brutus. The two characters are so widely different that it will be an interesting study to note Mr. Warde's interpretation, especially as it is always his aim not to follow in the footsteps of others, but to recreate each character he plays from his own conception. Ernest C. Warde, the youngest son of the tragedian, will appear as the "lean and hungry Cassius," he of the fiery and untamed nature, who conceived and executed what was probably the greatest murder in the world's history. This is one of the most difficult of all Shakespearean roles, but young Warde has won great praise for his impersonation. Andrew Rogers will appear as Marc Antony, Edouard D'Oize as Julius Caesar, John Burke as Casca, Miss Fredeŗika Going as

The other characters will be in the hands of a large company. A handsome scenic production is promised.

"The City," generally recognized to be the strongest of all the numerous legacies which Clyde Fitch left to his public, is the next play to be given its first stock presentation at the Burbank. Beginning this week, when this gripping modern drama will be given, there will be matinees at the Burbank every Thursday. Another point of interest attaching to this production is that in it Miss Suzanne Willa will make her first appearance at the Burbank as ingenue, and will play the same part in "The City" as she did with the traveling company which appeared earlier this season at the Majestic.

"The City" is rated as the leading Fitch play because of its tremendous power. In it Fitch directed all that wonderful technique, which he used with such consummate art in his earlier comedies, to gripping his audiences, instead of merely tickling their fancy. The story is the chronicle of the Rand family. The elder Rand has made a success of business in a small town, but has resisted all the appeals of his family to move to New York. He dies suddenly, and his family, relieved of this restraint, goes to the city. It is followed by the family skeleton, in the form of a degenerate, illegitimate son of the elder Rand. This youth knows he has some hold on the family though he does not understand its source, and his presence proves a bar to the political ambitions of Rand, finally developing a domestic tragedy the utter terribleness of which has seldom been approached in the drama, even by the ruthless Greeks.

A. Byron Beasley will be seen as the younger Rand and Charles Ruggles as the degenerate half-brother. The remainder of the cast will be filled by Peter Lang, David Landau, Frank Camp, Willis Marks, Frederick Gilbert, Elizabeth Stewart, Grace Travers, Suzanne Willa and Louise and others of the Belasco Company will this week offer an unusually sumptuous revival of that very delightful romantic comedy, "The Road to Yesterday." Miss Rambeau in particular will find splendid opportunities for some of her best work, while Mr. Stone in the role of Jack Greaterox will have one of the best parts that has come to him for a long while. Scenically, "The Road to Yesterday" will be found to be among the best of Artist Brunton's recent creations, while in the matter of costuming, the production will leave nothing to be desired.

The story revolves around 18-year-old Elspeth Tyrell, who, with her aunt, is visiting Will Leveson and his wife in London. Leveson is an artist and happens to have his friend, Jack Greaterox, in seventeenth century costume posing for him. Elspeth is a high strung girl with vivid imaginations, and this coming in contact with Jack in his costume gives her nerves a shock that is increased by the stories of Irish fables told by an old servant. "What's wished on a midsummer eve," she says, "must hold till midsummer eve comes again." Elspeth becomes so overwrought that she is made to lie down and rest until time for midnight supper. Before going to sleep she wishes she could go back to the old time, when there were heroes and heroines. Her wish comes true. She awakes to find herself back in the seventeenth century in the days of romance, and here is where the action and scenes of the play partake of the fantastic.

Following "The Road to Yesterday" the Belasco Company will offer, for the first time in the entire West, "The Deserters," Helen Ware's recent New York success. The Belasco production will be made by special arrangement with Henry B. Harris, and the local organization is the first stock coma strong vein of comedy runnin throughout the four acts.

Ferris Hartman and his compan will this afternoon commence the tent week in Walter De Leon's musica comedy, "The Campus." With th tenth week "The Campus" will equa the longest run that has ever bee achieved by a stock organization i America, and will exceed the number o performances by two, which really establishes a new record for stock company runs.

On next Friday night the one hundredth performance of this play will b given and for this occasion the management has prepared a suitable souvenir for every person attending. Th new costumes, the several new song and the new scenery have added muc to the play and make it well worth seeing for a second time. It cannot be denied that many persons have visited th Grand Operahouse several times during the run of this play.

Right from London, with a wealth o jewels that her multi-millionaire husband showered upon her to enhanc her beauty; with a wardrobe that i the creation of the highest titled modiste in the world; with furs sought i vain by the Czarina of Russia, come Fannie Ward to head the new Orpheun bill opening with the Monday matinee Miss Ward has never been this f west before, and only once hither has she toured this country, but she h been a petted favorite of Englis royalty for some time, and in one play her London engagement was a yea and a half. It will thus be easily realized in her case that it is not mer clothes that make the actress, but tha she is a very clever player of hig ability, in spite of the most gorgeou garb, and that even as she pleases th eye with a sartorial display, she delights the mind with her skill in stagecraft. Miss Ward has a selected coterie of players with her, and her tab-

Singly, and with them, she uts forth a choice collection of song, atter and merriment, and the act is hus differentiated from the "single" irl, or the usual quartette.

The Reed brothers are on a return ip with their comedy novelty gymastics. Strength, daring and high kill are the keynotes even of their ost comical stunts.

For another week, that highlyverting satire on autoing, "Motorg," remains, as do Mme. Vallecita d her thrilling act with her trained opards, Maxim's fine models in ainting impersonations, and John eff and Carrie Starr. New motion ctures of a startling character are omised.

A comedy bill from start to finish ill be the offering at the Hyman for e coming week. If past performces are any criterion seats will be a premium, for this house plays capacity matinee and night every y.

There will be a spirited race for adline position between two of the ts on the programme, for they seemgly do the same things, while, in ality, there is nothing in common tween them. They both do talking, nging and dancing, but each lends e stamp of originality to their oferings, so that they do not conflict in e least. In fact, their similarity only centuates the good points for each. The two acts in question are own and Willmant and the act of son and Tolon. These present a endid illustration of how four people utilize singing, dancing and talking and, appearing upon the same bill and each gain unstinted applause without affecting the popularity of the other.

Lester Raymond presents an acrobatic juggling act that is full of novelty and originality. He puts on trick after trick made possible only by his agility. He is said to be the youngest juggler in the world doing a single act.

A clever character comedian, George Harrison, will present his idea of a typical wooden-shoe "Dutchman." Harrison is a splendid dancer and, in his Dutch make-up, tells funny stories in a dialect that gets the good will of the audience.

The three first-run pictures will be up to the usual standard of excellency maintained by this house.

Lillian May Lancaster's Orchestra, directed by Miss Bessie Hardy, will present some of the latest eastern successes.

The programme at Tally's New Broadway Theater, beginning Monday, will include "A Decree of Destiny," Biograph drama from life; "Vanity and Its Cure," a motion-picture comedy; "Ma Embarrassed," and "After the Boxing Bout," two film farces, "Jealousy Foiled," a melodrama; "The Tramp's Find," and "Forbidden Cigarettes," two more cinematograph farces.

Miss Montgomery and Cehy. Albert Guille will be heard in a new musical programme.

With Mabel McKinley, one of the most popular singers on the vaudeville stage today, and Wilfred Clark with an excellent company, presenting the merry farce, "What Will Happen Next," as the particular features, Sullivan and Considine will open a new bill of seven acts at the Los Angeles Theater tomorrow afternoon. Miss McKinley will be favorably remembered for her previous appearance here. Her singing has been one of the features for several years past and this season she is appearing in an entirely new repertoire, among which are several of her latest and best compositions.

Wilfred Clarke, who is well known throughout the country, by reason of his many years in the legitimate field and who may be remembered as a leading comedian with such well-known stars as Barry Sullivan, Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Augusta Daly and Ada Rohen is appearing in the best laugh-producing vehicle which he has had.

The fun firm of Lester and Kellett will be prominent among the newcomers. Their act is designed purely for fun-making purposes and is a conglomeration of patter, talk and songs. This team has scored heavily all over the circuit.

Emily Dodd and company will bring to the Los Angeles stage a tabloid drama, "The Awakening of Lucille." This is purely a dramatic sketch and one which gives Miss Dodd fine opportunities to display her capacity for emotional acting.

Fred and Elsa Pendleton have a musical act, which should appeal strongly. Their programme carries enough of the classical "high brow," and at the same time enough of the popular melodies to prove highly pleasing to those who prefer music of the lively and catchy variety.

Completing the new bill will be The Rosaires, in a clever and graceful exhibition on the tight wire, and the new comedy motion pictures.

There are four novelties in the bill of eight new vaudeville acts to be presented at Pantages for the week starting tomorrow. On account of the limited number of trained sea lions before the public, the engagement of Capt. Tiebor and his troupe of five mammoth beasts is an interesting event. The sea lions have been taught to accomplish a number of remarkable tricks, remarkable from the fact that it has been heretofore thought impossible to teach such animals anything, yet Tiebor's sea lions play football, play upon musical instruments; juggle lighted batons and do other equally astonishing feats.

The Bottomly troupe of five aerial performers accomplish in mid-air the same routine of tricks that the average acrobat and gymnast accomplishes upon the ground. It is one of those thrilling numbers accomplished by graceful athletes.

Emil Hoch and a capable company from the legitimate stage will present a diverting comedy, "M'lle Ricci." It tells the story of a father's and mother's objection to the marriage of their son and how that objection is finally overcome by the witcheries of the girl in the case. It abounds in many laughable situations and has the aid of some special scenery and costumes.

The Swedish Ladies' trio are making their debut in vaudeville, but have been a standard attraction upon the concert and lyceum stage for a number of seasons. They sing folk songs in German, English and Swedish, and are heard in solos and concerted numbers.

Curry and Riley, comedians and clog dancers; Turrelly, a talented musician, who plays grand opera airs upon a number of odd-appearing musical instruments; M'lle Ethelea and Girls in songs, dances and acrobatics, and new motion pictures, complete the Pantages feast of good things.

How many novels of our day remain in the public favor for forty years? Henry Holt and Company are just having to send to press for the fourteenth time Berthold Auerbach's masterpiece, "The Villa on the Rhine," which they first issued over forty years ago. They will signalize this new son's effort reaches greatness, but it is wholesome, intensely human and highly entertaining. Or at least so say "them that have saw it."

With many a clever epigram, the comedian tells of a bachelor possessed of an extreme dislike for children, who is made to turn about-face by a prepossessing little youngster. The little one's father was his dead brother, and he has been left her sole guardian. The trust far from appeals to him, but by a trick he is made to meet the child, and in the end his capitulation is absolute.

—o—

Mrs. Fiero.

Demonstrating unusual versatility and quite realizing thetwo characters she played, Mrs. Alexander Fiero gave two readings before 100 invited guests of Walter H. Pritchar, in Mr. Pritchard's Pasadena studio last week.

Mrs. Fiero has put the characters of Carmen and the Second Mrs. Tanqueray into monologues, and though she has cut both her interprettaions to bring them within the time ordinarily allotted to a vaudevilleact, she has sucquality and spirit of the originals. Carmen was given in costume, and incidentally Mrs. Fiero interpolated a little dance, with Bizet's music.

—o—

Beauty's Bath.

Twenty girls of "The Arcadians" company found the waters of Santa Barbara just the proper temperature last Friday, and the beach strollers were delighted to see a score of shapely mermaids suddenly emerge from the bath-house and plunge into the curling breakers.

The aquatics were of short duration, but they were lively while they laster, and the sea was nearly frightened out of its accustomed place by this unexpected feminine onslaught.

—o—

Gertrude Elliott.

Gertrude Elliot will be seen here soon at he Majestic, presenting Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's play, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." Miss Elliott will come direct from her Chicago engagement at he Grand Operahouse.

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" might be called a modern sermon of belief in the Higher Power, but it is far from being so as the term is generally understood. It is a stage story of vivid color and ramatic strength. But it teaches optimism and it tells of the underlying good in human nature.

Did the Impossible.

"The late Admiral Read," said a Washington naval official, "owed his great success to his ingenuity. He would, in fact, undertake and carry through the impossible.

"Admiral Read, at a naval banquet, was once talking to some young officers about the strength and beauty of the arch. He took an egg from a basket, and, holding it aloft, he said:

"'Notice this egg's arch. Nothing could be prettier. Nothing, if you set it right, could be stronger. Why, gentlemen, I can set this egg on the floor in such a manner that you couldn't break it with a half-bushel measure.'

"The young officers demurred. A stout, iron-bound half-bushel measure was brought it. The admiral at once showed his almost inhuman ingenuity by placing the egg in a corner where the measure couldn't reach it.

"'You can't fill a square corner with a round measure,' said the young offi-

Life Insurance or Death Insurance---Which?

People willingly pay large sums for life insurance, which is really death insurance; but real life insurance frequently consists in taking Eckman's Alterative. Can any "lung sick" person afford not to take the Alterative?

It sharpens the appetite, makes life look different, brings better health with greater earning power. Often persons are so much improved that they can work even before they are finally cured.

Investigate it, if you are broad minded enough to believe that there can be a cure for Consumption which has not been sensationally exploited, or which is not based merely on climatic or diet restrictions. Mr. Webb's report follows:—

Weldon, Ill.

Gentlemen: "During 1905, my physician sent me to Texas, from there to Colorado. I became worse and was sent home to die. I heard of Eckman's Alterative, began treatment, and was cured. I earnestly recommend Eckman's wonderful cure for Consumption."

(Signed Affidavit) ARTHUR WEBB.

Eckman's Alterative cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever; Throat and Lung Affections. For sale by The Owl Drug Co., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

THE Mardi Gras ball, given at the Potter Hotel Tuesday night for the benefit of the Neighborhood House, was such a notable success that plans are now being considered for its repitition a year hence. It was one of the jolliest balls of the present season; a reminder of the festival times and made so by the genius of its managers, and the spirit of charity which pervaded it. If the evening was one of delight it was also one of mystery; and the most delightful surprises came at the unmasking at 10:30 o'clock, when the identity of the graceful and beautifully attired queen was revealed in the person of Henry S. Gane and the king, Samuel P. Calef. Among the striking figures and costumes were: Mrs. C. H. Hopkins as an Egyptian princess, Mrs. R. H. Channing, Jr., as a shepherdess, Miss Campbell in a butterfly costume, Miss Joseph de la Guerra, in a Spanish Carmen costume, Miss John Edward Beale as a Yama-Yama girl, Miss Nina Jones in a Periot, Miss Merian Edwards as a Dutch lassie, Miss Eugenie de Sabla of San Francisco, as a Spanish maid, Miss Margaret Edwards in a grandmother dress with poke bonnet and shawl, Mrs. Edwin H. Sawyer in a man's golf costume, Miss Delfina Dibblee as a Japanese maid, Miss Spaulding in a colonial gown, Mrs. E. P. Ripley as a mandarin, Mrs. H. M. A. Postley as a nun, Miss Chamberlain as a Dutch girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Jr., entertained Wednesday evening at their Montecito home, Inellen. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCann, Mr. and Mrs. Saunderson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis T. Underhill and Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Beale.

A RECENT wedding united in marriage Miss Jessie Dunblane Henderson, daughter of Lewis Henderson of Kelseyville, to Harry Hall Church of Covina. The ceremony was performed in the parlors of the North Congregational Church of Berkeley, of which her sister, Mrs. F. W. Dorn, is a member, by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Henderson. The rooms had been beautifully decorated, banked with evergreens and ferns, and with urns and jardinieres of magnolia blossoms and carnations. The bride was daintily gowned in white accordion-pleated chiffon over silk, and carried a mass of pink carnations. In her hair were orange blossoms that Mr. Church had brought from his Covina ranch. To the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, beautifully rendered by Miss Grace Hendricks, the bridal party entered—the bride on the arm of her father. After the ceremony, and the good wishes and congratulations had been extended, all sat down to a delicious luncheon, and a pleasant and informal hour was spent. Shortly after, Mr. and Mrs. Church slipped away to prepare to take a steamer for San Diego, where they will spend their honeymoon, after which they will continue their journey to the groom's old home in Nevada, where the romance began when Miss Henderson was a teacher there.

For many years, Mr. Church lived in Southern Nevada with his parents, who were pioneers of that State, where they still have interests. He has always taken great interest in public affairs, having recently been an Assemblyman in the Nevada State Legislature. He has also taken a prominent part in developing the irrigation and agricultural interests in Nevada and was instrumental in procuring a government station, which has proved of great value to that section.

The Diamond Store of Los Angeles

Sterling Silver Tableware in Colonial Pattern

The Madam Morris—a new pattern in sterling silver tableware, a pattern exquisitely simple and characteristic of that charming era—the Colonial period.

By the deft use of the "Bead and Reel" ornamentation revival of the "Georgian" period is revealed.

Originally the classic "Bead and Reel" ornament was used as the decorative motif during the latter half of the Eighteenth Century, notably in furniture and interior decorations.

This new pattern was named after the famous beauty—Mary Philipse who became the wife of Col. Roger Morris, a noted Tory of the time.

We offer complete lines of this tableware, being of heavy sterling silver, makes a most substantial and artistic pattern to buy and as usual our prices are very reasonable.

RUTH GARTLAND

chosen by JOHN CORT for an important role in Mrs. Leslie Carter's next play.

At one moment she was merely an obscure but ardently ambitious student---the next she was a successful young actress who had "arrived," for when the quickly critical eye of the Foremost Figure in the Theatrical World fell upon her she was instantly tendered an important engagement in the great production Mr. Cort is to make next season for Mrs. Leslie Carter, who is a Cort star.

Mr. Cort is So Sure of the Egan Dramatic School that he has made it the recruiting station for all his future productions.

Every year he will Personally give a Gold Medal to the most deserving student.

How many more aspiring Ruth Gartlands are there in Los Angeles, only awaiting the opening of the golden door of Opportunity?

ONE of the smartest affairs of the week was the dinner party followed by an evening at cards given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Munro Thursday evening. The affair was given by the losing contestants in the winter whist tournament as a forfeit. The members of the winning side in response to rhymed invitations assembled at a given point on Buena Vista avenue, where an improvised tallyho awaited them. By a circuitous route they were taken to the Munro's foothill home, where they were hospitably received. At 6 o'clock the club members sat down to tables resplendent with zeautiful appointments and prettily decorated in a red color scheme. After the delicious turkey dinner cards were the diversion. The settlement of the score will be chronicled in the club's annals as one of the most delightful events of the season. Covers at dinner were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Radebaugh, Mr. and Mrs. William Beardslee, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Shrode, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Munro, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Tuesday afternoon the ladies of the Duarte Reading Circle met with Mrs. E. A. Moore. The readings from "Clever Betsey" were humorous in vein, and while the readings were in progress the club members employed the time with fancy work. Four o'clock tea was served during the social hour. The circle now numbers thirty-two members, and the dues are used for the purchase of new books which, after being read in the circle, are presented to the Duarte school library.

The aged lady was generously showered wtih congratulations and good wishes, and as a souvenir of the occasion was presented with a handsomely bound volume. Sprays of acacia and California poppies were used with artistic effect in the living-room. In the dining-room the same color was used in all the appointments. The Charming Individuality of Our New

Spring Millinery

Awakens a Desire for Closer Acquaintance

MEN laugh at women when they talk of a "love of a hat," yet the woman would be hard-hearted indeed who would not succumb to the captivating pesonality of these Millinery debutantes for the Spring of 1911.

When you have chosen one of these fascinating models you feel it is in very truth your own—exclusive—artistic! A hat which lends to your own face the charming witchery it has stolen from, perhaps, a stern warrior of old, a barbaric princess or a picturesque gondolier, for Fashion has appropriated anything that chanced to strike her fancy of vivid colorings, odd designs and marvelous fabrics with a reckless disregard of previous environment.

The daintiest of greens shade through apple and foliage shades to the deep empire hue, while cerise, cherry and coral reds are great favorites even to the cabachons and other ornaments of real coral.

ACTIVITIES OF LOCAL WOMANDOM.

On Wednesday, March 8, the women of Cosmos Club will give an elaborate reception and musicale at the Ebell Clubhouse, in honor of Miss Edna Darch, the talented young Los Angeles musician. Some of the prominent musicians of the city will give numbers. Mrs. Fred A. Stephenson, Arthur Amsden Marcuda, Miss Howard, Mrs. Eugene E. Davis, Charles Ward, Mrs. Stanley Ross Fisher and Miss Harriet James are among the artists who will participate. A ladies' trio, Mrs. Eliot Bank, Mrs. Henry Wiltse and Miss Louise Beattie, will sing several numbers, and the Federation Quartette, Edward C. Boynton, Arthur A. Macurdo, Horatio Cogsworth and Edward J. Dykstra, will assist. A large number of invited guests will enjoy the concert.

Y.W.C.A Conference at Capitola

The annual conference of the Pacific Coast section of the Y.W.C.A. will be held this year from March 25 to April 9, at Capitola. This is an event which brings together a large number of earnest young women for sessions which are full of inspiration and uplift. The plans announced for the coming conference promise unusual benefit and enjoyment to those fortunate enough to attend. The mornings of the nine days are devoted to conferences of workers and classes on Bible and mission study and to technical help in methods; the afternoons are given up to social life and entertainment. Among the speakers and leaders of the conference are Rev. J. Wilmer Gresham of San Francisco, L. Wilbur Messer, general secretary of Chicago Y.M.C.A.; President Francis J. McConnell of DePauw University, Indiana; Miss A. Caroline MacDonald, general secretary of the Y.W.C.A. of Japan, and Miss Bertha Conde, formerly of Los Angeles, now one of the secretaries of the national board. Rev. William Horace Day of the First Congregational Church, this city, will conduct classes on the social teachings of Jesus, and Miss Mary Cunningham of Occidental will give a course in Bible study.

The total expense of attendance will be $15 for the nine days, $5 for programme fee and $10 for board and lodging, while the railroads will give a reduced fare.

Y.W.C.A.

A glance at the weekly calendar of the Y.W.C.A. shows that the beautiful home of the association on Hill street is a bee hive of activity from 9 in the morning till 9, or later, at night, six days in the week. Aside from the educational classes, which enable ambitious girls to study everything from correct English and typewriting to the history of the French revolution and Shakespeare, there are lectures and entertainments daily; thirteen clubs of girls are associated with the girls' branch, and numerous other clubs of the older members are active in various directions.

Just at present most of these clubs are engaged in a merry chase after dollars to be used in sending delegates to the Capitola conference. The lucky girl chosen will be expected to repay her sponsors by bringing back the inspiration and information gained to be shared by all her fellows. The Victoria Club gave a very pretty little comedy, "A Virginia Heroine," a Civil War episode, from the womanly side—there was no hero in the play. Under the direction of Miss Maud Howell, it was well staged and the actors showed careful study and some of them talent. The proceeds will be devoted to paying the expenses of a delegate to Capitola. The Adelphia, Ayuda, Hermosa, Wistaria, Mizpah and Boneka (Be kind) clubs, also have plans afoot for the same purpose.

A lively contest between the membership clubs is striving to increase the membership enrollment to 7000 before the next meeting of the national convention in April. If they succeed Los Angeles will continue to lead the United States in point of numbers.

The vesper service Sunday afternoon will be led by Miss Michi Wakai, a charming little woman who is connected with the Y.W.C.A. work in Japan. This meeting is followed by a tea with strangers in the city. On Thursday evening, March 9, Dr. Burdette will give one of his characteristic talks, "Little Mary Ann." This is for the benefit of the library and religious work department.

Cliff Dwellers.

Long Beach members of the Cliff Dwellers' Association will entertain the members of the club and guests on Tuesday, March 7, with a luncheon and musical programme. Among the hostesses of the occasion will be Mrs. George R. Barndollar, Mrs. Anna Martin, Mrs. F. D. Morrison, Mrs. Clay H. White and Mrs. A. M. Lipsey.

Wednesday Morning Club.

Mrs. Robert J. Burdette's lecture on "Personal Power," given before this club on Wednesday morning, furnished her listeners with food for serious thought. After the lecture a delightful social hour and luncheon was enjoyed by a large number of women. The hostesses for the day were Mrs. H. E. Brett, Mrs. F. A. Christy, Mrs. H. R Thomas and Miss Alice Snyder.

Wednesday mornings during March will be devoted to the study of King Henry IV, with Mrs. H. E. Brett as leader. Very thorough and enjoyable work is being done in these weekly classes, and they are attracting many students of Shakespeare. Each Wednesday afternoon the choral class, under the guidance of Fred B. Ellis devotes an hour to study and practice, and the members feel that they are gaining much from the work. March 8, at 2:30 p.m., current events will be discussed, Mrs. Jane Beattie leading. March 15, at 2:30 p.m., Prof. Warman will give another of his vital health talks. March 22, the afternoon session will be given to a musical programme, and on the 29th Mrs. Eleanor Bingham will lecture on "The Story of the Holy Grail." John S. McGroarty is announced as speaker for a benefit, the date of which is not yet selected, the money to be devoted to the building fund.

Council of Jewish Women.

An interesting programme was enjoyed by a large number of members and friends of the Council of Jewish Women at their monthly meeting, in B'nai B'rith Temple, Thursday afternoon. An appreciative paper on the poems of Eugene Field was read by Miss Ida Schwab. This was followed by a discriminating review of "The Jew in Literature," by Mrs. Addie R. Altman. She traced the history of literature as it developed, from older writers down to the present, giving some account of Spinoza, Heine, Moses Luzzatto, Disraeli, Bernstein and Zangwill, and showing the powerful influence, which the Jewish authors have exercised in the literature of all nations. Among other modern writers she spoke of the work of Miss Emma Wolff, author of "Other Things Being Equal," "The Heir to Yesterday," and other popular novels. Miss Wolff is a sister of the president of Los Angeles section, Mrs. Ben Goldman.

FRESH LITERATURE—BOOK REVIEWS.

By Willard Huntington Wright.

LITERARY VIVISECTION.

IE NEW MACHIAVELLI. By H. G. Wells. Duffield & Co. (Price $1.35.)

ET us grab haphazard at the novels this morning. It seems almost impossible to make any headway the pile of books that confronts me or no sooner do I dispose of a few an new ones take their places.

We will start with a good one, "The ew Machiavelli," by H. G. Wells. ere we have the frank, stark story the life of an English statesman. e follow Richard Remington from s early childhood, through his edutional career, his days at Cambridge, s continental life, his service as a ember of Parliament, his unfortute marriage and the tragic passion hich tore the mantle of fame and nor from him and brought him into grace and exile—a fate like that of famous Italian from whom the ok takes its name.

There is nothing sentimental in ells's story. On the contrary, his visection of Remington is as ruths and as detached from human symthy as a scientific laboratory analy- of a rabbit. If there is a criticism make of Wells's frank and fearless thod of writing, it is that he is too dly scientific. At times we lose ht of the fact that Remington is, ter all, a human being.

Since Dickens there has been no iter of note in England who has ght his material from the ranks m which Wells draws his characs. We have had only the extremes. glish fiction has either centered nd the high rollers encountered in s. Humphry Ward's commonplace s and in the Bensonian yarns of e-blooded seductions; or, at the oth- extreme, it has embraced the tracts uch writers as Philpotts and Thom- Hardy, who devoted their pages to analysis of Devonshire swine.

ells has hit the middle ground. if his attitude is that of the biolo- it is not for us to complain too ily. It is far preferable to the udlin sentiment of Dickens, who ghed a man's morality, not by the s of inductive criminology, but on amount he contributed to the sup- t of orphans.

rsonally, I would not give three of lls's books for all of Dickens's. You me I am an imbecile—but I pay attention to you. You inform me t Dickens is a greater artist than lls—but I pay no attention to you. You roar with derision; you guffaw at perversion of taste—but still I pay attention to you. Wells entertains and Dickens doesn't. And if there any other valid excuse in writing the lady or gentleman with an idea will kindly step forward take the platform.

NOBLE JAMES.

ROOT OF EVIL. By Thomas Dixon, Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. $1.50.)

AVING recommended to you Wells's first-rate book, we will descend to the lowest literary of modern fiction, "The Root of " by that mad mullah of melo-, that arch-vulgarian, that toreaof theological sanctity, Thomas Jr.

is fictional homiletic is so incon- atrocious, so downright abom-, so unspeakably cheap that it inates. We find in it a terrible un- ly combination of a Moody gos- diatribe and a Diamond Dick thril-. The terrible and blood-curdling s of marrying for money are lur- set forth for us in absurd and eloquent phrases, ponderous mor- titudes, and descriptions designed make the cold shivers cavort down spinal column and to turn the epi- into goose-flesh. Take it from there has been nothing like it since Smith breathed his last—the only ence being that this narrative is up on nearly every other page the Reverend Thomas mouths theological spleen.

LEVER. By William Dana Orcutt. & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)

the oysters that responded the call of the walrus and the ter, the novels leap thick and the presses.

Townsend Brady is again in with a novel of naive which he calls "The Better The story is surcharged with sanctity, and tells of the do- clergymen—one the pastor able church and the other a worker in the slums. How they both fall in love with the same woman; how they take opposite stands in the fight of labor and capital; and how they rival each other for a bishopric—these are the principal features of a book which makes for tedious reading.

In George Waldo Brown's "Ruel Durkee" we are given the picture of a political boss who, it seems, is an altruist as well. The book is conventional to a degree of exasperation.

More reform is encountered in "The Garden of Fate," by Roy Norton. The book is a loose-jointed narrative of a Moroccan holy war. There are some Americans in the story to give it a familiar touch. And on the whole the book moves swiftly.

A book doomed to failure is "The Great Diamond Pipe," by John Buchan. It is a novel almost entirely devoid of women and love-making. The hero is a young dare-devil of Scottish blood who, while only a youngster, had beat it for the Transvaal, got mixed up in a Kaffir uprising and had many hair-breadth escapes and incredible experiences. The book is a sort of grown-up juvenile.

A trite and somewhat simple-minded tale is "The Town and the Trust." Patten is too naif to make his novel interesting, and the expected happens with such unvarying regularity that it is almost impossible to get up any interest in the matter. We have had too many times before in fiction the fight of an honest newspaper against the grasping trust which wishes to hornswaggle the city out of unfair franchises, and it has long since become a wearying affair.

Another book which adheres closely to all the rules is "The Lever," by William Dana Orcutt. The weather is a little cold for this kind of summer reading just at present, but there may be some who would like to follow the career of the noble young hero who spurns the diplomatic service offered him by his father and starts out as a humble, but honest book-agent, climbing rapidly to dizzy financial heights. A preposterous yarn!

A book evidently designed to prove the depressing fact that love is not conducive to works of genius is "The Eagle's Feather," by Emily Post. If Jan was really such a great dramatist he should have known better than to think that making omelets with the beautiful Vera was going to further the parturition of his masterpiece. We hear a great deal of fine talk about what love does for art. But believe it not, ye unsophisticated. Love is a game that requires all of one's attention, and there is no time for poetry, novel-writing, composing, clay modeling, or water-coloring while the game is on. And Jan found it out. If Vera hadn't died, Jan's drama probably never would have been written.

HISTORICAL AND OTHERWISE.

CROSS AND DAGGER. By William Scott Durant. John Lane Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)
THE SEA HAWK. By Bailey Millard. Wessells & Bissells Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)
PEOPLE OF POSITION. By Stanley Portal Hyatts. Wessells & Bissells Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

ABLOOD-curdling yarn of the horrors of the thirteenth century in Europe is "Cross and Dagger," by William Scott Durant. Gore fairly oozes from the pages of this book, and the accounts of how youths and maidens were sold as slaves and tortured, will fill your nocturnal hours with horror.

Let us get into a more rarefied atmosphere. We find it in "The Sea Hawk," by Bailey Millard, a semi-sea tale of pearl fishing on the west coast of America. A sense of romance and clean excitement combine to make this story interesting. There are thrilling episodes galore, and bloody encounters with Mongolians. A rubber stamp love-story is thrown in for flavoring. Millard's meteorology is good, and occasionally we can sniff the tang of the sea.

An empty attempt at moral muck-raking is Stanley Portal Hyatts's "People of Position." The author-reformer seems to think that people of position are neither broad-minded nor sufficiently charitable, and he has written a book to prove it. Pifflish flubdub!

SWASHBUCKLING.

KEITH OF THE BORDER. By Randall Parrish. A. C. McClurg, Chicago. (Price $1.50.)

WE will now go West and breathe clearer air. "Keith of the Border," by Randall Parrish, attempts no problems or literary innovations. It makes no endeavor to solve any of life's problems or to point the way toward the alleviation of the sufferings of human existence. It is frankly and shamelessly of the dime-novel variety, and there isn't a character or a situation that we have not met many a time in our boyhood days, when Jesse James and Buffalo Bill were making pioneer history. Not once does the unexpected happen in this thrilling drama of Arizona. But we read on just the same, and learn how the Indians massacred the whites; how the lynching parties were organized; how the gamblers won and lost their fortunes; how the bronchos bucked, and how the beetle-browed desperadoes were thwarted and punished by the brave and fearless Achilleses of the plains.

Hackneyed rubbish, you say? Perhaps. But what a thrill there is in it!

TWO OF A KIND.

THE END OF DREAMS. By Wood Levette Wilson. Mitchell Kennerly, New York. (Price $1.50.)
NIGHTSHADE. By Paul Gwynn. John Lane Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

TWO fantastic literary fowls come next. Both are incredible and absurd. Both belong to the extravagant pseudo-psychical type.

"The End of Dreams," by Wood Levette Wilson, deals puerilely with a double personality—a Jekyll and Hyde affair. "Nightshade," by Paul Gwynn, relates amateurishly of a theosophical hero whose eyes are affected by the rays beyond the violet.

In the one, the hero, after stealing jewels and accomplishing other nefarious tricks, at the last conquers the immoral side of his nature and wins the lady of his heart.

The other book is somewhat more complicated and metaphysical. The hero loves two women—one whom he cannot see because his eyes don't operate in the daytime, and the other whom he is only capable of visualizing in the dark, by the aid of an ultra-purple lantern.

Absurd affairs, both!

WELL-INTENTIONED.

THE SCOURGE. By Warrington Dawson. Small, Maynard Company, Boston. (Price $1.50.)

ABOOK which makes a valiant and almost grandiloquent attempt to be what the lady critics of the literary monthlies are in the habit of calling "powerful" and "thoughtful," is "The Scourge," by Warrington Dawson. But in reality the book succeeds only in being a feeble and jejune account of the superficial aspects—social, political and commercial—of a small southern town.

As a muck-raker, Dawson is decidedly not there. Not only is he inefficient, but he is scared. And his hesitancy at telling the truth of the new South is not without cause. For if there is one thing the South will not permit it is honest criticism. Note what a furore that splendid novel, "The Southerner," created. The South will not permit literature to be a criticism of life. It will permit no discussion of its living creed. Nearly all novels, heretofore, dealing with the South have either romantic tales, such as Mary Johnston's or palliating and sentimental accounts in which the author steers clear of any descriptive accuracy.

Dawson seems to have tried a compromise between the sentimentalist and the truth-teller, with the result that his book has neither the romantic merits of the one nor the economic value of the other. It is a superficial and half-hearted affair, and, so far as I can see, without the slightest excuse.

THE REAL MAN.

CECIL RHODES: HIS PRIVATE LIFE. By Philip Jourdan. John Lane Company, New York. (Price $2.50.)

LEAVING the novels for the time being, let us read of the private life of Cecil Rhodes, as told by his private secretary, Philip Jourdan.

It is a pleasant change to turn from the idea of the Colossus, the empire builder, the thinker in continents, to the mere man, simple, impulsive, affectionate, shy, "particularly partial to people with blue eyes," hating letter writing, worried to distraction by lady beggars, dining with satisfaction off cold mutton, dispensing lordly checks to waiters, and getting horribly angry with Sir Luke Fildes because the half-finished portrait was not to his liking.

There have been those who denied that Rhodes had a heart, just as there are those who—until they read his will—denied him ideals. They may be recommended to read the testimony of Mr. Jourdan, who for the last eight years of his life was his private secretary in a peculiarly trusted sense, and whose tributes to the dead master are all the more touching for their unvarnished simplicity. To be a hero to one's private secretary, empowered to open letters marked "strictly confidential," is a harder matter than to be a hero to one's valet.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

The long-awaited publication in America of the writings of the most important modern figure in the revival of Irish literature is in many ways the chief noteworthy publishing event of the season. John W. Luce and Company will inaugurate their publication of the works of J. M. Sygne, the Irish dramatist and poet, by issuing next month four volumes, "The Aran Islands," with twelve illustrations by Jack Yeats, a picturesque account of Mr. Synge's stay on the Aran Islands off the west coast of Ireland, which he visited to study Gaelic: "Kerry and Wicklow,"—in which the author gives full rein to that wandering gypsy spirit, which again and again lured him to the fields and roads of rural Ireland; "The Tinker's Wedding," a comedy in two acts; and "Riders of the Sea," a one-act tragedy, generally conceded to be not only the best of Mr. Synge's work but the finest tragic note in the literature of our day.

To fully appreciate the importance and the personnel of the new literary movement in Germany, the influence of which is being felt more and more in this country, one will find a valuable aid in reading Percival Pollard's volume, "Masks and Minstrels of New Germany," just issued by John W. Luce and Company. Here will be found an intimate first hand view of Herman Bahr, whose play, "The Concert," is a notable New York success; Ernest von Wolzogen, who is now visiting America as the guest of German literary societies and our leading universities; Baronness Von Wolzogen, who has given fashionable entertainments in New York this winter; Schnitzler, the author of "The Green Cockatoo," "The Episode," and "The Farewell Supper;" Oscar Straus, composer of "The Chocolate Soldier," and "The Waltz Dream," who has written songs for the "Green Gerans," as they are called; Victor Hollander, who composed the "Swing Song;" Wedekind, who wrote "The Awakening of Spring," and other plays in which he enacts a leading role; and Von Hoffmansthal, the librettist of Richard Strauss's "Salome," "Elecktra," and "Rosencavalier," the latter of which was produced in Dresden January 25 of this year.

It is doubtful whether the confirmed smoker ever really enjoys smoking. The habit becomes merely mechanical. M. Maeterlinck has hit upon a happy expedient whereby he continues to enjoy the pleasure of his pipe and at the same time guard against its injurious effects. He is, it appears, the slave to a habit. "Without the help of tobacco," writes a recent biographer, "he seemed incapable of receiving inspiration or crystallizing it in words. If he has not overcome the need, he has outflanked it. Smoking, he noticed, had lost its virtue as a stimulant, and instead of arousing the brain to activity, as at first, had come to disturb its functions; so now, in lieu of ordinary tobacco, he fills his bowl with a denicotined preparation, tasteless indeed, but harmless. His pipe is still always alight when the pen is busy, but it is hardly now more than an innocent subterfuge intended to cheat and so satisfy an irresistible mechanical craving."

Louise Closser Hale, who is both author and actress, after a busy season at the New Theater in New York, and the writing of her latest novel, "The Married Miss Worth," is to take a long rest. She will sail next month for the Mediterranean, and finally will settle down in Algiers for some time. "The Married Miss Worth," like Mrs. Hale's former novel, "The Actress," is a novel of stage life, and actual experiences have gone into the writing of it—although not actual people or incidents.

Mrs. Roger A. Pryor, who with her husband, Judge Pryor, celebrated over a year ago the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage, has written her first novel, a story of life in Virginia in her girlhood, which will be published in the spring. Mrs. Pryor's literary work heretofore has been largely autobiographical.

Returning recently from a Louisiana duck-shooting expedition with an army captain of his acquaintance and two negro guides, Rex Beach brought the suggestion for a new novel. He expects to go back to New Orleans within a few weeks.

In spite of his ninety-three years, the Hon. John Bigelow continues his regular habits of literary work, putting in a certain part of each day upon the fourth volume of his "Retrospections of an Active Life," which his publishers hope to announce at no distant date.

A book of reminiscences of Carmen Sylva, Queen of Roumania, entitled, "From Memory's Shrine," is one of the interesting spring announcements. The work will be published this month, and a photogravure portrait of the author, and other illustrations, will adorn the volume.

MEN AND WOMEN MARGARET MEETS.

The announcement from London of the promotion of Henry Bax-Ironside to be Minister to Bulgaria, coupled with the fact that he is now a widower, recalls a Washington romance of nearly twenty years ago, when this plenipotentiary was a young secretary of the British embassy, at that time a legation, and a suitor for the hand of Miss Helen Brice, eldest daughter of the then Senator from Ohio, and reigning belle in Washington society.

Senator and Mrs. Brice, who occupied "Corcoran House," as they christened the family mansion of the late W. W. Corcoran, were the pioneers in the lavish entertaining which has since made Washington the greatest dinner party city of America, if not of the world. For everybody gives dinner parties in Washington, not once in a season, or to celebrate some important event, but frequently, and as a matter of course.

The Brices owned and used the first gold dinner service, from which as many as sixty guests could be served. They also gave balls that have been neither excelled or equaled for their appointments or the distinction of their guests. They entertained every notable foreigner who came to Washington, kept the smartest traps and greatest number of horses, all of which naturally placed the two young daughters of the house in the front rank of official belles. The British legation, under Sir Julian Pauncefote, was then the center of the social life of the capital, the attaches and secretaries thereof the beaux par excellence for all smart dances. Mr. Bax-Ironside and Miss Helen Brice, according to well-authenticated social history, fell in love, just like thousands of other nice young people; some say they got engaged in a truly American fashion without consultation of elders, when the trouble began. Mr. Bax-Ironside, who has since reaped both fame and fortune, as one of the most learned members of the diplomatic service, was then at the foot of the ladder, with just enough income to pay his club dues and settle his tailor's bill once a year. While sufficiently Americanized to fall in love and propose like any young son of this republic, he held to the old world tradition of a dot, and marriage settlements. In courting the richest girl in Washington society he followed both heart and head, but he reckoned without Senator Brice. The latter looked with favor on his would-be son-in-law until it came to the question of settlements; then the American spirit rose above the atmosphere of diplomatic society, gold dinner services and social secretaries, with an obstinacy that nothing could overcome. He loved his daughter and had indulged her every whim from childhood, but at the purchase of a husband his American spirit asserted itself with such force that the romance came to an end then and there. Mr. Bax-Ironside some years later married quite happily, to all appearances, and was left a widower less than a year ago. Miss Brice never married, and is now known as one of the most accomplished and charming of American women of middle life to be met in several European capitals, as well as an important member of society in New York, where she and her younger sister now make their permanent home.

The most thoroughly satisfactory Washington engagement of the present season appears to be that of Miss Cecelia May, youngest daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry May, to Robert L. Bacon, Jr., eldest son of the Ambassador to France and Mrs. Bacon, which has just been announced here and in Paris. Miss Cecelia May is a handsome brunette of 19, a debutante of last year and an acknowledged belle. She speaks French fluently and has seen something of society in London and in Paris, where she has a distinguished family connection. Her mother was a Miss Coleman of San Francisco, a great heiress of her generation and a Roman Catholic, in which faith the future Mrs. Bacon has been reared.

The Mays are one of the old families of Washington, famous in the annals of Maryland and the District society from the establishment of the government. Mr. Bacon was graduated from Harvard last June and is now filling a clerical post in the State Department as the first step in the diplomatic career which will probably be his profession. No date has yet been fixed for the marriage, which will probably take place in the coming summer.

Another engagement and prospective marriage occupying the attention of society is that of Mrs. Barney, widow of the late Alfred Clifford Barney of Cincinnati and Washington, and Christian D. Hemmick, a son of the former United States Consul at Geneva, Switzerland, which, although not yet formally announced, is being very generally discussed by the friends of the couple. Mrs. Barney, who is somewhat the senior of her future husband, is widely known as one of the artistic and literary lights of the National Capital, where she has passed a part of each season for the past twenty years. She has been a widow for eight or ten years, and is now in Paris, where it is expected her marriage will take place in April, to be followed by her return with her young husband to Studio House on Sheridan Circle, where they will take an active part in the social life of the post-Lenten season.

John Hays Hammond, contrary to many statements in the public prints, has not been named as Special Ambassador to the coronation of King George V. His name was seriously considered for that honor some weeks ago, but it may be said was finally rejected as it was made known through the regular channels of diplomacy that Mr. Hammond's selection would not meet with favor in England.

Mr. Hammond's connection with the Boer war, and the Jameson raid, although almost forgotten in Washington, are still too fresh in the British mind to admit of this distinguished Californian taking his place among the envoys of all the civilized world who will gather at Westminster next June.

No selection has as yet been decided upon, but it is safe to assume Mr. Hammond will not represent the United States in London in any official capacity, although he and his attractive and popular wife would find many friends to welcome them in a purely social way.

They will pass the spring season at their house on Rhode Island avenue, where, in the event of an extra session of Congress, they will entertain in the same wholesale fashion that marked their first season in Washington.

STORIES OF FAMOUS POEMS.

"JENNY KISSED ME."

BY LEIGH HUNT.

Jenny kissed me when we met,
  Jumping from the chair she sat in;
Time, you thief, who love to get Sweets into your list, put that in.
Say I'm weary, say I'm sad;
  Say that health and wealth have missed me;
Say I'm growing old, but add—
  Jenny kissed me!

One of the prettiest of the very sho poems i.. the English language is tha by Leigh Hunt, entitled "Jenny Kisse Me." The question is frequently ask "Who was the jenny" who inspir such a beautiful verse? Many storie both humorous and pathetic, clust around No. 5 Cheyne Row, Chelse where Carlyle and his "Jeannie" spe so many years together. Among the constant visitors none was more co dially welcomed than Leigh Hunt, f whom Carlyle maintained the staunc est friendship, a union of the most a parently antagonistic qualities. T man who has been designated as t "Apostle of Despair" took to his hea and cherished the impractical, wea but lovable "Apostle of Cheerfulnes with a tender, affectionate warmth th made the words of Macaulay, "W have a kindness for Mr. Leigh Hunt seem cold praise indeed.

Mrs. Carlyle ardently shared her hu band's appreciation of the many go points of the poor poet, and it is their intimacy that we are indebted f the latter's pretty and graceful litt improvisation, "Jenny Kissed Me."

"The happy occasion upon which th celebrated kiss was bestowed is wel re membered by friends of both," said biographer of Carlyle. "Hunt ca running in one day in hot haste bring them the good news of Carlyle having just received a government li pension of £300. Upon receiving th news Mrs. Carlyle impulsively spra from her chair, threw her arms abo the neck of the "gray-haired lad" a gave him a cordial kiss.

"There never was a more opportu gift than this pension, for Carlyle ha been forced to struggle on throug dreary years of painful poverty by r fusing to turn his pen to the kind work which promised gain."

It was a sort of poetical justice th he should have been afterward pe sioned by the very nation which he ha dared to criticise so remorselessly. An the happy accident which made Hu the bearer of the good news is re dered doubly significant by the remem brance that he, too, after languishi for two years in prison for the radic sentiments against the Prince Rege to which he gave utterance in the "E aminer," had his old age made compa atively comfortable by the English go ernment.

There is, of its kind, nothing mo charming than the poem which Ja Welsh Carlyle inspired.

"Jenny Kissed Me" was printed f the first time in America in the thirty ninth volume of "Harper's Magazine It appeared in connection with an a ticle by Moncure D. Conway, entitl "South Coast Saunterings in Englan Mr. Conway speaks of the pensio awarded to her literary children England as a "graceful custom." says that instead of its being a bri to sycophancy, it is usually bestow upon those who have been most fait ful to their ideals, and that Carly who consented, through long drea years, to be painfully poor rather th turn his pen to the kind of work th promised gain, was pensioned by t nation he had so remorselessly cri cised.

To this he adds: "His friends can r member the pleasant scene when Le Hunt came with the happy news telling which Mrs. Carlyle kissed hi

Exception has been taken to t story by no less an authority tha A. Froude, the illustrious English a thor, who, being written to upon t subject, penned the following letter reply:

"December 20, 1888.

"Madame—I have read your lett with much surprise. I never heard th Mrs. Carlyle had kissed Leigh Hunt think it exceedingly unlikely that if s ever had, Leigh Hunt would have wr ten a poem about it.

"I never heard that a pension h been offered to Carlyle until near t end of his life, when he refused it. am sure no pension was ever offered him while Leigh Hunt was alive, ev when he was in extreme poverty. U der such conditions I am sure Carl would not have accepted it, because was too proud. Moncure Conway m possess information which is unkno to me, but in the absence of any a thority which would lead me to beli it, I do not hesitate to regard the st as without foundation. You may m any use you please with this letter.

"J. A. FROUDE."

Leigh Hunt's father was a desce ant from one of the oldest families Barbadoes, who was sent to Philad phia to be educated, and in 1768 w graduated from the University Pennsylvania. He was admitted to bar and began the practice of law. himself was the author of many squi mostly political satires. Being a loy ist, he had a number of unpleasant periences in America, and finally fled England, where Leigh Hunt was b on October 19, 1784. The mother Leigh Hunt was a lady of Quaker traction, a tender-hearted, refined sensitively conscientious wom "whose memory was," says the son, serene and inspiring influence to a mate me in the love of truth."

Leigh Hunt early took to poetry, when just out of college he began c tributing essays to magazines un the name "Mr. Town, Jr., Critic Censor-General." He edited news pers and magazines at various tim was a friend of the leading literary m of his day, spent much time on the c tinent with Byron, dying at Putn August 28, 1859. Ten years after death a bust by Joseph Durham w placed over his grave, with the mo from his own poem, "Abou-ben-A hem," "Write me as one who loves fellow-men."

Leigh Hunt takes high rank as essayist and critic and as a poet sh much tenderness, a delicate and vi fancy and an entire freedom from morbid strain of introspection. narrative poems, such as "The Story Rimini," are among the very best the language.

Attributable to the unusual wa weather of Wednesday is the loss o barrel of twenty-five gallons of hon thousands of bees and a barrel of fi gallons of fine sugar house molas the property of John C. Tottshal Granite City.

Mr. Tottshal left the barrels of ho and molasses open to the weather. honey was procured from the farm own bees, of which he has a large nu ber, the hives of which are placed his garden, says the St. Louis Glo Democrat. Some one left the ce door open where the barrels were cated. When Mr. Tottshal entered cellar and examined his barrels found all the honey gone and the m lasses barrel full of bees, the molas having proved too sticky a substa for the bees to get away with or fr In the barrel there were thousands the little honey makers. Mr. Totts said he regretted the loss of his ho and molasses, but most of all so m valuable bees.

Music News.

BUSONI, THE GREAT PIANIST.

NEW KING OF THE KEYBOARD IS APPROACHING LOS ANGELES.

His Artistry Said to Be Colossal. Has Had Many Triumphs in the East, But Is Practically Unknown This Side of the Mississippi—Four California Concerts.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Ferruccio Busoni, the foremost pianist in the world at the present time, will play in Los Angeles on the evenings of March 14 and 17, under the management of L. E. Behymer.

There will be but four Busoni concerts in California. Los Angeles has two; San Francisco, two.

Busoni's terms are said to be the highest ever agreed to, except in the case of the last two tours of Paderewski.

One of the best-known artists of the time east of the Mississippi, he is unknown to western audiences except through hearsay or actual hearing elsewhere.

I have never heard Busoni, but it is said by numerous critics that his pianism contains practically everything that is to be found in ideal piano playing; tone in such abundance that it seems rebounding from every corner of the hall; tone of the most remarkable fullness, even in the finest pianissimi; intellectuality which covers the music as a whole and builds up effects with sure and positive construction, and a sentiment which never degenerates into mere sentimentality.

The feature of Busoni's work as a whole is its size, its immensity.

In breadth and depth his playing is said to be colossal—all of which, however, will be shown to be the truth or the reverse on the occasion of Busoni's forthcoming visit to Los Angeles.

It is to be hoped that the music-loving public of the city will manifest the interest which the artist's celebrity and talents warrant.

The last number of the great Berlin music paper, the Signale, presents enthusiastic reports about the success of the newer Busoni compositions as played under the leadership of Berlin's wonderful conductor, Oskar Fried. The Busoni compositions are beginning to be recognized all over the globe, and America is going to hear more of Busoni this year than could have been anticipated twelve months ago.

In the first instance, his Lustspiel overture has already been played by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and has been put down on the roster of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Of greater importance is the fact that Gustav Mahler has arranged to conduct the first production, either in America or elsewhere, of a remarkable and, as report will have it, a very brilliant composition entitled "Berceuse Elegiaque," which was penned by Busoni when, while last crossing to America, the news of his mother's death reach him while on the high seas. The composition was finished before the steamer George Washington reached New York, and it is therefore fitting that this should be given its first performance on this side of the water.

"The Túrando Suite," which last year scored such great success when performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra, under Gustav Mahler's baton, is now under consideration by the Cincinnati Orchestra.

Busoni in Chicago.

Busoni played with the Thomas Orchestra on January 13 and 14 of this year.

Glenn Dillard Gunn, in the Tribune, said: The Thomas men rarely permit themselves the dissipation of enthusiasm for the offerings of the soloists who assist them in their concerts, these artists being commonly received by them with obvious reticence, not to say reluctance. But yesterday they remained on the stage at the conclusion of the programme and joined heartily in the applause, adding a fanfare in honor of Mr. Busoni.

To impress an orchestra player is somehting of an achievement even for one of the world's elect. It is proof first of all that Mr. Busoni's art rests its appeal to the musician on no such insecure foundation as mere technical mastery. Virtuosity rarely impresses the musician. He cares little for mere mechanical dexterity, which is something far removed from the ideals that glorify the piano playing of this master. In his selections he proved that he was indifferent to the lure of mere digital display.

The "Concertstuck" of Weber has suffered that emphasis of its technical difficulties which is associated with the conservatories and the first adventures of the student before the public. By a technical mastery so supreme that it destroyed all thought of mechanical effort, Mr. Busoni was able to direct the attention of the listeners to the musical message that has so long been concealed behind the barriers which velocity and accuracy erect for the immature, and one recognized the delightfully fresh, naive and characteristic idiom of the Weber overtures. As usual he endowed the piano with the many voices as well as the sonorous volume of the orchestra. That he accomplished this by certain pedal effects which the reactionaries will always regard as anarchistic innovations was a circumstance which troubled only those acquainted with pianistic traditions of the last generation. Let the pianists forget the careful definition of pedagogic limitations which is to be discovered in the prevailing rules that apply to the use of the pedal and listen with an open mind to the beauty and effectiveness of Busoni's employment of this interpretative agent and he will not only learn how the piano may acquire breadth and life, but will enrich his knowledge by some interesting discoveries in the laws of acoustics.

Pianists are, however, prone to live first by their prejudices, secondly by traditions, and last of all by their ears, which must be long indeed, since they have been unable to convince the world that Liszt rarely wrote piano music for the sake of display and was habitually inspired by an ideal of fantastic imaginativeness, poetry, and grandeur that is sufficiently beyond the comprehension of the masses to need another century for its general appreciation. The technical difficulties of the "Todtntanz" are not the only obstacles that have hindered its frequent presentation. There are many pianists who are sufficiently limited in their mastery of the instrument to define the mechanical tasks of the work with startling emphasis.

There are few indeed who can prove, as did Mr. Busoni yesterday, that its dazzling virtuosity, like the colorful orchestration of Wagner, is merely a means to the expression of a deeply poetic and appealing musical message.

To supply that proof there is necessary a personality gifted with the power of eloquence. To address the listener persuasively, convincingly, with an appeal to his imagination and his sense of the beautiful, is not the mission of the orator alone Every servant of the "speaking arts" must possess it if his service be not in vain, and it is the heritage of the musician in guise more potent, more inspiring than is granted to the disciples of any other art. It is an elusive power. Forever it escapes analysis, and for want of a better word one falls back on the well worn phrases anent personality, sympathy, dramatic emphasis, and the like, that have lost their meaning through abuse.

It is this gift of eloquence that imparts to Mr. Busoni's playing the effect of a personal address to the hearer. His art is at once a declamation and a song. It sways the reason and touches the emotions. And by these qualities it commands the respect of the musician and the homage of the public.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Capt. Willy Meyer, who has become commandant of the Haytien navy, is one of the best known of the younger officers of the German Naval Reserves. He is 33 years old. In 1902 he entered the service of the Hamburg-American line. In 1906 he was recalled into official service as captain of the naval construction yard at the Krupp Works at Kiel, where he spent four years. During that time he had charge of the trials of all war vessels built at the Krupp yards.

Alvin C. Smith of Netcong, N. J., is Chief Smith, Collector Smith, Superintendent Smith, Supervisor Smith, Officer Smith and Janitor Smith. He holds six positions in the police, water, road and trunacy departments. He has just had a raise in pay, making his salary $45 a month for all the jobs. He gets $12.50 a month more as percentage on collections.

Col. F. S. Hastings, a Civil War veteran, who has presented handsome flagpoles to various schools and communities in Alameda county, California, has offered to erect a flagpole 1000 feet high with a diameter of eighteen feet at the base and flying an American flag 100 feet long, in front of the central permanent building at the Panama-Pacific International exposition in San Francisco. This will be the highest flagpole in the world.

A life-sized bust of John D. Rockefeller has been placed on the mantel over the fireplace in the south wall of Hutchinson Hall, at the University of Chicago. The design is the work of William Couper, of New York.

Miss Maurine Rasmussen, daughter of Charles Rasmussen, a noted artist of San Francisco, has been selected by Harrison Fisher, the famous New York artist and delineator of beautiful American womanhood, as the ideal American beauty. He declares she is the ideal type of the new American girl.

Josef Hofman, the noted pianist, though born in Europe, has a home at Aiken, S. C., and says this is to be his permanent residence. He has a summer home in Switzerland on the top of Mount Pelerin, at Lake Geneva, which he will visit each year. He enjoys the independence to be had in America and says he cannot tolerate the old conditions of Europe.

Senator Beveridge was once taking a young man to task because he spent all his money as fast as he earned it.

"What will you do when you become old and unable to earn money?" asked the Senator.

"Oh, I'll go to some Old Soldier's Home."

"Old Soldier's Home!" exclaimed the Senator. "How can you qualify for an Old Soldier's Home?"

"Well," was the answer, "I've been soldiering on every job I've had so far and—"

But the Senator was already half way down the street.—[Human Life.

Big Victory for the Sperry and Hutchinson Company

The Maryland Court of Appeals Holds Trading Stamp Law Unconstitutional

Declares Law Makers Might As Well Dictate the Price of Goods

Gambling Element Not Involved Premiums Certain and Definite

State Must Pay Costs

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 3.—In an elaborate opinion the Court of Appeals of Maryland affirms the judgment of the Criminal Court of Baltimore, holding that the trading stamp law of 1910 violates the Constitutions of Maryland and of the United States. The Court reviews the many decisions on the subject and states that the law of 1910 is class legislation, and that the Legislature has no power to fix the cash value of the stamps any more than it could fix the price of a merchant's goods. As the premiums are publicly on display and the trading stamp books clearly state the terms of redemption, The Sperry & Hutchinson Company had the right for its own protection to meet the changes of a fluctuating market by varying the articles given for its stamps, and such business arrangements contain no element of chance or gambling. The Court also holds that the restrictions on the issuance of trading stamps were intended to prohibit the business, and that as it is a legitimate advertising enterprise the Legislature cannot constitutionally prohibit it.

The opinion describes the business conducted by the Trading Stamp Co. as follows:

"It is engaged in the business of advertising merchants in the City of Baltimore for the purpose of increasing the trade, and especially the cash trade, of such merchants. The company maintains a store which is stocked with wares and merchandise, which is open to the inspection of the public. Each article bears a printed tag correctly showing the number of Stamps in exchange for which said company offers to give such articles free of charge to the persons presenting such Stamps."

THE LEGISLATURE POWERLESS. MIGHT AS WELL FIX PRICES ON MERCHANDISE.

Referring to the right of the Legislature to pass such a law under the guise of the police power, the Court holds that an act passed under the police power must show that it is in the interest of the general public and not for the benefit of a special or protected class, and quotes from Lawton vs. Steele, 152 U. S., 133, as follows:

"The Legislature may not, under the guise of protecting the public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations. In other words, its determination as to what is a proper exercise of its police power is not final or conclusive, but is subject to the supervision of the Courts. • • • • • • •"

LAW REPUGNANT TO CONSTITUTION.

The Court proceeds to say that "The defendants as we here hold, were engaged in a lawful business, and therefore 'to justify the state in thus interposing its authority in behalf of the public it must appear, first, that the interests of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, require such interference; and, second, that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals.' If these facts or requirements do not appear, then any legislative enactment under the guise of protecting public interests is repugnant to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and is, therefore, void.

"The power of the Legislature to fix the value of these stamps that the defendants are to issue no more exists, than their power to fix for the defendants the price of the merchandise sold by them at the time of the issuance of the stamps, and this power they did not have."

Referring to the burdensome requirements of the statute, the Court says:

"As to the requirements and conditions placed upon the defendants by Sec. 412A of the Statute, we hardly think it necessary to discuss them. From the character of them the object is clearly seen. It is too apparent that these conditions and requirements imposed, were not to regulate, but to prohibit the issuance of the stamps. • • • • • The conditions and restrictions contained in the last two sections of the law upon which the second and third counts of the indictments are based are unreasonable and unnecessary, and amount to a practical prohibition of the business as conducted by the defendants, and therefore are not a proper exercise of the police power of regulation."

APPROVES COMPANY'S STAND.

The opinion makes it perfectly clear that there is no element of chance attached to, nor does the issuance of Trading Stamps partake of the form of a lottery or gambling or of anything which would appeal to the gambling instinct, and lays particular stress upon the fact that The Sperry & Hutchinson Company, of Baltimore, has at all times been prepared to redeem its Stamps, thereby removing every element of chance.

The Court sites the fact that if a collector of stamps desires a particular article, he might go to the headquarters of the Stamp Company before he has collected the requisite number of stamps to secure it, and have the article desired set aside for reasonable time. While the same articles displayed this month might not be available for next month, certainly articles or the same value can be obtained at any future time.

This, and the general conduct of the business, is held by the Court of Appeals to remove all gambling chance from the business, and consequently removes it from police regulation.

There are glowing colors, bronze green and brown, in "Arroyo Seco," a canvas full of harmony. "Moonlight Calm" is an excellent study of night effects: tall eucalyptus trees stand like watchful sentinels beside a row of sleeping adobe houses. "Sunshine After Rain" has a fine play of cool, bluish greens.

"Glorious Morn" is laid in with breadth and freedom. "Moonrise—Monterey Bay" has a suggestion of the tropics in its composition—cypresses of great height with the pale moon entangled in their tops. "Sunrise—Grand Canyon" is a successful study of a difficult subject—an almost impossible subject, indeed; the canyon walls rise like pink castles of enchantment in the yellow light.

The landscape work of Benjamin Chambers Brown always interests; sometimes it enthralls. The artist is a close student of nature, and his pictures hold great truths.

Landscapes by Sammann.

Thirty remarkable canvasses, from the brush of Detlef Sammann, are now on exhibition in the Blanchard gallery. They are landscapes of California, with a few European subjects, among them being an English scene of exquisite tenderness and atmospheric quality. The exhibition closes on March 18.

Within the last few years Mr. Sammann has enrolled himself among the ranks of the impressionists, and he now wonders how he could possibly have painted in the old way. He has become a faithful follower of Manet and Monet and their school (choosing the simplest themes for his subjects—and, in fact, declaring that he would be quite content to paint a haystack through the variations of days and seasons.

The artist's aim is for quality of tone and atmosphere, and he feels that this can be gotten only by breaking up color into its prismatic hues and painting it without mixing. He makes account of reflections from above and below, and of local color, and combines these hues on the canvas with a nicety of touch and vision that produces wonderful vibration, and, at the proper distance from his canvas, perfect blending. Though his color is applied pure, there is no crudeness. On the contrary, the tone in some of his pictures is very beautiful.

His three pictures of Catalina Island, painted in the early morning, at noon and in the afternoon, are fine examples of his method.

A further review of the canvases in this exhibition will be given next week.

Fountain to Be Erected in Central Park.

The four figures, two boys and two girls, supporting the vase at the upper part of the fountain, were designed by Casper Gruenfeld of this city. They are four and one-half feet in height, and have just been cast in concrete. The sculptural work has been executed in a bold and forceful way, and will be a great artistic credit to Los Angeles.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Arthur Nevin, wife of the well-known American composer, has been appointed a bacteriologist at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

Mrs. M. L. Baldwin, adjuster of claims in the office of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior, is the granddaughter of a chief of the Chippewa Indians. Many times when she was a girl she saw members of her family shot and scalped, and one of her most vivid memories is of seeing her own brother tortured and slowly cut to pieces before her eyes. From the shelter of sand pits she, in company with other women and girls of her tribes, often watched their braves fight Indians of other tribes and soldiers of the United States.

Edna Rhodes of Quincy, Mass., has attended every session of the First Baptist Sunday-school for the past eight years, and May Critchley has a record of perfect attendance at the same school for six years.

Mrs. Emma Howell Knight is attending the State University at Laramie, Wyo., where her four children are also registered as students. Mrs. Knight will be graduated in June in the class with her daughter, when she will receive the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of pedagogy. Her daughter will receive the degree of bachelor of science. Mrs. Knight was elected county superintendent of schools at the recent elections.

Dr. Eliza E. Leonard is in charge of the Douw Hospital, Pekin, China, which is one of the few self-supporting hospitals in the empire. Besides doing her hospital work Dr. Leonard is on the teaching staff of both the Union Medical College for Women and the Union Nurses Training School. At present forty-eight young women are studying in the medical college and ten in the training school.

Chauffeur Obeyed Order.

"Drive like the deuce!" shouted Smith, springing into the taxi.

With a lurch the car darted forward, and away they went like lightning through the fog. Crash! They took off the wheel of a passing wagon. Hi! hi! They missed flattening out a small child by two-ninths of a hair. Clang! They upset a milk cart. People shouted, constables impotently held up their hands as the taxi dashed up one street and down another, taking corners on two wheels and threatening every lamppost with destruction.

At last, after half an hour's furious racing, they slowed up in a narrow thoroughfare, and Smith poked his head out of the window.

"Are we nearly there?" he asked, breathlessly.

The chauffeur turned in his seat and shouted:

"Where did you want to go, sir?" —[Everybody's Magazine.

Some Bold Statements

About the Wonderful

Owens River Valley

We have made some strong statements about the remarkable resources and productiveness of this wonderful country—statements that, judged by usual standards, would appear unbelievable. Yet, we are prepared to back up every statement we have made to the letter. We will go farther, and say that the actual provable facts about Owens Valley are even more astonishing than we have claimed.

You have only to talk to Mr. Lippincott or Mr. Mulholland, the principals in the Los Angeles Aqueduct Engineering project, to have them tell you that Owens Valley is, without doubt, the best watered valley in all California. Unlike all other valleys in the Southern part of the State, whose water supply comes from mountain streams—the high water mark in Owens Valley is in midsummer—when it is most needed by growing crops.

Although intensive farming has only begun in Owens Valley—the experience of the old farmers there proves, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the combination of conditions, which assure bumper crops, exist in Owens Valley as they do in no other spot in California.

The statements that 34 tons of baled alfalfa were taken from eight acres in one cutting—and that the same ranch produced 800 tons of alfalfa from 97 acres in three cuttings—sounds unbelievable. We are, however, prepared absolutely to prove this statement.

We can prove that nine tons of pink beans were taken off eight acres, which yielded the farmer $115.00 per acre.

We can show you 80 acres of land that produced 24,000 bushels of potatoes, or 300 bushels to the acre.

We can show you where ten boxes of winesap apples per tree were taken from twenty acres of Owens Valley Lands, and that these apples ran 80 per cent. four-tier fancies—and this, in spite of the fact that the appearance of the orchard proved that it had not received one-tenth the care it deserved.

Our holdings in Owens Valley lie right in the center of the proven fruit belt, and we are now installing one of the most modern steel and concrete irrigating systems in the State, which will supply an over-abundance of pure mountain water at unusually low cost.

We first offered these lands when the country was new to the farmer. We made exceptional terms and discounts to get Southern California farmers to take the lead and show what could be done. Our success has been phenomenal. The sales in four months amounted to $121,838.00.

Apple lands similar to these in Washington and Oregon are selling for $250 to $400 per acre. And with the continuance of activity in our sales, we will increase the price of our lands on May first.

If you are considering making a change or buying a ranch, you owe it to yourself to investigate Owens River Valley. These lands will net you greater profits per acre than the choicest orange lands—and ten or twenty acres will make you wealthy in a few years.

Come to our office if you can, and talk to us about this wonderful country. Or, if you cannot come, drop a card for photographs and our booklets—"Fortunes in Apples" and "Questions Asked and Answered."

CIRCUS TENTS FOR ORANGES.

National Citrus Show at San Bernardino This Week to Be Wonderful Exhibit—Fruit Will Be Cream of Southern California—Modus Operandi of the Orange-Packing Business to Be Shown, With Other Features.

THERE have been national apple shows, national flower shows, national raisin shows and all kinds of national fruit shows, except a national orange show. It is a strange thing that there has never been a national orange show. When you come to consider the millions upon millions of dollars that are invested in orange groves in Southern California and the millions upon millions of dollars derived from them in the shape of revenues, you will wonder, indeed, that the orange people have never exploited themselves and their products by means of an exposition.

But, now at last, we are to have a national orange show. Preparations on a very large scale have been under way for many weeks past. Besides being an orange show it will also be an exposition of the citrus industry. It will be held in San Bernardino, beginning Monday evening, and lasting a full week. Outside of the fact that it will be an exposition worthy of the name, its very novelty should and doubtless will induce thousands of people to make the pleasant journey to San Bernardino. The railways will make special rates for travelers and will run special trains.

The show has taken on such enormous proportions that no building in San Bernardino is large enough to house it. Consequently two big circus tents, the size of Barnum's, have been secured. They are erected with an entrance at Fourth and E streets, taking in both those streets and a whole city block vesides, providing an inside area of 33,000 square feet for exposition purposes.

The first tent will be given over to the orange display. Instead of the seats which are arranged for spectators at a circus, there ill be a solid bank of golden fruit reaching around the whole tent and composed solely of the best oranges that California can produce. The fruit will be arranged in artistic designs and will be a most beautiful and fascinating spectacle. Thirteen carloads of oranges were required to make up the display. Visitors to the show standing in the center of the tent and casting their eyes completely around the circle of its interior, will be able to count nearly one million oranges if they cared to spend the time doing so.

The fruit has been contributed to the exposition after the most careful selection by the famous producing districts of Southern California, including San Bernardino, itself, Riverside, Bloomington, Colton, Highland, Redlands, Rialto, Ontario, Uplands, Cucamonga, Etiwanda and the Queen Colony. There will be special days set apart durfug the week in honor of many of these named districts when the people from the localities will specially celebrate by attending the show in a body, each district sending for its particular occasion its own brass band and other home features.

At night the tents will be brilliantly illuminated with innumerable electric lights.

The second tent will be devoted to orange by-products and the exposition of every machine and inplement as well as the various kinds of fertilizers and irrigation methods, used in the care and operation of orange groves and the marketing of their products. For instance there will be a complete packing house in operation with the prettiest girls in San Bernardino valley—and that's going some—packing the fruit with lightening-like rapidity. A feature of this packing plant will be that you can buy a sample box of the finest oranges in the world and have it shipped to any part of the United States, express charges prepaid, all for the trifling sum of one dollar. This attractive feature of the show has not for its purpose the making of a profit, as the price named proves. Its purpose is, instead, to give visitors an exceptional opportunity to treat their friends at a distance to a box of California oranges for a small sum of money.

The whole modus operandi of the orange business from the picking of the fruit to the delivery of it into the hands of the consumer will be shown. A precooling plant has been set up. The boxes that hold the oranges will be the orange pickers use in the groves, will be omitted, so that people curious to know these things can have them fullly explained. And persons intending to invest in orange groves will be able to understand the business completely before making their financial ventures.

That the show will be a notable success, the public has the guarantee of the leading business men of San Bernardino who are back of the project with their time, their money and boundless enthusiasm. That San Bernardino is capable of making an affair of this kind a success, the public has only to remember its centennial celebration of last year.

The business men or San Bernardino are putting new life into their city and the country which surrounds it. When this show was first proposed and the necessity of a preliminary fund was made plain, Banker E. D. Roberts, who is now also the State Treasurer of California, went out in an automobile accompanied by two other business men and raised nearly $8000 in fifty-five minutes.

The officers and committee chairmen—in themselves a guarantee to the public—are as follows: W. W. Brison, Jr., president; J. Ingersoll, vice-president; R. E. Swing general manager; H. Perkins, director in charge. Committee chairmen: E. D. Roberts, finance; Hon. F. F. Oster, advertising; M. C. Kenney, concessions; J. H. Boyd, tickets; A. G. Kendall, fruit exhibit; H. S. SENATOR WATSON DIGS COAL.

Elkins's Successor, Who Would Rather Be a Miner Than Bond Seller to Chambermaids, Man of Few Words—Young Croesus Probably Will Manage Next Democratic National Campaign.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

By JAMES B. MORROW.

THERE was a family dinner at the West Virginia homestead on the day that James Otis Watson was eighty years old. One of the children—there were four daughters and six sons—asked him, were it possible to go all the way back, if he would change the habits of his life in any respect.

"Yes," he gravely answered. "I have talked too much."

There were smiles along both sides of the table, because James Otis Watson scarcely talked at all. He would travel half a day with an old acquaintance and never say a word.

"Clarence Wayland Watson," a friend warned me, "is like his father. He is sagaciously silent while other people are making a noise. You may succeed in interviewing him, but you will find it mighty tedious work."

The friend was wrong. Still, I have plowed in fields where the ground was not so hard. Until Watson came to the Senate, as the successor of Stephen B. Elkins, his custom was to say "no" or "yes." Sometimes he said nothing for a week. In that event he kept the other side guessing, which is part of the Watson practice, entailed from the elder to the younger man. Thus he bought coal lands or sold the coal itself. Hetty Green counseled her son, "Ned," to sleep at least one night before giving a binding answer. J. P. Morgan bargains in two dwarf sentences. "I will take it," or "I do not want it," he says and the listening man walks out.

Watson mined 300,000 carloads of coal last year. The task was done without any waste of breath. Nevertheless, Watson would sooner talk than write or telegraph, if the business in negotiation is large or delicate. He will travel across the continent rather than jeopardize a transaction with pen and ink or muddle it with doubt. Adept in several directions—vision for example, and also nerve—he excels in organization. The farm he bought on credit has expanded into an empire of 300,000 acres, situated in four States. He is the king of coal, though many blunt and brilliant men are engaged in the coal business. Now that he has turned his energies toward politics, there is a suggestion that the Democrats ask him to manage their campaign next year against President Taft.

BIG MOUTH OF GREATNESS.

Serious of visage and almost colorless, Watson has brown hair, gray eyes and a large mouth. An auger hole of a mouth subtracts from expression and weakens the masculinity of any face. Big men are big-mouthed. See the portraits of Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay and Calhoun, not to mention Bryan, Roosevelt and Cannon. Watson's nose is like Mark Hanna's—flaring at the ends, with broad nostrils, or air pipes to the lungs. He dresses in the latest fashion, except that he indulges himself in the obsolete gaiety of a fancy vest. Sitting by his table, on which there are a box of cigars and two volumes of ephemeral fiction, he swings one leg over the other and slowly but cordially answers my questions about rich men, corporations, and himself. Now and then he puts his elbows on his knees and leans forward as he talks. There is no paint on his words. His sentences are short cuts to the opinions he has formed and the facts within his knowledge.

"The company of which I was president until a month ago," he said, "mined 12,000,000 tons of coal last year. My father and my brother-in-law brought me to Washington in 1876. I was 11 years old. They had contracts to supply the gas companies here and in Georgetown with coal. In those days gas was not made of water and oil. To the grief of my brother-in-law, we lost the Georgetown contract. It amounted to ninety tons a month. 'Never mind,' my father said, 'it'll not now be mined on our property inside of two hours.'"

"About that time," I said, "you were initiated into the mysteries and perplexities of driving mules?"

"So the newspapers have stated. I grew up around the mines, and did almost everything under ground and above ground, but I was never on the pay roll as a mule driver," Senator Watson replied. "We lived on a farm of 250 acres, just outside the village of Fairmont. Our log house contained eight or ten rooms. I was born in that house. It is now occupied by my gardner. My five brothers, all older than myself, worked the farm and shipped cattle. In 1852, thirteen years before I was born, my father opened a coal mine by tunneling straight into a hill. Francis Harrison Pierpont, also of Fairmont, was his partner. Pierpont, an anti-slavery Whig, became the war governor of Virginia, and sent 40,000 men into the Federal armies. My father during the Civil War bought horses for the national government. He was an able business man, a better business man than I am, but his opportunities were limited. There are plenty of chances in these days for a young man to make money. The big corporations are always looking for competent helpers who are reliable and have ideas."

"When," I asked, "did you begin business for yourself?"

"After I came of age, I thought I ought to look about and find a mine. I went to Johnson N. Camden, one of our Senators in Congress, and asked him to sell me 130 acres of land on credit. He could not know that Elkins would follow him in the Senate, nor could I guess that his office would be mine some day in a straight line of descent. Camden had been a lawyer at Parkersburg, and owned a small farm in the Burning Springs district, some thirty miles distant. Traces of oil were found in the region. Camden bored two wells. The oil came up with a rush and was run into an old flatboat through a rough wooden trough. When the oil was taken to Parkersburg, it was sold to Gen. Samuel Carnes of Boston for $20,000. In the course of a few years Camden was the richest man in our State.

"I do not recollect the dialogue that occurred when I told him I wanted to buy some of his coal land, but didn't have a cent of money to pay down. No doubt he thought I was pretty impudent. However, he let me have the land. I borrowed funds at the bank in Fairmont with which to open the mine, and to purchase mules, cars, scales and other machinery. The sledding was rough for a long time, but I managed to pay for the land in six or seven years. That is the way I started in the coal business—on borrowed money. I have been borrowing ever since. I owe more money right now than any man in West Virginia."

"Did you learn to dig coal?"

"I never served an apprenticeship in that branch of the industry, but I can knock down coal just the same, and could make my living in that way if it were necessary."

GROWTH OF COAL BUSINESS.

"What is the Consolidation Coal Company, of which you were the president until after coming to the Senate?"

"All of us—my father, brothers, and myself—acquired lands as the coal business grew. At the death of my father I entered more largely into the management of the property. Ultimately, in association with other West Virginia men, we obtained control of the Consolidation Company, a Maryland corporation, and brought all of our interests together. We own 300,000 acres of land in West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, and employ 15,000 men. Our coal is shipped East and West, and we export considerable quantities to Cuba, Mexico, and South America."

"If coal were put on the free list, would injury result to the mines of the United States?"

"It would not, in my opinion. As a miner of coal in the four States I have named, I should like to have coal pass back and forth across the Canadian border as freely as it does between Pennsylvania and New York, or Ohio and Massachusetts. Our exports to Canada amount to 6,000,000 tons a year, on which the Canadians levy a tax of 60 cents a ton. Thus we are paying Canada $3,600,000 annually for the privilege of selling coal to its people and its manufacturers. About 1,500,000 tons of Canadian coal is brought into the

ANGELENOS GET TWO GOOD MINES

California and Mastodon in Tuolumne District.

Strike of Rich Milling Ore in Jamison Mine.

Silver-Lead Proposition in County of Inyo.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 3.—The California and Mastodon mines, in the Tuolumne district, have been acquired by Los Angeles investors, and arrangements are under way for immediate operations. At the Mastodon a pump is being installed, and an engine, boiler and hoist are about to be placed in position. With the installation of this machinery active developments will immediately commence.

The shaft at the Mastodon is 115 feet deep, with a strong body of milling-grade ore exposed in the bottom. The vein is the regular Mother Lode ore body, large and free-milling. As far as the property has been developed, the ore showing is good, and the vein gives every indication of continuing to great depth. This property has not been worked to any extent, but is regarded as unusually promising. The California is a well-known porperty, and good ore is known to exist. It is understood that vigorous developments will be inaugurated at the California as soon as work at the Mastodon has assumed satisfactory importance. The Angelenos are greatly pleased with the properties and expect the mines to become important producers within a few months.

Cash Rock Dredge Active.

The Cash Rock Dredge Company of Los Angeles is operating extensively on the American River and is reported to be earning splendid profits. The management has kept the gold-boat surrounded with tailings all winter, and no damage has been caused by the high water. An excellent quality of gravel is being treated, and the outlook is for a long season of profitable operation.

In former years the company was greatly handicapped in the winter months because of damage to the dredge by high water, this trouble finally resulting in the total destruction of the dredge. The new boat was especially designed to avoid the old troubles, and the success attending its operation is extremely gratifying to the management.

Gold Ship Active.

The Gold Ship Mining Company is arranging for the immediate installation of the new machinery, and the transformer house is being rushed to completion. The house is composed of corrugated iron, and will be equipped with three Westinghouse transformers. Developments at the mine, located near Groveland, have been conducted steadily, and a large quantity of good-grade gravel is available for immediate extraction.

It is expected to commence production in the early spring, and everything is being placed in readiness towards this end. The Gold Ship has been developed to a point where its future as an important gravel producer is assured, while large areas of virgin territory remain to be opened. Los Angeles investors are principally interested.

On the Mother Lode.

The new three-compartment shaft at the Lightner, Angels Camp, has attained the 350-feet point and is being steadily sent deeper. Cross-cuts have been started from the 200 and 300-foot levels to connect with the old workings. These will intersect the drifts and crosscuts tapping the main ore-bodies and permit the working of the lower levels via the new shaft. The new shaft is located in excellent ground, every precaution having been taken to avoid the shifting strata of rocks that ruined the old Lightner shaft. A tramway is being constructed from the new shaft to the mill and will be completed within a few days. The mill is being overhauled and placed in first-class condition. The manager expects to place twenty stamps in action in the first week of March, and twenty more within a few weeks. Ample reserves of ore are available to keep forty stamps dropping for a number of months. Alex. Chalmers is manager.

The Bunker Hill has placed its new addition of twenty stamps in action, and the full battery of forty stamps are thundering away on ore of excellent grade. The regular monthly dividend of 5 cents per share, marking the payment of dividend No. 56, was paid February 15. Developments on the 1750 and 1950-foot levels continue very satisfactory, and it is said that sufficient ore is in sight to keep the mill in commission for several years. The development of the lower levels will be vigorously pushed.

Operations have been resumed at the Zella, after a few days idleness, owing to the difficulty experienced in handling the water. The heavy rains imposed a severe tax upon the pumps, but after considerable difficulty the lower levels were cleared of water. Forty stamps are dropping and the usual force of miners is at work.

Rich Strike at Jamison.

The discovery of a splendid body of milling ore is reported from the famous Jamison mine, at Johnsville, Plumas county. The vein is reported to be six to eight feet thick, with its width undetermined. The strike is said to be one of the most promising ever made in the property, and is expected to keep the Jamison in the dividend class. The mine has been one of the most consistent dividend disbursers in the State, its payment of profits extending over a long term of years. Several Southern California capitalists are interested in the property.

Examining Balakiala Smelter.

Chemical engineers, in the service of the Farmers' Protective Association, are making an examination of the Balakala smelter, in an endeavor to ascertain how much damage is being caused to agricultural products by the fumes from the furnace. It is believed that in case the experts report against the plant that a compromise will be agreed upon. The Balaklala Company is making no effort to operate more than one furnace and asserts that little if any, damage is being caused.

Plumas-Eureka in the Ring.

The celebrated Plumas-Eureka mine, near Johnsville, which has paid over of the West. Ore carrying excellent quantities of free gold have recently been extracted, and the forty-stamp mill is operating steadily. A long crosscut is being driven from the Eureka tunnel to intersect the ore bodies known to exist in the Seventy-six workings. These veins yielded splendid ore in the upper workings, and are expected to show consistent values at depth. The new management is developing the property along broad lines, and with unquestioned success.

In Inyo County.

The interest aroused in the Villareal district last fall by the rich discoveries of silver-lead ore in the Villereal group, has been intensified by recent strikes by John Beauregard of Laws. Beauregard sunk through the lava capping and has opened shipping ore in the lime-shale and quartzite formation. This strike proves the district to be more extensive than at first supposed, and has given decided encouragement to owners of other properties. George Wingfield of Goldfield recently became interested in the district, several locations having been recorded for the Nevadan by Massey and Sheehan. The Domingo Mining Company, owning the Villareal group, is maintaining steady shipments of high-grade ore, and continues to refuse to let any leases. All indications point to the belief that Villareal is destined to become one of the great silver-lead camps of the State, and the coming spring and summer is expected to record great animation throughout the district.

The Tri-Metal Company is successfully treating the tailings from the old dumps at Benton. The recently completed cyanide plant is in commission and the company is handling seventy tons of material per day. About 20,000 tons of tailings are available.

COPPER QUEEN SMELTER.

IMPROVEMENTS BEING MADE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 3.—Improvements now in progress at the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas will keep a construction gang of seventy-five men busy for the rest of the year. At present the work is mainly upon a new building, 100x850 feet in area, that is to house two 100-foot reverberatory furnaces and six MacDougall roasters. For the passage of the electrically propelled slag cars that will serve the reverberatories is to be built a tunnel 276 feet long, fifteen feet deep and thirty feet wide, with a center wall of concrete, on which will be set four 400-horse-power boilers. Concentrates will be supplied to the reverberatories by means of a long belt elevator.

Additional flue dust chambers will cover a ground area of 6000 square feet. A new stack for the reverberatories will be 300 feet high and twenty-two feet inside diameter, with walls three and one-half feet thick, containing 1,250,000 brick. It is carefully explained that the purpose of the additions is not necessarily increased copper production, for the full furnace equipment rarely is called upon, but rather to insure more economical and more thorough treatment of concentrates, flue dust and fine sulphide ores that can now be accomplished in the ordinary blast furnaces.

A new 2000-foot shaft will soon be started by the Copper Queen Company between the Lowell shaft and South Bisbee property. It is to be used primarily for ventilation, as the air of the Lowell, with which it will connect on the 1200 level of this property is rather poor.

Sunday work is to be wholly cut out on the Calumet and Arizona properties around Bisbee.

Work has been resumed on the Bisbee Extension mines, fourteen miles west of this place. Thirty miners have been employed, mainly for drifting on the 700 level of the property.

SHIPMENTS FROM THE RAY.

CONDITIONS AT THE CLARA.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 3.—Ore shipments are now going forward from Ray to the bins of the concentrator at Hayden, at the rate of ten or more carloads a day. Of 100 sixty-ton cars ordered, forty have arrived and have been placed in commission. They are being loaded at a great heap of ore, just below shaft No. 1, where was heaped up the valuable stuff encountered in driving a number of underground levels. It is almost wholly of whitish schist, very unlike the average man's conception of ore, yet said to average much better than four per cent. in concentrating copper. When this heap is cleared away, cars will be automatically loaded under steel bins into which the mine skips will be discharged. New head works are being installed at shaft No. 1, below the company's headquarters, while work has been started with energy on shaft No. 2, farther up the canyon.

H. Lieux, a French mining engineer, lately made a close examination of the mines and works of the Clara Consolidated Company at Swansea, in the interest of French stockholders, who have a large proportion of the company's issues. It is told that all employees have been paid in full and that arrangements have been made for resuming production about March 6. There is belief that the company has made connection with some sulphide fluxing ores, so essential to the economical operation of the great furnace.

PICK AND DRILL COMPANY.

ANOTHER GOOD STRIKE MADE.

A few days ago a cross ledge cut through the foot wall of the main ledge of the Pick and Drill property on the 600 foot level in the south drift, about 500 feet from the working shaft. A strong flow of water indicated the nearness to an ore body, and after a crew of men had drifted a short distance on the cross ledge they cut a solid body of high-grade ore, nearly three feet wide, which is of a fine milling character. The ore was carefully sampled across the face and gave average assays of $38.75 per ton in gold.

The ground surrounding this body of ore is very heavily mineralized and has every indication of making a large and permanent body. This makes the sixth shoot of ore that has been encountered in the 1000 feet of drifting on the 600 foot level.

Visiting stockholders and the management of the company are highly elated over the new strike.

ADDITION TO CONCENTRATOR.

ARIZONA COPPER COMPANY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CLIFTON (Ariz.) March 3.—The Arizona Copper Company is building a large addition to its big No. 6 concentrator at Morenci, whereat are especially handled ores from the company's Humboldt mine. Several automatic ore carrying processes have been added to the mill, largely reducing the cost of its operation.

It is claimed that the Shannon plant is now earning about $30,000 a month and that it is producing copper at about 10½ cents cost per pound. The smelter is modern and is cheaply operated and costs have been cut down by the use of Kingman.

INTEREST IN FRISCO MINE.

Property at Union Pass Is Making History.

Wonderful Deposit of Free-Milling Gold Ore.

Samplers Still at Work in Gold Road Mine.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) March 3.—The very center of attraction and interest in Mohave county just now are the mine and mill of the Frisco Mines and Power Company at Union Pass. For two years the New York and New Jersey men constituting the company have been quietly but vigorously developing what is now believed to be one of the biggest deposits of free-milling gold ore in the country. An eighty-ton mill and cyanide plant have just been completed and though scarcely out of the experimental and adjustment stage, the results of milling to date are such as to assure the ultimate success of both mine and mill.

What lends unusual interest to the operations of the Frisco company is the fact that every feature from transportation to milling has been a distinct departure from the methods in vogue here, and though encountering great opposition the management has had the courage of its convictions, and as a reward has met with success in nearly every detail. To begin with, the mine is about fifteen miles from the nearest railroad point, Union, on the Chloride road, and about twenty-five miles from Kingman, the supply point, and when two automobile trucks were installed to take the place of teams for ordinary hauling, nothing but disaster was predicted. As a matter of fact these trucks are still in operation and have saved the company thousands of dollars.

The mine is developed by a series of tunnels and the ore has been so blocked out that it will all be handled through a single main tunnel for several years at least. Hoisting and pumping are entirely eliminated and the character of the ore is such that outside of chutes there is not a single stick of timber in the mine. The ore is nearly uniform in grade and the pillar system of mining will be used, although thousands of tons can be quarried from the surface. All of which make for great economy in mining.

The mill is a departure from the stamp type in use elsewhere in the county and consists of Kennedy crusher, Hardynge Ball and Pebble mills, pulp thickening tank, Pachuca tanks and Burt filter presses. The Hardynge mill and Burt presses are innovations in the district and their results will be carefully watched. The extraction is already 92 per cent., and this will probably be raised 3 or 4 per cent. with adjustment. A Gardner crusher for secondary crushing has been shipped from New York and will be put in at once. J. R. Clair, president of the company, who has been in active charge for several months, has gone to New York, where the question of enlarging the plant to 150 tons will be taken up.

While mill and mine equipment for the most part represent what is latest and perhaps best in mining operations, the feature of the 'Frisco plant that is most important and whose results will be most far-reaching is its power plant, two Meitz-Weiss crude oil internal combustion engines of eighty and fifty horse power each. When the local power house was put into commission about a year ago and electric power was delivered into the Gold Road district at about half the former cost per horse power, it was believed that the last word in cheap power had been said. Now comes a crude oil engine, which in turn again cuts nearly in half the cost of power. Its consumption of fuel is almost incredibly small, a little less than one pint per horse power per hour, and costs laid down at the mine after a fifteen-mile haul from the railroad a fraction under 6 cents per gallon. Judging from the tests of the past two weeks these crude oil engines are marvels of economy and efficiency, and should revolutionize mine power throughout the Southwest.

The Mossback group of mines, owned by the Gold Reed company, has been bonded by T. S. O'Brien, acting for New York men. Water will be drawn from the 300-foot shaft and development started at once. The Mossback is one of the biggest gold-bearing veins in the San Francisco district, twenty feet of its croppings averaging $12 per ton. A crosscut on the 300 level shows an ore body fifty feet wide, assaying between $5 and $6 per ton.

The Tom Reed mine has paid its seventh monthly dividend of 3 per cent. The purchase of the power and pumping plants of the Victor Gold Mines Company is being considered, and if this is done the Tom Reed will at once add to its present capacity and probably begin treating some of its lower-grade ores.

The Gold Road mine shipped gold bullion valued at about $26,000 several days ago. This represents a nine days' run and is quite the best performance of the new mill to date. The mine is still in the hands of the United States Smelting, Refining and Mining Company samplers, who have reached the 800 level in their examination. A sale is almost assured. President Holden, Directors Lyon and Jennings, and Engineer Anderson of the big corporation made another tour of inspection this week of the holdings of its subsidiary company, the Needles Mining and Smelting Company. Two of its mines, the Banner and Champion, in the Cerbat range, are shipping about a car of ore daily each.

At the Ruth mine some slight delay was caused in starting the newly-installed electric power by the presence of water in the oil of the transformers. Work on the mill is proceeding well and it is expected to be in operation by the middle of April. Leyner water drills have been set up in the mine and better headway is being made. Camp houses are all completed and in all the outlook is most favorable.

SMELTER FOR TUCSON.

ALL DOUBT FADES AWAY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 3.—There now seems to be no doubt that Tucson is to have the customs smelter for which her business men have so long striven. The details have been arranged by J. H. Thompson, manager of the Arizona Smelting and Mining Com-for New York to work on the financial features of the enterprise. They have accepted a smelter site, located less than three miles south of the city, close to the tracks of the Nogales line of the Southern Pacific and comprising a tract of 160 acres. This has been donated by the local Chamber of Commerce. Business men of this city and Nogales have, in addition, subscribed for $25,000 in stock of the smelting corporation.

MIAMI MILL MATTERS.

ADJUSTMENT OF TABLES.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 3.—Final adjustment of the concentrating tables of the Miami mill is being made by E. Deister, the inventor, who estimates that the copper recovery from the Miami ores will be between 70 and 80 per cent. The plant is not yet ready, for the hoists have not been equipped with cables and the skips have not been placed. The first of the power plant's electric generators has been tested and the main pumping plant is complete. The date of starting the mill, delayed from month to month, has now been set for March 1, though likely to be later.

Shipments of 27 per cent. sulphide ore are now being made to the El Paso smelter from the Summit mines, eight miles from the railroad at Miami. The ore reserves of the property are being tested, with a view toward determining the best method for reducing the ore that is not worth shipping. Several of the old dumps are said to average about 6 per cent. in concentrating copper. The ore of this property, embracing the well-known Gibson mines, is considered among the richest in this district.

The Warrior is shipping 125 tons of 10 per cent. copper ore daily to El Paso. Much underground exploration is being done by the management, which is now working a force of 110 miners.

Thompson, Towle & Company have wired to Globe that little importance should be attached to reports of probable mergers of the Inspiration and other Globe mining properties.

CLIMAX MINING COMPANY.

GOLD BAR SENT HERE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 3.—Short mill runs made during the past thirty days on the property of the Climax Mining Company on the Hassayampa have resulted in a gold bar valued at $1540, besides a considerable quantity of high-grade concentrates that cannot readily be moved to a market on account of the condition of the roads in this damp season. The bar was sent to Los Angeles, to the Granite Securities Company, which is behind the mining enterprise. The ore for the mill runs was wholly taken out by only two miners, working in a drift on the 475 level. In the lowest level has been struck an odd deposit of what might be called natural concentrates, assaying $93 to the ton.

Increased activity is reported in the vicinity of Mayer, center of the most extensively mineralized section of Arizona, with hundreds of mines valuable for almost every kind of mineral that has produced wealth in the Southwest. A fine strike of silver ore has been made by Vernon Slinkard on a property three miles south of Mayer. Rich copper rock has been found in the Yavapai Metals Company's claims. A new camp has been established by the Texas owners of the Copper Queen and development work is to be resumed at once.

The mill of the Venezia Company in Crook Canyon is again being operated on daylight shifts with large success. The mine has an ore body six-

The prospect well is twenty-four miles north and three or four miles east of the heart of the Kern River field. It is on an anticline running a little south of west from the main mountain range, on the south side of White River. Many years ago in a spring in the lower mountains above this place oil used to gather on the surface of the water showing rainbow colors and giving the water a distinct oily taste. The spring went dry and its location was lost, but pioneer stockmen vouch for its former existence. Oil indications also have been found in wells drilled for water in the White River country, but there are no outcroppings anywhere along the east side as in the Coast Range hills. The Eastern Trading and Oil Company having such a large amount of land tied up is prepared to risk the sinking of hole to a great depth to prove the value of the territory.

STANDARD MOVES OFFICES.

The moving of the headquarters of the producing, purchasing and leasing departments of the Standard Oil Company from San Francisco to this city, which is to be done as soon as offices leased in the new Brower Building are ready for occupancy, which will not only bring to Bakersfield a large amount of additional business, but it will be a great convenience to oil operators, who do a business with the big concern.

The Bakersfield offices will be in direct charge of F. H. Hillman, who has recently come out from the East to assume the management of the producing department of the Standard. Mr. Hillman will not only have authority to make purchases of oil from producers, but will attend to the leasing of lands, both without referring the contracts to the San Francisco office. The establishment of the Bakersfield office is taken to signify an intention on the part of the Standard to still further enlarge its operations in the Kern county fields. During the past two years the Standard has built up a large production in the West Side fields, and has proven a very great amount of land, which, with the experience gained, it can develop rapidly.

Within the past week, the Standard has tapped the gusher sand on sections 30 and 28, 32-24, in the southern part of the Midway field. The first named well is flowing between 5000 and 6000 barrels. The other has been flowing intermittently and shows lots of gas. The oil is light. It is reported that the Standard has been looking over the Lost Hills field and is offering to buy patented land there on condition that a test well develops oil in good quantities. The Standard's well on section 10, 32-23, out in the flat, midway between Taft and Fellows, is flowing about 600 barrels per day of heavy oil from a depth of 3180 feet.

IN THE GUSHER BELT.

On the northeast quarter of section 15, 32-23, the Penn Midway has finished a 700-barrel well at 2670 feet, with 275 feet of oil sand.

The Kalispel on section 5, 32-23, is down about 2400 feet, and expects to tap the gusher sand any moment. The well is close to the Midway Premier's gusher, which is still doing business for the stockholders at steady and uniform rate. The St. Lawrence well No. 3, on the same section, is flowing about 1000 barrels.

The Pyramid has cemented the deepest water sand in its well on section 26, 31-22, and will perforate.

Powerful gas pressure is making very difficult the completion of the Mammoth Oil Company's well No. 2, on section 31, 31-23. An eight-inch casing has been shoved through the gusher sand at a depth of 2270 feet, penetrating 300 feet of oil-bearing shale and sand. The well is now sanded, breaking out of control many times. During some of its periods of flowing, the well made 4000 barrels per day.

The Midway Northern's well No. 1, on section 32, 12-23, is flowing about 1600 barrels per day. Well No. 2 is down about 1000 feet, and No. 3 is to be started with a rotary soon.

PROPERTY MAY BE OPERATED.

OWNERS OF NEW YORK COALINGA MAKE PROPOSITION.

If the Stockholders Complete the Payments Within the Next Thirty Days the Lease Will Be Turned Over to Them—Latest News of Field Operations.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, March 3.—The New York Coalinga property, on 6, 20-15, which was purchased by the Burr Bros. last year, who made the first payment upon it, has been taken back by the York Coalinga Company, of which Smith & Bryner are the heaviest stockholders. The latter company owned the property before it went into the hands of the indicated promoters, and had to take it back for the non-payment of the amounts due. It is understood, however, that if the stockholders can make the payments inside of thirty days, the property will be turned over to the New York Coalinga again. If not, the owners will go ahead and operate the property. H. Henshaw is the manager of the property and says that it is in the worst possible conidtion. He has been working for some time upon it and now has two of the wells on the pump, and is working on another to get in producing.

The K. T. & O., on the line of 31, 20-15, has completed derricks Nos. 3 and 5, and the lumber is on the ground for No. 7. On 11, 19-15, the derricks for locations 12, 6, 8 and 10 have been erected. The work is being pressed as fast as possible, and many of the seventy-five wells planned will be started within a short time. The work will be carried forward acording to the programme, and it is expected that more than thirty strings will be running within the next thirty days.

J. E. Levi, secretary and manager of the Atlanta Oil Company, is here from Los Angeles, and is negotiating for the purchase of the Little Jumbo well and lease for his company. He has had the territory carefully inspected by reputable geologists, and is now awaiting the arrival of the company's attorney before closing the deal.

The Atlanta already has oil property, and Levi claims that it is so financed that it can purchase the Little Jumbo and carry on the drilling the wells to completion, besides drilling two more wells on the other property. He says his company will have one producing well and two drilling within six weeks' time. The Little Jumbo is just outside of the city limits, and the company drilled a well to over 1000 feet, when it had to shut down on account of lack of funds. There is no doubt of the existence of oil at a depth of about 3200 feet. An effort was made a short time ago to get it started again, but the efforts came to naught.

Besides the rig on the property, the hole is said to be in splendid condition to about 900 feet. Most of the casing was taken out of the hole a

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CADDO OIL FIELDS (La.) March 1.—The Caddo oil fields, like all of the gulf country endeavors, are spasmodic and irregular, spotted and uncertain, flourishing for a time, but sooner or later passing out, as has been the case in the Batson, Sour Lake, Spindle Top, Humble and the recent Markham, and what these latter fields are today may be expected, in time, of Caddo.

It is a well-known fact that every hole in the Caddo field was a wildcat up to the time the bailer was run to the bottom for a final test for the oil, the field being so spotted that salt water wells were more frequently brought in, even in the most promising territory, than oil. A well may be gushing at the rate of from two to three thousand barrels a day in a certain locality, while on four sides and within a radius of 300 feet are wells that are either dead or making salt water.

So far, there have been over 600 wells drilled in the Caddo fields and to conservatively place the estimate on the number of wells now producing it would be safe to say that there are not over 175 actually bringing out the fluid from day to day. When the cost of sinking a well is considered, viz., $15,000, and in many instances a great deal more, it can readily be seen that the small operator is justified in being very cautious in his ventures; in fact, the small man is practically excluded from operating in the territory.

Of the big wells that have come in from time to time, varying in their initial production from 2000 to 20,000 barrels per day, there are practically none making over 1000 barrels at the present time, and with one or two exceptions the great majority of the wells are making on the pump anywhere from 50 to 500 barrels. The decrease from the initial production has, in the greater number of cases, been very rapid, falling off from day to day in a very perceptible manner. To verify this statement there is in the Caddo field today a production of both heavy and light oil not to exceed 15,000 barrels. Two months ago this production was up to 25,000 barrels, but within a period of less than six weeks the daily runs had fallen down to less than 11,000 barrels of light oil and about 2000 of heavy oil. And during this period of heavy decrease there were in the neighborhood of fifty wells completed, some of them good producers, but on the most part dry holes.

Thus it can be easily understood why this field, like all the other southern endeavors, seems of an uncertain trend, prone to give the operator a little the worst of the deal, for no sooner than a locality has been thoroughly drained, or rather drilled, another well of a gusher variety opens up in an unexpected quarter, causing a tremor of excitement to run the entire length of oildom, with the result that the big companies immediately take up the land, paying large prices and larger bonuses, hoping thereby to strike something big, or at least wells large enough to pay back some of the money they have lost in the other sections, but ever the same result—spotted, short-lived, dry.

There is a general impression prevalent, however, that there is a pool somewhere. The optimistic oil man ever has this theory, a main pool or body of oil from which those that have already been discovered are but tributaries. One of the foremost geologists of the South, and in fact of the United stating that, in his judgment, the field with the exception of the shallow territor the most part has been covered, ritory.

HAS WELL ON PUMP.

PALMER UNION COMPANY.

The Palmer Union Oil Company's well No. 1 has gone on the pump, and the sand is clearing nicely. As it has something like 300 feet of oil sand and very heavy gas pressure, it is expected to turn into a gusher sooner than have any of the gushers on the Palmer property, which adjoins the Palmer Union on the south. Of these latter, well No. 1 which has been flowing 1600 barrels a day for more than two years, and jumped to 2500 barrels a week ago, is doing a hundred barrels better than that now. Well No. 2 is producing 8000 barrels a day, and well No. 4, which came in at the rate of 5000 barrels, will soon be flowing steadily. Well No. 3 is pumping steadily and flowing by heads, indicating that it will also soon join the gusher class.

Good progress is being made in Palmer Union well No. 2, which has reached a depth of 1682 feet, and in No. 3, which is down 740 feet.

MIDWAY UNION WINS.

TITLE TO OIL LANDS.

The value of the properties of the Midway Union Oil Company has been very much enhanced by a recent decision of the Kern County courts in the matter of title to its San Emidio holdings. Months ago the Midway Union secured by purchase 500 acres in San Emidio, and deeded 400 acres to the San Emidio Oil Company in consideration of the latter company drilling five wells on each of five quarter sections of the land.

The San Emidio Company also agreed to expend $200,000 on the property. Upon completion of these wells the Midway Union will still own 100 acres of valuable land. The first well of the San Emidio Company is now down 200 feet, and it is the intention to proceed with development. The Midway Union also has extensive options on oil lands in the immediate neighborhood of its present holdings.

PLANS OF GUARANTY.

ITS VARIOUS PROPERTIES.

Superintendent Burdick of the Guaranty Oil Company has more than doubled the production of the Coalinga property within sixty days. He is now having constructed 30,000 barrel storage so as to take care of the oil until the Producers' Transportation Company's lines get back again to their full capacity, as they have been retarded by the cold weather and the rains.

Superintendent Dart in the Midway is putting in a circulator in Guaranty No. 3 which is down about 1800 feet. This will aid him very materially in finishing this big well properly and every indication shows to it being a big Line bonds will commence April 1 and soon thereafter construction work will commence. This line is going to be a great aid to the producers and it will be of inestimable benefit to Southern California. It is an enterprise that ranks in benefits with other great movements of harbors, aqueducts, and municipal railroads.

Good Showing of Oil.

The Range Sixteen Oil Company, down 1000 feet on its Vallecitos field property, is getting a good showing of light oil in the bailer. As the shale formation is very hard at this point, the drill making only ten feet to the shift, the conclusion is that there is tremendous gas pressure in the pay sands below, to force the oil up into it. The Vallecitos Development Company, adjoining the Range Sixteen on the east, is down several hundred feet less than the latter, but started drilling at about that much less elevation. It is also getting a showing of oil reports of the Geological Survey state that light oil will be found at that depth in paying quantities.

Dawson Feeling Good.

The Dawson Oil Company has landed its 12½-inch casing at 1050 feet, and put in the ten-inch. It expects to bring in the well in a short time. The company is feeling good over the test of the oil in the adjoining American Sunset well, which is 23 degs. Baume. The August well is down 600 feet.

Making Steady Progress.

The Venice and Kern Realty and Oil Company is making steady progress in its well near San Luis Obispo. It is down more than 2900 feet, the gas pressure is getting stronger, and there is steadily a larger showing of oil in the bailer. It is expected to encounter the oil sands at considerably less than 3400 feet. Geological reports

VAN NUYS AND LANKERSHIM LANDS

Los Angeles has swung wide open the gates of her largest suburb—and hundreds are pouring in—the wise ones in ADVANCE of the electric road which is now rapidly forging its way to this remarkable stretch of fertile land that is almost within the very city limits of Los Angeles. Big things are being done in a big way on Van Nuys and Lankershim lands by the millionaire developers back of it all. Every local real estate authority recognizes it as the greatest suburban home project that Southern California has ever known. And tidy fortunes are going to be made by those who invest NOW in these lands. Values are going to rise as surely and steadily as the mercury rises in the thermometer. With $500,000.00 worth of asphalt boulevards under way, an electric car line from Los Angeles being constructed, settlers pouring in, buildings springing up on all sides, orchards and gardens being planted—WHAT BETTER STIMULUS COULD SUBURBAN LAND VALUES HAVE? And there's nothing of a boom nature about it at all—just a natural development that would have taken place twelve years ago if a stubborn estate hadn't held it back.

We are equipped to intelligently show you Van Nuys and Lankershim lands. We won't have to dilate on the fruit growing, dairying, poultry, suburban home and straight investment opportunities the lands offer—your own good judgment will determine them. But go with us and see everything under comfortable conditions. Remember—Van Nuys and Lankershim lands are the LAST THAT'S LEFT! Los Angeles can open no more suburbs. The history of Pasadena, Hollywood, and Eagle Rock will be repeated here—but this will be the LAST TIME.

AN 8% DIVIDEND STOCK

the stock of the

"Southern California Syndicate Improvement Company"

ALEX. CULVER, PRESIDENT

Many of our friends have asked us to put them in on something that will pay better than keeping their money in Savings Banks and we have now decided to offer them something that is a safe and sound investment of their money.

Realizing that the profits in building Bungalows in Los Angeles are greater than almost any other conservative investment, we have organized the "SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SYNDICATE IMPROVEMENT COMPANY," fo rthe purpose of developing our properties along these lines. And we heerby guarantee dividends of at least 8 per cent. on all the stock of the Company for this year. After the first year dividends should be greatly increased—almost doubled.

The "SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SYNDICATE IMPROVEMENT COMPANY" is the owner in fee simple of the thirty acre Subdivision—known as the Hyperion Tract, which is the basis on which the Company was organized. We invite our friends to subscribe to this stock with the full knowledge that it will become a handsome dividend payer, besides increasing in value.

IN THE EARTH.

Rare Minerals, Metallurgy and Chemistry.

To Correspondents.

Some Crystals.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Samples from Music Mountains, Arizona.

Yours truly,
R. P. D.

ANSWER: You submit seven chips of rock and mineral. One sample is quartz; crystal variety, and in small clusters. One other sample is azurite, an ore of copper, carrying silver. One more sample is quartz (calciferous,) with copper oxide a trace. The remaining samples are of hematite (iron peroxide) iron oxides; gypsum, crystallized in microscopical forms and geode-like; and limonitic iron ore. The samples should have been tagged, and fewer in number.

Graphite.

POMONA, Jan. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Samples in San Bernardino county fifteen miles north and east of Pomona.

Yours respectfully,
J. W.

ANSWER: Graphite (very much resembling molybdenite) is disseminated throughout the limonitic-aluminous mass, in cuneiform characters, and with massive black graphite on one side of specimen. As a commercial proposition, however, the graphite present amounts to but little.

Impure Ball Clay.

ESCONDIDO, Jan. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find sample which was taken from a creek bed near Escondido, Cal. Kindly inform me through The Times what it is and if it has any commercial value? Obliging.

Yours truly,
O. L.

ANSWER: The clay would answer for second-grade biscuit-ware in pottery manufacture, if mixed with feldspar and quartz.

An Ore of Aluminum.

EL CENTRO, Jan. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find sample of rock (?). Some say it is called magnesite and some say a salt formation. Will you kindly inform me in "In the Earth" what it is?

It was found ten miles west of El Centro.

Yours respectfully,
L. A. M.

ANSWER: In all probability material represented by the sample occurs very sparingly.

It is an efflorescent alum salt; in part a crystallized sulphate of aluminum, with magnesia and iron present in the mass.

Iron Carbonate Present.

PASADENA, Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a sample which I got from a four-inch vein in a 40-foot surface tunnel twenty-two miles east of Acton, Cal.

What is the black shiny substance? Does it carry gold-bearing sulphides, or free gold?

I will thank you for your opinion in the "In the Earth" column of The Times.

Yours very truly,
H. B.

ANSWER: The "shiny" matter you refer to is botryoidal (grape-like) limonite, hydrous iron oxide. The yellow is limonite. Sulphides not present. Free gold absent.

Granitic Rock.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would like to know kind of mineral contained in inclosed samples.

Yours truly,
H. W. B.

ANSWER: The samples are granitic, and carry iron oxides with manganese dioxide in spots throughout the mass.

This rock has been frequently confused with, and as an ore of tin. Absolutely no tin is present. Correspondents should give approximate localities of sample.

More Samples Requested.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please name inclosed sample and state if of commercial value. It appears to me to be nitrate, tasting like saltpeter and burning with great energy when ignited.

It is found within twenty miles of Los Angeles in a northerly direction.

Respectfully,
C. W. B.

ANSWER: On the day when San Francisco obtained the vote of Congress for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915, we tested the sample in parts only. Why? Because we put it in a long-handled spoon and lighted it with a match.

It affords us pleasure to confirm the qualitative test performed by you; it tastes like saltpeter, and it burns with great energy when ignited.

We have sent you sufficient postage for a pound or more of the substance, and hope to write further regarding the ore (?) in the near future.

Probably in the many exhibitions, fiestas, etc., of the future in California, where a "green-light fire" or any other old color is desired, all that will be necessary is to obtain the stuff from you, provide a spoon and matches to each reveller, and the material will do the rest. B. P. O. Elks could utilize the "ore" to great advantage in the initiation of candidates.

Not Diamond.

PARKER (Ariz.) Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find with letter of inquiry piece from stone picked up in California six miles north of Parker. The original weighs a fraction less than three ounces.

I think it is a semi-opal. It was picked up on Macy, below some very high and rugged mountains. This piece I send is a fracture on one end. The whole stone is as clear as the piece I am sending you. Please tell me what it is? Publish my letter in The Times.

Respectfully,
MRS. J. H. G.

ANSWER: The fractured sample weighed less than one-fourth of a grain, it is under 7 in hardness.

It is a variety of quartz of but little commercial value.

Probably upon testing the entire specimen results would be different.

Calicha.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Jan. 31.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am a subscriber to The Times through your agent here, and am sending you a sample of some stuff of which there is an abundance close here, and there is a lot of speculation as to whether it can be used in any way for mortar or plaster in building; so to settle the matter am sending you sample.

Thanking you in advance, I am,
Yours truly,
E. L. Y.

ANSWER: The sample is Calicha (lime carbonate granular, and in massive forms.)

It would answer for mortar, etc., where a better grade limestone is not obtainable for the kiln.

Impure Gypsum.

SANTA ANA, Feb. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The white powder inclosed in the box was taken from a of? Must a letter with sample to you be sent in the same package?

Thanking you for many favors, I am,
Yours respectfully,
E. E. B.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. The sample is gypsum but very impure. Present with the granular mixture we find lime carbonate, sodium chloride, magnesium chloride and sulphur.

Letter and sample should be forwarded to us by mail with properly tagged specimens in one container.

The habit of submitting specimens with letter of advice on a visiting card is decidedly objectionable.

Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find inclosed a piece of rock from Humboldt county, Nev. I suspect silver. Kindly state in "In the Earth" what it does contain. Yours truly,
G. G. J.

ANSWER: The rock is quartz, variety impure jasper, and the impurities consist of various iron oxides, traces of zinc, and silver sparingly present.

Manganese Present.

FULLERTON (Cal.) Jan. 31.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have been much interested in the "In the Earth" department of The Times, and I have a small sample of some kind of ore that I got on government land in an unknown district about twenty-five miles northeast of Paradise Valley, Nev.

There is thirty to forty feet of a ledge. I am not acquainted with minerals so cannot tell what it is. Some tell me it is bismuth. I had it assayed and the assayer told me that it was the first of that kind of rock he had ever assayed from the State of Nevada, and that he had been in that business for thirty years.

Now, will you please tell me what it is and what it contains? Thanking you in advance, I am,

Respectfully,
C. A. W.

ANSWER: The sample is quartz. The oxides present, when roasted, do not become magnetic. Before the blow-pipe on platinum wire with fluxes the powdered oxides react for manganese only.

Feldspathic Rock.

LONG BEACH, Jan. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will thank you very much if you will favor us with a description of the inclosed sample in your department at your earliest convenience.

It has been suggested that it carries tellurium; as its assays show more values in gold than are indicated by horning.

And if it is not asking too much, will you kindly state whether the component parts would make the ore refractory.

Thanking you, I am,
Sincerely yours,
H. V. K.

ANSWER: Tellurium is not present in the mass. The disseminated streaks and specks somewhat resembling tellurides when viewed with the naked eye consist of stibnite (antimony sulphide) iron oxides and zinc-lead traces.

If you mean by the term "refractory" an ore that would not plate its full gold value at the battery—the ore would be refractory.

The concentrates from this ore sent to a smelter would probably be classified as refractory.

Wulfenite.

CRESCENT (Nev.) Jan. 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find samples carrying vanadium pentoxide.

This comes from a large lead owned by Mr. C. C. O., Crescent, Nev., and from Old Crescent, about fourteen miles westerly from the town of Searchlight, in same dining district.

Kindly inform Mr. C. C. O. of per cent. values and if same would pay to concentrate for vanadium present.

Thanking you in advance for interest taken in vanadium values by The Times,
Truly yours,
H. M. B. (M. E.).

ANSWER: Some of the most peculiar and irregular finds of rare minerals are obtainable in the district by you referred to. At one point vanadates are in place; at another a zinc (blende) "possessing the little understood property of tribo-luminescence;" and, again, mineral such as you submit in close proximity with lead oxides, lead sulphates, and lead carbonates; and made up—like Joseph's coat—of many colors. No wonder that the mining boys in the hills "get buffaloed" (as they often write us that they do) in such a locality. With you it is different; your knowledge, as a mining engineer, and training in mineralogy comes to your aid always.

We take pleasure in giving results of our analysis on the three specimens of minerals submitted, sampled together. Vanadium is not present. Samples are wulfenite (lead molybdate.)

Sooty Oil Residuum.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 31.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Southern California. Yours truly, R. G. D.

ANSWER: Your two words on business card should have been more explicit, but as the native soot (?) as it were, is of some moment, the stuff will be described as follows:

The specific flue or chimney from which sample was obtained was for reasons, probably satisfactory, not given by you.

The material is an oil residuum and will make pigment (paint,) properly ground in oil, etc.

Nagyagite.

WALL STREET (Boulder County, Colo.) Feb. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The samples with this come from a claim ending on to the Golden Age mine near "Jimtown," Colo.

We have always regarded this ore as sylvanite (telluride,) and it carries gold values.

It roasts with blow-pipe or furnace like sylvanite, and leaves the gold-silver globules on the rock after roasting.

What gets us is that an eastern buyer of tellurium ores after agreeing to buy the sylvanite returned the samples with a curt note and writing—"not desired."

Will you please tell us what the trouble is?

Thanking you in advance, we remain,
Your friends,
B. & M.,
"Prospectors."

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you, boys. You do well to smother your anger and make an inquiry before "jumping upon" the eastern buyer. Results—is the only word in human industry nowadays.

The sample is nagyagite and not sylvanite (telluride of gold and silver.)

Nagyagite is a telluride of lead and gold, and carries traces only of silver; some 50 per cent. of lead and over 30 per cent. of tellurium. It is of lower specific gravity than sylvanite.

True, globules can be roasted, as by you described, on either mineral.

"Nagyagite is soluble in nitric acid, leaving a residue of sulphur."

It calls for aqua-regia to test sylvanite in the manner following:

Sylvanite placed in aqua-regia dissolves; from the solution chloride of silver separates out, and on the order of some bismuth ores—if to the solution water is added a white precipitate is thrown down.

True sylvanite carries but a trace of lead.

SENATOR WATSON

government of 45 cents a ton, or a total of $675,000. Canada is getting more revenue from us, therefore, than we are getting from Canada, with respect to coal. If coal were on the free list, we might lose a part of the New England market in competition with Nova Scotia and its cheap water transportation, but the whole of West Canada would be thrown open to us and we should profit immensely by the arrangement."

"Dr. Holmes, the government director of mines," I said, "declares that American mining methods are very wasteful."

"We are producing 450,000,000 tons of coal a year, and, I suppose, are wasting 125,000,000 tons—that is, we are leaving that quantity of coal behind, or are making its use impossible by one way or another. The competition between regions and between mines in the same region has caused us to follow the easiest and cheapest methods. If there are an eight-foot, a six-foot, and a four-foot vein in the same property, we are likely to work the largest vein and to let the rest of the coal remain in the ground.

"People are talking about the conservation of natural resources. Sometimes conservation may be practical and sometimes it may be theoretical or sentimental. A farmer moves into a wooded country. He must have bread and he cuts down his trees and plants corn. The trees are big and straight and would make fine lumber, but there is no railroad or other means of transportation and the farmer hauls them to a corner of his field and burns them up. Necessity governs him, opportunity is closed to him, and he does the best he can under all the circumstances. The case of the farmer has its analogies in mining and manufacturing. If our consumption of coal increases as fast in the future as it has in the past our supply of fuel will be exhausted in another century. But it will not increase in any such proportions. Anyway, if our coal runs out there will be a substitute. Our grandfathers burned whale oil and our fathers burned coal oil, but we are lighting our houses and streets with gas and electricity. Nature and the inventive genius of man are invariably equal to any emergency."

ALWAYS A POLITICIAN.

"Have you always taken a serious interest in politics?"

"Yes; even in the days when I was around the mines. However, I never used a megaphone. Loud noises seem to be necessary in politics — noises about one's achievements and what he means to do. However, I had no thought of ever running for office myself."

"Are you a progressive Democrat?"

"You are using a very respectable word," Senator Watson answered. "It's an honest word, but it has been overused and distorted until it has lost its former meaning and standing. I am not a progressive Democrat, as the phrase now goes, but I am an aggressive Democrat. In other words, I realize that conditions change in politics and government as well as in business and everything else. The old standpatters in both parties should remember that the world moves, and that the people, when practically all of them are of the same mind, will not tolerate stagnation or obduracy, or be diverted from their purposes by reactionaries."

"Are the trusts hurting the country?"

"Eliminating the word trusts and substituting the word corporations, I will say that large aggregations of capital that do business in secret are injurious to the people. The business of all corporations should be made known, first to the share owners, and then, if there is any demand for the facts, to the public. There are corporations in the United States so secretly managed that everything pertaining to them is withheld from the small stockholders. Men who buy the shares of such concerns do so on a guess. If they want to put their money into corporations of that kind and trust to luck, they can do so, of course, but the public buys the products of the corporations—indeed, it must go to the corporations as the only source of supply for the products—and should be protected against extortion.

"Publicity would stop overcharges and clear the commercial atmosphere. It is a very large and important question. Into it comes a peculiar state of facts that may be made plain by a little illustration. If I own a grocery store in a village, for instance, and buy an interest in the only other grocery store in that village, what is likely to happen? I will run the store that I own in part in a way that will lessen its competition with the store that I own altogether. Moreover, I will establish a scale of prices. Now, if after purchasing an interest in the second store, I were to borrow the amount of money so paid by putting a mortgage on the interest so acquired, it follows that I should come into control of the grocery trade in that village by a system of finance that gives me a complete monopoly without increasing my original investment. In short, I should use borrowed funds with which to buy into a competing grocery, to increase my own profits and build up my own property. It follows, naturally, that everybody in the village, except myself, is a loser. You have heard of high finance," Senator Watson said, lighting a match and letting it burn, and watching the blaze and smoke intently. "Well, the suppositional grocery transaction is quite common in the United States of America."

VIEWS ON RICH MEN.

"Do you think that the rich men are a menace to society?"

"I can guess the purpose of your question," Senator Watson said in perfect good humor. "Personally, I should like to be a menace of the kind you mention. I have been described as being a rich man. Since coming to Washington, I have been made to feel that the public has taken an inventory of my possessions and found them to be of uncomfortable proportions. As a matter of fact, all that I have is in my business. If my business prospers, I shall prosper. I am, as I told you, the heaviest borrower in West Virginia. Plenty of salaried men in Washington can meet their bills easier than I can meet my bills. The wealth of every one is always overvalued.

"I have thought," Senator Watson went on to say, "that no man, unless he discoveerd a wonderful gold or diamond mine, could make $100,000,000 fairly. Money acquired by speculation is undesirable money, in my view. There are many good men in Wall street. They are investors. I have great respect for an investment banker, but no respect for a speculative banker. I go to New York and see brokers getting rich by taking the money of chambermaids and coachmen. I would rather dig coal than live by such methods. Money made by developing the country and by giving employment to labor is worthy money and honors its possessor. Thus I reply to your question."

"How do you like being a Senator?"

"I am not ready to give an answer. I shall like being a Senator if I can be useful. It would be unfortunate if Congress were composed wholly of business men. They would be incom-do that. Yet there is room for men of business and need of them."

"You have been put on the Indian Committee," I said. "What do you know about Indians?"

"I didn't know anything about them," and Senator Watson smiled for the first time, "until after I became a candidate for the Senate."

NEW COMPANY OPENS OFFICES.

The United States Farm Land Company of St. Paul, Minn., have opened temporary offices at 311 Howe Building. Permanent quarters are to be taken in the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank Building, upon the completion of that structure. The interests of the company in this city are looked after by E. P. De La Hunt, manager, and E. M. Robertson, assistant manager. The company owns lands in the States of Oregon and California, these including the Chowchilla Ranch of 108,000 acres, located in Merced and Madera counties in the San Joaquin Valley, and the Williamette and Cascade road grant of 800,000 acres in Oregon. The Rancho Del Paso, or Haggin Grant, comprising 44,000 acres adjoining the city of Sacramento, has lately been taken over by the company and subdivided into small tracts.

FINE ROAD UNDER WAY.

Motorists traveling between Pasadena and Los Angeles will find within a brief time a new highway of the highest excellence near the Sierra Park tract. IN THE DOMAIN OF SCIENCE.

"American ingot iron" has been laced on the market. It has a high esistance to corrosion, and is therefore pecially valuable as a structural ma-rial. It closely resembles wrought on. It differs from steel in that its ontents of carbon, manganese and sili-n are only fractions of the amounts ordinary soft steel. It is produced in basic open-hearth furnace and the ual ferro manganese recarburizer is itted, and ferro silicon or its equivant is used to purify the bath of its xides. Aluminum is added in the dle to carry off the gases dissolved the fluid metal. Relative corrosionsistance tests with sulphuric acid ow that this "American ingot iron" s forty to sixty times the resistance steel and twenty to forty times the sistance of wrought iron, with which is otherwise practically identical in pearance, strength and ductility.

M. V. Henri in Caout et Gutta-percha
vol. vii. p. 4, 371) describes experi-ents to show the effect of the ultraiolet rays upon pure and vulcanized bber. In the case of pure rubber it came darker and more shiny within enty hours, and showed cracks when retched. With vulcanized rubber a nger time was required to produce milar results—from forty-eight to venty-two hours, while rubber im-egnated with mineral matter was afcted to a less extent. It was found at rubber exposed to the rays in the sence of oxygen, was not affected, d the change is attributed to oxidan promoted by the action of the rays.
e rays effecting the deterioration ere found to be those of a wave ngth of about 3650, which were abrbed in the rubber. The conclusion awn from the experiments is that the velope of a balloon should never be nstructed of unvulcanized rubber, d should be colored with some pig-ent, such as lead chromate, which uld act as a screen in cutting off the ra-violet rays to which a balloon is more exposed the higher it goes.

In plants, especially those where oil used for the production of power, ry material saving may be made ing the waste gases in the producof electrolytic oxygen and hydro-from water. The process is very ple, and can be carried out to any desired. The oxygen and hydro-are collected in separate gasome-and can readily be compressed a pressure of 120 atmospheres, and be sold in that form; but the main object is to mix the gen in certain proportions with the used to burn the oil, whereby a saving is made in the efficiency of plant. In the industrial arts hydro-is most valuable for soldering and ing, and the two gases form the hydrogen flame. The gases ob-used in making sulphuric acid

The Brass World, vi. 349, is authority for the statement that it is possible to produce blisters on perfect sterling silver by overheating it during annealing in an oxidizing atmosphere. It is generally assumed that the blisters are the fault of the metal itself, and are caused by careless or inperfect melting, but this is said to be wrong, and that sterling silver cannot be blistered when a reducing flame is used for annealing, but only when an oxidizing flame is used. The theory advanced is that silver absorbs oxygen energetically when the temperature approaches the melting point.

The French claim that a storage battery is being put on the market in Paris, which is the most powerful in the world. The Edison Storage Battery Company claim that their battery, of the type known as A4, has an output of 13.3 watt hours per pound, and their type A6 an output of 16.8 watt hours per pound; wheras, the French concern is manufacturing one type of battery which it claims has an output of 17 watt hours per pound, and another with an output of 27.3 watt hours per pound.

The offer of $5000 in prizes in a competition between warships for showing economy in power production, resulted in saving a $1,000,000 a year. The presumption is that the engineering staffs of the ships were ordinarily watchful of extravagance before the prize system was inauguarted, yet the result showed great waste. The Iron Age, suggests that these facts should be very suggestive of possible economies in the powerhouses of manufacturing plants.

Prof. V. F. Soddy, the celebrated investigator of radium emanation, transmutation of metals, etc., has just stated that the minimun period of growth of radium in some old solutions of Uranium is 35,000 years, and that the previous estimates of the rate of growth are withdrawn not being confirmed by later measurements. The previous estimates were that the rate of growth of the radium corresponded to the square of the time it was growing.

The Trenwith mine in Cornwall, Eng., has yielded some 500 mg. of radium product, containing about 10 per cent. of pure radium-bromide. This is the first extracted in Great Britain from British ore. It came from the concentrates of pitch-blende from Cornish mines.

An experiment of recovering cement from recently used cement bags, resulted in obtaining 4130 pounds of cement from 7398 bags.

Electrical engineers of the highest standing assert that for telephone purposes an underground cable is far more efficient than overhead wires.

It is estimated that if all the power used in England was distributed in the form of electricity (made with coal) from three or four central stations, it would reduce the coal consumption from 150,000,000 tons, to 60,000,000.

An electric foot warmer is made by joining two 16-candle-power incandescent lamps in series to make them burn low, and covering them with a woven wire casing.

It is said that a cement tank may be made tight and clean enough for cider, vinegar, etc., by first applying two coats of cement and water, and then a coat of melted paraffine.

Spread a solution of paraffine and benzine over a "gluing-up" table, and the removal of dried glue on it is effected by simply knocking it off.

HENRY ARDEN.

The Body Is a Fat Factory

When a man or a woman grows fat and huge, flabby layers of this worthless flesh makes them miserable, it is a certain sign that somewhere within the organism of that man or woman there is something radically wrong. The healthy man or woman digests all that is good in food and throws off in a natural manner all that is bad. This is what the digestive juices are made for. When these juices are weakened or too powerful they can not get the good things out of the nourishment we eat, and hence they turn into the blood that which makes fat. It is very simple to correct these juices in a fat person. This secret has been demonstrated in the famous Marmola Tablets which now have such a tremendous sale. They reduce fat at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They correct the faulty juices and give to the body the very nutrition it needs. They remove fat in a natural manner, but they do it so quickly as to be almost beyond belief. You do not have to diet or exercise, and you may eat what you will. These little tablets are the result of a demand on the part of the public for a form of the famous Marmola prescription that will permit a fat person to carry his fat reducer with him at all times, so that each meal will add no more fat to his body. Marmola Tablets are sold by every druggist, or you may write the Marmola Company, 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and a case will be sent you privately by mail. The price of Marmola Tablets is 75c everywhere.

Making Money is Easy at
BELL FLOWER ACRES
30 MIN. from L.A. on Pacific Electric

Actual photograph of one of the flowing artesian wells which supply unlimited free water to Bell Flower Acres.

People here are making big money from onions, potatoes, garlic and berries, and netting $300 to $400 per acre per year from apples.

And yet, these acres which yield such enormous returns, located right at the door of Los Angeles, and with unlimited free water (an extraordinary thing in this country)—are today selling at $350 to $700 per acre! The price is actually less than you can buy choice farming lands for several times as far from the city.

At Bell Flower you enjoy the charm of the open country—and still are in quick reach of the city by Santa Ana electric car. Many people here are making all or a large portion of their living from a single acre—and at the same time, working daily in Los Angeles.

Bell Flower is the greatest acreage opportunity near Los Angeles today. You can't turn it down for anything else if you investigate and get the facts.

Come to our office and see photographs of Bell Flower and samples of the soil—or better still, go with us to Bell Flower at our expense, and see with your own eyes. If not convenient to call at our office, or, if you wish to go on Sunday, take Santa Ana car at Pacific Electric Station. Get ticket for Somerset. Our Mr. Symons will meet you at the car. SOME PRINCES OF THE SOUTH.

BY MAJ. BEN C. TRUMAN.

me of the loveliest old gentlemen o ever lived in Los Angeles was . J. S. Griffin, who was a surgeon ring the Mexican war and took up permanent residence here imme- tely after that conflict had ceased. was a Virginian, and sympathized ly with the South and secession. d although he remained on good ms with northern people and Re- blicans hereabouts he always re- red to them as Yankees and occa- nally as the "damned Yankees"— generally jocosely. He was tall d gray and handsome and was quite d of a glass of Kentucky wine, but t to any excess. His sister was the fe of Albert Sidney Johnston, and death of that distinguished com- nder at Shiloh, on April 6, 1862, her intensified the dear old physi- n's animosity, although the old ny officers hereabouts in the 60's ed him, all the same, and he was y fond of them.

first met him at dinner at Don Be- o Wilson's Lake Vineyard in March, 7, and we struck up a good feeling each other that never met abate- nt; indeed, a few hours before he d he requested Hancock Johnson to to it that I was one of his pall- rers. When I took up my residence Los Angeles in 1872, Dr. Griffin's s of thousands of sheep roamed er where East Los Angeles and ghland Park, Garvanza and Pasa- na are beauty-spots, and where ny thousands of people make their mes. Even on the west side of the er his sheep grazed by the thous- ds.

Not long after Riverside became a omising colony a number of In- nians came to Los Angeles for the press purpose of creating a some- at like colony to that of Riverside; d in a few weeks they were sizing Dr. Griffin's San Pasqual ranch w Pasadena) where, as the doctor ed to say, half of his sheep used en to die on account of the scarcity the natural grasses. At that time I ned the Daily Star, and late at ht the doctor often came in and d the Indiana Yankees were "nos- round the San Pasqual, where a spectable jack-rabbit wouldn't be n." One night he came in, stimu- ted with at least two good slugs of urbon, and said:

"Truman, I'm going to land those ol Yankees, sure; they have made their minds to buy the San Pas- al. I pity them."

In a few days, sure enough, the In- nians purchased the San Pasqual, d the same night the sale was con- ded the lovely old doctor came into y office, not "three sheets in the nd," but boozed to the limit of adiness, and came up to my desk d said:

"Truman, I've sold the San Pas- al at $6.60 an acre, and got the aft in my pocket."

And then he went quietly towards e open street door; but before reach- it he turned quickly around, and tting his right forefinger beside his se, he gave a loud laugh and ejacu- ted:

"Truman, I've got the best of the mned Yankees at last!"

Less than twenty years afterward, d long before the doctor died, sixty t on Colorado street sold for more an he received for the whole ranch; d Pasadena, today, "where a re- ectable jack-rabbit wouldn't be n," in 1872, is a Mecca for many llionaire tourists, and is pronounced e of the jewel cities of the world.

Undoubtedly one of the gentlest, one the most respectable and the most pected of all old-timers was F. P. Temple, who in the 70's was one of s owners of the Temple Bank. He should have been a woman, and en he would have been one of the blest and kindest-hearted of that . It was his brother who built the mple Block, but the subject of this agraph owned the whole or parts of umber of the finest ranches in Los geles county. But one day he con- ded he would be a banker; and with old-timer named Workman, he es- lished the Temple and Workman k, and he put in one of his sons three young Englishmen as clerks, not only drew substantial salaries, who had the clever faculty of king loans to themselves. Mr. ple was so lovingly liked that a ber of the richest people in the rushed to become depositors, but st of the loans made were to the ches, who were not gamblers nor rollers, but who neither made d their loans nor the interest there- So when the Bank of California ed its doors temporarily, in 1845, Temple and Workman Bank did wise. But Mr. Temple managed to in the then Lucky Baldwin to ad- ce him nearly or quite a quarter million dollars wherewith to re- n his bank, which Baldwin not only do, but charged him ten per cent., ch he collected in advance, and mortgages on all his ranches. re never was a slicker piece of eel highwaymanship ever known. same staff of borrowing clerks as- ed their same old places, and in a t time the Temple and Workman k closed—this time forever— g a tremendous sum of money to Doriah Jones, Prudent Beadury hundreds of others, none of whom received four cents on a dollar. climax was dreadful; Mr. Work- killed himself and Mr. Temple died broken heart.

t on the merest slope overlooking San Gabriel Valley were the homes our or five men and their families d for their hospitality and good r forty odd years ago. There was Pasadena nor East Los Angeles, other town or settlement, and only house between this fringe of or- ds and vineyards and a half mile of the Los Angeles River. There no fences nor other obstructions; here was one road there were sands. The house referred to was vn as the "Five Mile House," ch was about half way between Vineyard and the location now vn as the Bullard Block.

e place first reached was "El Mo- del Rey"—the mill of the king— better known as "Colonel Kewen's. e were no locks on the doors, but strings all around. There was al- s abundance of great cheer, in h the wine of Kentucky and the s of France were in full sight in cked cupboards and on tables and ves. The colonel was a south- r of culture and adventure. was born in Columbus, (Ga.,) educated at some college, and was most classical orator (as I have re stated incidentally) in South- California. He had once been a uster, but did not share the fate of ker and some others. Being a herner he was a secessionist, but visitors were treated alike. Had dell Phillips or Joshua Giddings d and tied their horses to one of colonel's choices orange trees, bles would have been trotted out, icken would have been killed and a la Maryland by the charming Kewen's own beautiful and aris- atic hands and all would have been merry as if potentates had been ers instead. Mrs. Kewen was born lorida, and she could converse in nish or French, crochet a scarf or sing a song, kill a young rooster a rifle, roast a turkey, hitch up a , preside at a bounteous repast, children—two of whom are still g—mend a wayfarer's suspenders ew on a button on trousers or . She was simply a southern-born with no frills.

[illegible] "Lake Vineyard," or "Wilson's." This place was visited oftener than any other in Southern California, partly because the vineyards and orange groves were the prettiest and best kept in that day. Don Benito (Benjamin) Wilson was not so showy nor so picturesque as his neighbor Kewen; but, although born poor in Tennessee, he was a man of great brain and untiring industry, and with so much modesty and integrity as to fascinate all who were ever an hour in his precious presence. His house, too, was open to all visitors and there were spare bedrooms for those who made themselves guests over night. Mr. Wilson's first wife was a Mexican woman named Yorba, and he had a son John and a daughter Susanne, who became the wife of J. de Barth Shorb in 1868—and the widow Shorb is still living in San Francisco and is the mother of married children. Mr. Wilson's second wife was an American named Hereford—and if ever an angel lived on earth it was this same quiet, lovely woman. I first met her at her own table forty-four years ago, and visited Lake Vineyard a number of times during the six or seven years afterward. I was so enchanted with the prettiness and angelic manners of the two little Wilson children; one of them married George Patton and Mrs. Patton is the mother of a very beautiful, statuesque young woman and also of a fine stalwart boy who graduated with high honors from West Point about four or five years ago; and, by the way, this boy, who is doing fine service in our army, is the grandson of a brave Confederate General who lost his life on the battlefield of Antietam. These are incidents that make Americans noble and patriotic and our Government the greatest and best on earth. And, I may add, another grandson of Gen. Patton, who fell mortally wounded for a cause he thought just, was a graduate from the Naval Academy some six or seven years ago.

Near Lake Vineyard was "Sunny Slope," or "Rose's place," the owner of which came to Southern California after the civil war, but who soon had the handsomest orange and walnut orchards in the State. I think Mr. Rose had been for many years a boatman on the Mississippi River. But he took to horticulture so remarkably as to astonish all who had been in it for years. He was the first to introduce sub-irrigation and the first to graft the navels on old seedless trees. He also was the first man to breed fine horses in Southern California and the leader in the establishment of our agricultural industries. He once served as State Senator and was open-handed and openhearted in everything that was for the benefit of Southern California. His death was a great loss to this section, and I think he left two sons and two or three daughters, two of the latter having married between twenty-five and thirty years ago. I have always thought that the name of L. J. Rose was written high up in the annals of Los Angeles county.

Further along lived L. N. Titus, whose orange groves and other possessions called "Dew Drop," seemed as clean and as fresh as if swept with a broom every morning. Mr. Titus was also a horse breeder and owned the fastest trotter in Los Angeles county. A grown daughter carried out the social duties and became the wife of Capt. Newton, an ex-officer of the Union army. Their two daughters are living and are married.

In 1870 General George Stoneman, U. S. A., retired, took up a piece of Government land near by a few acres he had purchased and called his place "Los Robles." He set out a tract with Burgundy grape cuttings, built a winery and in a few years manufactured what he termed a Burgundy wine; but it did not catch on as such, and so he turned it into a brandy and afterwards went into politics and became Governor of our State. About this time J. de Barth Shorb built for himself and family a fine residence near the Wilson house on Lake Vineyard and he at once engaged in wine and brandy making, in improving orange culture, building reservoirs, and in many other ways honoring the section by horticultural and viticultural achievements. He made his home celebrated for its hospitalities and he aged and turned out sweet wines and brandies that for a long time were the best in the State.

In the late 70's, or early 80's, who should come along but E. J. Baldwin, who had become the owner of the Santa Anita ranch, a remarkably fine piece of neglected property further east; and he, like Rose, made wines and brandies and bred horses. Indeed, Baldwin made so excellent a brandy that it took a gold medal at the New Orleans Exposition of 1884-5.

Now, mark the contrast: Where only these seven men and their families lived thirty, forty and fifty years ago, there are the towns of Arcadia, Sierra Madre, South Pasadena, Lamanda Park, Alhambra and others; and, also, hundreds of orange, walnut and lemon orchards, and tens of thousands of busy and happy inhabitants.

One of the best known and one of the most public-spirited men of Los Angeles is Col. Charles Rivers Drake, who, I think, was cradled in Illinois, sometime, say, in the early forties. I first met him in Tucson (Arizona) in 1874, where he lived thirty years and was either postmaster or assistant postmaster and assistant U. S. Depositary under C. H. Lord and had charge of government moneys for much of that time.

He was known as a singularly courageous man, especially in promoting financial and other schemes; and he and the late Maj. John H. Norton along in the early nineties established a copartnership and the two engaged in labor contracts, under the name of the Norton-Drake Company, for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. During the time of that contract the old 65-pound steel of the road-bed was relaid with heavy steel, new ties were laid and the whole track ballasted.

I think Col. Drake made his first appearance in Tucson in 1870 or 1871 and for awhile had charge of the army hospital in that city; he had served three years as acting master's mate under Admiral D. D. Porter, during the War of the Rebellion, and for gallant and meritorious conduct at Alexandria and on the Red River expedition was especially mentioned by the admiral in his report to the Navy Department.

I again met him when he came to Los Angeles in 1900, and subsequently at Long Beach after he had organized the Seaside Water Company by the purchase of the Bouton water system, the Long Beach Development Company owned by the Crocker estate and the Banning water plant in San Pedro. In 1902 he built the splendid bath house at Long Beach, and in 1908 was the master hand in the construction of the Hotel Virginia, pronounced by all globe-trotters who have visited it as one of the most palatial hotels anywhere and much the most magnificent seaside establishment in the world. He is a regular booster, and has been the man of all others who has given what was termed a slow town many of its greatest and most costly structures and other improvements, so that Long Beach is today one of the prettiest places in California and is adding to its population thousands annually. As a proof of his daring and his belief in a great future for Long Beach, he purchased all the property of the Crocker estate, comprising over two miles of water front, 630 building lots and thirteen blocks elsewhere in a few months after he arrived at Los Angeles and had looked the country [illegible] cluded in the organization of the Seaside Water Company.

Col. Drake also has a fine home on Hoover street, which he and his family occupy portions of the year. He is an open-handed, big-hearted and high-minded man, a cheerful giver, an agreeable conversationalist, and thoroughly liked by all who know him and especially by those who have had business dealings with him.

Much the same may be truthfully said of the late Maj. John H. Norton, whose death is lamented by every one who knew him, and who had been regarded as one of the foremost public-spirited men of Los Angeles since his arrival in our city in 1874. I first met Maj. Norton in Tucson in 1876, but knew he had been a post-trader at Camp Grant, and had also been a stage owner and mail contractor for several years before and that he had founded the town of Wilcox, in honor of the general of that name, who was in command of the Department of Arizona at the time. He was regarded as one of the foremost men of Southeastern Arizona, and was greatly beloved by all who knew him, and had had business dealings with him. He came to Los Angeles in 1894, and has been a leader in business and club affairs and whole-souled and dead-on-the-square.

SOME NEWCOMERS.

George Hallett, formerly of the firm of Hallett & Rawson, leading architects of Des Moines, Iowa, has recently settled with his family at 966 Vermont avenue, Los Angeles. Some people leave Iowa because of the high cost of living and the system of double taxation prevailing there; some to escape the sudden and severe climatic changes, sloppy, cold winters with rough or muddy roads, and hot, sultry summers with dust and dirt, but Mr. and Mrs. Hallett come here not because they love Iowa less but because they love California more.

T. B. Moore and wife are stopping for the season at Hotel Snow, Sixth and Flower streets, Los Angeles. Mr. Moore has been engaged extensively for many years in the wholesale lumber business at Kansas City and Des Moines. He enjoys a large acquaintance and has a host of friends who admire his cordial, frank and clever ways.

Henry C. Harris, of the great department house of Harris-Emery Company at Des Moines, Iowa, is again spending the tourist season with friends and relatives in Los Angeles and Monrovia. Mr. Harris has ever taken an active part in religion, education and philanthropy in Des Moines, and strives to make every word and act of his life tell for the good of his fellowmen.

Mrs. Kibe Lummis, of Des Moines, Iowa, once prominent in educational work in the Middle West, with her daughter Miss Mary H. Lummis, are at the Hotel Trenton and hope to find a suitable home for permanent settlement here. Miss Lummis is a lady of very agreeable social qualities and unusual business ability.

Hon. A. F. N. Hambleton, from Oskaloosa, Iowa, of the sturdy Quaker stock which has ever distinguished that community, has recently taken up his residence at 1030 Stratford ave., Pasadena, and will likely make that the permanent residence for himself and family. He was several times chosen by his district to help make the laws of the State in the Lower House, and was prominently identified with the educational interests of Mahaska County.

Hon. George Kinne, a thrifty farmer of Curlew, Palo Alto county, Iowa, who served in the State Senate during the Thirty-second General Assembly, is taking in the delights of Southern California, having recently purchased a home at Pomona.

Hon. W. C. Kimmel, a successful breeder of thoroughbred Galloway cattle at Sheldon, O'Brien county, Iowa, and former member of the State Senate, is visiting this State, and will likely decide to make California his future residence.

Dr. J. A. McKiveen and wife of Chariton, Lucas county, Iowa, are at the Marlboro, 549 So. Grand ave. The doctor enjoys a State-wide reputation as a skillful physician and surgeon, having had fifty years of steady practice in his profession. He served over seven years on the State Board of Health and was an influential conservative in the State Senate during the thirty-second session of the General Assembly. The Doctor and his wife are highly pleased with this "land of the Golden West, sweetly resting by the Sunset Sea," though ever loyal to "Iowa, the Wild Rose of the West."

Hon. W. B. Martin, President of the Iowa Trust and Savings Bank of Des Moines, is staying, with his wife, at Hotel Trenton, 427 So. Olive street. Mr. Martin served Iowa three terms as its popular and efficient Secretary of State, and has long been prominently identified with the progress and welfare of the great State of golden corn and fat hogs.

Hon. W. B. Seeley of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, with his wife and three children, is spending the season in our city with headquarters at the Ivins, corner of Tenth and Figueroa. Mr. Seeley is well known in Iowa as an extensive breeder of high grade Angus cattle and Poland China hogs, and where he also presides over a string of banks. He has served a satisfied constituency two terms in the Iowa Senate, and is now forgetting all his many interests while taking a needed rest here.

Capt. James Elerick, who served three terms in the Upper House of the Iowa General Assembly as a conservative stand-patter from which position no bluff or persuasion has ever jarred him loose, is staying, with his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Siemon, at 1583 Second avenue. The Captain won his military rank and title by a long and faithful service in the Federal army nearly fifty years ago, and is still strong and robust enough for any sort of military service.

Hon. George A. Kellogg, president of the First National Bank of Missouri Valley, Harrison county, Iowa, now stopping, with his wife, at the Ivins apartments, served several terms in the Iowa Legislature with considerable distinction. He is a college bred man of the genial, broad-minded, liberal type whom it is a pleasure and profit to meet.

BEE KEEPERS BUZZING ALL OVER THE STATE.

A strong agitation for a more effectual organization of the honey interests of the State is under way. The Northern California, the Central California and the State Beekeepers' Associations, besides many country organizations, are talking strongly of getting together to form a strong, commercial organization with the determination of handling the output of the busy little bee in such a way as to make it at once more profitable to the producer and more satisfactory to the consumer.

Uniform grading, better marketing facilities, a determined war on adulterators, extensive warehouse and banking arrangements, making a more uniform supply possible, are points which are being eagerly talked from one end of the State to the other.

Colorado has made a splendid success and why should not California? The orange and walnut growers are cited as evidence that it is possible, and beekeepers are determined that nothing shall stop them from eventually placing the honey producers of this great State on a footing that shall be in accord with the vastly improved and healthy growing conditions of oth-book good for thirty days is sold for eighty cents. A thirty-ride family book good for ninety days costs $2.25, which makes the single fare a little less than seven and one-half cents a ride. A fifty-two ride individual book good only for the calendar month is sold for $3.50. This book is intended for those people who are in business in the city and have to travel back and forth every day and at the rate which this book is sold the single fare is cut down to a little more than six cents a ride.

Besides the electric road above mentioned the Covina branch of the Pacific Electric passes through the southern part of Alhambra and the residents are saved the necessity of having to walk a considerable distance into the center of the business section to board the cars of the San Gabriel branch.

The same conditions are experienced by the people living in the northern parts of Alhambra. Through this section the electric cars going to El Molino pass at regular intervals during the day and the local people are convenienced by this service.

A few feet just inside the western city limits of the town, the electric cars on the main line between Los Angeles and Pasadena pass almost continuously. Over these main tracks the cars may be taken to either South Pasadena, Pasadena, Oak Knoll, Glendora, Monrovia, Azusa, Arcadia and Lamanda Park. The residents of Alhambra are thus located in a position of being able to communiate directly with almost any town north or east of Los Angeles.

Or a commutation ticket issued by the Pacific Electric Company round trips may be made to some of the nearby popular beaches from Alhambra for 50 cents which is the price of a single round trip from Los Angeles.

In addition to these exceptionally abundant transportation facilities afforded the town by the electric railway company, there are also three steam roads entering Alhambra. Running diagonally across the town is the main line of the Southern Pacific between Los Angeles and San Bernardino and branching out the two lines one to Monrovia and the other to Pasadena. These three steam roads handle a large passenger business but their greatest benefit to the local people is in affording them shipping facilities to the eastern markets direct. The orange grower in the Alhambra district can pack his oranges and load them on the freight cars at the many sidings all along the railroad lines and know that his car will not be opened or reloaded until it reaches New York City.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

Alhambra was incorporated as a city of the sixth class July 11, 1903, and on January 23, 1908, annexed a large outlying territory immediately adjoining. The entire area of the city is in the neighborhood of nine square miles.

At its nearest point to the city limits of Los Angeles, Alhambra is only three miles distant from the metropolis but from the Los Angeles county Courthouse to the Alhambra City Hall, the distance is about seven miles. This distance can be traversed by the electric cars in from twenty to thirty minutes according to the service.

There are a number of good automobile roads leading from Los Angeles to the town and the Huntington drive from Los Angeles to Pasadena skirts the northern city limits of Alhambra.

The assessed valuation of Alhambra last year amounted to $4,436,842. The total tax for the city was $45,222.40. The tax rate for the oldest part of the city whose inhabitants are enjoying municipal conveniences, is $1.10, while that portion of the city which was annexed to the original town pays a rate of 88 cents. The ranchers in the surrounding country pay the regular county tax rate which was $2.15, last year.

The town is provided with the modern facilities of a city ten times its size. Under the direction of the city engineering department nearly every street within the incorporated limits is in some wise improved. Last year the city engineering department constructed five and one-half miles of graded streets of which three and one-half miles were thoroughly oiled and 75,000 cubic feet of asphalt were laid. During the year two and one-eighth miles of oiled macadam streets were made and five miles of curbing and five and one-half miles of cement gutter work were laid. All these improvements cost in the neighborhood of $83,000.

At the present time there are over thirty miles of improved oiled streets in the town sixty miles of sidewalks and curbs and another five miles of good streets are under construction. s electroliers similar to those on Broadway of Los Angeles. Each of these provide for six separate electric lamps. The city has adopted a special design for these and is prepared to furnish them to the citizens on demand. Many of the streets are lighted by single electric lamps placed every 200 feet or so apart.

The Pacific Light and Power Company furnishes the illuminating current. To the residents using the domestic current a minimum charge of 50 cents per month is made, and 8 cents per kilowatt hour is the rate after this amount is used. The company is prepared to furnish electric power for motive force at reasonable rates.

Gas is supplied to the inhabitants by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation at the rate of 80 cents per thousand cubic feet. A local company also supplies a large portion of the population with gas. Both these companies furnish the gas for either heating or illumination purposes. The pressure is good and the service is satisfactory.

Both the Home and Sunset telephone systems cover the district. The companies give their subscribers the privilege of communication with the following towns without extra toll: San Gabriel, El Molino, Garvalia and a portion of Arcadia. Connections with Los Angeles or Pasadena are made at the rate of 10 cents for three minutes. The Sunset company has lately constructed a new exchange building in the town and with the new operative equipment which they are installing it is said, they will be able to take care of any number of subscribers in Alhambra for the next twenty years.

The city is provided with good fire protection. A fire department is maintained at the expense of the municipality and the equipment consists of a fifty-horse-power automobile chemical engine which cost $3250 and which can reach the extreme farthest portions of the city inside of five minutes after the alarm is given. There is also a small hook and ladder and an emergency hose cart.

The city is equipped with the Gamewell fire alarm system, there being eighteen boxes placed on the street corners in different parts of the business and residence sections. The apparatus is housed in a modern station building costing in the neighborhood of $3000. One man is kept in the building all day and three at night. Besides these there are a number of volunteer firemen, who are paid so much for reporting to each alarm.

The population of Alhambra, as given by the 1910 census, is 5027. So rapidly, however, has the town been growing since the census was taken it is estimated that at the present time the population must be very close to 6000. It is the fifth city in size in Los Angeles county.

PROPOSED NEW LIBRARY.

A notable feature in the awakening of civic pride in the cities in the vicinity of Los Angeles, has been the interest shown in parks and public buildings. Alhambra is one of the first of the towns to try to carry out the plan now approved by experts in municipal architecture—that of grouping its public buildings. This, the latest word in city planning, is to be exemplified when to the imposing Alhambra High School are to be added a city hall, a public library, and a public park, all to be grouped within a radius of three city blocks on the main street.

A bond issue of $45,000 with which to purchase the public park and to erect the library building is to be voted upon in the immediate future. The design for the new library offers an exterior of great dignity and beauty without pretentiousness. It will combine utility of administration in its central location and nearness to the High School, with economy and beauty in its setting in the proposed park site. The building is planned of sufficient size to allow for a growth commensurate with Alhambra's present rapid strides. A special feature will be an outdoor reading-room, extending across the entire front of the building, which together with the park location, will make for that open air living and thinking that is penetrating all ideals of education and of life, and which can best be carried out to its perfection in Southern California.

The Alhambra library has in its short existence made a record that is a pride. Only four years old, her statistics compare with those of libraries of many years standing. A circulation of 3000 and more books a month is an illustration. It has added more books in the last year than almost any other library of similar size, and now has a total of 5500 volumes.

In its new quarters some of the special features planned are: A clubroom for boys, an open-air reading-room, and a children's room whose features and administration shall embody the latest in this important branch of library work. The plan of such a civic center, in park and library, is an index to the farsighted enterprise of the citizens of Alhambra.

BUSINESS.

number of well equipped stores which carry all the articles of merchandise for which there is a demand. Besides the largest of the Los Angeles department stores send out their wagons daily.

The First National Bank of Alhambra has been doing a successful business in the town for the last 23 years. It started as a State bank, but in January 1907 was nationalized with a capital of $25,000. Today its deposits amount to about $300,000 and its surplus is $25,000.

This bank is one of a few in the country which has the distinction of being on the American Bankers' Association's Roll of Honor. This honor is only awarded those banks which have a surplus equal to their capital.

The First National Bank building was erected several years ago and the lower floor is now the home of the bank. The building is of pressed brick construction and valued at $25,000. The bank is exceptionally well provided with all modern appliances for protection against fire and burglary.

Occupying the same building with the First National Bank is the Alhambra Savings Bank, which was organized in 1906. This bank is capitalized at $25,000 and has a surplus and profits amounting to $6061. Its deposits amount to $150,600. It has loans and bonds oustanding which aggregate $163,324.

Illustrating the growth of the institution and incidentally the growth of Alhambra is a comparative statement of the increased deposits made in this bank during the last five years.

January, 1907	$ 37,342.96
January, 1908	78,766.20
January, 1909	65,077.77
January, 1910	96,772.45
January, 1911	150,609.85

The savings bank has a safe deposit department and boxes are rented annually for nominal sums.

The Citizens' Bank of Alhambra is also a progressive institution, capitalized at $25,000, its total resources amounting to about $100,000.

The National Bank of Alhambra will soon commence the construction of a modern building in the business section. The banking company will occupy a space on the ground floor, 40 by 80 feet and this will be fitted up with all the modern facilities and improvements. A safe deposit vault department containing 750 boxes of different sizes will be installed and all vaults and safes in the bank will be equipped with time locks and up-to-date electric burglar alarms. One of the features to be put in is a special customers' room exclusively for ladies. The National Bank of Alhambra will have a capital stock of $50,000. Its officers will be composed principally of citizens of Alhambra who have been connected in different banking circles for a number of years.

The growth of Alhambra is definitely demonstrated by the following figures from the local postoffice: During the year 1907 this office served about 4000 people in the district with mail matter. Today there are over 7000 names on the service list of this office. During the month of December, 1910, 1040 pieces of mail were handled as against 828 pieces for the same month in 1909. For the calendar year ending December 31, 1910, there were 1652 money order transactions handled amounting to $12,990. For the same time one year previous there were 1053 money order transactions, amounting to $7302.

Commencing February 1, 1909, a free city mail delivery was started and the residents of the town continue to enjoy this privilege.

There is a live Board of Trade in Alhambra which has done a great deal to assist the progress of the town. All the leading business men are members of this organization. This body is provided with literature on the town and is prepared to give any special information which a stranger might desire to know. Communications addressed to the secretary, Frank Watkins, Alhambra, will be given courteous attention.

REAL ESTATE.

There are several reliable and obliging real estate men in the town and all are doing an active business. During the past year acreage lands and lots have been selling fast. A number of subdivisions were put on the market and at the present time there are many opportunities to make profitable buys.

The real estate situation of Alhambra has been subjected to very little inflation of prices and today lots and ranches in the district may be bought as cheaply as may ever be expected. The prices are steadily rising with the introduction of new living facilities and improvements and there is every indication that they will continue to advance as these advantages are brought in.

Residence lots range in price from $500 to $1500. All these lots are located on improved streets, through which have been laid gas and water pipes, and electric illuminating current town command prices of from $50 to $200 a front foot. All of these face improved streets and are provided with all the facilities afforded the residence lots.

Established orange groves within the city limits may be had from $2500 to $3500 an acre and one or two acres of such land make the most beautiful home sites. Established citrus groves outside the city limits run all the way from $1500 to $2500 an acre according to location and facilities.

There are yet some good unimproved lands in the vicinity of the town. These sell from $500 an acre up. The average price of the best unimproved lands may be placed at $700 an acre. This includes water stock and irrigation facilities. The soil of most of these locations is suitable for citrus culture or any other kind of vegetation.

SCHOOLS.

Centrally situated in the town and quickly located from all quarters of Alhambra on account of its lofty clock tower is the Alhambra city High School. It is a massive three story structure built of red brick which cost approximately $45,000 and occupies almost an entire block of ground. It contains fifteen large rooms and a number of smaller offices and rest rooms. Surrounding three sides of the building are beautiful flower beds of roses, geraniums and a variety of shrubs, palms and spacious lawns. Separating these beds in convenient places are cement walks which lead to the entrances from all sides. At the rear are cement tennis courts and basketball courts. A gardener is continually employed to take care of the grounds and the building itself is kept in order by a competent janitor.

On the main floor are found the principal's offices and reception rooms, a ladies' rest room, a comfortable auditorium and four recitation rooms.

On the second floor are the rooms occupied by the commercial department and the drawing and art department. Besides, there is a well-equipped library containing about 1100 volumes of literature and general reference works for the students, a physical geography laboratory and a study hall.

The basement is given over to a gymnasium, the physics and chemistry laboratories, boys' and girls' dressing rooms containing lockers, toilets, wash basins with hot and cold water and every convenience for the general health and comfort of the student.

The temperature of the entire building is regulated by a system of heated air conducted from the furnace in the basement to every other room through metal flues. Any desired temperature can be had in each room at any time by regulating the ventilators. Excellent sanitary conditions are provided in every part of the school. A unique feature in this line is the simple sanitary drinking cup originated by the principal which is attached to all the cold water taps throughout the building.

At the present time the institution affords three complete courses to the students. One prepares for colleges of social science, natural science and commerce. A second prepares for colleges of applied sciences and the third is a complete commercial course. These courses comprise all the general studies given by most high schools including ancient and modern histories and languages, several branches of mathematics, drawing, physiology, chemistry, physics, physical geography and music.

Commencing with the new term this year the Board of Education intends to add a fourth course to the school's work. This will be known as the domestic science course and will include work for the girls in cooking and sewing.

There are 176 students enrolled in the institution and an instruction staff of ten competent teachers and a principal are provided to teach them. The number of teachers will be increased next term with the introduction of the domestic science course but just how many is not at present definitely known.

Alhambra has three substantial grammar school buildings which far surpass those in the majority of towns of the same size. They are either of brick or stone construction and almost entirely fireproof throughout. Each of these schools is provided with a modern heating system and the very best sanitary conditions. They are all located on five acre plats of ground which make an ample playground for the pupils.

In the eastern part of the district a temporary frame school building has lately been constructed to relieve the congestion in that locality but it is thought that before very long a permanent structure will be erected upon the site.

Situated on a hill overlooking the surrounding country is the Romona Convent conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names. This is a boarding school exclusively for girls.

The building is a roomy brick structure valued at $100,000. There are fifty rooms and a new addition is in course of construction which will contain eighty rooms and will cost $90,000. There is an auditorium and a chapel in the present building each of which have a seating capacity of 400. The present building is to be remodeled and together with the addition will conform to the Mission style of architecture.

Physical training is given much consideration in the institution and a well-equipped gymnasium has been provided. Sleeping porches adjoining each girl's room is a feature which is a great novelty and original with this school. The school grounds comprise thirty-three acres.

There is an enrollment of sixty-one girls for which twenty teachers are provided, making the instruction almost individual. The convent offers courses in classical and scientific work in grades varying from the elementary to that equal to a public high school.

THE SAN GABRIEL QUARTER.

Recalling the old pioneer days of California, when the Mexicans and Indians where in the height of their power, is the little Spanish settlement of San Gabriel, one mile east of Alhambra.

The old San Gabriel Mission, still remains in its original location and the famous old grape vine planted some years before the founding of the mission still grows in its full vigor, to the wonder and admiration of all who see it.

Contrasting with this ancient Spanish art is a new and modern and yet extremely simple art feature which has lately sprung up in San Gabriel. This is a little home section intended for the lovers of Spanish history and art and for advocates of the simple life, generally. It is called the San Gabriel Art Quarter.

A number of congenial art lovers have already settled in the "Quarter." Pretty little homes have been constructed and modern living facilities have been supplied the community, but simplicity in all things is the motto of the residents.

The idea of the "Quarter" was orginated by Miss Lucile Wall of San Gabriel, who is an enthusiastic exponent of simple Spanish beauty. She is an extremely practical and enterprising young lady and has traveled extensively in Europe, Asia and America from which countries she obtained the ideas which she is now developing.

The "Latin Quarter" of Paris was perhaps the nuclei of her origination but the impressions she received in many other countries are strikingly obvious on visiting the San Gabriel Quarter. Here is a pretty home confined in its architecture to the lines of a modern bungalow, while across the street suggestions of the Orient are reflected in a house built absolutely along the lines of those found in Japan, with "NO FUNDS," SAYS SAM GOMPERS TO SAN FRANCISCO'S STRIKERS.

American Federation of Labor Plainly Tells Laborites of California That no Money Is Forthcoming for That Much-Heralded Demonstration in Los Angeles—Y.M.C.A. Refuses to Unionize Its Plant.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—San Francisco laborites are up in the air over a letter received this week from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation, in which he informs the General Strike Campaign Committee that the executive council of the American Federation of Labor finds it impossible to send an organizer to Los Angeles and that the committee need not expect to receive any money from the American Federation of Labor with which to carry on their organizing work in Los Angeles as the treasury of the American Federation of Labor is depleted and the labor unions throughout the United States have failed to respond to the appeal for funds for this purpose.

The laborites here had been given to understand that the American Federation of Labor was planning to "spend millions of dollars" in an effort to unionize Los Angeles. This was the story told by the leaders here when the unions objected to contributing any more money to the strike fund on the ground that it was simply throwing money away.

On the very day that the letter from Gompers was received a local labor paper announced that "definite plans were under way whereby several millions of dollars will be raised by the American Federation of Labor for the unionizing of Los Angeles."

That very night Gompers's communication was read in the San Francisco Labor Council, and now the laborites are asking the question, "whom are we to believe?"

Many of the laborites have reached this conclusion: "We have been contributing money weekly to the strike fund since last June, with the understanding that the American Federation of Labor would get behind the campaign and take the burden from our shoulders. Instead of so doing we are now informed that the American Federation of Labor has no money. The leaders are begging us to keep up our donations and yet cannot prove to us that any good has been accomplished in Los Angeles since the campaign started seven months ago. We think we have been suckers long enough and the best thing we can do is to keep what we have got in our treasury to fight our own battles at home."

From what I can learn this conclusion is warranted by the facts and it is the opinion of your correspondent that the Strike Campaign Committee will soon find itself without a dollar to carry on the work of agitation in Los Angeles.

One would scarcely expect to find union men walking the streets hungry and penniless in a city that is called the strongest union labor town in the country, and yet such is the case in San Francisco in spite of, or rather as a result of, the union shop and the union labor administration, according to the stories told by some of the men who are daily being arrested as vagrants.

Many men arrested on this charge are found to have paid-up union cards in their pockets. They are evidently honest workingmen and would rather work than beg, but they all tell the same story: "We are union men as our cards will prove, but we cannot get work under union conditions and we are not allowed to work below the union scale of wages or in shops or for firms that are not on the 'fair list' of the unions. If we do a boycott is immediately placed on the shop where we go to work and the boss fires us rather than have trouble with the unions. What are we going to do? We have not got money enough to get to a town that is non-union and so we are forced to beg, steal or go hungry.

We know of one union man who is in good standing with his union that was unable to get work through the union and is now an inmate of a charitable institution where he is working for his board and lodging. Another case that recently came to our notice was that of a union man who wore out his shoes looking for a union job and was forced to go to the industrial relief agency for a pair of shoes and something to eat.

We simply mention these things for fear that the union agitators in Los Angeles may forget to mention them when they are telling the wage-earners of Los Angeles of the beautiful conditions existing in San Francisco as the result of trade unionism. It is sometimes well to hear the whole truth and that you can never get from the union agitators.

That they have been betrayed by Olaf A. Tvietmoe and "Teddy" Yoell, president and secretary, respectively, of the Asiatic Exclusion League, is the opinion of the laborites of San Francisco who are furious over the action of Tvietmoe and Yoell in "backing down" on the Jap question. The day of reckoning for Tvietmoe and Yoell is close at hand, for the laborites are demanding to know just what was their motive for such "treasonable conduct," and if they sold out to the enemy. It is confidently expected that as a result of the investigations planned by the laborites, Tvietmoe and Yoell will have to hie themselves away to a more congenial community.

The general public is commending the action of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association in having the moral courage to refuse to unionize their institution in this city and to tell the laborites that they never will indorse the principles and methods of the trade union movement.

Trickiness.

UNRELIABILITY OF UNIONISM.

JURISDICTIONAL FIGHTS HAMPER CHICAGO BUILDERS.

In Colorado Shrewd Attempt Is Made for Enactment of Inspection Law That Would Put Unions in Complete Control of All Mining Operations in the State.

How are the contractors and employers of labor to do any building if their men are to be called out because of jurisdictional quarrels among the labor unions? This is a question that is puzzling Chicago contractors as well as employers of labor elsewhere, for it is not an uncommon thing for the unions to engage in jurisdictional quarrels, absolutely ignoring the rights of employers, the contracts under which they are endeavoring to accomplish their work, or the agreements they may have entered into with the union organizations to which their employees may belong. In Chicago, in particular, these jurisdictional quarrels are so frequent that contractors can hardly tell when they complete their work, and building employees cannot predict whether or not they will have continuous employment. Just now there is conflict between the Steam Fitters' Union and the Plumbers' Union. The latter had negotiated a new working agreement with the master steam fitters, which runs for four years, and hardly had the ink dried on the contract when the Plumbers' Union called out its men in every shop which employs both classes of workmen. About twenty shops were struck and eighty men called out, the ultimatum given the contrators being that they must discharge their union steam fitters.

Two contractors yielded and discharged their steam fitters. They said they were going out of the steam-fitting business and would take no more contracts for that class of work.

The plumbers' organization claims jurisdiction over all men in the piping trades and has determined to put the steam fitters out of business in that city, although the latter have maintained a separate union of their own since 1878.

The master steam fitters want to continue their relations with the old organization whose members they always have employed and in the new contract the men receive a wage scale of 70 cents an hour for the first year, 72 cents the second year and 75 cents an hour for the last two years of the contract period.

The larger steam-fitting firms in the city do not employ plumbers but there a number of smaller firms which maintain what are known as "combination" shops, and which employ steam fitters, plumbers and gas fitters. These are shops that have been struck, and Simon O'Donnell, president of the Building Trades Council, who is a plumber, has threatened to call out the other building trades in sympathy to crush the steam fitters.

Plumbing contractors, on the other hand, are threateneing a lockout of all their men, as they assert, they are not to blame for the jurisdictional fights between the two organizations.

The plumbers, they say, were largely responsible for bringing on the last lockout in 1900, and that a similar fight is again inevitable unless the unions change their tactics.

Here therefore is an all around squabble that holds back building contracts, and compels men to remain idle when otherwise they would be earning large wages. Both organizatheir buildings finished that they may be rented, are compelled to stand helplessly by and wait until the warring labor factions decide it is better to work than to fight.

If there were ever an argument in favor of the open shop it is found in such jurisdictional quarrels. There is no elevation of the laboring men by such events, and the union men instead of being given steady work at high wages are actually deprived of work, and compelled to live upon their savings bank deposits. Unorganized labor is better off than if they were members of any of the branches of the Gompers organizations. Contractors are better off to insist upon open shop conditions, because they can tell when they will be able to complete their contracts. In fact, the whole community is better off because there is a continuity of employment.

A sharp union trick was nearly played upon the Colorado Legislature last week by the Western Federation of Miners and United Mine Workers. A commission was recently appointed by the Governor to frame a law providing for a better inspection of mines, but the lawyers employed by the unions secured the incorporation of some changes the effect of which would be to put only unionites in charge of the work. After providing that the union miners shall be given all the best of it, the next consideration was, of course, to make plenty of jobs. Originally it was decided that a tax of ½ cent upon every ton of coal mined would be sufficient to pay for inspection. This was the way the bill was originally drawn by the commission. This tax was not sufficient, however, and it was doubled by order from the Governor, so as to provide for a tax of 1 cent a town upon every ton of coal mined in the State, making a revenue of about $120,000 annually.

The bill provides for one chief inspector at a salary of $3000, seven deputy inspectors at a salary of $2000, one electrical inspector at the same salary, and two office employees at a total salary of $2700. This is eleven officials without including the board of examiners appointed in a most peculiar manner, and who, if the bill remains in its present form, would apparently draw a salary of $6 a day for a term of four years. The bill as it now reads states that these examiners shall receive $6 a day and their expenses.

The men who draw the original bill declare that it was never intended that these examiners, who would probably be called upon to hold only one or two examinations during their term of office, should receive a salary of $6 a day. They declare that it was the intention that the examiners should be paid this salary only when engaged in holding an examination. The language of the bill in its present form, however, is unmistakable. It provides that this board of examiners shall be paid $6 a day and makes no reservation concerning the time when they are not engaged in holding an examination.

It is the manner in which these examiners are to be appointed that the fine Italian hand is much in evidence. They are to be appointed by the Governor from a list of names submitted to him by the inspectors in office. Each of the seven inspectors names two men and from these the Governor selects the four examiners. With the deputy inspectors union men and under the thumb of the labor leaders, it is safe to say that only the names of union men would be presented to the Governor. And with the board of examiners, who must pass on the qualifications of the deputy inspectors, union men, the whole department will remain under the domination of the union leaders as long as the law remains on the statute books.

Another Governor may come into office who is not so pliant in the hands of the labor leaders as the present executive, but he can make no changes in the system, as he must name his

GETTING A JOB.

[EDITORIAL.]

NOW it is the man who conducts an employment office that has fallen under the ban of the labor unions. The laborites would legislate him out of business. They want free employment offices established by the State, these offices to be controlled by union officials. We are not at all surprised. Naturally there is very little love lost between competitors. We are free to confess that employment offices are dangerous rivals of the labor unions. We deny that the labor unions have any superiority over the employment offices. Both are in the business for what there is in it. They are not charitable institutions by any means. We are convinced, however, that of the two, the employment offices are a greater boon to the man out of a job than are the labor unions. We are also convinced that the labor unions have made the employment offices a necessity. We also know that it is cheaper by far for a man to get a job through an employment office than through a labor union. He also gets the job more quickly through the employment office. Once he has the job he is under no further obligations to the agent. No man can step in and order him off. It is his to have and to hold at his own pleasure without further expense. Can the same be said of the job secured through the labor union? Hardly. In the first place a man who desires to get a job through the union must first apply for membership in the union of the craft he desires to follow. His application must be accompanied with the initiation fee and one month's dues. Initiation fees in unions vary from $5 to $500. We know of one union that is advocating an initiation fee of $1000. If you doubt this statement we respectfully refer you to the Green Bottle Blowers' Union of which Dennis Hayes, a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, is general president. After you have made your application for membership in the union and paid your initiation fee and dues you have to wait around for a week or perhaps a month for the union to act on your application. In the meantime you don't work. If you are accepted by the union do you immediately get a job? Hardly ever. You sit around and wait for a job to come along; and after all the favorites of the walking delegate have been placed, then if there is a job that no one wants, perhaps you get it. Perhaps you are forced to go out and hustle your own job. Usually this is the case.

What happens after you land the job? You are compelled to pay monthly dues for the privilege of working. Then there are usually weekly or monthly assessments and all sorts of fake benefits to which you are expected to contribute. Just as you are getting on your feet some one calls a strike and you find yourself out of work. Does the union provide for you? Indeed it does not. You must keep up your dues or go suspended. What about the man who gets a job through an employment office? He goes in and pays his fee (we never heard of it being $500) and is immediately sent out on the job. He does not have to pay the employment agent monthly dues nor is he asked to pay any assessments or to contribute to any fake benefits. He has no further dealings with the man who furnished him employment. It is not to be wondered at that the man out of a job prefers the employment office to the labor union. It is a quicker, surer and cheaper means of getting work. The men who patronize employment offices will tell you so. Many of them were formerly union men. They will tell you that the unions forced them to go to the employment offices. They will prove to you that through the methods adopted by the labor unions the employment offices have become a necessity. They will tell you that if it were not for the labor unions they could get work direct from employers of labor. We are not defending the employment offices. We are not exaggerating the conditions imposed on the man who would get a job through the unions. We have simply presented the facts. We are willing to let the facts speak for themselves.

EFFECT OF WEALTH ON AMERICAN WOMEN.

[J. Lawrence Laughlin, in Scribner's.]

Whether we like them or not we must face the facts about us. The characteristics of the modern type of rich women have changed from those of an earlier generation; and the consequences which are already noticeable cannot be blinked. The so-called independence of womenkind—the greater individuality, it may be—shows its undesirable side in a widespread self-indulgence and selfishness. Among the richer classes, the general unwillingness to do, or even to hear of, anything unpleasant is so marked as to be a common characteristic. This phenomenon of today, however, is only the explanation of a well-known economic generalization in regard to the family. It had long been observed that the birth rate diminishes as the scale of riches rises. With the growth of wealth, we must be prepared to expect—what is now evident about us—fewer children and a weakening of family ties. As much as possible, nothing will be allowed to interfere with the pursuit of personal gratifications. The growth of selfishness, under the name of greater freedom, the avoidance of tasks and hardships, the desire for new and frequent excitements, the personal delight in notoriety, have in undue measure, drawn the attention of such women away from the care of their children. But whatever the cause, the conscientious supervision of the morals and training of their children is not today what is used to be.

It is safe to say that the spread of divorce is due more than anything else to the personal selfishness, the personal extravagance, and the personal aversion to anything unpleasant of the modern woman of the world. And her example is of influence on the less well-to-do woman whose unhappy married life is unrelieved by the distractions open to the rich. In the main, the unrestrained selfishness and the exaggerated extravagance lead many a rich woman to ask: "What am I getting out of it?"—not. "What am I bringing to it? The willingness to control self from a sense of duty, a steady performance of tasks for the sake of a given object, the ability to sacrifice some satisfactions for the common good, content with a limited income, are rarer than they once were. The forms taken by this selfishness are protean; but the one which has a large economic significance is that of national extravagance. Not having had to do with the winning, but only with the spending of wealth, the rich woman is more or less responsible for the criminal lust for riches which is now cursing the nation. More than she can possibly realize, her discontent at not having an expenditure equal to that of others richer than herself is the cause of the passion to get rich quickly. More than she knows, she is at the bottom of speculation and of the schemes for getting wealth other than by saving in order that men may be able to gratify her demands.

More than she knows, she is responsible for the widespread disposition to live beyond one's means; for the mortgages on the homes, the showy automobiles, and the extravagant dresses and entertainments which aim to express social superiority. It has not passed unnoticed that diamonds to the value of $48,000,000 were imported into the United States last year. Traced to its ultimate analysis, the uncontrolled passion for pleasure and expensive form of gratification has caused the living beyond our means in recent years and influenced the extraordinary reversal of late in the relation of the imports to the exports of merchandise. For this our rich and our would-be-rich women are in a degree responsible. With low ideals, additional income does not mean more of higher satisfactions; it means only more foolish, emulative, showy expenditures; and in this competition—as in the building of battleships—there is no place to stop. The indictment runs correctly against a large class of American women to whom it has been tively the existence of a numerous class of women—the "sound remnant"—against whom this indictment does not lie. Possibly, it may be answered that those who are not rich have remained uncorrupted. Unfortunately such a statement cannot be made safely. The danger is not confined to those who have the means to spend. The passion for social position is almost universal; and the example of the rich who have low ideals is hungrily followed by those who have low incomes. It is the deteriorating example of those who guide the expenditure of the rich women that is spreading widely and thoughtlessly over the great class outside the well-to-do. The danger lies in the increasing adoption of habits, social customs and expenditure based on low ideals—which attracts the weaker and poorer members of the sex who are most influenced by emulation.

UNION METHODS.

The persistent purpose of unionism is to keep the largest possible number of unionists employed, at the highest possible rate of wages, regardless of the effect upon employers or of the industry itself. Whenever any attempt is made in opposition to this scheme in the interest of business economy, it is a signal for trouble. One of the most significant illustrations of this unionite disposition is the present attempt at Washington to reduce the expense for Treasury Department printing. Union labor is resorting to threats in its attempt to defeat legislation that is being urged by the Treasury Department authorizing the printing of United States bonds, notes and checks on steam presses instead of by the old-fashioned hand rollers method. Unionism is exacting a tribute of more than $700,000 a year from the United States Government in this matter. A bill has been introduced in Congress authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to install steam presses for note, bond and check printing in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. This proposed legislation has been acted upon favorably by the Senate Committee on Printing and it has been reported to the Senate, the members of which who are favorable to this reform legislation are constantly receiving anonymous, threatening letters. The position in which the Treasury Department finds itself is described by Platt Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, in a published statement in which he points out that the Federal treasury is between two fires, the one criticizing it for continuing the excessive expenditures entailed by the old hand press system, and the other attacking them for attempting to install modern methods. The assistant secretary adds that Director Ralph of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate Committee on Printing, and others who are interested in this reform legislation are constantly "receiving anonymous, threatening letters."

A strike is on in a bag manufacturing establishment at Taylorville, Ill., as a result of which a riot occurred one evening last week during which several men were bruised and several slashed with pocket knives. This was the result of 400 unionites gathering at the bag-making plant and attempting to intimidate the forty employees of the company. Two hundred men and women were employed at the plant before the strike, which has been on since October. The demands of the strikers are for a closed shop, reduction of working time from ten to eight hours, and a general increase in wages of 25 cents a day. The bag management offered to pay the increase demanded, but refused the closed shop and reduction of working hours.

As a result of the riot the Governor, in response to a request by the Sheriff, ordered out four companies of the UNION PICKETS DISREGARD LAW.

Resume Infamous Tactics in Factory District.

Northern Laborites Advise Further Disorder.

Plot Industrial Crisis for May Next.

In violation of the city and State laws, laborites have again resorted to picketing in the vain hope of dragging independent workmen from their jobs. The iron business is almost at a standstill in San Francisco, owing to the domineering tactics of the union bosses there. In consequence the ranks of the local strikers have been recruited by brawlers from the North.

At the works of the Wilson & Willard Manufacturing Co., Monday night, a gang of half-intoxicated unionites attempted to make trouble for the independent men employed there. The strikers from other plants joined the motley throng and tried to create trouble. But one patrolman was in the vicinity at the time. A call for assistance brought a squad of police. The loud-mouthed pickets scattered and ran like sheep.

Chagrined by the remarkable strides being made by the open-shop foundries and machine works, the members of the Metal Workers' Union are using every petty form of annoyance against the loyal employees. Threatening letters have been written to these men; their wives have been intimidated and their children held up and beaten on the way to school.

With a police force of double the present number, it would be impossible to prevent all such annoyances and assaults. The murderers and dynamiters are lurking in the dark places just now until the hue and cry has partially lost its vigor. But desperate men are even now in this city waiting for a favorable opportunity to strike another blow against industrial freedom.

Despite tremendous pressure brought to bear by union saloon-keepers, the local breweries have not given in to the unjust demands of the bosses representing outside liquor interests. The Los Angeles brewery owners declare it is ridiculous to expect them to discharge their independent men to make places for the unionites. Ever since the unsuccessful strike of May last, the idle brewery workers have tried to stir up trouble. Independent workers have been slugged on their way home. They have been threatened and cajoled by turns. But there have been few desertions from the ranks of loyal employees. The breweries are prospering and, but for the interference of San Francisco and Milwaukee interests affiliated with the unions, there would be no difficulty here.

All the great captains of industry in this section are holding fast by their convictions and the commercial organizations here are a unit in the victorious campaign for industrial peace. While it is apparent that some sort of a strike will be called May 1, present indications are that it will prove a farce. The labor-union treasury is bare and the contributions from other cities stick fast to the pockets and itching palms of the walking delegates. Without the sinews of war, a general strike will prove abortive.

Cheat in Sausage Making.

Sausage makers in New York State, particularly in Onondaga county where no less than twenty-seven violations of the pure food law have been brought to the attention of the State Agricultural Department, are up in arms over notices sent out by Atty-Gen. Carmody informing all those accused of violating the law that they will have to pay a fine of $50 for each offense. It happens in practically all cases that those accused of violating the pure food law are charged with three or four offenses.

Agents of the State Department of Agriculture have begun a State-wide investigation of charges that sausage makers have been placing starch and other cereal matters in bologna pork sausage and pan sausage and that the particular object in placing these unnecessary ingredients in the articles mentioned is a scheme of the bologna and sausage dealers to have them absorb water and make them weigh considerably more than they otherwise would. Agents of the Agricultural Department secured thirty samples in Syracuse alone and concluded that there were wholesale violations of the law there.—[New York Sun.

SAN FRANCISCO LOSING.

Industrial Establishments Drifting Away From the City—Alaska Packers Considering San Pedro.

The business men of San Francisco are gradually rebelling against the incubus placed upon them by union labor, though it was not until a considerable number of industrial establishments of the city had moved to other locations. Of the existing industrial conditions the Commercial News of that city says:

"Under the exacting operation of the labor trust, San Francisco has gone down the scale industrially, until it is not even in the second class among Coast manufacturing cities.

"One after another the exactions have been piled upon manufacturers, until they have either given up and gone elsewhere or they have consented to become merely retail repair shops.

"Strangely enough, we find some of these industries conspiring with organized labor to refasten the yoke upon other Coast communities that have had sense and pluck enough to free themselves from the galling restraint thereof.

"San Francisco has surrendered bag and baggage to the labor monopoly, and the result is that there seems to be utterly lacking the pluck to make any sort of a stand for industrial freedom.

"There are individual instances where success has attended a stand for the right to transact business without interference from the walking delegate.

"These are few and detached, but they fully demonstrate what may be tone by the proper quality of grit and determination.

"Nor is there lacking the knowledge of the great need of a revolt against present industrial conditions.

"The sentiment in favor of the 'open shop' is general and insistent.

"It needs only some strong, courageous man to take the lead and the rest is easy.

"Why not do it before any more big industrial concerns are driven away?

"We need a few determined, well-balanced leaders who will meet the issue as did Patrick Calhoun of the United Railroads, and force issues to that point where very employer of labor will unite unreservedly, shoulder to shoulder, to win the right to run his business, in connection with which he is furnishing the capital and taking the risks, as he pleases."

The event that has stirred up San Francisco more than anything else is the information that the Alaska Packers' Association is considering removal from San Francisco to San Pedro. The annual business of this company amounts to $10,000,000, and it owns the largest fleet of American sailing ships in the world. Two of its steel vessels are the largest sailing vessels afloat. The company handles 80,000 tons to and from Alaska every year, and every pound of that cargo is its own product.

How bad the industrial conditions have become at San Francisco is shown by the statement of Henry F. Fortman, president of the Alaska Packers' Association, to the Commercial News, in which he says:

"The news concerning the probability of our removal to San Pedro is substantially correct. We are seriously considering such action, negotiations with that end in view being under way.

"In addition to the status of the waterfront facilities here, the industrial situation, as you well know, is fully as bad a feature if not a worse one.

"It costs us far more to do our work in this port than to have it done elsewhere.

"The same thing that has driven away nearly all of our other industries is having its effect with us. The continually increasing demands and breaking of promises on the part of the labor interests, especially the fishermen of late, connot be endured.

"For cheapness of construction and thoroughness of work we cannot compare, so far as we have looked into the matter, with the south.

"We are constantly building small steamers or what might be designated as large tugs. In fact we are constructing one now and for the first time in the history of our company we find we can get better and cheaper work done, even including freight and handling, at Newport News, where the boiler for the present boat is being built.

"Everything is drifting away from San Francisco to other sections, where different conditions in labor circles exist."

INORDINATE INDIVIDUALITIES.

Thomas Hopkins of Brattleboro, Vt., is credited with holding the world's record for doughnut eating. On a wager in that city last week he ate a dozen doughnuts in nine minutes and thirty seconds, washing the doughnuts down with a cup of coffee.

Thomas Patrick, a woodchopper at Dayton, Wash., recently performed the most unique surgical operation known upon himself. He sustained a dislocated hip by being thrown from a vehicle down a forty-foot embankment in a runaway. All but unconscious from pain, realizing his hip was out of place, he rolled over and over on the ground until the dislocated member was in place. With a report like a rifle shot, the hip was forced back into its socket.

Frank Shaffer of Bloomsburg, Pa., who died recently at the age of 37 years, confounded the medical profession by living fifteen years after having his back broken by a fall in a stone quarry. He was given only a few days to live, but he improved and, after a time, was able to sit up, although he had no use of his legs. He was able to use a wheel chair and conducted a poultry farm, caring for the chickens himself.

Standing little more than three feet in height, yet arresting a man of full-grown stature and landing him safely in the Police Station, was the work of "Admiral" Don O. Robbins of Belfast, Me., who lives with the family of City Marshal Marcellus R. Knowlton.

Miss Nancy Elizabeth Sloan of Tuscola, Ill., once attended the Normal School at Charleston, that State, and always retained so kindly a feeling for the institution that when she was wedded a few days ago she insisted upon the ceremony being performed in the dome of the Normal School's tower 200 feet from the ground. The bridegroom and clergyman acceded to the request lest the ceremony go unperformed.

Rev. Edgar Campbell, rector of Christ Church, Woodbury, N. J., has had a desire to be made a deputy sheriff for some time. A few days ago he took a 10-year-old boy to the reform school at Jamesburg, and took advantage of the opportunity to be sworn in as a deputy by Sheriff Technical education increases the wages and salaries of those who have foresight and industry-to-secure-free of foresight and industry to secure it, and charge—in this country particularly. If a boy is put into a trade school, where a small amount of technical training is given in addition to the teaching of a good trade, his earning capacity increases rapidly.

WAGES IN JAPAN.

Japan is seriously discussing the advisability of passing laws to regulate labor in its factories, to affect more women and girls. In a recent report the director of the Industrial Bureau of Japan says that Japanese women's labor as an individual factor is very great, as their influence is felt in almost every industry. The percentage of women employed in the industries of Japan is 66, as compared with 34 for men—nearly twice as many women as men. The usual day's work is twelve hours and hard-driven work at that. The silk industry employs 373,284 persons, of whom 330,020 are women and girls. The rates of daily wages in this industry are:

	Cents per day.
Males over 14 years	15 to 25½
Males under 14 years	6 to 10
Females over 14 years	10 to 14
Females under 14 years	5 to 9

If American wage-earning voters vote to let down the tariff bars against foreign-made silk goods and they are let down, it will be "good-by" to the present prosperous high wages paying American silk factory—an industry entirely created and held up by the full protective tariff of the Republican party—even though Japan may (as is very unlikely) increase the wage scale in its many silk factories. American women and men workers in silk need the votes of every American voter, particularly those of voters who, like themselves, work for their daily bread. It is for American wage-earning voters especially to so vote as to protect each other. That is "labor unionism" of a directly beneficial kind. American wages can only be kept safe by keeping out competitive foreign goods.

IN MILWAUKEE.

Labor agitators had a great deal to do with electing the present socialist city administration in Milwaukee. Already the experiment is very costly, compelling the borrowing of $1,130,000 from the local banks. Additions to the city pay roll cost $118,598 a year; operation of the city garbage incinerator has increased by $27,000, and so on.

WAGES ABROAD.

England's jam industry is a great industry, but all the wages it pays is $1.22 to $3.65 per week for lads and girls, and 73 cents to $1.70 per day for men. Free-trade low wages keep up the industry.

The wharf laborers of Melbourne, New South Wales, went on strike the other day, breaking their agreement with their employers and paralyzing interstate shipping.

At last strikes in some shops have compelled the Master Printers' Association of England to pass a lockout resolution. This affects nearly 10,000 work people, says the Times of London.

COST OF DISTURBANCES.

In 1910, the United Kingdom had 506 industrial disputes, involving 508,538 workers, and causing the loss of 9,722,800 days' wages, and some of the strikes are still going on. Think of in only one year. The trades affected were:

Trade—	Disputes.	Work-people.	Days' wages lost.
Coal-mining	201	295,552	5,459,400
Engineering and ship-building	66	45,469	2,941,600
Textiles	86	131,162	939,300
Metal trades	28	6,830	80,400
Clothing	36	4,346	56,200
Mining and quarrying	10	1,429	52,100
Transport	19	17,976	81,300
Building	18	856	33,900
Other trades	42	4,918	108,600
Totals	506	508,538	9,722,800
Totals for 1909	436	300,819	2,773,986
Increases in 1910	70	207,719	6,948,814

The work people involved in disputes in 1910 amounted to 5 per cent. of the total industrial population of the United Kingdom, says the annual report of the British Board of Trade Labor Gazette, from which the above figures are quoted, as also the following showing of ten years' loss in days' wages:

Trade—	putes.	Work people.	Days' lost.
1901		179,546	4,142,287
1902		256,667	3,479,255
1903		116,901	2,338,668
1904		87,208	1,484,220
1905		93,503	2,470,189
1906		217,773	3,028,816
1907		147,498	2,162,151
1908		295,507	10,834,189
1909		300,819	2,773,983
1910		508,538	9,722,800

Total days' wages lost in 10 years	42,486,561
Yearly average—a fearful one	4,243,656

Even at $2 a day, representing a yearly money loss of $8,487,312. At American rates of wages such a wage loss each year would be fully $15,000,000.

No More Questions.

When a noted Irish orator was in America a few years ago, says the National Monthly, he appeared at a meeting in St. Louis and delivered an address on the subject of "Home Rule for Ireland." There were 6000 of his countrymen in the audience. At the close of his remarks the chairman asked:

"Would anyone like to ask the speaker a question?"

A man in the rear of the hall, who was quite evidently under the influence of liquor, arose and said.

"Will the gentleman tell me if there is any reason why the Irish should not be wiped off the face of the earth?"

Immediately pandemonium reigned. The disturber was attacked from every quarter. Calls of "Down with him!" and "Let me at him!" came from all directions. Finally he was rescued by the policemen and, torn and bleeding and in an unconscious condition, was placed in an ambulance which had been called. Order was in a measure restored. While the audience could still hear the clatter of the ambulance and the sound of its gong as it conveyed its burden to the hospital, the chairman stepped forward and asked:

"Would anybody like to ask

$100.00 Orange Groves

Under a Plan That Guarantees Maximum Profit at Minimum Cost

We have engaged Mr. W. E. Pedley, the well-known originator of the Victoria Avenue Groves and one of the most successful planters of Citrus Groves in Southern California, to plant a first subdivision of 166 acres of

The Very Cream of California Citrus Lands

Now, doesn't it stand to reason, that we can do this cheaper on such acreage, than YOU could do it for yourself in a comparatively small way?

Doesn't it stand to reason that co-operative team work of this kind means more money to YOUR pocketbook than individual planting?

That is just why we can sell these fully developed groves at $600 per Acre

The land is located at CORONA, within a mile of the station of the Santa Fe Railroad, so affording splendid shipping facilities. Water supply for irrigation is abundant. Corona is within a few hours' auto ride of Los Angeles, so that we can easily take you out, show you the land and return the same day.

HOME-TALK No. 9

"To own a home makes a man a better citizen, gives him standing in the community, and establishes a credit."

The home that meets the needs of a household, directly and simply, is the home built on utilitarian lines. Intelligent planning makes such a home, and a home of this type is the ultimate goal of every man and women.

Los Angeles Investment Company homes are strictly utilitarian. They are built for use. Derby Park Tract and its adjoining neighbor, College Tract, have notable examples of this type of home-building. They are worth seeing.

Derby Park Tract is the most beautiful little home spot in Los Angeles. It is a model community, having lawns, trees, gas, sewers, electricity, cement walks, telephones, endowed parks, parked and endowed streets, model stores, playgrounds, postoffice, churches, assembly hall, convenient schools, good neighbors, three-minute car service and there are no unimproved lots or streets. Its homes cost from $2900 up.

Home-making is seen at its best here. Take a Grand avenue West Forty-eighth street car to Gramercy Place, or ask for one of our automobiles.

Hand the agent a ten-dollar bill and he will hang a "Sold" sign on yours.

LOTS BOOM NEAR SITE OF SCHOOL.

Prices Rise in Prospective Educational Center.

Empire State Capitalist Buys Fine Acreage Tract.

February Building Valuation Is Record Total.

PASADENA, March 4.—The real estate business has been good during the past week, considering the inclement weather, which prevented the closing of several deals that are under consideration. Dealers report more inquiry than a year ago with the excellent prospects for a busy spring. Several wealthy winter visitors are in the market for homes if they can find what they want.

Since the announcement made early in the week that the new High School is likely to be located on East Colorado street near the city limits, right in the center of that rapidly growing section, there has been a marked strengthening of prices in all lots east of Lake avenue.

J. Richard Haas reports a large list of sales. These deals were for property scattered all over the city and show a demand in all sections. He sold for W. B. Ross to Mrs. Maria M. Langford, a bungalow and large lot at No. 476 South Marengo avenue; a bungalow at No. 610 North Michigan avenue from George A. Griggs to Mary V. Lane, consideration $3600; property at No. 619 South Los Robles, Mrs. Maria M. Langford to W. B. Ross, $7000; bungalow at No. 884 North Michigan avenue, A. L. Horton to E. E. McCullough, $3200; bungalow at No. 913 Granite Drive, James E. Davis to Vernon Sayre, $3000; house and lot at No. 723 North Chester avenue, A. L. Buel to Emil Grandlund, $2900; southwest corner of California and Oakland, Thomas E. Fentress to Edgar E. Geary, $2800; lot on Franklin avenue, south of California, E. Sage to James F. Davis, $1100; lot on Berkeley avenue, south of Colorado, W. A. Walden to A. M. Thyre, $1000; lot on Catalina, south of Claremont, $850; lot on Woodbury road at the head of Los Robles avenue, George A. Tate to Aaron Cover, $850; lot on Michigan avenue, north of Mountain, John H. Lambert to R. Edwards, $900; lot on Stevenson avenue, south of East Orange Grove, L. M. Odell to Charles W. Hammond, $900; lot on Catalina avenue, south of Claremont, Eleanor and Carrie Hazard to Lucille K. Presby, $850; property at No. 105 Valley street, Charles W. Hammond to Louis N. O'Dell, $2300.

OAK KNOLL SALES.

One of the largest sales of the past week was that of a beautiful tract of eight acres of land in Oak Knoll from Theodore A. Irwin to Frederick H. Stevens of Buffalo, for a consideration of $50,000. The land is situated on Oak Grove avenue, just east of the Harry Gray property, and runs across the old Wilson's Lake, making an admirable site for the new country home which Mr. Stevens will build.

The William R. Staats Company has sold several desirable properties in Oak Knoll, as follows: Lot to F. E. Woodruff, $5450; lot on Oakland avenue, south of Allendale road, 140x180 feet, to Joseph Gaunt, $6000; lot on Oakland avenue to Cassius W. Kerrick, $4500; lot on Oakland avenue, south of Allendale road, to The Hogan company.

BUILDING ACTIVE.

The building permits for February broke all previous records with much to spare and were nearly $100,000 over that of a year ago. The total for February this year, $175,882 as against the total for a year ago of $86,000. March has started off in good shape with a total of $20,000 for the first three days. Plans are being prepared for new homes in all parts of the city and particularly in the northeastern section. Altadena is getting ready for another building boom this spring.

Some of the permits taken out for the first three days of March were: Dr. Paul G. White, nine-room bungalow, No. 812 Oakland avenue, $6000; Ellen S. Bemis, nine-room residence, No. 919 Garfield avenue, $1800; Mrs. Leora Alvey, five-room bungalow, No. 939 North Michigan avenue, $1500; Milton H. Blass, six-room bungalow, No. 981 Elizabeth, $2000; Julius Thelin, five-room bungalow, No. 1051 Mentor, $1600.

Edward M. Taylor of Altadena, has started work on his beautiful new $60,000 country home which he is building on his property at the corner of Santa Rosa and Calavasas. The old house which has occupied the property for many years will be removed and the new one built on the old homesite. When completed it will be the finest house in Altadena, which city is noted for its beautiful country homes.

BUILDERS OUST FANS.

Santa Monica Ball Grounds Will Soon Be Laid Out in Streets and Dotted With Homes.

SANTA MONICA, March 4.—For a stated consideration of $7500, W. J. Stadelman has purchased from the Santa Monica Land Company the block of lots bounded by Utah, Colorado, Tenth and Eleventh streets. With the exception of six lots that had been previously disposed of, he secures the entire block. The whole property will be improved, plans now being developed for the installation of sewer mains, water, gas, concrete sidewalks, curbs and gutters. As soon [illegible] of new residences will soon be built there.

This transfer sounded the death knell, temporarily at least, of the national game in this city, as this block had been utilized as a baseball park for a number of years. Should there be a revival of the game here, it is probable that the diamond will be located in the polo grounds on Nevada avenue at Ninth street.

The word is given out that the commencement of building operations in the Seaside and Vicente terrace tracts between Ocean avenue and the broad walk on the ocean front awaits only the completion of the street paving and concrete retaining wall contracts. Plans have already been accepted for a family hotel to be built by Arthur Munn, who has purchased two lots; an apartment-house for Patrick Lannan of Salt Lake City; F. P. O'Neill of Spokane, who will build a mission apartment-house; Thomas McCall of Eden, Tex., who will erect a three-story apartment-house; Mrs. Lucy Forden, who will have a German apartment-house; John T. Harris, who has arrangements finished for a family hotel, and C. F. Schader, whose plans call for a Spanish villa of reinforced concrete with mission tile roof.

In anticipation of the building of a Polytechnic High School here, the Board of Education has set apart March 13, 14 and 17 as days on which to confer with architects and give primary consideration to such plans as may be presented at that time. Four architects will be heard at each meeting and each one will be given forty-five minutes for the elucidation of his plans. This is all preliminary to the selection of plans when the sale of the bonds shall have been completed, the site purchased and the general plans decided upon. The incorporation of the open-air idea in the group system of buildings is being considered and data is being secured from cities both in the East and in the West where the open-air plan has been given a fair test.

The $30,000 extension to Hotel Windermere will be completed during the present month. May 1 was the date originally set for the completion and formal opening of the structure, but the contractor found the building weather so agreeable that he will be able to finish fully thirty days ahead of time. In anticipation of the dedication of the new hostelry not later than April 1, the Board of Trade and members of the beach commercial organizations and citizens in general are setting on foot a movement to hold a big banquet at the Windermere on the opening night.

FEBRUARY BUSY MONTH.

Great Quickening in Demand for Business Property—Large Frontages Command Good Prices.

SAN DIEGO, March 4.—The month of February proved the best season for sales of business property of any month since last summer. For more than three months there was a lull in the demand for business and city property. With the approach of early spring, however, sales of high-class realty are becoming more numerous.

Within a period of two weeks, J. C. Rice negotiated sales totalling $171,000. One of these was the transfer of 82x100 feet, with a three-story frame building, for Viola M. Lindsey to James Wilson, an investor, for $50,000. The property is located on F streets, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

J. C. Rice also reports the sale of 50x100 feet, on Third street, between B and C streets, for F. W. Van Buskirk, to a local investor, the price being $28,000.

One of the best recent sales of residence property was the transfer of the old Keating homestead, consisting of a lot 125x200 feet, and a large brick and stone residence, to A. L. Bouchard, for $35,000. The purchasers has brought his family here from St. Louis and will occupy the property, which is located on Sixth street adjoining Balboa Park.

D. G. Ives has sold the Ives flats, a two-story structure on a lot 50x100 feet, on Sixth street, between Cedar and Date streets, for $12,500. The property was purchased by T. W. Hickey for a client.

E. B. Schuyler and J. M. Lewis have sold to M. F. Schultheis fifty feet fronting on California street, between Ivy and Juniper streets, for $2000. The site was purchased for a brick warehouse.

E. J. Miller has sold to Martha D. Budlong two lots in University Heights facing Park boulevard, with a new residence, for $4500. Mrs. Budlong and her husband recently moved here from Idaho.

H. M. Withrow has sold to C. E. Osborn 50x100 feet, with a five-room cottage on Columbia street, between Juniper and Kalmia streets, for $3200.

J. C. Rice has sold to J. B. Beardsley 50x150 feet and an eight-room house at the northeast corner of Twenty-second and E streets, for $5000.

Warrenberger and Melborn have bought, through J. C. Rice, all of block 59, and all of block 13, in Arnold & Choate's addition, for $15,000. The purchasers expect to subdivide and improve.

L. Sample has bought of C. W. Green 100x100 feet, on Albatross street, between Hawthorne and Grape streets, for $4000. The property is unimproved.

Wells & Lane have sold for W. Wright a chicken and dairy ranch in Mission Valley, for $3000. The purchasers are C. E. Moore and wife, who recently arrived from the East.

Building permits, since January 1, aggregate $455,575. Among new buildings for which permits have been issued within the last few days are the following: Two-story frame residence for A. C. Playy, Columbia street, between Palm and Quince streets, $3000; E. G. Helm, two-story frame residence at La Jolla, $2900; Mrs. A. S. Briggs, bungalow at La Jollla, $2900.

LARGE GROVE EXCHANGED.

Charles N. Green reports the exchange of a forty-acre walnut grove in the city of Anaheim, belonging to A. B Tuthil and valued at $40,000, for property in Colorado Springs, Colo., owned by Handley and Miller and valued at lily pond and miniature garden. Further up the street the low slant roof of a Swiss cottage is seen while in the next house the exterior finishing is accented by Doric columns.

English, French, American, Spanish and Indian art are expressed all through the "Quarter," and although Miss Wall's plans are yet in their infancy there is every reason to believe that this feature is destined to become an additional attraction to San Gabriel.

The "Quarter" is only a few hundred yards west of the mission, but being situated an sloping ground is not conspicuous. The San Gabriel Arroyo flows through the extreme western portion of the settlement adding to the picturesque lay of the landscape.

THE MISSION.

On August 6, 1771, four Franciscan fathers from San Diego escorted by a number of Mexican soldiers arrived at a place on the San Gabriel River. It was their intention to found a mission somewhere in the neighborhood but the exact location, we are told in the old chronicles was determined more by fate than by the decision of man.

The old mission stands with all its original walls still entact save a portion in the rear of the main building which has crumbled away past repair. Services are held regularly every Sunday in the main church, which seats about 600 and a congregation numbering about that many and composed of Americans and Spanish attend. The building is opened daily for the inspection of visitors.

Of the original six bells in the belfry only four remain. The Angelus bell is among the remaining five and is tolled every day. The mission grounds comprise about eighteen acres, of which a large portion is used as a burying place. Some of the bodies have been buried about 200 years. The museum inside the building contains relics of the old Spanish and Indian mortars and pottery, a collection of Spanish paintings and statuary brought to America in the eighteenth century and many other features of historical interest.

THE GRAPE VINE.

One block west of the mission in the "patio" of a modern adobe building is the largest and oldest known grape vine in the world. This vine was planted by the Franciscan fathers 135 years ago. On account of the three great trunks which come up out of the ground it was known for many years as "El Parion de la Trinidad," or the Trinity Vine.

It is never irrigated or cultivated but is alive and healthy. Its hundreds of long branches are trellised in such a way as to make a vast canopy in the yard and when the foliage is on the vine it occupies a space of 9000 square feet. The main trunk is about eight feet high and is five feet six inches in circumference. It bears two crops of fruit annually and last year about 250,000 bunches of grapes were collected. The grapes are small but make excellent wine and jelly.

SOCIETY.

Nearly all the leading fraternal organizations are represented in Alhambra. Several have constructed substantial brick buildings in the business center of the town in which they hold their meetings.

The ladies of Alhambra are active in social affairs. One of the principal organizations is the Wednesday Afternoon club. This society is a member of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. It has a membership ranging between 140 and 150 members and meets every Wednesday afternoon in a pretty little clubhouse situated in the heart of the city. The clubhouse is valued at $5000 and is surrounded with tasty grounds. The object of the organization is the mutual improvement and advancement of its members in education, philanthropy, civic interests and social enjoyment. It was started in 1893 and is the oldest independent organization in the town.

The Parent-Teachers' Association is strongly represented in Alhambra and holds regular monthly meetings. The local members are doing much to bring the home and the school closer together and by its splendid and noble work many poor children are enabled to attend school who would otherwise have to work for a living.

The P. E. O. is a ladies' secret order which is also active in social affairs.

There are eight church denominations in the city, all of which have their own places of worship. There are no saloons and the moral tone of the community is carefully safeguarded by the authorities.

COUNTRY CLUB.

The San Gabriel Valley Country Club is situated about two miles due east of Alhambra and about one mile northeast of San Gabriel Mission. This club has been organized nearly seven years and owns fifty-one acres of ground, the best portion of which is given over to a beautiful golf links. Nearly the entire extent of this area is covered with a rich green carpet of natural grass and the course is provided with natural hazards in the form of live oak trees.

Running across a portion of the club's property is the remains of one of the old cactus hedges planted by the Franciscan fathers almost 200 years ago. This formed part of a large square field which it inclosed and was the only way the old fathers had of keeping their cattle and other earthly goods away from the thieving hands of the Indians.

Besides the golf links there are four excellent clay tennis courts conceded by the Misses Sutton, Messrs. Bundy, Sinsabaugh and McLoughlin to be the best clay courts in the country.

The clubhouse is a very spacious building constructed on a unique style of architecture, being a combination of the old English-Saxon and the Mission. It contains a large living room, a main room, gentlemen's locker and rest room and a kitchen.

There is also a six-room cottage on the grounds used by the members who stay out at the club over night. Meals are served three times a day regularly throughout the year. A social dance is given once a month and other dances are given by the members at various times. At the present time the club has 300 members enrolled, among whom are many prominent leaders of society and finance in Southern California. The San Gabriel Valley Country Club is a member of the Southern California Golf Association and also the California Women's Golf Association.

RANCHING.

The orange groves of the Alhambra section are the pride of the community. The perfect growth of these trees and the beauty of their foliage are ever admired by the tourist and visitor. All through the town there is hardly a home which does not boast of an orange tree of some variety in the front or back garden. These home-loving people and the habit of combining beauty and utility in their orange trees.

The soil is a rich brown and red loam all through the valley. It will grow positively any vegetation which can be produced anywhere in the United States. It is mellow and very deep, easy to plow and cultivate and absorbs moisture readily, which it retains.

The citrus groves are paying the growers handsomely. Some of the largest and sweetest navel and valencia oranges grown in the State have been produced in this section and the crops are abundant. There are several packing-houses.

Surrounding Alhambra are a number of large chicken ranches. There are certain sections where the soil is not quite so rich as that required for citrus culture, and which can be bought for less money, which is very suitable for poultry raising. The location offers the poultryman the choice of several markets, Los Angeles and Pasadena being the largest.

The water question is always one of interest to a prospective settler. In this district it is not necessary for the farmer to produce his own domestic or irrigation water, nor would it pay him to do so even with the water only a few feet below the surface. The San Gabriel Valley Water Company supplies the domestic water for the town of Alhambra and the irrigation water for the surrounding country at rates which are low for the service given.

The town's domestic water is sold at the rate of $1.25 for 10,000 gallons or 1300 cubic feet. All the streets are piped with good sized mains.

The irrigation system covers over 10,000 acres, about 8000 of which are receiving water from the company. The water is conveyed through underground pipes and practically does not see daylight from the time it is lifted from the company's wells, situated three miles north of Alhambra, until it reaches the consumer. The rate for the irrigation water is 1 1-8 cents per surface inch, per hour.

PHOENIX SCHOOL A MODEL.

Plans for Magnificent Educational Group in Arizona Capital Nearing Completion in Los Angeles.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 4.—The working plans for the magnificent new Phoenix Union High School group are being rushed to completion by Architect Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles. The buildings, six in number, will be arranged on one large campus near the present high school and will stand on both sides of Sixth street, just north of Van Buren. The project will represent an outlay of over $150,000.

The structures to be erected are a science hall, auditorium, household and fine arts building, manual arts building and gymnasium. All will be in the classic style, the science hall being in the Roman Doric, the household and fine arts building in the Roman Corinthian and the auditorium in the Ionic style.

The construction throughout will be in brick, plastered on the exterior. The school will be one of the finest and most modern in the Southwest.

ROMANCE AND REALITY.

DID you ever read a novel called "Life in a Furniture Van?" Perhaps that is not the right way to read the title, but it will do. It is great. Why? Because it is real. But is that any reason for saying that the book is art? There was once a man named Goethe. In his time he was considered a great artist. He wrote some stories in prose and others in verse. "Eclectic Affinities" was one. "The Sorrows of Werther" was another. But "Faust" was his greatest work, his most exquisite art. Were these stories real? Not a bit. No such person as Faust ever lived. His career was impossible. His companion in the drama, Mephistopholes is altogether an imaginary personage. There is not a particle of reality in this, one of the leading characters of the play.

There is a play known as "Salvation Nell." It has had great vogue. The critics of the day almost without exception have proclaimed the greatness of this drama. So there was a dramatist named Shakespeare. He penned a bit of dramatic work under the title "Midsummer Night's Dream." Does it in any respect resemble "Salvation Nell?" In no feature. It is not real. It is prose-romance, a creation of the phantasmagoria-working imagination. There is not one real character in this play. They are all wrought out of pure moonshine. They are "such stuff as dreams are made of." No mortal like these ever trod the earth. There is not a bit of realism in the piece. So by the canons of present-day criticism this drama of the man of Avon is not art. What is it? Modern criticism has no specific name for this kind of work. Generically it is not realism, therefore by a jump through the major premise of the syllogism it is not art. That is a conclusion which to question would arouse not Homeric laughter but self-sufficient, most inconclusive derision. Or perhaps one would say conclusive. It all depends on the point of view of the speaker. To the master of the Elizabethan age of literature the conclusion is lame because the ma-real is rot. The men who made the literature of the jor premise is false. To the modern critic anything not Augustine age at Rome and those who made Athenian literature in the days of Pericles hold with the Elizabethans. The authors of "Three Weeks of Bestial Sin" think the Pericles people, the Augustinian fellows, those of the days of Queen Elizabeth, were barbarous in their conceptions. So does the author of "Life in a Furniture Van," and also those who go wild over the realism of "Salvation Nell."

There are other artists than those of the pen, those of the brush and also those of the mallet and chisel. Realism has invaded their realm, too, but has not so carried all the outposts and inner citadels as in the realism of fiction prose and verse. There are commonplace realities to challenge the attention of the painter. There are scenes which call aloud to him to paint things as they are, as many as the events of human life which call to the story teller to portray life as it is. These scenes call upon the painter to turn his back on Corot, on Claude Lorrain, on Raphael and Titian, and to give the world in imperishable oils the life of our day as it is. Go into the regions of great cities where vice, degradation, sin and shameless shame flaunt their hideous heads and paint the unrepentant, unsavable Magdalens of the slums as they are, as they live, as they will die. Let no redeeming influence of a sense of decency check your hand, but take the slums as they are and make them immortal. Who ever saw a "Mater Dolorosa," a "Descent From the Cross," a Hobbema landscape, or a Greuze maiden weeping over a dead canary bird? These things do not dwell on earth, or if they do they cannot be discovered in the everyday life of the Ghetto or of the London fish market. Paint the real and put a curb on your imagination.

There is a shorter course than this to the real in the painter's art. The editor of the Dunghill and all its realities has not thought of this. Cut out the brush and the colors, the atelier and the easel, and let us set the boy and girl loose in the world to let the truthful seer portray life in the barnyard and elsewhere as it is. But if the man does not make the scene banal enough, or if there are vulgarities in life not to be had in barnyards and similar localities, the editor of the art journal of the real can take a hint from his brother who edits "Life at Its Worst" and use his blue pencil. There is still room for the play of the imagination. If real life is not vulgar enough there are the frescoes of Pompeii to copy and the fine verse of Lucretius to imitate.

There have been artists who have been realists, too. Rabelais was one. So was Laurence Sterne, and so was Fielding. In verse one artist has achieved undying and well-merited fame by sticking as close to the material reality as ever a shoemaker stuck to his last. It was this man Lucretius. His verse is all of the earth earthy, but it is great. He has had and has imitators, but like all who plagiarize, or even copy, they were small. A modicum of talent is all they can lay claim to. Genius they have none.

Shakespeare is often real and sometimes nasty. Witness "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Antony and Cleopatra." Even in that idyl of supreme beauty, "Romeo and Juliet," the nurse is both realistic and vulgar enough. Yes, just enough to save her from sinking to the depths of just common depravity, coarse, bestial vice. And what a fine sense of humor there is in introducing her in the play! She is brought in for this, not just to be vulgar, common and coarse. As for Cleopatra, she shows in the concrete what Solomon meant when he said that thing about beauty in some women as a "jewel in a swine's snout." That is what Royal Egypt shows in her lewdness of thought and speech.

But let us return to our starting point. Goethe is not a realist. He is a romancer pure and simple. His lines come not from real life, but are brought down from white heat of sublimated play of the human imagination and are meant to show us depths in the human soul that do not reveal themselves in everyday life. Faust is not to be found in Ghettos, nor are barrooms his habitual place of abode. He is not a mere animated clod all earth, all earthy, all mere beast, all beastly. No man ever lived who was so. "Salvation Nell" sets before us sodden parcels of humanity that differ from the swine in the barnyard only in walking upright and being endowed with speech. The realist may think there are men of this type. We do not. Goethe was convinced that no man could fall so low, become so degraded, so bestial, that all trace of the human should in time be lost. Ignorant, besotted, vicious, degraded, a man may become, but he is not a beast from the worst of it. He is still a man, and no matter how low he may sink, it is always possible for him to rise.

Then which phase of life is most worth while to portray in prose, in verse, on the written page or on the canvas? Is it best to take it for granted that all men are bestial, and that those who do not sink to the swine's level missed their opportunity and are living unworthy of their race and origin, or shall we take the Goethe conception that in Faust there is something more than in the swine in the pen? Is Circe the true prophet of humanity and is her sty the proper habitat of us all? Shall we by our art seek to lead all men to go down open-eyed to the level of the dogs, and to tread the paths of dalliance after the fashion of the heroes of Mrs. Glyn, and shall we look with complacency on the lowering of our wives and daughters to the level of that woman's heroines? Which is the highest faculty of human nature, that which allies man with the oyster and makes digestion the supreme function, or to the head of the herd in the pasture and makes the gratification of passion the one thing to live for, or shall we insist with romantic Goethe that Faust may deceive Marguerite and lead her down to untimely and shameful death at the peril of losing some part of his nature that outweighs a century of mere gratification?

You That Are Gone.

BY WILBUR D. NESBIT.

To the house appointed for our living.—[Job xxx. 23.

You that are gone—we know not where,
Save that your eyes were shut in sleep
And that your hands were waxen fair,
Hands whose warm touch we fain would keep—
You that are gone, this is to say
The hearts you left behind you yearn
And wait all patient, day and day,
For your return.

Who knows what pathway lured your feet?
It may be that 'tis yours to fare
Out where the dawn and twilight meet,
Into a vast, unknown, somewhere—
But this is sure, the home hearts wait
While through the mist of worlds you roam,
And sigh and say that soon or late
You will come home.

Your chair within the inglenook
Holds still its comfortable space,
Upon its arm your open book
With ribbon left to mark the place;
Your roses burst anew to bloom
And drip their jewelings of dew;
The very air, lush with perfume,
Is waiting you.

We know not, in the curtained night
Whose every shadow blurs and bars
The far-flung gleaming of the light
That comes from all the time-old stars—
We know not but we faintly hear
Your step, and we hold silence then,
With faith that ever drawing near
You come again.

They say 'tis done that we no more
May see you smile or hear you speak,
Or catch your footfall on the floor,
Or trace the roses in your cheek;
But still we blindly send this call
To you, that somehow you may learn
That hearts and hearths are waiting—all
For your return.

MOTOR CAR CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH.

The favorable effects of a change of air in the later stages of whooping cough are well known, and Dr. Manuel Rodriguez Portillo, in Clinica y Laboratorio, states that these results can be even bettered by ordering such patients to indulge in motor drives.

He imposes certain conditions, however, namely, that a clear, mild day be chosen for the excursion, a good level road selected, a speed of six and a half miles an hour never exceeded and that the child be placed on the front seat of the car, next to the chauffeur. He attributes the beneficial effects of this treatment to the increased depth of the pulmonary respiration thereby induced acting as a sort of sweeper-out of the respiratory passages as well as to the tonic and stimulating action of the fresh air breathed. The appetite and blood-forming powers of the system are also increased.—[The Hospital.

HE DIDN'T LET GO.

The following story is told of Lockwood Kipling and his famous son. When Rudyard was 12 he went on a sea voyage with his father. The elder Kipling became very seasick and went below, leaving the youngster to himself. Presently there was a great commotion overhead and one of the ship's officers rushed down and banged at Mr. Kipling's door.

"Mr. Kipling," he called out, "your boy has crawled out on the yardarm, and if he lets go he'll drown."

"Yes," said Mr. Kipling, glad to know that nothing serious was the matter, "but he won't let go."—[New York Sun.

SONG.

Where are the fields of Arcady,
Of sweet desire and gentle thought,
Where love is like the burning rose
And roses wither not?

Where is the land of Romany,
Where life is one itinerant dance,
Today a song upon the road,
Tomorrow but a chance?

And where is gay Bohemia,
Where heart to heart is fondly bound?
Contentment is the wine they drink,
And every cup is crowned?

Arcady? 'Tis a simple heart.
Romany? But a spirit free.
Bohemia? The clasp of hands—
And you yourself the three!

AMERICAN COLLEGES.

HOW THEY ARE REVOLUTIONIZING THE ORIENT.

BEIRUT.—Do you realize how American education is revolutionizing the Orient? It has been one of the chief forces which have modernized Egypt. It has much to do with the great revolution in Persia, and it is the basis of the reorganization now going on throughout the whole Turkish Empire. The first schools of Egypt were started by United Presbyterian missionaries, and their educational institutions now cover the Nile Valley. They have schools in the Sudan and a great American college at Assiout, several hundred miles above Cairo. The college was started in a donkey stable about forty years ago, and it has been turning out graduates ever since. It has now more than 1000 students, who are housd in ten large two-story buildings, and it has recently completed three of the finest halls to be found in the Far East. These are situated just outside Assiout, at the junction of the Nile with the great canal north of that city, and by the time this letter is published they will be finished and in active operation. The college has about 300 women, and it is associated with the new Girls' Academy which was dedicated at Cairo during the stay of President Roosevelt.

The American College in Egypt.

I visited the college at Assiout not long ago. It is full to overflowing and notwithstanding the new structure just completed it needs more money and more buildings. It has a great prestige throughout the Nile Valley and its efficiency, with a little money, could be easily doubled. The college is said to give a better education than the government institutions, and that at the lowest possible cost. The tuition is nominal. For the poorest scholars it is only about $1 a session in money, and the ordinary rate is about $10 a year. The cost of the education varies with the taste of the students. These are of all classes from the sons of the poorest fellah to the highest pasha and richest merchant of the Nile Valley. There are three kinds of accommodations, the cost of which ranges from $35 a year upward. The wealthy Egyptian boy can have his own room or he can live four in a room. He can have a good table, or, at less cost, can be boarded so that he has meat three or four times a week. On the other hand he can work his way through college, bringing his own food, and buying vegetables and fish at very low cost. Many of the boys bring their bread from home. It is made of ground corn or millet and baked in cakes an inch thick. These cakes are toasted until they are as hard as stone, in which shape they will keep through the term. Before going into a meal the students dip their bread in buckets of water set out for the purpose, and, when soft, carry it with them in to the table.

The Assiout institution has its graduates in all the government departments of Egypt. They are among the leading merchants of the country, and every town has numbers of them. Many are Copts and not a few are Mohammedans. I am told that there are more than 15,000 boys now being educated in the United Presbyterian schools and colleges.

How the Sultan Lost His Throne.

Shortly before the Sultan Abdul Hamid was ousted by the Young Turk party and carried to his prison in Salonika, where he now is, he referred bitterly to the work that Robert College had done in unsettling his empire. Said he: "That institution has cost me Bulgaria, and it is likely to lose me my throne."

He was right. Robert College was founded in 1863 by a New York merchant named Robert, who gave a large part of his fortune to this institution. He was aided by the Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, D. D., who was, I think, the real organizer. Since then it has been turning out graduates, and they have largely formed the leaven which has brought about the new Turkey and the Young Turk party of today. Some of its graduates built up Bulgaria and organized the colleges and schools there. Others have been teaching in schools throughout the Turkish Empire; many have acted as officers of the government, and today the best of the new are among them.

Robert College has now 500 or 600 students, including Mohammedans, Jews, Armenians and Russians, as well as representatives of the other nations about. The teaching is non-sectarian, although all are required to attend daily prayers and go to services Sunday. I understand that this college is now highly approved by the new government, but that the latter would like to have it incorporated as a Turkish institution, subject to the laws of Turkey and with Turkish directors. To this the Americans naturally object. They say that they are organized under the laws of New York, and they expect to stand by the rights which the foreign ownership gives them.

The Censorship of the Turks.

There is no doubt but that the Americans are sensible in preferring the protection of Uncle Sam to that of the Sultan. Conditions are bound to be unsettled in this part of the world for years to come. There will be revolutions and counter-revolutions before the Turks come thirty-five professors, the most of them Americans, and it is a thoroughly up-to-date university. It has a medical department which, with its hospitals, treats something like 16,000 patients a year. It has physical, chemical and other laboratories, a large library and ethnological and industrial museums devoted to Syria and Turkey.

The New Turks at School.

During my stay here I have visited the college. It is beautifully located, the buildings being situated on the bluffs south of Beirut and running from them down to the sea. Standing upon the campus, which contains about fifty acres, one faces the glorious Mediterranean, and at his back are the snow-capped mountains of Lebanon with the rich vegetation climbing their slopes. The institution has a gymnasium, tennis courts and good athletic grounds. Its students play football, baseball and cricket. They are full of college spirit and have their college papers and college songs. Their college yell is as folows:

S. P. C.

The boys have a silver cup which is contended for by the various athletic teams, and these Persians, Greeks, Syrians, Arabs, Egyptians, Armenians and Turks are being welded into one brotherhood by the hard knocks of football and the track.

Civilizing the Mohammedans.

The Beirut College is an American college and a Christian college as well, but it does not attempt to proselytize, and the Mohammedan can come to it without changing his religion. It insists only that every one who goes through its courses shall attend chapel and the Bible classes studying the Bible as one of the great influences in the work of the world. It is not long since the students, who believe in Mohammed, struck against these regulations. They refused to go to chapel and took an oath not to attend the Bible classes. The strike created a sensation, and for a time it seemed as though it might do serious damage. The faculty, however, headed by the president, Dr. Howard S. Bliss, insisted, saying that the school was a Christian college. They demanded that all students must attend the religious services, and the result was that most of the strikers came in and the college has gone along on its original lines.

In talking about this to one of the Mohammedan students Dr. Bliss said:

"Our college was established to give the Mohammedan world the best that the Christian world has. Our aim is to make of you broad-minded, intelligent men whether you continue to be Moslems or Christians. We believe that the best thing we have is our religion, and we are bound to let you know what it is. Whether you accept it or not rests with yourself. If upon investigation you still think the Moslem religion the best we believe that the knowledge you have of our religion will make you better and broader Moslems. Religion is for man, not man for religion, and we want you to have the training which will make each one of you the best man, whether he be Christian or Moslem."

Today the Mohammedan students, attending the services, look upon them as largely educational, and they study the Bible as such.

The Spread of Education.

The influence of colleges like this goes far and wide. The students come from villages all over the Turkish Empire and from those of India and Persia as well. Going home, each forms a little hotbed for the growth of independent thought, and civilized ideas are spread in other ways. One of the great means of such distribution is the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, which is attended by about half a million Mohammedans from all parts of the Orient. At that time Mecca becomes a great camp meeting or bush meeting, such as we farmers have in Virginia. The people come together and gossip. They discuss the crops and ask one another how they are getting along. Hassan Ali of Egypt says to Mohammed of Turkey. "How is business? Are you making money, and how does your government treat you?" Mohammed replies that the Turks are taxed to death, but they hope for much under the new Sultan. Thereupon Hassan says that the English have cut down the taxes and that the church has plenty of money in its treasury. He tells how he has been able to send his boy to college, and that he hopes he will some day be an official. The Turk thereupon longs for a better government. At the same time the college students tell what they have learned, and as a result the twentieth century spirit of modern progress is stirring the Mohammedan world.

The Work of the Missions.

In addition to the collegiate work great advances in our civilization are being made by the Protestant missions. There are now thousands of native Christians in Syria, and from seventy-five to one hundred thousand native Christians in the Empire of Turkey. The American missionaries alone have over 100 schools, with five or six thousand pupils, and the English have many more.

Right here in Beirut is the largest and most up-to-date publishing plant in the Orient. It belongs to the American mission, and it annually turns out tens of thousands of volumes of the Bible, of school text-books and of others on religious and scientific subjects. Altogether it has published more than 700 different works in Arabic, and it is estimated that it has printed approximately a billion pages of one kind or other. It issues in the neighborhood of 100,000 volumes a year, containing altogether something like 30,000,000 pages. Its Bibles published in Arabic are sold throughout the Mohammedan world.

The medical missionaries are doing a great deal in all parts of the Orient. I have seen their hospitals everywhere on this trip around the world. They are to be found in all parts of India, far up the Nile Valley and in the leading centers of the Holy Land. One of the best I have visited is situated at Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee, being headed by Dr. Torrence, who has been treating the Bedouins and others there for the past thirty years. In talking with him the question of tuberculosis came up, and he described the evils of the great white plague as they are found in his region on the very edge of the desert. He says tuberculosis is rife among the Bedouins, although they live out of doors and are in the purest of air all the time. He thinks that the disease is largely distributed by the cattle. About 50 per cent. of the cows have tuberculosis, and the people live chiefly on milk.

Another doctor connected with that hospital tells me that Syria had no consumption until about twenty-five years ago, when the disease was brought in from the United States by natives who had emigrated to our country, contracted consumption and brought it back home. The Syrians had no idea what it meant, and it rapidly spread. The sanitary conditions of this part of the world are bad, the bacteria breed rapidly and the disease is sweeping the country.

An American Hospital for Consumptives.

And this brings me to a great work which has just been started at Juneau within a few miles of Beirut. I refer to the Tuberculosis Hospital, which is being built there by the Church of the Covenant of Washington City, and which is under the care of Dr. Mary Eddy, a young woman physician, who has become famous for her work as a medical missionary throughout the Near East. Miss Eddy is the daughter of the Rev. William W. Eddy, who came to Syria about sixty years ago and remained here until his death. She is a woman of fine education and great medical skill, and moreover an expert upon all matters connected with tuberculosis and its treatment.

She is the only woman who has ever been granted an irade or certificate of protection from the Sultan authorizing her to practice as a doctor everywhere throughout his dominion and directing that all good Turks shall give her assistance as she goes on her way.

Miss Eddy has been working in Syria for years and Miss Eddy has been working in Syria for years and has been fighting the spread of consumption as best she could with no place for her patients. The people have come and camped in tents near her house waiting treatment and the tents of the Bedouins may be seen dotting the plains near where the hospital is now. It is only a year or so ago that the movement to erect this hospital began, and the buildings are now approaching completion. Among the largest givers ~~to~~ it have been Mrs. John Hay, the wife of the late Secretary of State, and the late Mrs. Gardiner Hubbard, the mother-in-law of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. So far the contributions are not equal to the needs of the institution, and much more money could be profitably used. I do not know any place where charitable contributions will bring in a greater return.

GERMAN TELEPHON E GIRLS.

HAVE TO PASS CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS BUT MAY HOLD JOBS TILL 70 YEARS OLD.

The German telephone girl gets her job through a civil service examination and usually hangs on to it for life. Her average age on entering the business must be near 30. As she can stay until she is 70 (but no longer) one sees many operators, says the Telephone Revieu, whose age it would be ungallant to guess.

Novices go to a training school, but are not paid while there, and the drill in practical operation is complicated with a good many technicalities of construction. On entering an exchange an operator is paid about 60 cents a day.

She has 4 cents a day increase each year until the eighth or ninth, when she is established, and cannot be discharged without considerable red tape. When she has worked up to $450 a year, and $450 extra for house rent, she stays at that pay until retired on pension.

On the back of each operator's chair are two bags, a black one to hold head set and service property, and a brown one for her lunch and personal belongings. Operators freely talk back to a hostile subscriber and pleasantly pass the time of day with a friendly one. They apparently talk to one another with little restraint while at the board.

Working hours are about ten a day. Girls work the board from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Night operation is done by men, paid double wages, and they repair cords and work about the board as well as answer calls, for the night traffic is very light.

Supervisors are not so numerous as with us, and handle fifteen to twenty-five operators upon lines that do not tend to produce the quick service our public is accustomed to. The cardinal virtue of the German service is its cheapness, and the cardinal defect its leisureliness.

Berlin calls average two and a half cents apiece, and it is possible to talk nearly 400 miles for 25 cents. But the German exchequer, of course, bears the burden of a deficit, on the same plan as Uncle Sam's postoffice.

One excellent practice universal in Germany Americans might well adopt. Telephone managers here are now trying to bring subscribers to identify themselves when answering the telephone. Every German does it, for instead of saying "Hello," the form of answering is invariably "Hier Karl Schmidt" or "This is Karl Schmidt."

Long-distance operators identify themselves by their towns, so that when Frankfort-on-the-Main is rung up from Berlin the operator says "This is Miss Frankfort" or "Hier Fraulein Frankfort." The "Fraulein" is never left off.

While long distance is cheap, it is also crowded through the day, and considerable time is needed to get a message through as a rule. The Berlin operators on long distances speak several languages, as they are working with French, Italian, Russian, Swedish, Dutch, and other operators.

The Ober-Inspektor at Berlin gave one amusing fact on this point. While all his operators handling traffic to Paris speak French, learned in the thorough German fashion, only one or two long-distance operators at Paris condescend to speak German.

Some of the exchanges have comfortable lunchrooms where coffee is served to the operators, and all will have them in time, it was said. The telephone service in Germany is like most business there in that the employees have two hours for hearty meal in the middle of the day and go home to take a nap. Peaks in the traffic come at two points—9 to 11 in the morning, and 3:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon. A double charge is made for night traffic, and so it is light.

"Information" is also rather a placid person, and complaints are handled upon a system which furnishes many contrasts to the American practice. It is said that an operator will often enter into a detailed discussion with a subscriber who asks for a firm whose number he does not know and finally turn him over to "information" reluctantly.

When the call comes to the information desk the operator there has little but the official telephone directory to go by. If that will not answer the question, it commonly goes begging. The directory is issued once a year and not even the list of new subscribers is posted promptly at the desk. If a complaint comes in, too, the operator will frequently discuss the matter with the subscriber, especially in the case of a wrong connection or premature cut-off.

If she cannot establish an alibi and it goes further the supervisor or inspector reprimands her for that particular offence, but nothing else happens. If the complaint gets as far as writing, the authorities reply, stating to the subscriber that both parties are at fault and they will try to correct the shortcoming. The subscriber's letter is read to the operator with a caution.

One inspector said that the operators handle three complaints to his one, but added that this was largely the fault of subscribers, who have the habit of taking up trouble direct with the operator. If an operator complains that a subscriber has insulted or sworn at her the subscriber can be fined or have his telephone taken away.

BICGEST OF WOODPECKERS.

It is a pleasant life that Graham Burnham has led for many years in Oklahoma. Burnham is an Indian with a white skin. A long time ago he built a hunting lodge of big logs down on the Little River and "denned up" to enjoy the delights of the wilderness.

No day passes in lawful season without finding game hanging from the rafters of the Burnham smokehouse. He knows more about hunting places than any other man in Oklahoma. The honk of wild geese will wake him at midnight and the hum of wild bees will rouse him at the sleepiest noon and lead him to the woods and the honey hole in the tall sycamore.

It is doubtful if anybody knows more about the fauna of Oklahoma than Burnham. He is acquainted with the haunts of all the furred and the feathered dwellers of the forest, and keeps his eyes open for such strangers as wander to this latitude. Perhaps his most pleasing discovery last fall was a pair of ivory-billed woodpeckers, a male and a female, which he mounted and sent to the Bureau of Biology in Washington.

"The ivory-billed woodpecker, Campehilus principalis," says Burnham, "is the largest type of the woodpecker species in the world. It is twenty inches long and of beautiful black and white and red plumage. Formerly quite common over the Gulf States, it is now found only in eastern Oklahoma and in remote portions of Florida.

"A brilliant crimson crest adorns its head. Its note is a two-syllabled shriek or squawk, sometimes resembling the screech of the domestic hen, hence the frequent name of 'squaw hen.' Another commonly-accepted name for the bird is woodcock, which is again a misnomer, as the woodcock is an entirely different bird, more on the plover or snipe order, a night feeder and ground dweller.

"The ivory-billed woodpecker is much more destructive to trees than the common woodpecker, as he is greater in size. He not only strips dead trunks of bark, but invariably bores a hole in a solid live tree for his nest, in which from three to six glossy white eggs, about an inch and a half long, are hatched. The bird is very wary, but bids fair to early extermination."—[New York Sun.

THE AVIATOR.

O God! To have the world below our feet!
To mount, and glide, and soar, and looking down
Upon the little men that dot the street,
And all the tiny tracing of the town;

For once to measure with an infinite span
The little things of earth, from heaven's great height
And thence to view the works and ways of man,
And judge their values with a clearer sight!

O Joy! to race the winds, and hear them singing,
To cleave the clouds, and spring, and swoop, and rise,
And on and on, in the infinite upwinging
With throbbing pulse, and sun-confronted eyes!

To soar, alone, above, in the immense
Blue freedom of the sky, where time and space
Dissolve in joy of motion, and the sense
Of power outruns the little earthly race

Of creeping men—O God! what joy of fine
New being this! Shall not our race grow fair,
With powers like these? Greater, more free, divine?

New Impressions of An Old Land. By George W. Burton.

THE CENTER OF MADRID.

ONE HUNDRED YARDS FROM THE PUERTA DEL SOL.

By a Staff Writer.

I AM sitting here in my room writing this letter 100 yards from the center of the world. The center of infinity is anywhere and everywhere. So it is with the center of this old world of ours. We all know where the "Hub of the Universe" is in the world of a great many highly intelligent and very fine people. The Chinaman thinks his "Flowery Kingdom" is also "The Central Kingdom" and is full sure that China is the center of the globe. To the Southern Californian who would dare say that Los Angeles is on the rim? And the dweller by the Golden Gate will become indignant if any dare assert that his city is not the most central spot from which all latitude and longitude must date, while the Portlander is just as sure that the sun in his diurnal course does not look down upon a bit of country comparable in any respect with the valley of the Willamette from the forks of that delightful stream to where it mingles its waters with those of the Columbia.

We are speaking of the sun and where he wheels his course. I am at the gate where he first sheds his rays upon the earth. This is a fact as old as history. All men who have heard anything in the past or the present have been fascinated by the things said of the Peurta del Sol, or the "Gate of the Sun." It lies in the geographical, social center of Madrid, and indeed it is the focus of this ancient, modern and altogether charming city from whatever point of view you contemplate matters. La Puerta del Sol is the center of Madrid. Madrid is the exact geographical center of Spain and the center of the kingdom in all respects, and who will dispute that Spain was once the center of the world?

Madrid to Malaga at the southern end of the Iberian Peninsula is 616 kilometers, to Santander on the north coast in a straight line the distance is 503 kilometers, to Barcelona 685, and to Lisbon 665. These are railroad distances, and in no case are the places absolutely the farthest from the capital to the coast. To be sure, Lisbon is not in Spain, but once it was, or what was the same, was under Spanish control, and this is another case of things being what they should not be. The patriotic Spaniard is fully convinced that it was a hard and unfair decree of fate that his country is not still what it was in the days of Philip II and much more besides. Surely the world would be better if the wrong cause had not triumphed and deprived the world of so able a mistress. But fate won, and we shall not be able at this late day to change her decrees and make what should be the things that shall be.

I had heard a great deal of the Puerta del Sol and had my own ideas about this interesting dot on the surface of the earth. Now I am little given to consulting guide books. I find they too often lead me into the wrong paths and leave me to find my way back to fact by my own unguided efforts. I do not know, "Kind Reader," what you think of the "Puerta del Sol" just as you sit there on the shores of the faraway Pacific at this moment. As I sat there a few months ago I had in my mind in connection with these fascinating words a vision of an ample park with stately houses on all sides and fine trees and flower beds full of color and beauty all between. I never pretend to more knowledge than I possess, and am making a clear breast of my ignorance, as it was last winter when I sat where you sit now. Well, there you have the Puerta del Sol as created by my misguided imagination. Here is the spot as it stands before me from my window here in old Madrid.

Condensed Population.

We reached the Hotel Londres at midnight of a certain day. It is a regular hotel, not large nor fine from our point of view in America. It is called "Grand," as are all hotels here. Measured by things in New York it is not dear. But I knew I could get just as comfortable entertainment at a pension for less than half the "tariff" at the hotel, and early in the morning sallied forth in quest of my ideal. I found it in fifteen minutes, and it was at the very edge of the Puerta del Sol. This I found to be a bit of the city in the shape of a horseshoe which some one gave a hard blow on the toe and thus flattened the curve. From heel to heel across the straight part of this square the distance is 500 or 600 feet, and around the flattened curve it might measure somewhat more than 1000 feet. Here ten of the principal streets of the city converge and here come all the street-car lines of Madrid. Here also congregate at noon a mass of the population that fills it as thick as an anthill in a summer field, or the mouth of a beehive when the flowers are all in bloom. It is a flower bed of color, to be sure, but the flowers are human, the beautiful women and handsome men of Spain, and the color is that of the robes they wear. How wide apart are facts and fancy! The houses are good all around the horseshoe, but not grand in any one instance. Two or three are hotels, all "grand" by the signs they bear, but not one so good as a second-class hostelry in any large city on the Pacific Coast.

No wonder it is a beehive of humanity. Here center the civil, mercantile and social life of a city of 500,000 people. It is a city, too, not of busy mercantile people, or of manufacturing plants, but mostly of government officials, of well-to-do people whose business is that ancient trade of killing time, of visitors from other parts of Spain, and of tourists from all parts of the world. There are here in our pension eight to twelve persons day by day. Most of these come from America; once in a while comes a German or a Swede, or a man or a woman from England. Of natives there are some here at any time. This pension is Madrid in epitome. It is a flat with an area of about fifty by sixty feet. This is subdivided into ten rooms, all bedrooms excepting the small kitchen, the smaller "sitting-room" with a piano that occupies one-third of its space, and the dining-room eight by twelve, where half a score of people eat three times a day. The space is about that of the bedroom floor of a pretty good American house where would be found four bedrooms, a hall, and a bathroom. Remember, this is made to answer for ten rooms, and here more than a dozen people find accommodation all the time. The sleeping-rooms are fitted up with from one to three beds each, and these are shifted from room to room as they are needed. All are single beds. It is scarcely worth while to say that some of these rooms are mere holes in the wall, with no light from outside nor ventilation excepting from the small halls, almost always hermetically sealed from the outer air. In the center of the flat comes down a light well six by ten feet which greatly reduces the available space. This is used to dry the clothes, which are washed in the kitchen. This flat has five floors and a mansard story under the roof. The ground floor is used for stores; in all the others people live more or less packed together. The building is flanked on both sides and in the rear with others just like it, only the rear one has a light well between it and the others and those on all sides share in the light. The air is not enough for a bird in a cage.

So it goes up and down the street and so in all the other streets near the center of the city. All the houses are five to six stories, mostly five, excepting a few old ones of one or two. If all the floors of the building are as well occupied as ours the four principal floors lodge and feed nearly fifty persons. As the storekeepers live in the rear of their stores, and as the mansard accommodates several persons, this space of fifty by sixty on the ground with its six stories gives shelter to [illegible] half a hundred people and twenty such spaces lodge 1000.

a most wanton way used up the woods, leaving a trees, bleak and sterile plain for miles around Madrid.
nce comes the high cost of fuel as well as of timber other purposes, and worse still, the awful climate of adrid. It has passed into a proverb which you hear on ery hand that the climate here is made up of "nine nths of winter and three of hell." You realize it at atever time you come. Moreover, the climate is sub-t to great changes because of the winds from the untains around. We came in November, because we rned that September 1 to November 30 was the best son. It is pleasant during the hours from 11 a.m. to p.m. The nights are very cold, and also the morn-s and evenings. The mercury rarely gets below the ezing point, but when there you do not wish to ex-rience anything more severe. The Gulf Stream park commissions of all our cities should visit these ntries and learn. Madrid has dozens of small plazas quares all over the city. It has the Prado, with its ongations around the southeast side of the city, per-three miles in all. It is 250 to 500 feet where it rges into a plaza here and there. It resembles the nue Champs Elysees in Paris. All along are trees walks between them, flower beds here and there, fountains and monuments to the memory of great or representing some mythological subject. Sim-ity is the feature that strikes you. The plan is all convenience and to please the eye, and this is done the closest adherence possible to nature. All that is e is to make walks and drives. These and the monu-nts are the only obtrusion of man into the realms of ature in her simplest moods. Beyond the Prado lie the rks, stretching for miles, all the creation of art whose rpose is to counterfeit nature as nearly as possible at the same time permit the people to come into est contact with the simplest moods of nature and autumn foliage when we were there was gorgeous, this with the light and shade that played hide-and-k along the straight or winding paths and roads was naturally artistic that we were often compelled to nd and look in silence for half hours fascinated by the ple beauty of the scene. There are numerous seats rywhere for the use of the populace. In the hot days ummer the people spend nearly all the nights in e parks and sleep most of the day.

nty of Water.

Outwardly Madrid is very clean. It is mostly so in-dly, too. More than twenty years ago the city spent
,000,000 to bring in 300 miles from the mountains a bountiful supply of pure water. This is piped gh the streets and to the parks, where many small have been created. Every morning city employees h long pieces of hose to faucets in the sidewalk and the streets. There is no mud nor dust in the ts or the air. In the hot summer the streets are nkled in this way several times a day, cooling the great deal.

r cent. is equally divided between beggars and e persons on one side and the "great world" on pass the children of the middle classes. Some-the parents of the children of the laces walk by e of the little carriages. The middle classes take charge of their own offspring for the most part. And the crowd is all shot through with people of the humblest walks of life, both old and young. The parents sit in the sun and chat betimes while the children skip rope, play horse, throw balls, and indulge in all the sports of childhood that are older than all histories and antedate all cities. So at noon in the Puerta del Sol. It is a motley crowd. The grand dame steps from her carriage and the rich merchant walks the sidewalks cheek by jowl with the street sweeper who has the noon hour off, the street-car man who is to get his lunch, and the omnipresent beggar, as well as small boys and girls, old men and women in poor clothes selling all sorts of things useful or otherwise to catch a penny for the daily needs. Here passes along a regiment of infantry, colonel and captains in gorgeous array, foot soldiers well clad and carrying their guns, and the street gamins run in and out among the ranks. Here is an urchin with a broom he has borrowed from the street sweeper on his shoulder mocking the sergeant by whose side he struts. In a monarchical country, one in which birth and position count for so much, one might expect to see much repression of the common people. As a matter of fact there is no such thing. The commonest men and women go about much more independently in aristocratic Madrid than in the most democratic city in America. All asked here has nothing to do with wealth or position, with clothes or other outward circumstance. Any person goes where he will provided he has the price to pay for what he wishes and will behave himself properly. The laborer jostles the count; the poorest sits at the next table to the millionaire in any public place where each pays his way or where admission is free. In all their bearing the utmost independence is marked in the conduct of all classes of people. All you can say to the King is "senor," and that the mozo who robs you for moving your trunk, if he can, expects. "Si el le guste a usted, senor," is the way the humblest expects to be addressed. The girl of all work whose wardrobe is worth $2.50 and whose monthly wage is $3, expects this of all guests, and gets it. That is all you can say to the mistress. The English is "If it pleases your honor, sir." So it goes in this old monarchy where aristocratic dignity clings so to ceremony and every man is in his own eyes a hidalgo and is treated so by all—the most aristocratic people with the most democratic ways.

Opening the Rock Cities.

MOST CURIOUS STONE STRUCTURES TO BECOME ACCESSIBLE.

By Felix J. Koch.

A RECENT consular report draws attention to the renewal of work on the famous Bagdad-Constantinople Railway, which is to shorten the distance between the two cities from fifty-five days to five. Among other things it will do for the Orient, is to to make accessible the famous old rock cities of Capodocia, the queerest structures of stone in the world.

As it is now, the Mecca-Damascus Railway allows of getting to a station one day's trip from Petra, the most famous of the cities. Round about, on the plain, rise strange cone forms of rock, the result of the weathering of the soft stone, and standing two to three hundred feet high. The greater per cent. of these cones were honeycombed with caves, or tombs for the dead. At the front there stood a house of ordinary rooms, all stone, though; and behind ran the excavation in the stone. Sometimes there were artificial cones erected for the purpose, and they made one think of the knobs at Philippopolis.

The plan of Petra embraced a central street of caves. That was the basis of these rock-cut villages of Asia Minor, for their early inhabitants were cave dwellers and their ways have influenced the architecture of later times.

Petra itself lies south of the Mediterranean on the Arabian Desert. Leaving the railway, one takes camp outfit, and this is often sent ahead, it including a train of ten horses, which is to meet the owners at a given rendezvous. There is an Arab guide, and, led by him, you strike across the desert, due west to where you suppose the city to lie. There, thanks to failure of the water train, your horses may be forced to go thirty hours without a drink. You rely on finding water in the desert, but there is none until midday. Sometimes in the distance, then, you find the Bedouins beside some desert wells, and meet with Rebecca and her water sack, as in the time of the wanderer Jacob, who went through here. Farther along come the beginnings of a great forest, the trees low and scattered, but extending on to the Jordan, where one finds the ancient woods. Much of this was ruined by the Arabs turning them into charcoal. Here, at one place, you may count 400 camels or more, out of the mountains, loaded with charcoal. You see the sun on the hills of Gilead, where the site and the ruins of the city appear over the mountains.

The location is magnificent; the landscape is as in Greece. Greeks, you remember, followed in the wake of Alexander here, and so, perhaps, helped in taking this splendid site for a town. It gives one an idea of the grandeur existing in the time of the great Roman empire, when this place was one of the large fortress cities of the realm.

Here at hand is the group of pillars of stone of an old temple; like the Great Temple of Zeus, at Attica, they rise. Yonder, you see sections of the columns which ran the length of the city. Several of the Greco-Roman cities of the Aegean, you recall, had such. Those there, though, adorned the front of the Forum.

Step on, and you come to one of the two theaters—all in the rock ruins, likewise. You see the Arch of Triumph in one building. You remark how pretty the scene, looking out of the arch into the valley, the valley where Jacob wrestled in the night with the angel.

Then you return to the railway, and go on into the real desert. At the end of the road, as it now stands, you again take the camels. The animals whine while being loaded; once the burden is actually on, they come to foot and trudge on without sound.

Your guard is vigilant and true, and he rides ahead to the top of each level to scan the country around. It is a long, long journey to the entrance to the canyon that you are to pass through to Petra. The city lies in an amphitheater valley, and is reached through a ravine of rocks, as in the Mammoth Cave. You note a spring which is the beginning of the creek of Edom, which gave birth to the town of Petra. Lower in the valley appear far hills and springs; it was in this valley, you recall, that Moses saw an Arab village or camping place for the night. And you, too, pitch your tent here till the morrow.

Round about, the rock structures hold you. Most of them, most of the architecture left here, dates from the third century before Christ to the second after. Some of the rock cuttings, though, are of earlier times; they go to the period of the Exodus, or even to the times when men were real cave dwellers.

There is a splendid entrance, by the canyon or cliffs, and here, too, there are rock cuttings, tombs of ornamental type. You stand enthralled by the portal to this Appian Way. Then you pass through deep, dark, narrow gorges, with the sun able to reach one side only, and on into clefts of the mountains a mile in length. Walls rise 200 to 600 feet in height; the trail lies fifteen feet up from the canyon bottom. In almost every wall there is an old aqueduct, to take the water into the city.

Twenty minutes or more you ride through this gloomy canyon, when suddenly a glimpse ahead reveals a crack, as it were, in the rock. Here a richly-carved facade stands out, odd as it is beautiful. This, it seems, was the town treasury, cut from the solid rock. The height of the facade is a hundred feet; the style of architecture is Greek. It goes to form the most beautiful monument left in all Petra, one of the finest in the world.

This temple or tomb may have been the safety deposit of precious woods and diamonds, of myrrh and incense and the gems of the Indies, brought by the caravans of the East. It was Edom's stronghold, and it comprised one great chamber, surrounded by smaller ones, all with heavy doors. The upper section was most ornamental. This place is now absolutely deserted; only three Arab herders gave life to the scene. Utter desolation led on to where, a few hundred yards beyond, a great amphitheater of stone stood, unique, in silence.

Amid walls of stone, the rock sides worn to cones by weather, one halted again, to scale these cliffs, 600 feet, for a birdseye view.

Round about lay more rocks still, chocolate-colored cliffs, with a creek below. The floors of the valley lay covered with stone houses, the palaces of the merchant princes. There were baths and triumphal arches and gardens—all of rock. But other buildings have disappeared—worn to shreds and forming the soft sand that now marks the sandstone of which they were composed.

A PROTEST.

O lucky California, beneath your summer sky!
We stand on stormy snow banks here, and cast a wistful eye
On you, who gaily taunt us with our winter load of cares:
It saddens us to see you putting on so many airs.
Now, wouldn't it be kinder to forego that boastful strain
Till our blizzard season's over, and our robins nest again?
We know our climate's beastly, and our woes are but increased
By having you crow over us,
Away
Down
East.
When Boreas howls around us till the very houses shake,
And colds and grippe and rheumatiz our lives a torment make;
When the mercury goes sliding down to ten degrees below—
A place where good thermometers should never, never go;—
D'you think it's comforting to hear about your early peas,
Your violets and roses, and your balmy summer breeze?
And is it quite considerate, to say the very least,
To brag to poor unfortunates,
Away
Down
East?
When all our fortitude we need to grin and bear our lot,
It only makes it worse to think of what we haven't got:
(A similar idea's expressed in what the poet sings—
"A sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.")
To hit a fellow when he's down is reckoned as a sin:
We're glad to know you're happy, but you needn't rub it in.
We're quite aware the lion's share is yours at Nature's feast;
Then spare the feelings of your friends,
Away
Down
East.

Restoring the Forests.

TWENTY TONS OF PINE SEED FOR REPLANTING BURNT AREAS.

By Rene Bache.

TWENTY tons of tree seeds! It seems a fabulous quantity; but all of it and more, too, will be required to replant the great areas which were stripped of their forest cover by the frightful conflagrations of last autumn in Idaho, Montana, and neighboring States.

The Forest Service is making ready to tackle the job of replacing the burned trees, and for this purpose its agents have recently collected, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, the largest supply of pine cones ever got together. It has paid for them an average price of about 75 cents a bushel, a large share of the money being earned by the women of Custer, Hill City and other towns in that region, who, eager to take advantage of such a chance to gain pin money, have gone into the forests on horseback, filling sacks with the cones, and delivering them at central points.

Cones at collecting camp. San Bernardino Nation

Boys and girls have had their own share in the work, doing much of the necessary and often arduous climbing; ladders and sharp hooks on the ends of long poles have been brought into requisition; and, wherever lumbering was going on, the pickers have followed the sawyers and taken the cones from the newly-felled trees. Meanwhile, the men have made use of wagons and tall boxes, receiving from $30 to $40 a load.

Squirrels' nests yield quantities of the finest and most desirable pine seeds, because these are found in the cones which ripen near the ends of the topmost boughs, where it is difficult even for the most expert climbers to reach them. Occasionally a single such hoard will yield from $5 to $8 worth of cones—a prize indeed to the finder. One bushel of cones is expected, on an average, to yield one pound of seeds, which run about 360,000,000 to the ton. Thus it may be judged on what a wholesale scale the Forest Service is presenting this undertaking.

The gathering of the cones, however, is only the beginning of the business. When they are delivered by the collectors, they have to be examined and sorted carefully, many of them being infested by injurious insects. These and all damaged ones are thrown out and not accepted. For the good ones a somewhat elaborate process of treatment is necessary before the seeds can be used for planting. It is not very difficult, but demands labor.

First it is requisite to get the seeds out of the cones—a task originally performed by hand-picking. This was found exceedingly laborious, however, and very hard on the hands. Accordingly, the expeditient was adopted of spreading the cones on sheets in the open air and exposing them to sunshine, when, after a while, they would open, and the seeds would fall out, to be afterward separated by sifting. This method, indeed, is still practiced to some extent, an important feature of it being the covering of the cones with cloths at night, to prevent them from shutting their capsules again.

But a better way to accomplish the result, as experience has proved, is by hot-air drying, recent improvements in which are part of the development of a complex system of labor-saving machinery for the separation and cleaning of the tree seeds. One machine, newly put into use at Custer, is a belt bucket conveyer, operated by gasoline, which handles 100 bushels of cones in fifteen minutes, carrying them to the top of a building, and dumping them through a hole in the roof into a loft, whence they are transferred to screen-bottomed trays in drying-rooms. Big stoves furnish the requisite dry heat.

Another contrivance used is a huge cylindrical sieve, which is made to revolve while the cones (previously opened by hot air) are poured into it through a hopper at one end. The cylinder being inclined from the hopper downward, the seeds fall out through the sieve meshes while the cones are passing along it. As might be expected, this process does not get all the seeds out of the cones, and so the latter are finally put through a sort of threshing machine to separate the remainder.

Even when this has been accomplished, however, it is still necessary to remove the "wings" from the seeds. For, as most of us have noticed, thoughtful Nature has provided each pine seed with a wing-like appendage which is obviously intended to enable it to fly, in falling, some distance away from the parent tree. To get rid of these appendages, the seeds are either kneaded in sacks, and afterward sifted, or are put through a fanning mill. They must be cleaned, as a final operation, and the fanning mill accomplishes this part of the work better than any other contrivance.

The most difficult cones to treat, by far, are those of the lodgepole pine; and thereby hangs a very curious nature story. In the forests the cones of this species of pine hang on the trees for years, and, as a rule, do not seem to open at all, unless a big fire comes along. Then the heat of the flames melts the pitch that seals the capsules, and the seeds drop out. It is as if Nature's intention was to hold them in reserve for replanting purposes when the woods should chance to be burned.

To extract the lodgepole pine seeds by artificial means is a troublesome problem. Steam has been tried, to unseal the capsules, but it is liable to cook the seeds incidentally, thus interfering with their prospect of germinating. Up to date the best method discovered seems to be to soak the cones in warm water, which partly dissolves the pitch, and then to expose them to dry heat.

There are now twenty-four national forest nurseries, with an annual producing capacity of over 8,000,000 seedling trees. But it costs a good deal of money to raise and plant such seedlings, and a quicker and cheaper method is demanded for replanting extensive burned areas. With this idea in view, the Forest Service is now making experiments on quite a large scale. The broadcasting of tree seed (as wheat is sown) has been found to give excellent results in the Black Hills and certain other regions, though much of it is eaten under such circumstances by birds and various rodents such as field mice, ground squirrels, and gophers. Rabbits, unfortunately, are very fond of little trees, whether nursery transplants or field-grown seedlings, and this is a special problem that is now receivin attention.

Experience has shown that one of the best plant tree seed is to sow it on top of snow in spring. Thus, when, later on, it finds its way ground, there is plenty of moisture at hand its germination. In different regions different ods have to be adopted, and in some parts of the try, tree planting is best accomplished with of a corn planter.

CUSTOMS PECULIAR TO THIS ARISTOCRATIC INSTITUTION.

By Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke.

WELLINGTON declared that the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton; a statement, many have argued, made merely by a biased old Etonian, for it was in that ancient school on the banks of Father Thames that the Iron Duke received his earlier education.

To those, however, who were acquainted with the personnel of his army the statement does not appear to be void of truth, for the games and exercises indulged in on those historic playing fields no doubt tended to harden and imbue with endurance the men who led the troops of every branch of the service on that fateful day, the reason of these officers being so nicely placed being, no doubt, owing to the notorious fact that the Duke of Wellington favored the old Etonians somewhat unduly and promoted them to a higher rank on every possible occasion.

Sentiment may have prompted him in this to a large extent, also the fact that they were the scions of the highest nobility in the land, no other English school, at that period, being deemed worthy of harboring the youths of the wealthy and aristocratic class.

The school was founded by King Henry VII in the fifteenth century, and was exclusively patronized as the seat of learning by the sons of the nobles who surrounded the King at Windsor Castle, within a mile of which imposing pile the antique towers and spires of the college throw their picturesque shadows on the Thames.

The number of the scholars, naturally, rapidly increased, as it became the ambition of every man of rank and fashion within the kingdom to place his sons, or at least the eldest and the prospective head of the house, where they would consort with the sons of those who were the acknowledged rulers of the land, until the number of those seeking admission became so great that the powers controlling the college were forced to call a halt and fix a limit to the number of pupils allowed to be in residence at the one time.

They fixed the limit at 1000, and above that number it has never been allowed to go, so that at the commencement of each school term, of which there are three, the number of new pupils entering the school is exactly the same as the number who have vacated the school for good.

The waiting list is large and parents have to enter their sons' names when they are at an early age, which entries are duly considered by the board controlling the college, preference being given to those socially prominent and as most likely to be congenial to their fellows.

It is on account of this strict exclusiveness, perhaps, that Eton has been widely advertised as the "School of Snobs," but such misnomer has been solely actuated by jealousy, because if there is any place on earth where democracy is practically demonstrated, it is most surely at Eton College.

The boys there have created their own code of ethics and carry them out so thoroughly that those in authority have given them full sway in that direction, and so well has the scheme worked out that rarely indeed have they had to interfere with the social laws laid down by the pupils under their control.

A system of "fagging" was inaugurated centuries ago and has been rigidly maintained, and as a social leveler no better means could have been found. Each boy entering the school, no matter what his rank, be he duke, earl, or commoner, or even a prince of royal blood, must go in his period of fagging and must submit to that servile condition until by his own efforts in class work he shall have raised himself out of what is called the "lower school."

By hard work and diligent attention to study a boy may accomplish this in the space of one year, but this is very rarely accomplished, and two years' service as a fag is the experience of the majority of Etonians. They have emerged from fagdom into a somewhat nebulous condition known as the "middle school," where they cease from fagging but are not yet permitted to act as fag masters, to reach which coveted position they must have passed into the "upper school" and have proved themselves worthy and capable of handling with discretion the youngsters allotted to their service.

To the American youngster this system of fagging may appear cruel, but carried out as it is at Eton, it is not so in the least, and is a great deterrent to bullying by the larger and stronger boys.

The pupils take up their terms of residence in a number of "houses," each of which is in charge of a house master, who also conducts classes in the school proper, and each house accommodates about forty boys. The senior boys in each house who have reached the upper school are entitled to employ as servants the youngsters of the house who are still in the lower school, and at the beginning of each school term these fag masters cast for their fags by a tossing of coins, the old and tried fags being naturally preferable to the boys who have to be broken into service.

If the fags in the house outnumber the fag masters, as they invariably do, then the senior boys are entitled to two fags each and the junior fag masters must content themselves with one slave to do their bidding. The fag's duties are clearly defined. He must prepare his master's breakfast and tea; sometimes cooking those meals to the best of his ability, or if his fag master's pocket money permits the luxury, he will order and bring them from the restaurants in the town, or the "sock shops," as the Eton boys call them, and a curious sight it is to see the hundreds of youngsters in silk top hats and Eton jackets scurrying from house to town and back again with the loaded trays of delicacies.

A fag must learn to make toast, boil and scramble eggs, grease the football boots, run messages and deliver them correctly, brush and fold clothes and keep his master's room in spick and span condition. An indifferent fag will soon learn that indifference does not pay, because his master is empowered to administer corporal punishment and a sound spanking with a toasting fork or a liberal amount of kicking delivered on the right spot becomes irksome if too frequently invited.

The fag master on his part is not allowed to abuse or unduly bully his fag, and must act more or less as his protector. The fag has the privilege of reporting him if he considers himself badly treated and the case is heard "in camera" by the senior fag masters of the whole school, who decide the case on its merits, but woe be to the fag who complains without just cause! It is a serious step for a youngster to take, because if he sustains his case his fag master will be deprived of his privilege of employing a fag forever, and if he loses his case he is delivered again to the tender mercies of the boy against whom he has registered the complaint. In such a case his term of fagdom is not apt to result in happiness.

By this means the boys are imbued with a sense of obedience to those in authority over them and having to serve a period as servants themselves are more capable of understanding the feelings of those who may be subservient to them in after life and of treating them in at least a human manner.

The boys take their breakfasts and their teas in their own rooms, the house master providing each boy, daily, with one small loaf of bread, two pats of butter and two small pitchers of cream, and one pound of sugar and a quarter of a pound of tea, weekly.

Any such food beyond this which he may desire for those two meals he must provide out of his own pocket. The midday dinner is partaken of in the house dining-room, where a butler in livery caters to the wants and pours the thin school beer, which is practically non-intoxicating and is euphoniously termed "swipes." This refreshing beverage is also served at the late supper, which at 8:30 is likewise consumed in the house dining-room and consists of cold meats, bread and butter, cheese and a suet pudding indifferently sprinkled with raisins, and commonly known to schoolboys throughout the world as "spotted dog."

The majority of the boys being the sons of wealthy parents, the sums allowed as pocket money are usually sufficient to permit them to indulge in all sorts of delicacies from the sock shops, and a breakfast consisting of strawberries and cream, ham and eggs, broiled kidneys and fish, with a bag of candy on the side is not by any means an infrequent trayload for a perspiring fag to carry with cautious tread from the sock shop to his hungry master. The toast and tea he will have to prepare with his own hands, and when his master is served, and not before, he will be permitted to see to his own wants, and lucky indeed does he consider himself if he can find time to gulp his loaf and pot of hastily-brewed tea before the morning chapel bell has ceased its ringing, ere which he must find himself seated in that place of worship, except those of other than the Episcopal faith.

The learning and preparing of lessons is done largely in the boys' own rooms and in the study of the house tutor, who is, more often than not, the house master himself. His study is officially styled the "pupil-room," but more popularly and vulgarly referred to by the pupils as the "puppy hole."

The lessons when learned are rehearsed and gone over in the various classrooms, and there also the lessons for the following day are set. Each Saturday afternoon is a half-holiday, and every saint's day is recognized as a full holiday, and, needless to say, is eagerly looked forward to. To the Eton boys the saints are indeed blessed! The pupils are thoroughly grounded in Latin and Greek, and later in the modern languages. There is an army class where those boys who are anxious to make the military calling their profession may prepare themselves for the competitive examinations which may enable them later to enter the military college of Sandhurst or the Royal Academy at Woolwich.

If a boy chooses to devote himself to study there is no school in the world where he can make quicker progress than at Eton, and that many do avail themselves of their opportunities is emphasized by the fact that the majority of sound English statesmen have first whetted their appetites for political discussion in the debating society of this historic school.

Such names as W. E. Gladstone, Lord Rosebery, Wellington, Marlborough, A. J. Balfour, the Marquis of Salisbury, Tennyson, Winston Churchill and his father, Lord Randolph Churchill, the Duke of Devonshire, Earl Spencer, Lord Curzon and many hundreds of others equally capable, will attest the statement and refute the cry often made by graduates of other places of learning that the school of Eton is a bad one for study.

Athletic games are very strenuously indulged in, and the boys are encouraged to make themselves proficient in them. The summer term is devoted to cricket and rowing on the River Thames, but it is rare indeed that a boy will indulge his tastes in both. He must elect to be either a "Dry Bob" or a "Wet Bob," as they there term respectively the votaries of the cricket field and the river, and must place himself under the guidance of the boys most proficient along those lines in his own house, as there is great competition among the various houses in every line of outdoor sport. The winter term is devoted to football and to following the school beagles, a pack of hounds, somewhat smaller than foxhounds, which the boys follow on foot and which chase the nimble hares with good success through the surrounding country. Some of the senior and most wealthy boys will follow the royal staghounds from Windsor, but not many parents allow their sons this luxury, as it entails keeping a horse or two in stables for which an enormous rent is charged.

Racquets, "fives" or handball, rifle practice and paper chases comprise the chief sports during the spring or eastern term. The college likewise boasts a volunteer corps which any of the boys may join, and the strength of the battalion is kept well up to a quota of about 300. The masters and some of the senior boys comprise the officers, and the acting adjutant is an officer of the regular army, seconded from his regiment for that purpose. The uniform of the school battalion is gray, faced with light blue, and the army rifle of latest pattern is employed for drills and practice on the rifle range.

Each boy lives separately, in his own room, the furnishings of which he may augment to suit his own taste, and many of the boys display their love of comfort and luxurious surroundings, rivalling in many instances the cosy boudoirs of the most fashionable ladies.

Between the hours of school and on holidays they are allowed to seek their pleasures in various directions, the only places strictly prohibited being the hotels and saloons or "public houses" as they are called in England, the railway stations and certain streets in Windsor that bear an unenviable reputation.

Smoking is, of course, prohibited, as is every form of petty vice, and the punishments inflicted are generally bound to be quite adequate.

An allotted number of lines of Latin verse or of Greek verse, with their properly-accentuated stops and breathings are meted out in so many hundreds for minor offences for indifferent work in class, and any offence of more serious nature, which is not yet serious enough to warrant expulsion from the school, is dealt with by the head master in his classroom, where an imposing array of freshly-picked birch rods and the ancient wooden block—on which the boys kneel to receive the full benefit of the birching—strike terror to the erring ones who are summoned to his presence.

This birching, or "swiping," as the boys call it, is an impressive ceremony, and is carried out in such a way as to leave a lasting impression on the recipient of the dozen or more severe strokes which the head master delivers with the full force of his strong right arm and with, no doubt, extreme relish.

The birches, being fresh and green, are covered with prickly buds which tickle and score the juvenile skin to an alarming degree, and that the birchee may receive the full benefit of the head master's efforts, a boy is posted at each side of the block to sustain the kneeling offender in a steady position and keep his clothing from intervening between the exposed skin and the carefully-aimed strokes.

After the ceremony the birch is presented to the boy by the head master's butler, to whom he tips half a crown for the souvenir, which he, no doubt, treasures as a hard-earned relic.

Those of the pupils who do not seek to enter the military colleges when their school education is completed almost invariably enter at once into the University of Oxford or Cambridge and form the backbone of all that is most manly in those ancient seats of learning.

The proximity of the royal castle at Windsor has always kept the little town of Eton in a flourishing condition, and the sight of royal personages on horse or afoot is no uncommon one to the pupils there in residence.

The drive through the picturesque town was ever a favorite one with the late Queen Victoria, whose pony carriage was invariably greeted with delight by the boys, who never failed to claim their ancient privilege of removing the pony from the shafts of the carriage and drawing their sovereign with much cheering and reverence through the confines of the town.

The old Queen dearly loved her Eton boys, two of whom had the honor of saving her life by fearlessly seizing the maniac who sought it with a six-chambered revolver in the streets of Windsor, but was overpowered and thrown down by the two boys after he had fired one shot and missed her.

Her Majesty tendered a reception to the whole school, at the castle, in recognition of their bravery, and filled the hearts of the boys with love and pride by wearing a silken scarf inscribed with the school motto: "Floreat Etona."

RUSSIA'S FUR BUSINESS.

Without exaggeration it may be said that the principal supplier of fur to the world's market is our Siberia. Therefore from time immemorial the prices of fur at the Siberian fairs have served as a barometer to the world's market.

One of the largest Siberian fairs is that held in the summer at Yakutsk, with a circulation of millions of rubles. This fair continues for two months, and thereto come fur traders from the most distant points in Siberia, bringing all that has been obtained by them during the protracted winter. Telegrams giving the result of this fair state that the prices of furs have risen, compared with last year's prices, more than 50 per cent.

Referring to data concerning the Yakutsk fair for the last ten years, it is possible to clearly define the present position the fur trade occupies. In 1900 5000 sable skins were brought to the fair at a price of 7 rubles ($3.61) each; this year only 2000 skins were listed and at a price of 160 rubles ($82.40) each. In 1900 1,200,000 squirrel skins were sold at 20 kopecks (10 cents) each; this year only 75,000 skins were sold, but at 75 kopecks (39 cents) each.

The vast number of Siberian exiles live mainly on their ability to trap in those regions without molestation on the part of the authorities, and as a consequence fur-bearing animals are not multiplying as fast as they are trapped. This decimation has been going on for many years, with the result that furs are becoming scarce and the prices are soaring.—[Ruskoye Slovo.

Desert Vegetation.

REMARKABLE FEATURES OF PLANT LIFE IN ARID PLACES.

By Harvey M. Hall.

[Assistant Professor Botany, University of California.]

BETWEEN the Colorado River and the southerly continuation of the Sierra Nevada lies a vast, sparsely-populated tract of land comprising the Mohave and Colorado deserts. Lying barren and parched throughout the greater portion of the year, or even for several years in succession, these deserts are sometimes transformed with startling rapidity into regions of surpassing floral beauty, as is well known to the fortunate traveler who has visited them after seasons of copious rainfall.

The sudden appearance of desert flowers and their remarkable abundance is due to a number of factors. Plants of arid districts produce seeds with thick coats and are thus enabled to retain their vitality through long seasons of drouth, such seasons sometimes extending over a period of several years' duration. When, now, this drouth is broken, the dormant seed readily responds to the influence of moisture and warmth and an almost tropical rate of growth results. We notice, too, that the absence of sod-forming grasses allows greater freedom for the growth of flowering annuals. Thus, given an abundance of hardy seed, the warmth of desert sand moistened by a spring rain, and the generous elbow room of desert countries, we have a combination of flower-producing factors with which no city park commission can compete.

The mass effect of flower beds, so often used to good advantage in city parks, is here found as the result of natural causes. It often happens that the annual flowering plants grow huddled into great clumps about the base of some desert shrub, as though for protection. And this idea of protection is not entirely fanciful. The stems of the shrub form a net where passing bits of vegetation, blown about by the winds, are caught and held fast until covered by drifting sand. Twigs and leaves from the shrub itself are added to the growing mound which thus becomes fertilized and rendered suitable for the numerous flower seeds, which are likewise caught and impounded. Moreover, the shade produced by overhanging boughs, even though thin and scant, aids in the retention of moisture, so that only a few timely showers are necessary to cause this natural compost heap to burst forth into a mass of color. Not infrequently does one see a creosote bush thus standing guard over a bed of yellow desert dandelions and white chaenactis, or a shrubby dalea entirely surrounded by poppies, gilias and other delicate annuals.

A remarkably showy plant is a desert species of prickly poppy. This flourishes in apparently sterile soil on some of the bleakest and most forsaken slopes. Its crimped, papery petals of the purest white surround a central head of yellow stamens, while the smooth-surfaced but spiny-edged leaves furnish a setting which holds in store a painful surprise for any who would pluck these desert beauties. The general effect is as though a clump of thistles should suddenly bloom out as white hollyhocks. The perfume is delightful and very noticeable, but I fear that it would not develop under cultivation.

If we now turn to some of the more permanent types of vegetation, the eye is at once caught by the tree yucca, perhaps the most fantastic of all desert plants. From its arborescent habit, the rough exterior, and the rigid, spine-tipped leaves, one would scarcely suspect it of belonging to the lily family. Its misnomers of "tree cactus" and "yucca palm" are evidences of the layman's inability to properly classify this altogether weird plant. On the Mohave Desert this tree forms open forests in a well-defined belt at proper altitudes. The individual trees stand well apart and give a fantastic touch to the landscape; their trunks are usually straight, but divide at heights of eight to ten feet into peculiarly spreading branches; the leaves are thickly set, rigid and spine-tipped, the old ones first spreading at right angles, then becoming reflexed as they wither and turn brown, finally, after a year or two, falling from the rough branches which now stand out like immense bare arms each supporting a brush of stiff, bristling leaves toward its distal end. The thick-petaled and waxy white flowers are even more peculiar. They are regularly pollinated by the yucca moth, the process representing one of the most remarkable cases on record of the interdependence between plants and animals. The large ovary contains hundreds of small bodies which are to develop later into seeds, and among these the yucca moth lays her eggs. Now comes the interesting feature. The moth, which is a very superior little body, does not forsake the flowers to become pollinated as they may. Neither does she pollinate them in any accidental fashion, as is so often the case with other insects, but, running to the top of the ovary, she there carefully applies a quantity of pollen which she has deliberately brought from another flower for this purpose. Regardless of the physiological explanation of this act, she seems to know that such a process is necessary if the seeds are to develop and furnish a proper food supply for her larvae. As it is, the larvae, or grubs, feed upon and destroy but few of the seeds, the great majority of these being left untouched and so insure the reproduction of the yucca. The process is thus seen to differ from ordinary insect pollination in that it seemingly involves careful planning and intelligence on the part of the insect.

The tree yucca is by no means a useless member of desert society. Of late years it has come into great demand as a material for the manufacture splints and other appliances as well as ors. More than thirty years ago editions woody are its culms. The young parts, however, are greedily eaten, as are also the flower clusters. Many a desert camp has been located in an otherwise undesirable situation only because of the proximity to a patch of galleta, and many a desert traveler has spent weary hours in gathering it as a substitute for hay. The tops are commonly harvested with the aid of a spade or a hoe and fed as needed. Although too fibrous to be of high nutritive value, this grass sometimes forms the sole food of mules and desert ponies for weeks at a time.

Such are a few of the oddities encountered by the student of our desert flora. Many other weird types of vegetation carry on the fight for existence under these exacting conditions, each solving its own problem by a series of clever adaptations to its peculiar environment. A study of desert flora from this point of view is at once stimulating to the investigator and productive of far-reaching scientific results. The difficulties to be overcome in making a desert trip, need not deter any one from visiting this fascinating region, for with proper precautions, and at the proper season, desert travel is as safe as any other. Few places will yield more of interest to those who combine a love of the beautiful in nature with a desire to know something of desert plants and their environment.

NOT A POLITICIAN.

HOW CHARLIE ROBINSON KEPT A PROMISE MADE TO HIS CONGRESSMAN.

By a Special Contributor.

Charlie Robinson lives in Chicago now. During the second Cleveland administration Charlie lived in another part of the country. He went to Washington to secure a fat government office, but on his arrival in the national capital he was informed by his Congressman that he had recommended another man. He said:

"Charlie, you are not young enough. This other fellow is a live wire. He is useful to me and also to the entire party. Therefore I have recommended him and must stand by my recommendation."

"That settles it," replied Charlie Robinson, "and I'll give up gracefully. But, I should like to tell the folks back home that you were perfectly square, and also very kind. I'd like to have you take me to the White House and introduce me, so that I can tell the boys that I at least saw our great President. Will you do that?"

"Of course I'll do that," replied the Congressman; "but it must be upon one condition."

"Name the condition, and I'll agree to it," was the reply.

"That you will not ask Cleveland for this office, nor bother him with a request for any office whatever."

"I'll solemnly promise that," said Robinson.

Within a day or two, Mr. Congressman accompanied Charlie to the White House and formally introduced him as "a lifelong Democrat who is visiting Washington, and wanted to call and pay his respects."

"I am glad to see lifelong Democrats from every State in the Union," said President Cleveland, giving Robinson a hearty clasp of the hand."

"Thank you, Mr. President," said Robinson. "And Mr. President, will you give me a message to take back to an elderly Presbyterian preacher in our town? His name is Hubbard."

"What?" exclaimed the President. "Do you know Rev. Dr. Hubbard?"

"He is my neighbor," replied Robinson, "and his wife died last month, in the arms of my wife."

"Come here and sit down with me," said the President. "Now, tell me all about that dear old man. He was my instructor in my youth, and I am indebted to him, yes, incalculably indebted even with my heartstrings of gratitude. Tell me about his health and his habits. Excuse me, Mr. Congressman, I want to spend at least half an hour with Mr. Robinson."

The Congressman went away. Charlie Robinson remained and was warmly welcomed by the President and heartily thanked for giving him an account of that venerable man of whom the President thought so much and so kindly. Before Charlie left, the President asked him:

"Are you related to the Mr. Robinson, in your State Legislature who prevented the adoption of a vote of censure on me last winter?"

"Yes, Mr. President," replied his visitor. "I am so nearly related to him that I am his father's son. I am the very man who did that work, Mr. President, and I am proud of having accomplished it."

"Well, Mr. Robinson," said the President, "is there nothing that I can do for you to show my appreciation?"

"Probably nothing," said Charlie. "I wanted to be pension agent from our State, but my Congressman who just introduced me says that he has recommended another man, who is younger. And, moreover, I promised him that I would not ask you for that office, nor for any other office."

"Well, you have kept your word," said the President," and I admire you for it. Now you go back home and ask Rev. Dr. Hubbard to write to me and to ask your appointment to that office. I cannot refuse him anything; and I'd like to have him feel that I did something at his request."

Charlie Robinson did so, and he was appointed.

Later on, his Congressman berated him for having broken his promise, when he showed him a letter written by the hand of Mr. Cleveland telling Rev. Dr. Hubbard that his letter had been received, and that it afforded him pleasure to make the appointment of Mr. Robinson, "particularly as Mr. Robinson did not ask for any office for himself."

Then Charlie slyly said:

"I'm not a 'live wire,' and I'm 'not a politician,' but I certainly did need that job."

Interview With Mars.

THE EX-GOD OF WAR ON THE DECADENCE OF WARFARE.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

MARS, the well-known and prominent ex-god of war, is now running a delicatessen store and family grocery on The Other Shore. I found Mars—he appears to have no other name—in his establishment. He was using his sword to slice off blutwurst for a lady of Ancient Teutonia. His helmet, I observed, was on a near-by counter, turned upside down and full of dill pickles in a quart of brine. He wore a white apron over his breast plate and had on straw sleeve protectors.

"Yes," he said, replying, in a Graeco-American accent to my opening question, "I practically went out of the war business quite some time back. My original profession had fallen off to almost nothing at all. Except for local elections in Breathitt county, Kentucky, and the regular fall and winter Central American revolutions, there'd be absolutely nothing doing in my line for months on a stretch. It was bad enough when the Dog of War had to pay a license tax and wear a tag showing he belonged to the Rothschild family. When Andrew Carnegie got ready to put a Steel Preferred muzzle on him, too, I just threw up both hands and abandoned the poor thing to his fate. He'd shrunk in size and been cross-bred until he wasn't much fiercer than a King Charles spaniel, anyhow. So I quit."

"But somewhere in the world, wars and conflicts go on constantly," I said. "Look at Mexico, just south of us, for example. Only this morning I was reading in the paper that the war there rages fiercely."

"There seems to be no doubt about the wage part, anyhow," said Mars, wiping his hands on his apron, "said wages, I understand, being one-forty a day for patriots and find yourself, which is 50 cents more than some of the New York theaters are said to be paying a head for audiences. But then, of course, the work in Mexico must be more arduous even than sitting through a bloomer show from 8:15 to 11:05 nightly. If you've been reading the papers closely, you must've seen the casualty list of the last engagement—one painfully shot upon his departure, one run down by a sightseeing coach full of American rubbernecks from across the Texas line, two overcome by heat prostration and one revolutionary general in full uniform found in a state of complete exhaustion, panting like a lizard, nine miles to the rear. It seems he swore he would die in the last ditch, and was on his way back to find it when overcome by his exertions. He'd passed many ditches on the way, but they were not deep enough, or too close to the enemy, or something, and, anyway, he was pledged to the last ditch.

"By all accounts it must be a frightful conflict. I myself have been watching its progress closely—the infuriated slap on the ulna bone; the diffident charge, followed by the whole-souled and enthusiastic retreat; the calling of many harsh and desperate Spiggotty names; the mustering-in office at every adobe jail, with the government making gallant yet modest, not to say retiring, defenders of their nation's honor out of Colorado Clara gents in for sixty or ninety days for swiping chickens; the intrepid war correspondents of the American papers exposing themselves where the lead is thickest—that is to say, where the double lead is thickest; the pause in the heat of battle to roll the brunette or native cigarette; the sudden appearance at the border of the breathless courier looking like a small Postal Telegraph messenger who's mislaid his shoes somewhere and quit bathing, and bearing in his hands the latest proclamation from the camp of the heroic insurrectos, announcing to a waiting world that the whole country is aflame with patriotic ardor and even the women are up in arms, but not stating whose arms they're up in.

"As you say, the war wages fiercely. But I rather anticipate that peace will be restored to the distracted republic and the even more distracted newspaper reporters on the job as soon as your Uncle Porfirio Diaz gets a few of the opposition leaders backed up against a stone wall some bright morning before breakfast with their arms tied down and neat targets painted on their several bosoms. Being opposed to Diaz is one of the most serious complaints you can contract in Mexico, I understand. It's the next thing to being down there without any quinine, or trying to find something to eat without red peppers in it.

Diaz is an old gentleman after my own heart. Give him an army behind him that didn't want to go home every night for dinner, and I rather imagine he might do a good deal, even at his age, to restore the ancient and honorable institution which I once adorned. But as the thing stands, I'll have to confess that personally I'm highly disgusted with about all the wars we've had around the world these last fifteen or twenty years. Take that scrap back in the nineties between Greece and Turkey now. In his day the Greek had been a mighty warrior, but he'd quit working at the trade. When he tackled the Turk, he made a mistake in selecting the wrong weapons. He could have put it all over the Turk with banana knives. At a peanut-roasting contest, give or take twenty goobers, he'd lick him the length of a city block. At twenty yards with plaster images of Garibaldi or Georga de Wash, he could have won on points inside of three rounds. He'd have beat him at skinning tourists or turning out bogus antiques for United States millionaires. But his idea of war, considering that he came from the neighborhood where I myself made my original headquarters, was primitive in the extreme. He first attired himself in an accordion-pleated skirt, an Eton or modified bolero jacket, a Little Lord Fauntleroy sash and a Mystic Shriner's lid He then sang the national hymn of his land, entitled 'Come Into the Garlic, Maud.' He then bade his captain and each of his brave comrades farewell by kissing them on both cheeks. Then he went forth to repeat the deathless achievements of his ancestors at the historic Pass of Thermopylae. But in the meanwhile they'd framed an anti-pass regulation and he didn't know about it. He was a fliver. He gave an imitation of what looked like a cross between a wand drill by the Girls' High School and the Loie Fuller serpentine dance, and he thought it was warfare. The Turk, who is a short but broad person with hair on his chest, had no such vain illusions. His idea was to spit on his hands, grasp his trusty curved snickersnee by the handle and then sail in and make the neighborhood look like somebody had been cleaning fish. But before he got the job more than half done, the Powers interfered. It wouldn't do to have a Christian race rammed nine feet into the ground by a lot of Moslem heathen that didn't give to foreign missions and hadn't contributed anything to civilization for many years except the Hoochie-Koochie dance, ex-wives of the Sultan, and bum cigarettes.

"Then there were our little yellow brothers, the Chinese. They're learning more about the game now that they're acquiring such modern improvements as a floating debt and close hair-cuts, but at the time of their muss with our other little yellow brothers, the Japs, they entertained the delusion that they could lick the foe by going out and making hideous faces at them and then going through the parasol flirtation, armed with paper umbrellas. Your own Spanish War was merely a kind of a large summer picnic, with incidental yellow fever and journalism to match. The late Russo-Japanese War started out well, but passed away in the early part of its second summer owing to the money giving out. The nearest approach to real carnage and infuriated struggle these times is when an honorable but slightly decayed scion of a noble English house contracts a matrimonial alliance on Fifth avenue, New York, with some fair young American girl of 18 years and fully as many millions, so he can have the money to put open plumbing and other needed repairs in the ancestral castle and get himself a new set of the latest thing in teeth. That's the only chance for a real battle any more.

"In my mind's eye I have a picture of the next great war," went on Mars. "I see the vast opposing armies drawn up in martial array. The trumpets are sounding, the banners are waving, and the surgeons are greasing their saws. All the preliminary steps have been taken. All the old, obsolete, last year's Dreadnoughts have gone to the scrap pile and the new 1911 models scour the seas. Satisfactory loans have been arranged with the Standard Oil Company, and Bank of England, and the other arbiters of destiny. All is ready for the tocsin to sound.

" 'Are the submarines all down?' inquires the gallant commander in chief, posing for a fresh photograph and dusting his nose with violet sachet.

" 'They are," says his chief of staff, 'especially the French models, they being down permanently, as is their wonted custom.'

" 'Are the war balloons all up?' continues the commanding general, consulting his wrist watch and holding his new sword out at arm's length to keep it from getting between his legs.

" 'All up, general,' says his aide, 'and no way of getting them down again, either.'

" 'What's the good word from Baron Rothschild?'

" 'There's a dispatch just come from him saying the terms of interest are satisfactory, and you may fire when you are ready.'

" 'Where's Andrew Carnegie, with his $10,000,000 peace fund?'

" 'We have confiscated the ten millions and removed Andrew to The Hague calaboose as a measure of self-protection,' says the chief of staff.

" 'Fine,' says the general, 'then let the battle proceed. But hold,' he says, 'hold! What is that Easter Greetings in light blue and old gold doing between the lines? And who is the hand-illuminated Christmas Card he has with him?'

" 'That,' says the aide, 'is Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U.S.A., retired, but not very much so, accompanied by Capt. Archie Butt, in full undress uniform. They're here to take notes.'

" 'Well, remove them to a safe place indoors,' commands the general. 'It looks like rain, and I'd hate to see such beautiful decorations spoiled.'

"And then he opens his mouth to give the signal for the advance. But at this moment an orderly dashes up on a foam-flecked charger and salutes.

" 'General,' he gasps, 'don't do it. If you do, you're liable to arrest. The Wright Brothers,' he says, 'have got out an injunction against the war on the ground that the airships are infringing on their patents. And anyway,' he says, 'the vitascope people decline to let the hostilities proceed until the weather clears, owing to the impossibility at this time of getting good films.'

"And there you are," added Mars. "Do you wonder that I went into the grocery and cold-sliced-meat business?"

THE SEVENTH SON IN BELGIUM.

In the early days of the reign of the late King Leopold of Belgium a seventh son was born to a Brussels woman, and when the King heard of it and was told that the boy was the seventh successive one and that no girl had come to the family, he asked to be the baby's godfather.

Ever since then every seventh son born in Brussels has had the same honor, and the mothers have received gifts in keeping with their station in life. King Albert, in carrying out the old usage a short time ago had some difficulty because the seventh son was twins. He could not stand for both boys, because that would give the family two Alberts. The remedy was found by Queen Elizabeth, who suggested that her little son, the Duke of Brabant, be the godfather of the eighth boy, who consequently received the name Leopold.—[London Globe.

Spring in Alaska.

WHEN THE ICE WITHDRAWS AND THE SEA IS UNLOCKED.

By Olive Fisher.

"I sing of the northern ice plain;
Of the yelping, dashing pack,
As they leap away in the year—long ago
At the whip that the sledgemen crack."

The Weaver of the Seasons changed once more the pattern upon the loom and the long-delayed spring had come suddenly after storms of cold rain and gales of wind had swept the Island of St. Michael in northwestern Alaska.

The few days of soft sunshine had coaxed forth the tender blades of grass and the surrounding hills were covered with a carpet of delicate green. Rivers, lakes and the great sea were once more unlocked. The Yukon, freed from her icy bondage, hurled the crashing fragments of crystal into the wastes of Bering Sea.

It was late May and the Corwin, which had been the last boat to leave Alaskan waters in bleak October, was now being daily expected. Three weeks had passed since the good news was telegraphed that two boats, bound for the North, had left Seattle. Enormous wagers were made among the seafaring men as to which ship would first weigh anchor outside of Nome or St. Michael on or before the first day of June.

The constant efforts of the detailed officer in St. Michael to communicate with either boat by means of the wireless were without success. Some fear was felt that ill fate had overtaken them, for word was always sent from the ship's wireless upon her entrance into Unimak Pass, and to be three weeks at sea and not yet to have reached the Pass was a thing to cause no small wonder.

It was late on the afternoon of the 29th when word spread over the little island that smoke had been seen far out at sea.

"O daring joy but safe!
Are they not all the seas of God?"

The island that had for months been "filled plumb full of hush to the brim" was suddenly awake.

Housewives, busy with the evening meal, left pots and pans to burn upon the stove. Native women, bending low beneath the burden of their babes strapped across their backs, hastened to the top of the highest hill that they might better view the ship that was bringing them once more within the touch of civilization.

In the distance, serene, as if oblivious to the pandemonium she had created, towering, stately, imperturbable, could be seen a great steamer whose hulk of sharpest steel tore asunder the crust of ice that threatened each second to bar her way. And as she glided nearer in the direction of the throng the air was rent with a happy cry, for that ship had come on a noble errand, and brought these hungry hearts word from a world for eight weary months silent. Men, lured from their homes by the ancient call of the sea and their thirst for gold, flocked on the ship's deck and amid the shrill shrieks of the siren answered that call.

Dog teams, which were the boast and pride of merchants and Tom Richards, the mail carrier, hailed as an Arctic hero, were immediately put forth to cross the floating ice. A "musher" preceded them to test the treacherous way, and after a hazardous journey their sleds were loaded with food and mail. So perilous was their journey that not only their cargo was many times threatened on that return trip, but also the lives of man and beast.

Unlimited seemed that ship's store with its quantities of fresh fruit and vegetables, belated Christmas gifts and long-looked-for missives from loved ones at home. For in this land of "northern ice plains" it is not only the sweet song of the birds that brings again the warmth of spring to our hearts, it is not so much the melting of the snows or the budding of the flowers or the last tender rays of a golden sunset, 'tis but the coming of a ship that opens again the ice-clad gates of commerce.

Be it little wonder that the captain of the Corwin is hailed as their hero on those foreign shores, for his heart knows no fear as year after year he guides his ship across that perfidious sea.

In tribute to that noble man we quote from the pen of a wonderful poet whose words are in praise of an earlier hero though no braver one than our Capt. West.

"What shall I say, brave Adm'r'l, say,
If we sight naught but seas at dawn?"
"Sail on! Sail on! Sail on! Sail on!"
They sailed. They sailed.
Then spake the mate:
"This mad sea shows its teeth tonight.
He curls his lips, he lies in wait,
With lifted teeth as if to bite!
Brave Adm'r'l say but one good word:
What shall we do when hope is gone?"
The words leapt as a leaping sword:
"Sail on! Sail on! Sail on!"
Then, pale and worn, he kept his deck,
And peered through darkness. Ah, that night
Of all dark nights! And then a speck.
A light! A light! A light! A light!
It grew to be Time's burst of dawn.
He gained a world; he gave that world
Its grandest lesson:
"On, sail on."

As if to form a perfect epilogue to a day so full of animation, the sun dropped slowly into a mass of molten gold, sinking lower and lower in an array of gorgeous coloring until its very lips seemed to kiss the sea beneath, just where "the wearied bird" blown so long o'er the deep, let droop her withered wing. There in the midst of a turquoise sky one gazed into the heart of an opal, until dying in pale diffusion the mighty monarch of the world left in the heavens a rosy flush. The last rays lingered then softly faded into a throbbing violet.

In this land of the summer's perpetual twilight it was but a silvery mist that hovered at the midnight hour.

From a distance came the prolonged howl of a wolf dog. At your feet the moss, the ferns, the wild cranberries hidden amid the cushions of tundre bedipped in dew. In your heart rested the wonder of that mysterious alchemy of an Arctic sky. Even the gaunt rocks on the islands of the bay had been brought into softened splendor by the passing miracle of the after-glow.

A saffron halo softened the island with enchantment, then silently, coldly the waning moon swung low, the gold became a mist and sank in the cave of the heavens. The silvery night had fled, leaving its beauties to be surpassed by the tender glow of dawn.

Spears of flame in deepest cardinal suffused the sky and, as though "scorning his fleeing heralds, came the flaming lord of the day."

'Twas but during the elapse of three brief hours that ended the journey of yesterday and brought forth the resurrection of today, leaving behind the elfishness of May to be surpassed by the rival month of June.

LANDING PASSENGERS FROM THE CORWIN.

LONDON TIMES HOAXED.

Some joker has been perpetrating a hoax at the expense of the London Times and two Irish newspapers. In a letter to the Times he gave details "of a cruel and heartless desertion of the victim of a so-called 'unhallowed union' by the partner who should have remained faithful to her for life." The letter proceeded:

"The case has received considerable notice in the Belfast News Letter and the Northern Whig.

"The poor mother, thinking that at least she should have her children to console her, was, however, not only abandoned by her natural protector, but robbed of her offspring.

"Sir, this occurred close to Bangor, within twelve miles of Belfast, and I am in a position to say that the foul robbery of flesh and blood was perpetrated by a member of an Irish secret society.

"No terms were dictated, because no terms would have been accepted, and the unfortunate creature was deprived of that which by all laws of nature was nearest and dearest to her.

"But there is a bright side to the picture. I can say that the mother is in no state of destitution. She is being at present amply provided for by a well-known and respected elder of the Presbyterian Church."

The three hoaxed journals have now learned to their discomfiture that the foregoing pathetic story related to a cat whose kittens had been taken and drowned soon after their birth.—[New York Sun.

Living in Paris.

THOMAS CAREY LEARNS SOMETHING OF THE COST.

By Myron G. Lewis.

DURNG his first few weeks in Paris Thomas [illegible] gained an exterior survey of the Latin [illegible] and found it to consist mostly of short [illegible] streets, lined with dull, cheerless, blank-looking [illegible] ings, sometimes partly hidden behind high stone [illegible] ings—houses which look as though the dust of the [illegible] had mingled for an unknown time with the ashes [illegible] the human lives passed within them, a fit setting [illegible] such tragedies as only the French know how to [illegible]

Like every one else he had heard the oft-repeated fiction that the cost of living abroad is "so [illegible] cheaper than in America," but he had not been [illegible] credulous on this point as many people, whose [illegible] nations have traveled so much further than their [illegible] ical selves that they have about the same idea of [illegible] and living abroad that the Spaniards had [illegible] years ago of the gold to be found in the New World [illegible] fact that rooms and board are almost to be had [illegible] the asking, or paid for with a sum too small to [illegible] sider. Other home-confined people expatiate [illegible] in large, general terms of the cheapness of [illegible] "when one knows how to manage," and then [illegible] or that purported acquaintance "who lived for [illegible] nothing." I am certain that the French would [illegible] pleased to discuss with any American the [illegible] which such economic feats can be accomplished [illegible] would learn most humbly and gratefully, for the [illegible] complain bitterly of the price of food and other [illegible] modities, laying the blame largely onto American [illegible] the way. Whether that is a just accusation [illegible] it is certainly true that prices have mounted [illegible] times over during the last two decades, and that [illegible] increases in proportion. It is one of "life's little [illegible] ies"—or is this one of the big ones?—that [illegible] when the spirit of travel has seized us, as [illegible] when we are beginning to realize the pleasure [illegible] estimable advantages derived from it, it is [illegible] become too expensive a luxury. Years ago [illegible] stayed at home, Europe was a cheap place [illegible] for that reason; now when we suddenly realize [illegible] we can go, we pay prices immeasurably in [illegible] the past, when we could and didn't, or we [illegible] whereas we might have gone before, now [illegible] afford the price.

During Carey's first weeks in Paris he lived [illegible] cheap a way as he felt compatible with American [illegible] respect and custom, shifting from pensions to [illegible] hotel, for the sake of variety and other [illegible] Those who have lived in a French pension [illegible] there may be other reasons. He was not long [illegible] ing the discovery that he had overestimated [illegible] chasing power of his money, and this meant [illegible] must either retrench or retreat some months [illegible] vance of his previous calculations. He [illegible] cided to follow the dark and narrow ways of [illegible]

When Carey made this decision to court the [illegible] face of the Latin Quarter, which is, after all, [illegible] lar one, if numbers form the measurement of [illegible] ity, he did so gaily enough, as a financial joke [illegible] self, and an unpremeditated experiment. He [illegible] more inclined to it from the things he had [illegible] heard of the incoming foreign students, the [illegible] erty of whose manner of living made his [illegible] luxurious by contrast. For the well-nigh [illegible] able destitution of many students here is a [illegible] known in America. In our country we do not [illegible] great deal of starvation for the sake of art [illegible] tion. But in the Latin Quarter the air is [illegible] tales of such meager living that life has paid [illegible] alty. So when Carey discovered the manner of [illegible] of the majority of the students and artists—for [illegible] hung about the ateliers of the Montparnasse [illegible] hood, and even became acquainted with one [illegible] dent so reduced that he picked the fragments of [illegible] food from the garbage pails of the alleys, yet [illegible] his work from the sheer fascination of art—he [illegible] that the real entry of the ways of this Bohemia [illegible] through poverty and the simple life, not such [illegible] tolled by Wagner, and still less, as according [illegible] port, lived by that eloquent gentleman.

Before Carey had found other lodgings, the [illegible] changed, as suddenly as it does on our eastern [illegible] and the small hotel room in the Rue de l'Odeon [illegible] had seemed too comfortable and pleasant before [illegible] came a frigid horror. He learned that the [illegible] which a foreigner gets of Paris depends more [illegible] on the weather than on any other factor. It [illegible] seem quite impossible for a city to present two [illegible] more at variance than Paris in warm and fair, [illegible] cold and rainy weather. In the pleasant season [illegible] is nothing except the architectural beauty [illegible] makes the boulevards of the city and the banks of [illegible] River Seine seen up and down from the many [illegible] bridges more artistic than the hazy light which [illegible] hovers over the city on clear days. It is present [illegible] at midday, but in the afternoon deepens into the [illegible] "artist's light." It is indefinable, illusive, and [illegible] catingly beautiful. In the early evening, when [illegible] lights begin to twinkle through the haze, Paris [illegible] comes a dream city, and the spires and domes of [illegible] great monumental buildings, seem, in the [illegible] phantoms of architectural beauty. It is this [illegible] of the atmosphere which makes a satisfactory [illegible] eye view so rare, which makes the Arc de Triomphe [illegible] at the head of the long Avenue des Champs [illegible] always veiled in a gray-like film. But in late [illegible] and winter Paris is anything but comfortable [illegible] tractive, when the cold, dismal rains of autumn [illegible] and the dampness of street and air penetrates [illegible] bone. Then the haze becomes a dull, deep, heavy [illegible] an eternal grayness enshrouds everything, and shuts out almost the remembrance of a sky, and the sun, if it appears at all, looks as though in eclipse. The passage under foot becomes unspeakable. Chicago streets do not present a satin side in rainy weather, but the very thought of them is a relief in Paris, which verily seems the dirtiest, dreariest spot on earth.

In a letter written by Carey at this time, he said: "In the midst of such external discomfort, it is unwarrantable that the French have never learned to keep warm; but it is certainly true that there is a more oppressive dreariness within their homes than without, and a more deadening variety of cold. You may often hear them declare that cold does not affect them, or that they like it, but it is not so; they suffer as other people do from it, but the fact seems to be that, as a people, they are too penurious to keep warm. In a great many instances, undoubtedly, they are too poor, but many of those who eat and drink and dress expensively do not have sufficient fire. Most rooms are provided with small grates, and if these do not draw, which is often the case, they face the winter with a little petrol stove, or a microscopic contrivance of sheet iron which holds anywhere from a spoonful to a small shovelful. Real stoves are hardly known; they burn too much fuel. Perhaps the combination of physical discomforts affect the American students more than the others, for Americans are not used to this quality of Bohemian existence. Even the Americans whom in our parlance we would designate as "poor," are accustomed to more conveniences, more of the comforts of life than the well-to-do Parisian. It is in the better class of pensions that our people are to be found, and many of them cannot even endure remaining in the Latin Quarter, but live on the opposite side of the river, near the boulevards, where some attempt to comfort is reached, and make the trip daily to the schools. But those who remain—and only those imbibe any of the spirit of the Quartier Latin—put on a brave face; they are there because it is the great thing to do, and they are after all there is in it. And right there lies the wide difference between the American students in Paris, and those of other nationalities. With the Americans it is more of a sentiment, a boast, a craving for the unusual, the unique; with the Europeans it is a matter of tradition, sacrifice, educational ambition, and even of necessity."

Carey, being a steam-heated youth, quickly concluded that though he might bring himself to starve, he could not freeze. Therefore he set about to find a warm room without board. This was a harder undertaking than he had anticipated. Paris is as full of pensions as Chicago is of flats, but a separate room is more difficult to find, and a heated one is practically unknown. He secured addresses from schools, restaurants, shops, anywhere, in fact, but without results. One day he heard of some new heated apartments in the Boulevard St. Jacques. It was a long way, but he was ready to exchange that inconvenience for warmth. On reaching the address, he found that there was indeed "central heat," but so ingeniously centralized that there was no possibility of its diffusion. It consisted in heating pipes in the walls of the hall, guaranteed to be of sufficient carrying power to affect the walls of adjacent rooms! A room one removed from such a tempered wall was offered Carey, with the privilege of using the latter for study. The heat, however, despite the bitter cold, was not on and would not be for a week. It might have been funny had Carey not been desperate and his sense of humor congealed. Finally at the Hotel de la Sorbonne he found "chauffage centrale," warranted to be "the real thing." The radiators were large, and it was impossible, said the suave landlord, for the rooms ever to be even chilly, as the fire never went out. Carey selected the smallest room, and put his hand on the radiator; it was warm, and contact with it was elixir. He prepared to move in the morning, but on advice of a skeptical friend began paying by the day rather than by the month, which would naturally have been cheaper.

Carey was never able to offer a satisfactory explanation of how it happened that the radiator was warm on that night when he had first called, as during the eleven days that he remained there, the phenomenon was never repeated. At all hours alike it maintained a stonelike frigidity. At the end of that time he had found a place which seemed different. Having paid his bill of 3 francs per day, tout compris, that is, heat, light, and service, he was about to drive away in a cab, when the garcon of the house demanded his fee. Carey's French had become of sufficient fluency to admit of arguing, and he stated that he had just paid his bill in full to the landlord, and that the price included the service. The infuriated garcon seized his suitcase, rushed into the house and up to the first landing, where he sat on the suitcase, and pale with rage, declared it his intention to remain there until paid. Carey appealed to the proprietor, who upheld the servant, and he was obliged to pay the 25 centimes per day demanded, before he could recover his luggage. This was merely a sample of what he found everywhere. The French "hold up" Americans at every possible chance, and any effort to claim justice is futile.

Carey moved to the apartment of a madame and daughter, or in his order of importance, a mademoiselle and her mother. They were of blue blood and stunning appearance, and both dressed extravagantly. Though they indulged in little or no fire in their own rooms, they agreed to keep one warm for him. There was only the usual cheminee in the room, but for a sum considerably larger than a well-furnished, steam-heated room in our own University neighborhood would have cost, they promised to keep the charbon supplied night and day if he wished it. Although this dazzling agreement was never fulfilled, and Carey was gone a large part of each day, there were evenings when he was very comfortable; and thus finally established in endurable quarters, he set out in other respects to make himself one of the many.

One of the Bunch.

THE GREAT REWARD THAT CAME TO AN ACCIDENTAL HERO.

By E. D. Ewers.

IN Las Palomas a man who is habitually known by three or more syllables can hardly be said to have arrived. The fact that he was addressed as Mr. Valandingham—never as Val—illustrates the handicap with which that gentleman contended in his chosen community.

For years Mr. Valandingham had realized that he was an "outsider," in spite of his efforts to earn popularity. As proprietor of Las Palomas Emporium he contributed liberally of his time and money to all public demands; he was charitable, sociable, and locally patriotic. What more could the most discriminating community desire? Yet Mr. Valandingham bore that most galling brand of human relationship—indifference. Had the town hated him it would have been more endurable.

Mr. Valindingham pondered frequently on this subject, but with him, as with most of us, brooding over his shortcomings brought little redress. As the rank and file seldom take the trouble to analyze likes and dislikes, his associates generally labelled him merely as a business man, cool of head and quiet of demeanor, and let it go at that.

Possibly a little too much of the prim air of "back East" still clung to Mr. Valandingham's manner; possibly it was only the result of an early habit of deference to one of its first citizens, now become a custom in Las Palomas. At any rate, Mr. Valandingham nursed a poignant grievance, the more galling because it must be endured in secret.

As a natural consequence, Mr. Valandingham became somewhat reticent on certain subjects. His associates who observed him daily about his shop noted his business shrewdness and little else, after our complacent method of judging a man's character by his predominating trait.

Public opinion may mark a man in his daily walks, but it rarely pursues him behind the veil of his private life. There were none to observe Mr. Valandingham's activities after business hours—none to look in on him, ensconced in his comfortable quarters over the Emporium. Here he usually spent his evenings alone, among his books and magazines, or poring over a coveted collection of prints from the old masters, none the less prized because it had come to him as a premium through the medium of soap.

Mr. Valandingham was not given to introspection, and he had never charged his personal tastes to the promptings of an esthetic nature, nor did he reason that an esthetic nature may be both a blessing and a handicap, depending upon one's environment. He had no intention of importing Bohemia into Las Palomas, and when he observed that his fellows evinced no enthusiasm over the prints from the masters, and regarded his works of standard literature as they might the musty tomes of ancient writ, he envied rather than pitied them.

For they were popular, these hale fellows, whose speech was jargon, and whose literature was newspaper headlines. He could not evade the fact that these men were free-hearted and clear-headed, and he longed for the boisterous companionship of their kind.

If any of Mr. Valandingham's associates had ever suspected him of harboring these sentiments, it probably had not occurred to them that there was anything pathetic in his attitude. A bachelor, rotund and 40, inclined to balness and ruddy with health, is not a figure which lends itself readily to one's sense of pathos.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Valandingham literally came into his own. Dressed in leathern chaps and sombrero, astride a range-bred buckskin, he rode away from town—from the atmosphere of the Emporium and the indignity of formal titles. Across the cactus-studded mesa, up over the foothills among the cedars and pinons, and oftentimes on to the foot of the mountains, he rode until the panorama of the valley lay before him.

Here he dismounted and strutted about in keen enjoyment of his vantage point. Before him lay the green, platted fields of the irrigated valley, a verdant checkerboard of gigantic proportions. Beyond, the desert stretched away to the green-fringed mountains, swelling upward to snow-tipped peaks, which gleamed against the background of turquoise sky. On these occasions his esthetic nature seldom failed to boil over.

"It is great. There is no place like it. I will not live anywhere else—in spite of them."

On occasions Mr. Valandingham spent hours rambling among the foothills or lying on his back in the warm sand reading. Sometimes he read aloud from his Book of Favorite Poems. It was on one of these occasions that Sam Higby, trailing a recreant horse, came suddenly upon the proprietor of the Emporium declaiming "The Lady of the Lake" with great oratorical effect. Although Sam voiced his astonishment in lurid detail, his presence was not observed by Mr. Valandingham, and after staring in bewilderment for some seconds, the intruder slipped away.

This incident, as reported in the Gold Bug saloon, gave rise to exhaustive comment. Although cherishing a secret respect for a man whose temperament craved poetry after a twenty-mile ride in the desert sun, Las Palomas nevertheless regretfully added the charge of being a "queer cuss" to Mr. Valandingham's score. Fortunately the latter did not learn of this additional handicap to his popularity. A misdemeanor may be forgiven; one may live down a crime; but to be branded as "queer" is damning.

For five years this colorless existence had continued. Gradually the conviction had grown upon Mr. Valandingham that no method at his command could gain the end he sought—popularity. In these moments of discouragement he quite overlooked the fact that his methods had been those which appealed to his own approval rather than that of his neighbors.

Equipped in cowboy regalia, which, it must be confessed, contributed to Mr. Valandingham's taste for the picturesque rather than his bodily comfort, he haunted the hills whenever opportunity offered. On one of these excursions Fate extended her kindly offices. Nodding in his saddle while his horse threaded its way through a narrow canyon, Mr. Valandingham's itinerant thoughts were brought suddenly to temporal things by coming abruptly upon the Las Palomas stage—empty in the roadway.

Even to the inexperienced the spectacle of an empty stage coach in a mountain gorge is an ominous one. Mr. Valandingham's heart thumped wildly. Peering past the deserted vehicle, he observed that his premonition was well founded. Huddled in a group beside the trail, the half-dozen passengers stood with uplifted hands, while a masked man deftly explored their pockets.

For many years Mr. Valindingham had read of holdups with avid interest. He knew from local gossip that these occurrences were not infrequent, and that the Las Palomas stage had suffered the indignity on several previous occasions. Always, down in his heart, he had cherished a secret yearning to experience this adventure himself. The thrill of meeting an outlaw face to face he felt would amply repay the danger and financial loss. Often, in anticipation of the event, he had laid adroit plans for outwitting the robber by shooting from a sleeve or coat pocket. In our daydreams heroics come easily.

Whether it was these thoughts that fired Mr. Valandingham or the more practical one that the advantage was entirely on his side, probably he himself did not stop to consider. After the melee which followed a critical observer would have marked that Mr. Valandingham was the most astonished member of the group which stood gasping by the roadside.

Brandishing his six-shooter, the erstwhile staid proprietor of the Emporium swept down upon the scene amid a clatter of stones and a fusillade of shots. Since that day it has been a favorite subject for argument in Las Palomas whether what followed was the result of accident or design. Those most familiar with Mr. Valandingham's marksmanship aver that only the accidental theory can apply. At any rate, the robber not only received a severe shock of surprise, but was further discomfited by a lead slug in the leg. Unable to flee, he dropped his weapon and made overtures of surrender. Mr. Valandingham found himself not only a deliverer, but a guardian of the culprit as well.

Willing hands bound the robber and placed him in the stage, after which the party paused to facilitate the hero. It was agreed that Mr. Valandingham should be given a place of honor beside the stage driver for the ride to town, one of the party riding his horse. Mr. Valandingham did not notice that the latter hastened away at top speed, while the coach lumbered leisurely behind.

It had long been one of the traditions of Las Palomas that no occasion which offered a reasonable excuse for a public celebration should go unheralded. Circuses were few and far between, and even film-pictured vaudeville as yet denied. So it devolved upon the inhabitants to amuse themselves.

The arrival of the messenger with news of Mr. Valandingham's prowess wrought a magical change in the main street of Las Palomas. Popping six-shooters called the inhabitants out en masse, and hurried preparations were made to receive the victor and the vanquished. Not every day was the modest adobe calaboose at Las Palomas graced by a real outlaw, and, with excitement long at a premium, the event assumed momentous proportions.

At a hurried council it was voted that the occasion should be given the dignity of a formal reception by a speech of welcome, to be delivered by Pompadour Allen, who claimed oratorical ability on account of his facial resemblance to Patrick Henry, and by a cornet solo of "Hail to the Chief" by the captain of the Salvation Army.

Thus Las Palomas rose to the occasion, Pompadour Allen presuming somewhat on his prerogative as speaker of the day by immediately launching into a preliminary speech, which was generally regarded as an unnecessary imposition. However, the ardor of Las Palomas could not be daunted, and when the belated stage finally came careening down the main street, no conquering hero could have coveted a reception of more spontaneous expression. Mr. Valandingham looked on with wonder while Pompadour Allen climbed to the seat beside him and addressed the crowd. The speaker's words of flattery somehow made him feel more embarrassed than elated, and he blushed sheepishly. His tension was relieved when some one proposed a cheer.

"What's the matter with——" The speaker paused in evident perplexity.

"What's the matter with Old Val?" a voice boomed.

A score of voices took up the cry. In the twinkling of an eye Las Palomas's hero of the hour had been dragged from the stage, to be jostled with happy abandon among the crowd.

Sorely tried in body and mind, Mr Valandingham hastened to his quarters over the Emporium at the first opportunity With the familiar surroundings of his everyday life about him, it seemed easier to review his adventures in their proper perspective. Viewing the subject dispassionately, he could not rid himself of the conviction that his act had been one of reckless abandon, which no sane reasoning or calm judgment could justify. But down in his heart he was buoyed by a new elation. Whatever his own opinion of his deed might be, his fellow-citizens had formulated their own verdict. In the expressive, if inelegant, vernacular of Las Palomas, he was "one of the bunch." They were calling him Old Val.

Thorne's "Scoop."

AN ENERGETIC CUB REPORTER NABS HIS FIRST BIG STORY.

By Pulsifer Payne.

THORNE pulled the last page of a rehash story out of his typewriter and, after reading the sheets hastily, threw them on the night city editor's desk and rolled a cigarette. He waited a moment for the grunt which meant, "all right" and then walked briskly out into the street.

He was a young man of sinewy, yet powerful physique; his gait was the careless lope which indicated perfect health. On the paper he was merely one of the "cubs," but Klinkard, the managing editor, had an eye on him, and although he had not yet been given any big or important assignments, the time was coming when the opportunity would be his. He had dreamed of this opportunity, confident that when it came he would rise to the occasion. In the meantime he had to content himself with rewriting the telegraphic items and covering the lesser cases which make up a large part of the daily routine of every great city newspaper.

When he left the office of the paper that night, his mind was full of that dream. It was just midnight, and he went to Tony's lunch counter for his regular hamburger and coffee before retiring to his room in the top story of a cheap downtown hotel.

Thorne was always on the lookout for a "scoop," and he was just wishing that there would be a double fire alarm or a cry of "Murder!" from one of the many dark windows which lined the street through which he was passing, when a taxicab which was far exceeding the speed limit took a notion to skid directly in front of him. The rear wheel of the machine struck the high curb not ten feet from where he was walking, and so violent was the collision that the tire exploded and the sockets snapped like kindling.

The machine, by the impetus of its speed, lurched on for several yards, and then came to a sudden stop. Almost at once the door next the street opened, and a man jumped out and began to inspect the wreckage.

"What are we to do?" he asked the driver, in great excitement. He was short and stocky and wore a close black mustache. He looked impatiently up and down the dark street.

The accident had interested Thorne, but the man's actions were even of greater interest. With that inborn news sense which all good newspaper men possess, he scented a story. Stepping back into the dark of a doorway, he awaited developments.

He had no sooner concealed himself than a cry issued from the taxicab. It was the voice of a woman, and directly following it the gutteral tones of a man formulated the harsh command:

"Keep still! Do you want to be gagged?"

The man on the sidewalk seemed to pay no attention to what was going on in the machine. Turning to the chauffeur, he ordered him angrily to hurry to the nearest telephone and get another machine. Without waiting, the driver disappeared, and the man, after a look up and down the street, went to the window in the door of the tonneau, pulled aside the curtain, and began to talk in a low tone to the man inside.

Thorne was all excitement, but he kept well in the dark and waited for the return of the chauffeur. Before two minutes had passed there came another cry from the machine—this time louder than before—and the man who was standing outside opened the door and leaned in.

"Oh, let me alone! Where are you taking me? My God, will no one help me!" The voice of the woman was terrified, and a chill swept down Thorne's spine.

Here, indeed, was the beginning of what might prove a big story! Although he was tempted to spring forward and answer the call for help which came from within the wrecked machine, Thorne restrained himself and decided to follow the machine and take no risks.

As he stood trying to formulate some theory to explain the events which were transpiring, another taxicab turned rapidly into the street and drew up in front of the disabled one. In an instant the occupants stepped out, and Thorne for one brief second saw a beautiful woman, her hands tied behind her, a look of appealing terror on her face. The two men half carried and half dragged her into the new car, and almost before the door was closed it began to sputter down the street. From all indications the chauffeur was particeps criminis.

Thorne leaped forward after the machine. For three blocks, by straining every muscle, he managed to keep the taxicab in sight. At Second avenue and Fourteenth street a surface car delayed the hurrying machine for a few seconds. This gave Thorne his chance. Swinging to the rear end of the car he ran forward to the motorman, and showing his badge, commanded him to keep as close behind the auto as possible. Mistaking Thorne's reporter's badge for a policeman's star, the motorman threw on full speed and hurried after the unsteady red light of the taxi.

At Twenty-third street the machine turned in toward the Square, and Thorne, again in luck, caught a Crosstown car, thus managing to keep his eye on the object of his pursuit.

At Broadway he found a vacant taxicab in front of the Bartholdi. He jumped into the seat beside the driver and gave some rapid orders. There was a sudden lurch, and in a few minutes Thorne was within fifty yards of the other machine.

Turning west at Seventh avenue, the two machines went north. With the exception of a few late hacks there was no traffic, and they were able to make unusually fast time. At Fifteenth street the taxicab in the lead turned east and began to slow up. Thorne directed his chauffeur to do the same.

Presently the other machine came to a stop in front of one of those high gray stone-front houses so characteristic of the temperament of the people who live in them.

Thorne sprang from the machine and thrust a bill into the driver's hand. Pulling his hat over his eyes and simulating a drunken man, he lurched rapidly forward to the point where the two men and the woman were just emerging from the closed tonneau. Without paying the slightest attention to him, as he clung for a moment to the iron fence which lined the street, the men, supporting the hysterical woman between them, crossed the sidewalk and mounted the short fight of steps. As they reached the landing the door was opened by a woman who wore a maid's cap. The machine in which the trio had been riding left the scene at once.

Thorne was somewhat puzzled as to exactly what course of action to pursue. He had scarcely enough evidence to warrant reporting the matter to the police. And another thing, such a proceeding would spoil his story. He felt he had made a big find, and he was loath to divulge it to anyone, even to the police. This was the opportunity he had dreamed of for so long—the opportunity to show his chief the kind of stuff he knew he was made of.

Obsessed with this determination, he ran rapidly up the steps. Pausing before the door through which the two men and the woman had disappeared, he buttoned his coat tightly about him and shifted his automatic revolver from his hip to the side pocket of his coat where it would be available at an instant's notice. Then he softly tried the door.

To his great surprise it yielded; and like a cat he stepped into the dimly lighted hallway, gently closing the door after him. For fully five minutes he stood motionless and intent in a silence which seemed to be intensified by the gaunt shadows cast by the dim gaslight. Then the door at the head of the stairs opened. He could hear a murmur of men's voices. He tiptoed across the hallway to the foot of the bannister. As he stood there, with every sense alert, there came again the shrill, agonized voice of the woman:

"Where am I? Why did you bring me here? Let me go. Oh, let me go."

At this instant Thorne felt two strong arms thrown about him from behind, and in a second he was on the floor, struggling in the grasp of a burly man with red whiskers. Thorne wrenched his right arm free, and clutching his revolver pressed it against the man's neck.

"Not a sound or I'll blow your head off," he said tensely.

The man relaxed his hold and both arose in silence Thorne keeping the other carefully covered with his revolver.

"Where is there a vacant room?" Thorne asked.

The man pointed to a door on the left.

Without taking his eyes from his assailant, the reporter slowly opened the door. Beyond was blackness

"Where is the switch?" he asked.

The man told him.

Thorne turned on the lights.

He found himself in a small bedroom, simply furnished in white enamel. Going to the bed he dragged one of the sheets from it.

"Sit down," he commanded roughly.

With a fearful glance at the leveled revolver, the man obeyed. In a second the other had bound and gagged him securely.

Turning out the lights, Thorne returned to the hallway. A man was just on the point of descending from the upper landing, and Thorne drew himself quickly behind one of the portieres which were draped across the arch at the stair's base.

The man who descended was the one Thorne had first seen jump from the wrecked taxicab. Passing so near that the hidden reporter might have touched him he turned down the passage and entered a door at the further end. Thorne cleared the stairs, three steps at a time, and crouched in a dark alcove in the upper hallway to await developments.

Again the agonized voice of the woman rang out:

"Oh, what are you going to do with me? Will no one help me? Why did you bring me here?"

The reverberation of her clear voice had no more than died in the night silence when the other man who had been in the taxicab came from the room opposite Thorne's hiding place and called loudly over the banisters:

"Dr. Klinkard—O, Dr. Klinkard!"

Klinkard was the name of Thorne's managing editor, and hearing it thus spoken gave the reporter fresh courage.

The heavy-set man with the close black mustache, who had gone below, reappeared and started to ascend. The man at the head of the stairs went down to meet him, and a short consultation ensued, the gist of which Thorne was unable to ascertain.

This was Thorne's chance. He moved swiftly across the upper hallway, keeping close to the wall, and entered the room from which he had heard the woman's voice. When he was inside he quickly shot the bolt. Then he glanced about him. The room, though larger, was furnished similarly to the one in which he had bound and gagged the red-whiskered man. On a couch by the window lay a handsome young woman, her arms and feet tied.

"Oh, you have come to save me?" She spoke entreatingly.

"Quick—tell me what the trouble is," he demanded.

The woman took her eyes from him and looked at the ceiling.

"Oh, why did they bring me here?" she cried out again. "Make them let me go. Make them let me go."

Thorne heard the men ascending the stairs. He over the woman. "Tell me who you are," he said

"No matter," she replied, looking at him ingly. "Just save me from these men—save me"

The two men were at the door. Thorne took from his pocket and cut the canvas straps which the woman.

The door rattled violently.

"Who's in there?" demanded an angry voice hall.

Thorne turned to the girl, who was now sitting gazing nervously about her.

"I'm going to get you out of this," he said as I tell you."

Going to the window he raised the sash. was a narrow iron balcony which was the landing fire-escape.

"Here!" called Thorne, peremptorily. "Get this window. Climb down as far as you can for me."

The girl hesitated a moment, and then into the blackness. The door was being lently, and the men were demanding to know inside.

Thorne was just about to follow the girl the window when the lock yielded to the the door swung inward. Before either of had time to speak, Thorne drew his revolver dered them to halt. Turning to the man who bore the name of aging editor, he gripped him tightly and across the room to the door through which had entered.

Thorne sat down before the nearest began to pound away furiously. On the office he had asked the woman many told him she was Mrs. Charles Chittenden Park avenue. WOMAN'S LOVE AND ITS UNEXPECTEDLY PATHETIC ENDING.

no, no!" Fan gasped and clutched her restrain- Then the humor of the thing broke over her in us wave. "Old Grimalkin" coming to bind up a breaking heart with hot-water bags and flannels! She burst into wild laughter that was worse than her sobbing.

It seemed to Helen a year before she grew quiet and lay a limp, broken thing across the pillow. Chafing the small cold hands, she talked persistently of a thousand cheerful everyday matters. It was not until she spoke Phil's name that she felt Fan wince, and then catch herself quickly. She was not overquick; she herself had no subtleties. But she caught the significance of the quickly-averted face, the sharp intake of breath, in a stunning flash. For a moment she sank back upon her pillow. The weakness passed. With characteristic courage she sought the truth.

"Fan! YOU love him—too." Her tone was fraught with a world of pain. She drew her chum into motherly, protective arms. For a moment the other girl battled with surging emotions. Helen—lucky Helen—should not know—and pity. Then the barrier burst, and in a rush of scalding tears she gasped out her heart in broken sentences.

Helen felt as if she herself died beneath each word. Yet she listened to the protestations—the pitiful wasted confessions—the girlish whisperings—and gave comfort though her jealous heart was savage with its own hurt.

In Fan's mind, through the relief of expression, there ran an undercurrent of prophetic shame. She knew that with tomorrow's dawn would come the inevitable regret and self-loathing—yet she could not choke back the torrent that poured itself out until exhausted. Helen listened with a great wonder upon her. She herself loved Phil. But not as Fan loved him. She tried to tell the other girl of her own feeling, but its sacredness bade her keep silence, and the words died upon her shy lips. Until far into the night she listened, and the pity in her heart grew until she could scarcely bear it, and she wept over the other girl as a mother, or an angel, might have wept.

"It does not matter, Helen! It does not matter," Fan pushed back her hair with hot, impatient hands and stared into space with rebellious, tragic eyes. "The doctor says I can't live very long, anyway. Only a year or two at best. So it doesn't matter."

Helen wept afresh. "Oh, Fan, why do we both love him?"

"Oh, for the same reason that everything else happens. The world goes by contraries, and nobody ever gets what they want." Fan spoke in a dull tired way as if she had already lived through centuries of disappointments. "I've had my little wail," she said grimly. "Don't ever dare remind me of it. I shall live through this as millions of other women have before me. I shall live to laugh at it!" A wave swept over her—again she stood in the darkness, and felt—his groping touch—and then the warmth of his arms—his kiss—and she broke into wild, terrified sobbing and clung to Helen with convulsive grasp.

At last she grew quiet, save for gasping breaths, and lay forlorn-eyed and passive. The first bridge had been crossed. There was only a consciousness somewhere in the back of her brain of overwhelming anguish. She could suffer no more—only lie spent and helpless, in Helen's madonna clasp, until she fell asleep.

Helen did not sleep. She argued a certain question, with a concentrated intensity that precluded rest. Over and over she threshed out the cruel problem that outlined itself before her with inexorable distinctness. "Only a year or two at most." Could they not sacrifice a year or two of their happiness? Would it not indeed be all the sweeter for the time of waiting—for the added beauty of sacrifice? She had a thousand memories to live upon, memories of their childhood when he, a dear brown-eyed boy, had played with her under the apple trees, and of other summers, when they, grown older, had fished and boated and strolled through the long sunny hours. In a certain bureau drawer at home lay a dozen soiled little relics of their mutual growing-up days. She had even begged his baby picture from his mother's album, and cherished it among the things that count. How rich she was—while Fan—poor little Fan—had nothing but one stolen, unsanctified caress.

She raised herself on her elbow and looked at her chum. She slept heavily, her two thin hands pressed against her breast in an indescribably pathetic gesture. All her unmothered youth, her lonely, unguided years spent in drifting from one boarding-school to another, always alone, unmothered—seemed to rise up before Helen and plead. She bent and kissed one thin little hand. The inexorable problem had threshed itself out.

And then the other side presenting itself inevitably, she sprang wildly from the bed and fell sobbing upon her knee to pray. Dawn found her still there upon her knees before her God.

. . . .

The wedding was over. Fan, in her white simple gown, had stood with Phil under the green canopy, erected in one corner of the parlor of Helen's home, and the village minister had said the stirring words that, however familiar, always fall upon the heart of the hearer with a bliss akin to anguish.

Helen, tall, statuesque, with a curious radiance shining from her unseeing eyes, followed her rosy, comfortable mother about, helping care for their guests. The noon wedding feast had been a triumph of delicious home-made country cookery. The noisy excited crowd of young city folks had eaten and laughed, and laughed and eaten, to youthful repletion.

The village hack was drawn up at the door—a half hour before train time—and its steps were crowded with noisy youngsters. It was seldom that Somerville saw a big wedding.

Fan and Helen had slipped away alone to Helen's pink bedroom for a little good-by talk and a parting weep. They sat on the edge of the bed clasped in each other's arms—deaf to the impatient shouts from the hall below, where the crowd stood lined up with all the old shoes and white ribbons the village had been able to muster.

"I want you to be happy, dear," Helen whispered, as she fussed with the lace of Fan's blouse, with loving touches. "Little Mrs. Phillip," she said grandiloquently, and kissed the nearest ear.

Fan, with shining eyes, as of one already translated to ports of happiness unspeakable, laughed a little tremulously and hid her face in her hands. In a moment she straightened herself proudly. Then she looked at Helen. "Are you sure you're happy?" she queried innocently. "You know it never seems possible—to a wife—that any one else should have tired of HER HUSBAND." Her accent upon the wonderful new words was delightfully self-conscious.

Helen whitened suddenly. She rose a bit unsteadily. "They're calling you, dear," she said quickly. "Kiss me, Fan. You dear—old—girl—I can't—give you—up."

And when the door was impatiently flung open by the laughing, excited crowd, they found them sobbing upon each other's shoulders.

The train proved to be late, and there was a tedious period of waiting in the hot little station; tedious to the tall, white, statuesque girl, and the miserably-happy bride and groom, who were the squirming target for a rain of careless jests from the crowd of schoolmates, having the time of their lives; not tedious—but a special intervention of a kind. Providence—to Phil's mother, who clung to him, and gave him low-voiced, tremulous advice on every subject under the sun, from the proper date for the donning of winter flannels to the proper way of embarking upon the marriage career.

But at last the train came puffing in, and there was one last wild, screaming, pushing, kissing, weeping moment, before it puffed out again, and left behind that curious emptiness that is like no other emptiness in the wide world.

When they reached home Helen collapsed in the little pink bedroom, and by night she was so ill that her house party came to an abrupt end.

"It all comes of this higher education," said Helen's rosy comfortable mother, as she saw them off to their train. "Helen has just overworked. She is so ambitious, just seems as if all she cares about is books!" And she heaved a little sigh over certain mysteries of which today had seen the culmination.

. . . .

Helen looked in her mail box mechanically. It wasn't the day for her mother's letter, and she expected nothing more than the usual round of polite invitations to faculty receptions and club teas. When her eyes fell upon the oblong envelope that bore familiar scrawling characters made with a stub pen—held between the first and second finger—just for one subconscious moment she thought: "Here is my letter from Phil"—before memory reasserted itself mercilessly. "I believe I'm losing my mind," she thought shamefacedly.

It had been two years since those letters had stopped coming. She held herself together until she reached the door of her room. She knew it would never do for the curious, all-watchful eyes of her landlady to discover her in excitement over a letter. The air would be rife with wild conjectures for days.

Just as she was about to turn the handle of her door and slip into shelter, Miss Cummings, the philosophy assistant, called to her, from across the hall: "I'm coming over for a minute, if you don't mind." And without waiting for an answer, she strode across the hall and over the threshold. "Oh, you have a letter, haven't you? What an interesting hand! Who is it? Now, Miss Hill, who'd have ever suspected YOU of a love affair! Tell me who the lucky man is." Miss Cummings showed all her full set of carefully-patched teeth in a coquettish grimace.

Helen blanched and put a hand to her heart as if to ease a sudden stab. She took off her hat with fingers that sought awkwardly for the pins, and hung it in her closet, before she made an irrelevent, careless answer.

Miss Cummings had settled herself in the easy chair by the window for a "good" visit. She admired and liked the brilliant young librarian, and she had found her a good listener. As the flow of her dull talk went on ceaselessly, Helen found her large stock of patience dwindling lower and lower. At last she pleaded a headache, and after much sympathetic questioning and offers of osteopathic services, and a half-dozen false starts, the philosophy assistant took herself off to her own room. Helen rose and with shaking knees crept unsteadily to the door and locked it. She sank to the floor and feverishly broke the seal. Her cold shaking fingers tore the inner contents of the letter also.

With excitement that amounted almost to physical nausea she avidly devoured the first page.

"Dear Tommy" (she read:) "She's gone. Up to the very last she never gave up. While she was dying she made plans for us to come back home to see you this summer. Oh, Helen—there was never another woman like HER. God! It seems hard. But we've all got to go. How I worshiped her! Maybe that's why I lost her. That boy-and-girl affair of ours—I never knew what a KISS COULD MEAN till I held my darling in my arms. I'm going into service, have already enlisted. Tell mother not to look for me this summer. I've got to get away. Good-by, old 'Tom.' Yours always, Phil."

With the letter clutched in extended fists Helen leaned back against the bed and gasped for breath. Now she knew—knew upon what false hope she had lived these two years. At last she knew. Knew the full measure of her sacrifice—the price she had paid.

A TIMELY WARNING.

Visitor: What was that whistle—fire?

Superintendent: Oh, no. Just a signal telling the president's son over there that a reporter is coming. That gives him time to get his feet off the desk, throw away his cigarette and his novel, rumple his hair, rub burnt cork on his face, get a dinner pail, and dash into the factory, where he's supposed to be learning the business from the ground up, before the fellow gets here.—[Puck.

Irrigation for Indians.

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT IS DOING TO HELP ITS WARDS.

By William Atherton Du Puy.

WHENEVER Uncle Sam gives an Indian family a thirty-acre tract of ultra-fertile irrigable land in the West and perpetual water to insure its continued productiveness he has emancipated that family. Its members are no longer wards of the government, but self-supporting. They no longer face that possibility of starvation which has hung over many tribes for decades. They inalienably possess a heritage that will yield them an abundance to the end of the chapter.

And this is exactly what Uncle Sam is doing. Already enough land has been reclaimed to furnish 30,000 Indians with these homes. This means that nearly a fifth of the Indians in the West have already been supplied with this guarantee of plenty. Yet the work is but well begun, and may be carried forward until it reaches practically all these Indians who need its aid.

The Zuni Indians, in New Mexico, now have great irrigation ditches where their squaws formerly carried the life-giving waters in vessels on their heads. The Mission Indians, in the great Colorado Desert of California, around Indio, whose very existence in so inhospitable a surrounding has always puzzled the tourist, have been given scores of gushing artesian wells and the barren wastes are blossoming as the rose. The government wards at Sacaton, Ariz., who were left without substance when the white man took out canals higher up the Gila and cut off their water supply, have been given great pumping plants that bring to them a prosperity of which their fathers never dreamed. On the Yakima reservation in Washington tens of thousands of acres are being brought under irrigation, making it in every way equal to the much-heralded apple lands of that section. The principle is variously applied, and is everywhere bringing favorable results.

Model Farms.

The world is just coming to realize that the best farm to be had is the irrigated farm in the West. Here the farmer with ten acres and water is independent. Here may be lived the life that is most nearly ideal of them all. These Indians are being given these choice farms. Their allotments run from five to ten acres each, with outside lands for grazing. A family of six draws a farm of from thirty to sixty acres of this most productive land. The white man is making a model home on ten and twenty-acre tracts. The storehouse of the Indian is coming to be perennially full and he is taking on a new lease of life.

This is one of the big ideas that is just now being worked out by the Indian service and executed by W. H. Code, its chief engineer. Mr. Code is an Ann Arbor man, who has spent the twenty years since leaving college developing irrigation. The projects he has general supervision over dot all the region west of the Missouri. Six million dollars have been spent by the government in this work to date, and Mr. Code estimates that an additional $5,000,000 will be needed before all projects under way are completed.

There is a benefit to the Indians entirely aside from that of providing them with farms. They are converted into workmen in the meantime. The work of building dams and digging canals is, as far as ordinary labor is concerned, all done by the Indians themselves. By the time one of these great projects is completed the men of the tribes interested are carried well along the road toward civilization through wage earning.

The Crows at Work.

Take, for instance, the big project on the Crow reservation, in Montana, one of the first built. It covers 60,000 acres of Indian allotments, and insures the present and future prosperity of the tribe. These sons of the men who slaughtered Custer and his fellows know little of work. The Crows were hunting Indians, and not of the agricultural instincts of those tribes farther south.

But getting these Indians to work was one of the objects of the reclamation. The appearance of the early Crows who assembled at the call of the engineers in charge was sufficient to discourage any man alive to the task before him. These Indians appeared on the pay roll under such names as "Kills Three Men," "Takes a Gun," "Kills the Man Who Has No Front Teeth," "Two-Barreled Guns." Uncle Sam probably never had a stranger set of employees. They brought with them all manner of teams of mismated bronchos, whose harnesses were misfits and frequently tied together with buckskin thongs or baling wire.

The sight of a Crow or Cheyenne Indian attempting to drive such a team with one hand while the other tightly clutched his wildly flapping blankets was one to be remembered. These blanket robes are much more picturesque than utilitarian. Squaws in multi-colored dresses worked in clearing up the right of way, and were really much more effective in the beginning than the men, having had more practice. But in the end these men became good workmen. Today many of them are peacefully following the plow in the very shadow of the Custer battlefield, and their property has so increased that the tribe will be prosperous forever.

Wealthy Yakimas.

The Yakima Indians already have 30,000 acres under cultivation. This area may be expanded to four or five times that amount. This land lies just below those famous irrigated lands in Washington that have been recently opened up by the Reclamation Service, and which it is today selling at from $100 to $800 an acre. So it is evident that a sufficient prosperity will be supplied to these Indians and others similarly situated.

Indeed, the problems connected with the reclamation of these lands in the north are comparatively easy as compared with those in the arid Southwest, particularly in New Mexico, Arizona and California. In Arizona the government is spending approximately $600,000 to relieve the Pima Indians on the Gila River reservation.

At the advent of Europeans into the Southwest there was but the remnant of the tribe. They lived in tepees along the Gila River. But even then they paratively prosperous. They led the waters of onto the lowlands and raised wheat and cient to supply their needs. But twenty years this meager prosperity slipped from them. man came into Arizona. He found many lying along the headwaters of the Gila. He stream and irrigated those lands. The Indian dred miles below watched the flow of the less and less. Finally there was no water small farms. They were forced to fall back rabbits of the desert and the beans of the subsistence. There was much hardship

The vast amounts of water stored in this reservoir are released through nels under high pressure. Electric power limited quantity is thus generated. In passing it may not be amiss to the fact that irrigation in the Salt and old as the Pharaohs. Making the Desert Bloom.

There has probably been no greater brought about at any point in the world velopment of water than among the Southern California. Here there are tribes gathered about mere seepages of midst of the great deserts. So scarce fluid that there was often a question for even drinking purposes. But today of gushing artesian wells. The water from these is led upon the great tracts of silt-formed lands which, under its influence and that of the ever bountiful sunshine, yield such crops as to fill the laps of the tribes with an unfailing abundance.

The most noteworthy of these is near Indio, where a number of small reservations were established by a commission, on lands so barren that it was thought no white man would ever cover them. The deserving Indians located on these lands adjacent to the Salton Sea could obtain barely sufficient water for drinking purposes. An enterprising white man decided to try for artesian water on some adjoining lands owned by the railroad. To the surprise of every one his experiment revealed the fact that fine flowing artesian wells could be obtained at nominal depths of from 300 to 500 feet.

On the occasion of the late President McKinley's western visit his special train stopped a short time at Indio. It was boarded by a delegation of Indians representing the various reservations of Torres, Cabazon, Martinez, Coachella and San Augustin, and the "Great Father," through an interpreter, was asked to give his children water. The President was touched with their recital of their hardships, and from his car window could observe the Sahara-like appearance of their lands and appreciate their great needs. He promised to help them, and, taking the written petition submitted by them, wrote this request to the Secretary of the Interior on the back of it:

"Please give these Indians water if possible.

"WILLIAM McKINLEY."

McKinley's Request Heeded.

This autographic request of the martyred President ultimately reached Engineer Code, with instructions from the department to obtain the supply of water necessary for the needs of the Indians. To the personal interest which President McKinley thus manifested in these little bands of Indians is due in a large measure their prosperity, not exceeded by any tribe in California at the present time, for there are thousands of acres of land that may now be irrigated in this way, and these Indians, but two or three years ago the poorest of God's creatures, are today threatening the precedence of those Oklahoma tribes who claim to be the wealthiest per capita race of people in the world.

Another of the most interesting of the transformations is that brought about on the Zuni reservation in New Mexico. Here the men of the Indian service found the industrious Indians carrying water in great jugs and pouring it upon their growing crops. The enterprising farmer was thus able to cultivate a field about the size of the ordinary living-room.

But on the Zuni reservation the government has created a storage reservoir and constructed an irrigation system for the reclamation of lands belonging to these remarkable Indians, whose folk lore was so interestingly written by the late Lieut. Cushing.

This little tribe of 1800 souls lives in one of the most unique pueblos in the Southwest, a compactly-built adobe village, located on a slight eminence in the center of a rich alluvial valley, whose red soil is wonderfully fertile if irrigated, but utterly worthless without water.

Strange Zuni Village.

This pueblo is rarely visited by whites, being located in one of the most isolated sections of New Mexico and forty-five miles from the nearest railroad. An especially interesting feature is a high, flat-topped mountain, which rises out of the plains to a height of several thousand feet, on which are the ruins of a former Zuni village, presumed to have been the site of the principal one of the seven cities of Cibola, which the Spanish explorers were sent out to locate. Two detached rocky pinnacles projecting from the mountainside are the legendary forms of a vicarious sacrifice of the son and daughter of the chief, made to save the tribe from Noah's flood.

The government has expended about $350,000 on this reservation in the construction of a combination loose-rock and hydraulic earth-fill dam, and a canal system leading from the storage reservoir created by the dam. The task of constructing such a dam at a point so remote from a base of supplies, with untrained Indians to furnish the common labor required, was one beset with many difficulties. It was necessary to teach them to work with derricks, dump cars, drills, hydraulic monitors, and to perform cement work.

But the Zuni took well to this work, and became efficient in it. These Indians are instinctively agricultural, and irrigation has long been understood by the tribe. Last year they harvested for the first time crops from some hundreds of acres, and the harvest celebration was such as the tribe had never before known. To them Engineer Code, representing the great white father, is the "water man," most blessed of them all. When he visits the settlement the call of the 'water man" goes through the village, and every individual turns out to do him honor.

Partners With the Whites.

The Salt River reservation is in Salt River Valley, covered by the great Roosevelt dam. Here the Indians join hands with the white farmers in their water users' association and are as much a party to the building of the project as are any of these. They now have 4000 acres under cultivation in this valley where such lands sell for $300 an acre. They are permanently independent.

The Navajo Indians, tenders of flocks and weavers of blankets, are a tribe 30,000 strong. Their cattle and sheep range over portions of New Mexico, Arizona and Utah. They are prosperous and intelligent. They need no irrigation, but they need watering places for their flocks. The government is prospecting for artesian water that the ranges may be made more accessible because of added watering places.

On all these reservations are scores of young men and women who have been educated at the various Indian schools. Many of them have trainings that compare with those of our best colleges. Most of them have been given much industrial training. There is always the tendency to revert when the youngsters return to the reservations, but this may have been because the reservations offered no opportunities. Certain it is that on many of these irrigated reservations there are to be found cosy cottages and well-arranged homes that are inhabited by young couples of education who are making of themselves examples to their tribes and bringing to themselves great prosperity.

There are at present ten projects either completed or under way. Some $6,000,000 has been expended and as much more must still be spent. Of course there will be still other projects with great possibilities that will show up with the opening of other reservations. But the scheme is doing much toward solving the vexed problem of providing for the suffering red man, and it is effective just where the suffering is greatest. The list and location of the projects now completed and under way are as follows:

Fort Hall reservation, Idaho	$750,000
Crow reservation, Montana	1,000,000

Cupid's Quickstep.

HARTLEY TURNS A POPULAR AIR INTO A FUNERAL DIRGE.

By Lannie Haynes Martin.

HARTLEY might have been a musical genius. But the fact was, Hartley was only an office clerk, and the same bacilli that has made so many "might have beens" was responsible for this one. Hartley was lazy. He could reproduce any tune he had ever heard; that is, by a little practice, and by transposing the air into the three-flat key in which he played everything; he could render, without ever having known a note, anything from "The Maiden's Prayer" to the "Traumerei" with a finish and a touch that were marvelous.

Hartley was content, however, with the knowledge that he possessed this faculty and did not often bring into audient actuality the tunes that sang themselves in his head. But one summer an air came to town that was so ubiquitous, so insistent, so rollicking, so teasingly triumphant, he could not escape it. It whistled itself on the streets. Bands played it. Newsboys warbled it between their yells of "Extra! Extra!" Girls jingled it on guitars and mandolins. The dance orchestras played it till Hartley's very toes wiggled time to it, and his fingers thrummed unconsciously on his desk, hypnotized by its rhythmic swing. If the gate creaked, or the teakettle sang, or the cat purred, it all seemed to echo that merry little jingle of a jig.

When the locomotive started out with a "Chough—chough—chough—chitty chut chut chut chut, chough," it seemed to be just breathing out the tune it had taken in from the air. When the wind whistled round the house it went with a "Whish—whish—whish—wishy whish wish whishy wish." One night Hartley had to wake up his roommate because the snoring took on the unbearable rhythm of "Kronch—kronch—kronch—kronchy kronch kronch kronchy kronch." When his trolley car took him to town of mornings it went over the tracks with a "Click—click—click—clickety click clack click clack click," till Hartley was frantic.

He could stand it no longer. He simply had to get it out of his system. He went to the piano and played it accurately, simply, moderately slow, and feelingly. Then he put some trills into it, and some runs and inch or so of chromatic scale. He threw in a natural and flatted a note, and crossed over the left hand from the bass to make a treble echo like a lark's high soaring song; then the right hand crossed over into the bass with a deep and rhythmic rumble; then he fell into a minor key that wailed the tune as tragically as if a snow shoveler had been whistling it on the boulevards of hades. He played it staccato, then andante, then pianissimo, and finally with a long-meter doxology tempo. In short, he made of it a work of art, and it came to be known as Hartley's Classic. The fame of it spread abroad through all the country round about his native town. He was asked to play it at concerts and afternoon teas, at weddings and commencements, and, being so interested in the possibilities that lay in it, he left off the remainder of his repertoire altogether and could not feel sure of himself in any other piece.

About this time Hartley fell in love with a damsel in a neighboring hamlet, and it so chanced that the fair one lived with a stern and cruel aunt who would not permit her to receive young men callers. Hartley was in despair, and lay awake of nights revolving romantic and impossible plans of procedure. But it happened in this wise. One day he was mystified, electrified, glorified, by the receipt of a note from this gorgon aunt who had turned his hopes to stone, requesting him to come over to her home, a few miles distant.

When he went to ask his chief for a half-day's leave of absence, so great was the agitation of the young man and so extreme his pallor that even His Incredulous Augustness would have credited the statement had Hartley asserted that his grandmother was dead. Making an equally urgent but less conventional excuse, he rushed on his wheel breathless to do the lady's bidding, vowing all the way that no task could be too hard, no condition too exacting, for him to perform, if only he might win her favor.

When he arrived he was received with a cordiality passing his wildest imaginations, the dreaded aunt smiled on him, and when she asked, in bland and wheedling tones, if he would grant a request for her, he was so emphatic, so vociferous, so abject in his avowals of readiness to serve that when she asked him if he would not play his great classic at the funeral of a neighbor that afternoon, what could he say on the impulse of the moment, and in the face of his lavish protestations—what could he say but: "Why, certainly, Madam, with the greatest of pleasure?"

And having given his promise, how could he tell her that it was not suitable for a funeral, that it would not do at all, that it would be wholly inappropriate?

How roundly he cursed himself that he had not kept up his other pieces, that he had forgotten his "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "In the Sweet By-and-by!" But maybe he could disguise it—he would play it in the minor, with the doxology meter, and he would make his variations very solemn. He was playing for a stake. If he stayed and played, she had asked him to come to supper. If he went to supper, he would meet Corinne. And if he met Corinne—then all of life ever afterward would be "one grand sweet song." Yes, he would play it, and he would make it sound like a funeral dirge.

That afternoon, as he was playing, the cold drops starting on his forehead from the ordeal through which he was passing, he glanced in the mirror in the organ in front of him and saw reflected there Corinne's face. There was an amused, whimsical, quizzical little pucker to her lips, and her ear, elevated to an inquisitive angle, seemed trying to verify some former recollection of sound. A sudden minor crash in the music, some hastily-improvised chords and an impressive pause, seemed to change the association of ideas in the young lady's mind and her face cleared perceptibly.

That evening, when they were left alone together for a few minutes, the girl said to Hartley: "I wonder if you would tell me the truth about something if I asked you?"

"Try me and see," said Hartley.

"But will you?" persisted the girl.

"On my honor I will," he said with sudden seriousness.

"Well, what was it you played at that funeral this afternoon?"

"I wonder if you would keep a secret if I were to ask you?" he said.

"Try me and see," she said, mocking his own tones.

"But will you—FOR ME?" and his voice and eyes meant many things.

"Yes," she said softly, as her own eyes fell.

"Then," said he, assuming a very pompous and important air, "I will tell you that at the funeral of your esteemed neighbor this afternoon I played an extemporaneous adaptation of that famous opera, 'There'll Be a Torrid Temporal Event In the Ancient Burgh Before Morning.' "

And when the girl shrieked so with laughter that her thing in the world, but I can't."

And now Hartley is saying that the only thing that mars his otherwise perfect bliss is that he can't play at his own wedding, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

A CALIFORNIA SUNSET.

I have seen the sunset!

The murmuring city lay at my feet stretching on toward the sea—sheer wall, tower, minaret and dome reaching up into the amethyst haze that rested on the city like a fluffy mantle that the hands of a mother-God were tucking about a weary child. A low cloud of deeper amethyst stretched out in long strata. It might have been there for an eternity if its attitude of repose and its perspective meant anything. But in its midst the setting sun shone orange-red, and sank, and sank from sight; and in the ether above the slumbering cloud, appeared that rainbow blending of delicate yellow, green, and blue.

Only one thing in the scene refused to take on any of the glory. Resting across this softly-colored bosom of ether, a mauve cloud stretched into the far distance, as if it had come from "its own place," to which it intended returning again, unmoved by any of the spirit of the scene.

Deeper and more deep the amethyst of the mist mantle grew, as if it would whisper a more fervent forgiveness to the murmured bedtime confessions of the city's heart; the Lethe-bathed cloud showed blood-red veins of rousing life, warming into the deep red of some master passion; and one sweet star with its face to the sun came out from behind the retiring mauve, growing more radiant in the waxing glory.

The cloud dead to all this drama was slowly but inexorably drawn back to "its own place" in the infinity of space, as if no sun had ever rose nor set. But the star caught more and more of the sun's bright face; the yet more deepening amethyst mantle meant a still more fervent forgiveness; and the still more deeply impassioned cloud whispered: "Ready for service! Ready!"

Night at last folded to its peace the passion-spent cloud with the forgiveness-spent mist; and the great city, comforted and forgiven, smiled in its sleep.

But the star kept shining.

THE PATHETIC LOVE STORY OF OSIFA, AN INDIAN GIRL.

By Ernest Douglas.

PINOLE, deposed chief of the Papagos, sat on the platform which served as a station building at Turkey Creek, gazing stolidly but expectantly northward along the railroad track while Billy Rudero warned him, for the seventh or eighth time, to keep his goats off the forest reserve.

"The next time I find any of your goats on this side of the line I'll take you to Prescott and see that you get six months or a year in the cooler," threatened the ranger.

Three miles away, across the creek, a bit of smoke floated in the air, presaging the coming of the tri-weekly train. Pinole rose slowly, pulled off his broad, dirty-white hat and tightened the hair band. He then rearranged the green silk handkerchief knotted about his neck and surveyed his red flannel shirt, blue overalls and high-heeled boots with complacent satisfaction. Pinole was conscious that he looked his best.

Before the train puffed up to the station he had tightened the cinches of the saddles on three snakelike ponies tied to near-by bushes. One carried his own dilapidated old saddle, another bore a new and shining affair of yellow leather and metal rosettes, while on the third was a pack saddle. The new saddle was for Osifa and the pack horse for her baggage.

Billy saw the meeting of the old father and the daughter who had just graduated from the Indian school at Phoenix. She was standing on the platform of the coach, holding a little leather satchel. At her feet were two well-filled muslin bags. For an Indian girl she was unusually attractive. In her dark, round, well-molded and intelligent features Billy could trace no resemblance to the wrinkled, wicked countenance of Pinole. Her figure was short but trim, with none of that ugly squatness common to Papago women. She was dressed in a neat checked gingham dress and on her head she wore a white cloth sunbonnet. Her eyes hastily swept the little crowd and came to rest a moment on Billy Rudero.

With no greeting other than a guttural grunt, Pinole seized one of the bags and made for the pack horse, leaving his daughter to bring the other bag and the satchel.

"Allow me," said Billy, and assisted her to the ground.

"Thank you," she returned with a pretty smile, as he took both the grip and bag and helped Pinole fasten them to the pack saddle. Pinole was astonished and somewhat disgusted that the forest ranger should thus notice a squaw, though that squaw was his own daughter.

The storekeeper's wife and daughter hurried out to welcome Osifa. She shook hands with them, and declared that she was glad to be "back home." There was a little catch in her voice as she said it, and Billy knew she was not speaking the truth.

Pinole led the pack horse away, and Billy helped Osifa to her saddle. He noticed for the first time that she wore a divided skirt.

"I changed in Prescott this morning so that I wouldn't have to wait here," she explained. "Good-by. I'll be over to see you soon, Mrs. Nellis."

She was looking at Billy. He smiled back, and she turned her head in confusion.

"Good-by," she said again, and followed Pinole.

"Poor girl," sighed Mrs. Nellis. "I'm sorry that she ever came back to live with him. She thinks it's her duty, but he's still an Indian, while schooling has made her a lady."

Pinole and Osifa were disappearing over the hill southwest of the station. She turned and waved her handkerchief.

"I've heard that educated Indians lapse back into their savage manner of living, but I believe that girl is going to be an exception," remarked Billy. Mrs. Nellis emphatically agreed.

"Osifa was always a good girl, even before she went away to school," she said. "She has only been back twice since her mother died, six years ago."

Of Pinole Billy knew little, but he knew as much as any one in the Bradshaws. The old man had once been high chief of the Papagos at Gila Bend, but had gotten into trouble with his people and been forced to flee from that country. Rumor said that his crime had been a brutal murder which even the Papagos, who view with more or less indifference the taking of human life, had been unable to overlook. At any rate, he had come to Yavapai county, far from the Papago country, and taken possession of an old cabin on Castle Creek, twelve miles southwest of Turkey Creek station. In some way he had acquired a few goats, and from them, a few horses, and game he managed to kill, he eked out an existence—an existence that had been a lonely one since his only child had gone away to school, somewhat against his better judgment, and his wife had died.

Pinole's cabin was just over the east line of the Prescott national forest, and his goats frequently strayed over on the reserve, thus violating the grazing regulations of the United States Forest Service. And Billy, as the representative of that governmental branch, had had many violent arguments with their owner.

Billy thought much of Osifa that day as he rode across the mountains to his headquarters at Crown King. Three or four days later he rode over on the east boundary, chased half a dozen of Pinole's goats off the reserve, and then visited the cabin. Pinole was gone, but Osifa gave him a shy welcome.

"Good afternoon," she said as she stood in the door. "Won't you come in?"

He hesitated a moment.

"Surely you don't have to hurry on," she ventured.

Mumbling something about resting a minute or two, Billy tied his horse to a tree and followed her into the cabin. He was surprised to note the appearance of the room. Evidently Osifa had toiled hard to make it look like a civilized home. Muslin curtains were at the windows, and the two rickety old chairs had been covered with cloth to conceal their ugliness. Everything was neat and clean.

Billy hardly realized that he was talking to an Indian girl as he carried on an aimless but animated conversation with her. She told him of her life at the school, and he tried to tell her of the objects and purposes of the Forest Service, which she seemed to understand but dimly. She couldn't comprehend why country like that around her home, covered with rocks and brush and with almost no trees, should be included in a forest reserve. But she understood readily when he told her that the surrounding district had been reserved because of its value as a watershed.

There was a certain charm about Osifa's conversation that made it hard for Billy to tear himself away. He did not leave until late in the afternoon. As he was mounting his horse, Pinole rode up, grunted an unintelligible greeting and passed on without a second look. Billy started to give him another dressing-down about his goats, but for some mysterious reason refrained. He was watching Osifa, and saw a shadow cross her face when she looked at her villainous old father.

"Good-by," said Billy simply. "I'll come again, if I may."

"Come soon. I'm so lonely out here. It's so different from the life I've lived at the school."

Because he felt sorry for her and because the girl interested him as a study of what an Indian may become under the influence of education, Billy visited the cabin often as the summer wore on. Pinole was usually gone, and when he was around he paid absolutely no attention to the ranger. Several times Billy had to warn him about his goats. There was plenty of grazing for them off the reserve, but they would stray across the line.

No one else ever went near the cabin except, now and then, a stray prospector. That Osifa enjoyed his visits Billy well knew, but he did not know how well. Perhaps he would not have been so blind had he not been so hopelessly in love with Alice Shattuck.

Alice Shattuck was a teacher of the Crown King school, and was spending the summer vacation with her relatives in Ohio. Billy was enduring the summer somehow, deriving great comfort from fat, heavy, square envelopes that came regularly three times a week, every time a train ran from Prescott to Crown King.

Billy had mentioned Alice to Osifa, but only in a casual way, as he had mentioned other persons at Crown King. But when a letter came saying she would soon leave for Arizona, he talked about her all the time he was with the Indian maid, giving an enthusiastic account of her beauty and virtues.

"I'm going to bring her over here to see you, Osifa," he said. "She often rides horseback with me Saturdays and Sundays. She's just the kind of a woman you'll like, and I know she'll like you, too."

"I'll be very glad to know her," Osifa replied stiffly, but Billy did not notice. He rambled on about Alice until it was time for him to go.

The first Saturday after Alice Shattuck returned to Crown King, Billy took her over to see Osifa. He had told the school teacher a great deal about the little Indian girl.

"It's a perfect shame for her to live away off out there," declared Billy. "Several times I have tried to get her to come to Crown King, offering to get her a place as seamstress, cook or anything she wants to do—and she can do anything about a house—but she won't come. She says it's her duty to stay with her father. That's her Papago nature. Show me the well-educated, almost cultured, white girl who would bury herself in the Bradshaws just for the sake of her father."

Osifa came out to meet them as they rode up to the cabin. Alice dismounted and Billy introduced them. Osifa offered her hand without a smile.

"I'm glad to meet you," she said slowly.

"And I'm glad to meet you," returned Alice heartily. "Billy has told me so much about you. It's all so romantic, your living away out here like this. I don't entirely agree with Billy about it."

"Mr. Rudero has been very kind."

Billy, who was tying the saddle horses to a stunted mesquite, noticed that "Mr. Rudero." Why was she so formal? He was "Billy" to Alice Shattuck and every one else in the Bradshaws. Osifa had called him Billy from the very first.

The girl's constraint did not wear off during their call. Alice chattered on about the "romantic West"—for she was still a "tenderfoot"—about schools and a hundred other things. Osifa replied only in monosyllables, while Billy said nothing at all and wondered what was the matter. Osifa did not like the pretty, dark-haired little school teacher; that much was plain, but he couldn't tell why.

Finally Alice suggested that it was time for them to go. He agreed with relief, and they went outside to the horses.

"Good-by; come back again," said Osifa as they rode away.

"We will, just as soon as I can find the time," replied Alice. Billy merely waved his hand.

"What on earth was the matter with the girl?" ejaculated the ranger as soon as they were out of earshot.

"Are you as blind as all that, Billy Rudero?" demanded Alice. "You men are the limit, and you're the worst blunderer I ever saw. Why did you take ME to see that girl?"

"Why, I thought you'd be interested in her. She's a remarkable character, I think, and I supposed you'd be interested as a teacher, if in no other way."

"Yes, she's a remarkable character, and in studying her you've caused the poor girl to fall in love with you—fall in love as white girls do. That's the reason she doesn't like me—she's jealous. I'll never go back, [illegible] you had better be careful how you study such [illegible]ters."

"Osifa in love with me! Why—why—Alice, [illegible] crazy. I never thought of such a thing."

"No, but it's true just the same. Any one who [illegible] blind, deaf and dumb can see that."

He could not deny that it was true. The more [illegible] thought about it the more firmly convinced he [illegible] that Alice was right and that he had been in some [illegible] to blame.

"I felt sorry for her, and I only wanted to be [illegible] the girl," he explained miserably. "Why, I even [illegible] her two or three little gifts, such as a sewing [illegible] once, and some handkerchiefs another time."

"And she thought you were making love to her [illegible] time. I know you didn't intend it that way, Billy, [illegible] you've been very foolish."

Billy reached over and seized her hand. "I [illegible] make love to any girl but you, Alice," he said [illegible]estly.

And thus they rode until the mountain trail [illegible] too narrow for two horses.

The ranger's real trouble with Pinole began [illegible] after that. About a year before, Billy had bought [illegible] or sixty head of cattle which ranged on Castle [illegible] all within three or four miles of Pinole's place [illegible] looked after them while attending to his duties [illegible]est guard.

Along in the fall the stock suddenly began [illegible] appear. First Billy missed two cows and two [illegible] and after that his cattle dropped out of sight by [illegible] threes and fours. He suspected Pinole from the [illegible] and spent long days trying to catch the old Pap[illegible] the act, but he could not secure any direct evi[illegible] connect Pinole with the rustling.

After he took Alice Shattuck to see Osifa it [illegible] month before Billy again saw Pinole's daughter. [illegible] had decided that the wisest plan was to stay away [illegible] her, but one day he had to hunt up Pinole to [illegible] to chase his goats off the reserve, and he went [illegible] cabin. No one seemed to be at home. He knocked [illegible] the door. Osifa answered his knock, dusting flour [illegible] her hands.

"Good morning," said Billy pleasantly. "[illegible] your father today, Osifa?"

"He has been away three days," she answer[illegible] don't know where he is."

She was looking past him at the rocky side of [illegible]tain across the creek, dumb suffering in her eyes.

"Osifa," Billy said impulsively, "I—I'm sorry."

"For what?"

"Oh, because—well——"

He suddenly turned, leaped to his saddle and [illegible] away, cursing himself for a fool.

Later her words recurred to him. Pinole ha[illegible] gone three days. Where had he gone, and why? [illegible] conviction that Pinole was responsible for the [illegible]pearance of his cattle became stronger than [illegible] turned and rode eastward, "cutting for tracks."

Billy rode at least ten miles east that day, [illegible] as much as possible on the less rocky ground [illegible] tracks could be most easily seen. It was not [illegible] had turned back that he found what he sought. [illegible] was a horse track, following upon the tracks [illegible] cattle. The tracks led right down to the bed [illegible] Canyon Creek, into which Castle Creek emp[illegible] looked to be about three days old. The horse ha[illegible] without shoes, making Billy absolutely certain [illegible] rider had been Pinole, for no one else rode [illegible] horses in the Bradshaws. Pinole rode a horse [illegible] its feet became so worn and tender on the rocks [illegible] could not travel, and then caught up another.

There was no longer any doubt in Billy's mind [illegible] Pinole was driving off his cattle and selling [illegible] New River, where the stockmen were reputed [illegible] none too particular where a cow came from [illegible] her brand could be easily worked over. To prove [illegible] the Papago was guilty, however, was next to [illegible]sible. Billy might have followed the tracks, but [illegible] were old and he would certainly lose them down [illegible] country where there were many cattle. Doubtless [illegible] led to some corral where the brands and earmarks [illegible] been changed, and he would never recognize [illegible] cattle among the vast herds on New River.

There was nothing else that Billy could do, [illegible] turned to Crown King. But the next day he wa[illegible] on Castle Creek, keeping a sharp eye out for Pinole.

Perhaps his continued success had made Pino[illegible] less; for Billy ran on to him less than half a mile [illegible] the cabin, driving four yearlings down the c[illegible] the left hip of each was Billy's LT brand.

Billy saw Pinole coming, and hid behind a tr[illegible] the Indian drove the cattle past the ranger [illegible] from concealment, revolver in hand.

"All up, Pinole," he said curtly. "I've caught [illegible] with the goods on this time."

The Indian's hands flew to the left side of his [illegible] where the stock of a rifle projected from a worn [illegible] scabbard. Billy cocked his Colt's.

"No chance," he said evenly. "Put up your ha[illegible]" Pinole obeyed sullenly.

"I've had enough trouble with you, Pinole," [illegible] went on. "You have refused to keep your goats [illegible] reserve, and have stolen almost half my cattle. [illegible] have to go to Prescott this time, and no mistake."

The Indian merely grunted, but Billy knew [illegible] understood.

Feeling the reins loose, the Papago's pony be[illegible] move off.

"Get down and tie to that tree, but don't touch [illegible] gun or you're a dead one," directed Billy. Again [illegible] obeyed, and the ranger ordered him to stand of[illegible] side. He then rode up and took the Winchester [illegible] the scabbard.

They heard a rattle of stones down the creek, [illegible] moment later Osifa, breathless, her hair stream[illegible] her general aspect one of terror, came into view.

Bones the Terrible.

HE IS CONQUERED AT LAST BY THE TEARS OF THE ENEMY.

By Neeta Marquis.

THERE were two clouds which hung with persistent gloom above the sunshine of Pinky's small life. One was an exaggerated distress over the physical figurement of "shingled" hair, the other a most real d active terror of the boy next door.

Pinkey was no coward, but this odious neighbor, the start Bones, although thin was so tall and muscular mpared with her that she held him in the unwilling spect which weakness must ever accord to strength wever hateful. On rare occasions he was splendidly different to her presence in the world, but rampant he s a veritable Caliban, impervious to the appeal of the man with its droppings of warm tears. For he de- sed a girl as he did a worm, going out of his way to nt the one and to step on the other. And Pinky's l hated itself for her cringing fear of him.

She was reflecting moodily upon all that made for her happiness one day while trying to find diversion in usually absorbing pastime of dressing up. She had ttoned herself into an antiquated black spangled vel- basque with glass buttons—her most impressive and atrical article of raiment—over a diaphanous skirt of k flowered organdy. The skirt flared out into a eading train in the back, being rolled up at the waist in front in such a way as to add considerably to ky's bulk and to make the basque button quite gly about the middle. As she looked in the long rror, she felt that if she was not exactly the glass of sent fashion she was at least of a pleasing mold of m, and would on the whole have been reasonably isfied with her reflection if she had not looked so ch like a boy on top.

"Who ever heard of a duchess with stubby hair!" she offed disdainfully, and went back to the old trunk to e if she could unearth some sort of headgear to hide e blemish.

It was the disappointment of Pinky's life that she had t story-book yellow hair. It was the humiliation of r soul that such hair as she had was kept cut close to r head, straight, uncompromising, ugly. She thought tinously that it was bad enough to be so freckled of e that the unspeakable Bones had been inspired to l her "Turkey Egg," or so spare of limb as to warrant excrutiating title of "Spider Legs," but in addition those trials to have no floating tresses to braid beau- lly and loop around her head, or even short hair ugh to tie into a topknot, was too cruel a dispensa- of "sensible" Aunt Lucy.

Aunt Lucy kept it so very short on the ancient theory such a course would produce an ultimately heavier th, unmindful of the well-established fact that thick and thin hair, like corpulency and leanness, go by rdination.

lving deep just now into a mass of discarded finery e garret trunk, Pinky's fingers came into contact a paper bag which she drew to the surface. The was crumpled and yellow, but within it, mirabil , was a braid of hair, a switch, the existence of ch Pinky had never dreamed of in her wildest flights. be sure, it was a dark-brown switch, while Pinky's , to speak quite delicately, bordered on the Titian es. But it was undeniable hair.

With fingers that fairly quivered with eagerness, she ssed its lack-luster waves, the joy of deliverance ing through her being. Hair! Lovely, long and y! A fairy could not have satisfied her wish more pletely.

e problem was, how to attach it. There wasn't the t of a thing to pin it to, so she braided it as thly as she could, tied the two ends together with e, and fitted her small round head into the circle made, pulling the braid well over the front in a ion which gave her much the appearance of a china that had donned a doughnut. She was then at in- e pains to anchor at the place of joining, just above hape of her slender little neck, an immense black n bow borrowed from Cousin Anna's bureau er. When her task was done she drew a luxurious th. A crown of glory at last! And the black bow the finishing touch of perkiness and coquetry.

And yet perhaps more absurd on the whole than the grown-up devo- f the "hobble" and the "rat."

ither god nor man, however, happened by. What y there was no one at home but grandma. Even happened to be having the afternoon out.

er a dozen or more turns across the yard, she de- ed to go in and call on grandma. It was about for her nap to be finished, anyway, and perhaps y could obtain permission to step across the street few minutes to pay a little visit to Minnie Edt then an observer appeared, but oh, alack, infi- y worse than either god or man. It was even the Terrible, whose daily creed demanded that his baleful utmost in the way of tormenting little ted porcupines such as his small neighbor.

es was a fair specimen of the genus boy. He t be teased and terrorized merely because he d to. As a matter of fact, he was unconsciously lifying the traditions of a cave-dwelling ancestry s diluted form of sex tyranny. He now bestrode th dividing fence insolent as Goliath, more ter- than an army with banners.

, Turkey Egg! Aw, haw haw!" he jeered in a delirium of diabolical glee. "Get onto the style! Who-ee, Brick Top! Come on, fellers, take a look! Turkey Egg's hatched out!"

The maddening mortification of that moment! Pinky stood as if rooted to the patch of shade beneath the cypress tree, an infant-sized image of outraged dignity. Her face was a color study of scarlet humiliation and speckled, impotent wrath. That he, this trampler in the dust of manly chivalry, should make her a figure for not only the time of scorn to point his slow, unmoving finger at, but for the wiggling, mocking fingers of the juvenile neighborhood as well! It was monstrous. All the rancor engendered by past insults welled up in Pinky's bursting little heart to add its bitterness to the moment's shame. She could have rended her enemy corduroy limb from limb had her strength been commensurate with the rage which tore her bosom.

With the swift instinct of the hunted, however, she realized that wordless scorn would serve her better than open-mouthed denunciation. So she turned magnificently toward the house, inwardly explaining to her pride that she had just decided to go in, anyway, and her small cropped head was carried, in spite of its unusual weight of capillary adornment, with a manner that would have done credit to a "truly" duchess.

It was a masterly retreat. But the dastard Bones was not visibly impressed. His sodden soul was dead to grandeur of spirit in a girl. Even a man, aside from that august person called the cop, must be great indeed to inspire awe in this small boy. To follow up his gibes he dropped down on Pinky's side of the fence and started toward her, while a row of grinning imp faces began to break the skyline along the fence top.

"Gimme a lock o' yer hair, Turk? I want it to poi- the rats in the barn!"

He thrust his hand deep into his corduroys and drew forth a murderous "toad stabber" the nicked blade of which testified to long and faithful service, and with a joyous whoop advanced in his victim's direction. "Jes one little lock, Turkey!"

It was too much. Thus far across the lawn Pinky had succeeded in holding her terror with a tight rein and had progressed with studied and superb calmness, but now the primal instinct for flight broke loose. In a sudden wild panic she cast aside every weight, abandoning the feather fan and the weak-ribbed parasol to whatever fate might overtake them. She clutched desperately at her unaccustomed flounces, and ran as she had never run in her maddest game of tag. She covered the lawn, she successfully dodged the palm tree and had just gained the cement walk, when, blind with rage and tears, she tripped on her treacherous skirt and went flat on her persecuted little freckled nose.

It was the overflow of her cup of gall. It was the cruelest thing in the wide world. In another instant HE would be upon her, and since all boys in knee trousers were more wild Indian than plain human being, he would certainly scalp her. Oh, her precious, short lived joy in the possession of hair!

The horrid thought had power to nerve her to further effort. Pinky would never be one to die and make no sign. With the desperate heroism of one who faces not only death but torture, she strove to get up and fight, but encountered once more the deadly difficulty of clinging draperies. How gladly would she be a little girl again in point of dress! And of what earthly consequence would it seem now that her legs were skinny, if they were only in a position to work freely? She was crying aloud in racking sobs by this time. If only grandma were not so deaf! It was hard that one should have even to plead for help through an ear trumpet.

Her struggles brought her to her knees, and she cast a fearful glance over her shoulder. There he was, sickeningly near. Oh, why wouldn't her feet get untangled? There—he had grabbed her! With one terrible leap her heart seemed to retire from active service. She could do nothing now but wait in a dull apathy for his next move. Why didn't he hurt her? What was this warm stuff running down over her mouth? She put up one hand, then gave a shuddering gasp. Bones had her by her arm, her thin little arm like a brittle pipestem—it would break—she knew it would——!

"There, I'll help you up, Pinky," he was saying, trying at the same time to get her to her feet. "I didn't go to scare you so."

"Get away from me! Don't you dare——! You're a nawful, horrible, me-e-ean——"

It ended in frantic sobs and struggles. Then she caught sight of the blood on her hand. The lace glove was quite saturated with it.

Pinky's frightened eyes turned piteously toward her tormentor, who was now standing by in awkward, shamefaced concern. It was a mute appeal for mercy and succor such as her stubborn little lips would never have made.

"Here, take my hank'chef. Yer nose's bleedin'."

Bones was not a street gamin. His speech was merely modeled after the unchanging primary forms of boy language. He looked back and waved an autocratic hand at the row of grins still adorning the fence top, and one by one they silently dropped from view. He evidently commanded subservience in more quarters than one.

Then Pinky found herself being led to the steps of the side veranda and seated thereupon. Shaking with sobs and nervousnes, she repeatedly stumbled on her trailing skirt, but each time her companion caught her and drew the voluminous folds out of the way. Oh, how she wanted her valiant Aunt Lucy now!

But this strange and terrifying Bones was developing unheard-of gentleness. He took the vari-colored square of cloth by courtesy called a handkerchief, wetted it at the hydrant and helped her to wash away the marks of her sanguinary encounter with the pavement. He brushed the dust from her black velvet elbows with clumsy kindness and sat by her on the steps watching her with remorseful, albeit furtive, solicitude as her choking sobs grew less violent and her heaving little body quieted.

"There, I guess it's all right now," he said at last in a chastened voice. "Feel better? I didn't go to do it. I—I'm sorry I called you Turkey Egg.

He got it out by jerks accompanied by uncomfortable redness of face. Pinky, removing the last tear with the back of her gloved hand, turned and looked at him long and curiously. The unexpected was happening with spectacular rapidity, but Pinky's was a conservative soul that had its doubts concerning sudden conversion. She seemed to regain her normal poise without thought or effort.

"Then what made you do it?"

She was cool and merciless at once, as befits one who finds her foot, however unpreparedly, on the neck of the tyrant.

Bones outlined elaborate geometrical designs with the toe of his brutal shoe. "Aw, I dunno. Jes fer fun."

He felt cheap, and he looked it. The lion must ever appear a bit foolish in trying to square himself with the lamb.

"Hm! It wasn't much fun for me," Pinky sniffed, but she stopped short with the words, for the sniff started her nose to bleeding afresh.

"Here's the hank'chef. You better keep it and go on in the house and change yer duds." The boy's voice became masterful once more with the familiar giving of orders. He was on his own ground here. "You've got yer aunt's skirt all bloody."

Pinky looked down, to see the flowered organdy giddily variegated with splotches of red. It recalled the rest of her costume, and she put her hands to her head. Where was her hair?

Where, indeed! It was gone. No wonder the deceiver had been so ready with his assistance. Oh, perfidy, thy name is man! Fully convinced that her first suspicions had been only too fatally correct, Pinky began again to pour forth tears of the largest and briniest sort.

"You've scalped me!" she wailed. "You've got it in your pocket, and you've got to give it back!"

"Aw, I have not!" growled Bones, stung by her doubts. It is a bitter thing for the majestic leonine applogy to be received with frankly distrustful bleatings. "If you mean that old bunch o' hair, it's out on the walk where you fell down. Wait, I'll get it."

He came back holding it gingerly between thumb and finger, masculine repugnance eloquent in every line. Pinky sprang forward and hugged it ecstatically to her flat little chest, a seraphic smile lighting her face and kindling it in spite of the tears and blood streaks to a genuine sort of promissory prettiness.

"Oh, thank you!" she gulped emotionally, and, blissfully disregardful of the proprieties, began to readjust it.

"'R welcome," the hastily-reconstructed Scourge of the Skirted grunted in reply with a politeness which he could not have explained to himself, and which seemed to be internally painful. How could he know it was the hand of a cavalier progenitor on the throat of the elder cave man in him? "I gotta go now."

He moved toward the fence with an exaggerated and self-conscious slouch and proceeded to fling himself loose-jointedly across it. Pinky watched him, one hand holding the wadded handkerchief to her abused nose, the other caressing the braid which circled her head and dipped rakishly over one eye.

The contact of her fingers with that crown of glory gentled her mood toward all mankind, so much so that even Bones began to change shape in her speculative gaze.

"I guess he didn't really go to be so mean," she began to argue to herself in soft contradiction to earlier conviction, "but boys just can't help it. Prob'ly I'd be mean myself if I was made of scissors an' snails an' puppy-dogs' tails."

With the tolerance which characterizes the noblest of her great sisterhood, Pinky was striving to make the best of man as she found him, and after the long practice of her kind condone and forgive where she could neither alter nor understand.

With imperial ease Bones balanced for an instant on the edge of the fence, then abruptly disappeared earthward.

With that disappearance Pinky knew, with an infallible discernment above explanation, that the reign of terror had come to an end—that Bones, although not metamorphosed into an angel of mercy for good, could never again be quite the monster that he had been, toward her at least. And while she recognized that the wonder had been performed in a mysterious way, after the manner of all great wonders, there had come dimly to her little woman's soul a first glimmering apprehension of the useful fact that where the spirit of chivalry is once awakened in a masculine consciousness there is forevermore an irresistible power in feminine tears.

"Say!" she called suddenly, conciliatory sweetness not unmingled with a flattering note of admiration softening her shrill little voice. "Good-by!"

There was no audible response from the lordly Bones. Yet Pinky was satisfied. She caught him looking back at her through a crack in the fence, and knew that he knew he was forgiven.

O far-sighted little daughter of the race, doing by instinct what your foremothers learned through labors of body and of soul, may you ever be thus divinely wise to make friends with the enemy when he gives you the chance!

SNOW BURDEN.

They bear the burden of the snow—
They bear it with a patient grace,
The drooping trees! Yet well they know
A melting hour comes on apace.

Ah, if but Time, that crowns me white,
An equal clemency would show,
Then I, some soft, mild day or night,
Would drop the burden of the snow!

A Birthday Hint.

"HUMAN nature is a queer mixture. The average man, next to good fortune for himself, is best pleased to see ill fortune befall his friends."

The speaker, George Barr McCutcheon, was responding to a toast on "Man" at the Athletic Club in Chicago. He resumed:

"Once, bicycling in Georgia, I heard a terrible hullaboloo in a cabin. Yells and shrieks, sobs and groans—it was evident that a half-dozen pickaninnies were getting properly whaled. I stopped, and eight pickaninnies came ruefully from the cabin, rubbing their eyes with one hand and rubbing tenderer parts of their small persons with the othed.

"Then out bounded a little chap with loud, gleeful laughter, and, while his brothers and sisters wept, he threw handsprings, cartwheels and somersaults all over the garden.

"The father of the brood, appearing later, made things clear to me. —

"'Yas, sah,' he said, 'hit wuz Rastus' birfday today, sah, an' Ah hadn't no cash ter buy him nuffin, an' hit made me so mad ter see his lil bruddern an' sistern all jes' as gay as he wuz dat I jes' natcherly guv 'em all a good trouncin' while Rastus looked on. Yo'. see how pleased he is, sah—jes' as pleased as if yo'd guv him fi' cents ter celebrate de day, sah!'"

Too Unpleasant.

DR. WILLIAM J. GIES of the College of Physicians and Surgeons was discussing, at a dinner in New York, his recent dictum that cannibalism is the ideal diet, for the reason that the best food is the one which most nearly approaches the bodily composition of the eater.

"Cannibalism is the ideal regimen," said Dr. Gies, smiling, "and the books of Stanley, Jameson, Barttelot and other explorers will bear me out. The cannibals of the Congo are wonderfully fine fellows physically.

"But cannibalism is, of course, as unpleasant and as impossible as the economy suggested by the Southern housewife.

"'Here,' said her husband to her, 'if you're going in to the village, buy me 5 cents' worth of snuff.'

"But the woman shook her head.

"'No,' she said, 'times are too hard for snufftaking. In future, John, you must just tickle your nose with a straw.'"

* * *

Resourceful.

"EVERY man can find work if he uses his brains," said Andrew Carnegie, in an after-dinner address in New York. "If there are no more openings in oil and sugar, rubber should be turned to, and if the automobile trade grows crowded, then there will probably be openings in the aeroplane line.

"We should all be like the piano tuner I once met out West.

"'Why,' I asid to him—for we were in a wild, unsettled country—'surely piano tuning can't be very lucrative here. I shouldn't imagine that pianos were very plentiful in this region.

"'No, sir, they're not,' said the piano tuner, 'but I make a pretty fair income by tightening up barbed-wire fences.'"

Justices and Judges.

A NEW YORK judge, it will be remembered, recently declared unconstitutional the new law that an automobilist, having run over a pedestrian, must stop and leave his name. The judge said that the autmobilist had a perfect right to run away and leave his mangled victim to bleed to death alone for the reason that, in criminal cases, no man is obliged to bear witness against himself.

James Halden Wilkes, president of the Street Defence Society of Atlanta, discussed this legal decision at the society's last meeting.

"And that," he cried hotly, "is called justice! Well, indeed, was a search after justice once defined as a blind man looking in a dark room for a black hat that isn't there."

* * *

One-Candle Power.

WASHINGTON is smiling discreetly over a witticism of Miss Helen Taft, who inherits her wit from her mother.

Miss Taft, at a ball, was accosted by a matron, who gushed:

"So you have just been dancing with Baron Blank! Isn't he brilliant?"

"Is he? I don't know," Miss Taft hesitated.

"Why, of course he is! He is the most brilliant light in the legations."

"Well," said Miss Taft, with a smile, "his light flickered while he was with me, and I rather set him down as a tallow diplomat."

Great Expectations.

PETER L. HARRIS, the well-known grain expert of Lincoln, was condemning the reciprocity idea.

"The United States promoters of Canadian reciprocity expect too much of it," he said. "They expect to gain practically everything and to give practically nothing. Well, they'll get left—like Hi Billings.

"Hi went to a horse sale one day and bought a horse for $18. When he got the horse home, he offered it a bucket of water, but it wouldn't drink. After that he gave it a feed of corn, but it wouldn't touch that, either.

"'By gosh!' he said, 'you're the very horse for me if you'll only work!'"

* * *

City Wine Cellars.

"THE best wine, old or young," said a wine tester, "is that which is kept absolutely quiet.

"Immobility permits whatever particles there are in new wine to settle to the bottom of the cask. The sediment thus formed being drawn off, the wine's bouquet is improved and it is less likely to spoil.

"Bottled, the wine continues to deposit a sediment which, if the bottles are kept perfectly still, adheres in a thick coating to the bottom of the bottles. If the bottles are moved, or there is any vibration in the cellar where they are kept, these injurious particles refuse to gather in one solid mass, and, scattered through the wine, spoil its flavor.

"It is impossible to age wine in modern cities. Trolley cars, underground railways, railroads, heavy automobiles in the streets, make vibrations that disturb and ruin it."

The wine tester smiled.

"Don't be surprised," he said, "if the Pontet Canet or Chateau Yquem for which you pay an enormous price turns out a failure. It may be as old as its thick-covering of cobwebs and dust proclaim it to be, it may even be as old as the wine merchant claims, but if it has been kept in a cellar where there is the slightest vibration you have wasted your money, and might much better have bought a young California wine."

* * *

Perhaps.

THE late David Graham Phillips had, like many bachelors, a caustic wit toward matrimony.

Mr. Phillips, at a well-rememebred reunion of Princeton's class of '87 at the Princeton Club, said of marriage:

"The Persians have a proverb that every young man should consider well before proposing. It runs:

"'He that ventureth on matrimony is like unto one who thrusteth his hand into a sack containing many thousands of serpents and one eel. Yet, if the Prophet so will it, he may draw forth the eel.'"

* * *

Good Eating.

REGINALD DE KOVEN, at his beautiful daughter's wedding breakfast in New York, parised the appetite of musicians.

"Musicians, being fine, healthy fellows," he said, "always have good appetites. You know, perhaps, what Rossini once declared?

"'If I am to dine on roast turkey,' said Rossini, 'there should be only two at table—myself and the turkey. If, however, it is a question of grilled chicken, then the company should number three—myself and two chickens.'"

* * *

The Substance is Sound.

THE late Paul Morton had an ineradicable faith in the great mass, or middle class, of the American people.

"We may have corrupt multimillionaires," he once said at a banquet at the Metropolitan Club, "and we may have anarchistic and nihilistic slums; but society, after all, is like a pie—yes, like a pie. There is an upper crust and a lower crust, but the real substance lies between."

* * *

Well Defined.

CHARLES DANA GIBSON, an authority on feminine beauty, discussed, at a dinner in New York, the beauty of the Englishwoman.

"I admire," he said, "the Englishwoman's type. Most men, however, don't. She is so lean, you know, with a clean, greyhound leanness. She is like a tall boy in football training.

"A Japanese diplomat once defined the Englishwoman neatly at a ball in Cavendish Square.

"'Comparing the Englishwoman with others,' he said, 'I find out the former's meat looks much harder.'"

* * *

An Appropriate Story.

"LINCOLN'S very best story," said a Washington correspondent, concerned the office seekers and the distribution of patronage that continually bothered him at the White House during the war.

"One day at the height of the war, Lincoln paused in the midst of a Cabinet wrangle over certain political jobs and said:

"'Gentlemen, do you know what we are like? We are like the man who was busy letting cheap rooms at the back of his house while the front was on fire?'"

* * *

She Got Them.

AT a lodge in Philadelphia a group of very old men, some with empty sleeves and some with empty trouser legs, were telling stories about Lincoln.

"My wife collected autographs," said one. "She once wrote to Lincoln for a sentiment and his autograph, and she got in reply a note that ran:

"'Dear Madam: When you ask from a stranger that which is of interest only to yourself, always enclose a stamp. There's your sentiment, and here's your autograph.—A. Lincoln.'"

* * *

Mrs. Taft Epigrammatic.

MRS. TAFT'S epigrams are the joy of Washington society. Her latest epigram was on the subject of beauty.

"She is beautiful, but not at all accomplished," a lady told Mrs. Taft of a western matron.

"My dear," Mrs. Taft answered, "there is no accomplishment more difficult than to be beautiful."

"SYLVA OF CALIFORNIA."

A GREAT WORK HAS JUST BEEN ISSUED AT BERKELEY.

By Ernest Braunton.

AWAY back in the dim ages, thousands of years ago, before our land suffered from the great glacial period, California began the making of enduring and unbroken botanical history. All that now remains of living plant life which successfully passed through the war of the elements in the remote past is our Big Trees (Sequoia gigantea.)

So soon as the sun's heat tempered the denuded land, nature began to add to these forest nuclei, and on such a grand scale that today we stand forth the envy and the admiration of the whole world. No other country of like extent may boast of the variety or grandeur common to our coniferous forests, our magnificent oaks, madrones, and other venerable trees of many kinds, both evergreen and deciduous, being scarcely less noted.

Both poet and prose writer have vied with each other in singing the praises of our sky-piercing forest giants and photographs of our Big Trees may be found in every country. Not even the finest arboreal veterans of the richest tropic forests can approach our sequoias in majestic grandeur. In one respect alone the trees of California have been slighted—a scientific record on a scale grand enough to match the subjects treated of, so far as puny man may measure up to the marvelous works of nature. At last we (and our trees) have come into our own.

There has just issued from the University Press, Berkeley, Cal., a monumental work entitled "The Sylva of California," the author being Dr. Willis L. Jepson of the Department of Botany, University of California. This great volume, weighing from five to ten pounds in a paper cover, is over a foot long and of nearly the same width, containing a total of nearly 500 pages of the finest paper; divided into 283 pages of text, 85 full-page illustrations, together with several large folding maps. Nearly all the illustrations are photo-engravings of the first water, and altogether they make in themselves a grand photo-record of California's trees. The work so far surpasses any other like effort on this Coast that the writer will not attempt further description. Those interested in our trees (as all should be) will doubtless be able to see this truly magnificent work in the public library, the central High School, and our various colleges. The price is unknown to the writer, but information may be obtained from the University Press at Berkeley and the writer sincerely hopes that all who are able will purchase a copy, for it must be published at a loss to the institution of many thousands of dollars.

Plants and Flowers in the Klondike.

THE "bitter, biting North" is not without its blaze of floral beauty in the short, meteoric flight of summer. In the Klondike country, along the Yukon River, magnificent blossoms break forth for a short week or two and are then swept away to return no more and only their counterparts are seen during the next short warm period of midsummer in this land of the midnight sun. In this department we shall aim to show garden and flower scenes from all lands from the Equator to the Arctic Circle and this week may be seen a view of caommercial nursery in the frozen north, near the city of Dawson in Yukon Territory.

California and Palestine

THE Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin entitled "Agricultural and Botanical Explorations in Palestine," by Aaron Aaronsohn, director of the Jewish Agricultural Experiment Station at Haifa, Palestine. Some very interesting comparisons are drawn between California and Palestine in climate, in topography, in vegetation, and many other conditions. We quote:

"Palestine is more like the State of California than any other in the Union in everything except size. It lies between longitude 34 degrees 30 minutes and 36 degrees 30 minutes east, and between latitude 30 degrees 30 minutes and 33 degrees 45 minutes north. It is practically a California reduced to about one-twentieth in size, but markedly similar in general topography, climate, veegtation, and agricultural and economic possibilities.

"Like California, Palestine is longest from north to south. Like California, too, it has both very high mountains, having an elevation of 9000 to 10,000 feet, and very deep depressions. The Dead Sea, 1200 feet below sea level, is the greatest depression known, and, like the Death Valley of California, it is situated in the southern extremity of the country.

"Passing from west to east, we have in Palestine the coast zone, extending along the Mediterranean, similar to the littoral region of the Pacific, and the zone of hills and plateaus of the mountains of Judea and Galilee, forming, so to speak, the backbone of the country and being similar to the foothill region of California. Farther east we have the valley of the Jordan, the diversified parts of which are similar in soil, climate, and agricultural possibilities to the San Joaquin, Imperial, and Death Valleys. . . . In Palestine, just as in California, we have a dry, warm season and a humid and more temperate one. The rainy season extends from October to May, and the dry season from May to October.

"Curiously enough, the list of the flora of the small territory of Palestine includes approximately the same number of species as that of California—about 3000. This is nearly twice as many as are known in Algeria, which has the same variations of soil and climate as Palestine but is about fifteen times as large.

"There are many other points of similarity between the vegetation of California and that of Palestine. In both sections evergreen shrubs predominate. The same forms of vegetation, often the same genera, are found on Mount Tamalpais, California, and on Mount Carmel, Palestine; the maqui formation of Palestine is to be compared to the chaparral and chamiso of California, and the forms of vegetation of the Lebanon and the Hermon mountains are much the same as those of the western slope of the Sierras.

"The introduction of Medicago (alfalfa), Melilotus (Sweet Clover), Trigonella, Astragalus (Loso weed), Trifolium (Clover), etc., into the Southwest, and their cultivation and selection, may be expected to contribute greatly to the improvement of the range. This analogy of the flora of Palestine with that of California justifies our expectation of the best results. The plants of Palestine are, so to speak, the homologues of those of California, and, a priori, their success seems assured."

John Burroughs, Poet.

NOW that John Burroughs, the great naturalist, is visiting Southern California, it well to call our reader's attention to the fact that in addition to spending much of his time with woods and fields and songsters, he sometimes sings himself. It is believed that his earliest effort was the poem "Waiting," which is herewith printed. It was written in 1862, when Mr. Burroughs was a mere lad, and for years the authorship was unknown. General interest was first awakened by its publication by Whittier in a volume mous and fugitive verses.

Serene I fold my hands and wait,
  Nor care for minds nor tide nor sea.
I rave no more 'gainst time nor fate,
  For lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste, I make delays,
  For what avails my eager pace!
I stand amid the eternal ways,
  And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
  The friends I seek are seeking me;
No wind can drive my bark astray,
  Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone?
  I wait with joys the coming years,
My heart shall reap what it has sown,
  And garner up the fruit of tears.

The waters know their own and draw
  The brook that springs in yonder
So flows the good with equal law,
  Unto the soul of pure delight.

The stars come nightly to the sky,
  The tidal waves unto the sea;
Nor time nor space nor deep nor high
  Can keep my own away from me.

MANY SCHOOL GARDENS.

VARIOUS METHODS EMPLOYED IN DIFFERENT CITIES.

By Ernest Braunton.

WHEN scanning the reports of various school gardens throughout the United States one is almost amused at the immense range of work performed under this designation of school gardening. Every city taking up the work has studied its own peculiar needs and followed that phase of the work believed to be most beneficial to the city, for all of it is of great value great value to the children.

The residents of Washington, D.C., bent their energies to arousing civic pride by making better school surroundings, grounds, etc. Back yards, as well as the front yards were cleaned up and planted through a special effort made by the teachers. Other cities, having a much larger foreign population than our national capital have turned their attention to carrying on the work largely outside the city, where large tracts, divided into individual plats, were available. This has been the programme with such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and St. Louis. The work in the several cities also differs materially in detail and furnishes interesting reading to all following up this work.

Last spring 66,000 penny packages of seed were sold to the children of Washington for home planting. A list of easily-grown, fall-blooming flowers, vines, and three kinds of vegetables was submitted to the children. Limitations were put upon their selection. Nasturtium seed only was thought desirable for the first and second grades. The third grade was encouraged to plant nasturtiums, radishes, and morning glories. Above this grade the full list was presented: Zinnias, marigolds, petunias, lettuce, beans, balloon vine, morning glory and purple flowering bean, together with the seeds sown by the first, second, and third grades. No child in any grade was allowed to spend more than 3 cents. Teachers gave lessons in the schoolroom on the manner of planting and the care of the garden in summer.

The students of Hartford, Ct., are given lessons in mixing soils, sowing seeds, potting and shifting plants, transplanting, making hotbeds, repairing and painting sash, mixing and applying fungicides and insecticides, and budding and grafting. The work begins in February indoors. In May all of the classes are assigned land for the study of the subject by actually doing the work. The plat of the first-year student is 10 by 30 feet; of the second, 10 by 40 feet; of the third, 10 by 60 feet, and of the fourth, 10 by 80 feet.

Philadelphia has seven gardens conducted for school children. These owe their existence to the efforts of the Vacant Lot Association, though they are not under its care. An offer was made by it to the Board of Education, to the Public Education Association, and to the Civic Club to secure and prepare suitable land for school gardens if these bodies would bear the expense of teaching. The Civic Club carries the responsibility of two—one 60 by 100 feet, containing fifty-four plats planted in vegetables; the other containing sixty-four plats planted in vegetables and flowers. The Board of Education controls the two largest gardens—one accommodating 250 children; the other 268 children—and $2500 was appropriated for the work. The children are divided into four classes, each attending three-quarters of an hour in the morning. They are provided with small rakes and spades, hand weeders, and watering pots. The gardens are well planned. From a central mound of flowers four wide paths divide the land into a corresponding number of section, each class cultivating a section. An individual plat is 4 by 12 feet, separated from its neighbor by a two-foot path. The planting is uniform, five kinds of vegetables being planted. The same rules are in operation as on the vacant lots—to cultivate well and to respect the rights of others. Neglect after a certain time causes forfeiture, as there is a large waiting list.

IDEAL PARKWAY PLANTING. CHESTER PLACE.

Proper Parkway Planting.

THERE is urgent need, everywhere, of concerted planting and care of parkways, for except this work is carried out on a co-operative basis it is never, as a whole, satisfactory. Each block, with the residents on each side of the street should organize "Block Beautiful" clubs so that a uniformity and thoroughness of work may be carried out, a standard quite impossible under individual effort alone.

AMERICA'S SWEET TOOTH.

TWICE AS MUCH SUGAR CONSUMED NOW AS THIRTY YEAAS AGO.

[New York Sun:] The people of the United States consume half their own weight in sugar every year. If we take the quantity of sugar produced in the United States and add to this the quantity brought from our own islands and the quantity imported from foreign countries and subtract therefrom the amount exported, we get a grand total of considerably more than 7,000,000,000 pounds consumed in the country.

By dividing the population into this grand total, says the Bakers Weekly, we get an average of 81½ pounds per capita, speaking in round terms, for 1910, and about a like quantity for 1909. Taking the total consumption and comparing it with the total population in the section known as continental United States, the average yearly consumption of sugar is found to be about 81½ pounds per capita.

In fact, the people of the United States are larger consumers of sugar per capita than those of any other country of the world except England, for which the latest figures show a consumption averaging 86 pounds per capita, against our own average of 81½ pounds per capita. The next largest per capita consumption is in Denmark, 77¾ pounds; followed by Switzerland, 64 pounds; Sweden, 54 pounds, and Germany and Holland each about 43½ pounds.

Not only is the United States the second largest consumer per capita, but the total amount consumed annually is much greater than that of any other country, aggregating, as above indicated, more than 7,000,000,000 pounds a year against about 4,000,000,000 pounds in England and about 3,000,000,000 pounds in Germany.

About one-half of the sugar consumed in the United States is brought from foreign countries, about one-fourth from our own islands and the remaining one-fourth produced in this country. The total production of sugar in the United States now amounts to one and three-quarter billion pounds a year, of which more than a billion pounds is beet sugar and about three-quarters of a billion cane sugar.

It is only recently that the production of beet sugar in the United States has come to exceed that of cane sugar. In 1900 domestic production of cane sugar was twice as great as that of beet sugar, and twenty years ago was more than sixty times as great, but the growth of beet-sugar production has been very rapid in recent years, and in 1907 for the first time exceeded in quantity that produced from cane and has so continued since that time.

The sugar habit is evidently a growing one with the people of the United States and probably with those of other countries, since the total world production of sugar, including all countries for which statistics are available, has increased 50 per cent. in the last ten years and about double in fifteen years. In our own case the consumption has shown a rapid growth; the per capita consumption having been in 1880 forty pounds, in 1890 fifty-one pounds, in 1900 fifty-nine pounds, and in 1910 approximately eighty-one and a half pounds.

A HAMMER IS NOT A MACHINE.

A hammer is not a machine under a ruling by the appellate term of the Supreme Court, which reversed yesterday a judgment for $1000 obtained against Bart Dunn, the contractor and Tammany leader, by one of his employees. The plaintiff was holding a chisel when the head of a hammer with which a fellow-employee was pounding the chisel flew off and broke the plaintiff's arm. The plaintiff got judgment in the City Court under the statute relating to an employer's liability for the use of defective machinery.—[New York Sun.

CUNNING OF THE FOX.

When foxes find themselves beaten they often resort to peculiar means to endeavor to bewilder their pursuers. I do not for one moment wish to rob the species of one bit of their traditional cunning, but it always seems to me that legend has surrounded them with a greater brain power and thoughtfulness than they really possess.

It is usual to place to the credit of the fox every accident which occurs in a run which turns out in his favor, whereas in seven cases out of ten it has no connection whatever with the scheming of the hunted animal. The other day a Goathland fox, after a sharp burst, found himself too close to hounds to be safe, so he scrambled onto the roof of a dwelling-house in Sleights village. The probability is that had hounds been alone they would have thrown their heads up and have been beaten, for they rarely look for the unexpected.

The foxhound essentially relies upon his nose. They may course the fox for the last few hundred yards of a hunt when they run from scent to view, but this is unorthodox and belongs to greyhounds. The same applies to the use of their brains. There are hounds which think, but they are the exception, so that when they have overrun or lost the line and have cast themselves unsuccessfully they invariably give up and wait for the assistance of their huntsman.

This Goathland fox was seen on the housetops, and he knew it, for whatever powers the species may or may not have they undoubtedly do know by some mysterious means when they are discovered during a run. He therefore continued his journey, jumping from roof to roof, till misjudging the distance, he fell some twenty feet into the roadway below. Despite this, the fox ran on for half a mile or so before hounds ran into him.[Court Journal.

PAINT ON ARMORED SHIPS.

The latest thing in shipbuilding is to apply no paint at all—not until they have been at sea for some months at any rate. The constant repainting of armored ships and ships with steel hulls involves an enormous cost, and since it has been found that when a vessel is allowed to go unpainted for several months the steel scales, which usually come loose under the paint and afford an opportunity for rust to attack the surface, wear off, the British government is experimenting with unpainted craft.

The training ship Exmouth was the first one tried. It was given two months at sea with no paint, and then given four coats in dry dock. At the end of five years there was scarcely a trace of wear except at the water line, and the bottom was in perfect condition. The idea was first suggested by A. C. Holzapfel, who had made a study of the Exmouth, and now the steel ships are all put out to saok before being painted.—[Chicago Tribune.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE LA BRESSE BREED.

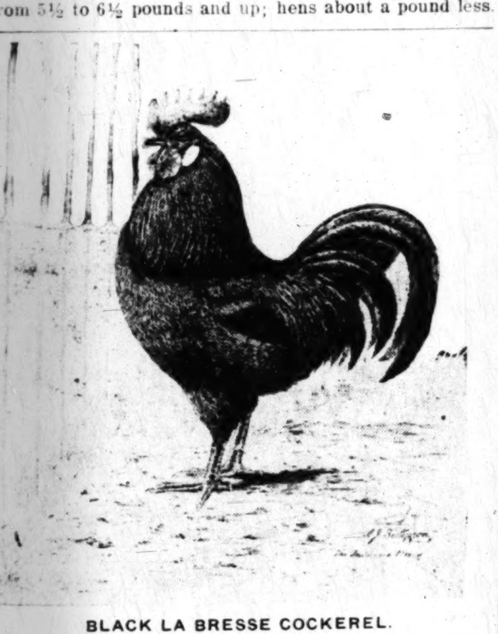
GAINING POPULARITY IN ENGLAND THOUGH LITTLE KNOWN HERE.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

AMONG the less popular of the French breeds of poultry the La Bresse seems to be gaining a foothold in England, though as yet occupying a minor position in America. The breed takes its name from the district of Bresse, in the French province of Burgundy, where it is numerically strong and quite popular. Its history is more or less obscure, but judging from its type there is undoubtedly Dorking and Leghorn blood in its makeup, for in some respects it suggests a table breed, and in others an egg type. A close scrutiny of our illustration in a measure carries out this opinion. It is grown quite extensively for carcass in France, while in England it also possesses some reputation as an egg breed. Having been bred for years on its native heath, it "comes" reasonably true to type and color markings, and hence has been considered a pure breed for some years.

There are four varieties the Blacks, the Whites, the Grays, and the Blues. Of these, the first mentioned is the most popular, with the Whites as a good second. The La Bresse in size are a trifle ahead of the Leghorns, and possibly a trifle under Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, possessing just enough blockiness to give them a graceful and substantial appearance. Cocks weigh from 5½ to 6½ pounds and up; hens about a pound less.



BLACK LA BRESSE COCKEREL.
(From Feathered World, London.)

They are said to be easy to rear, the young being hardy and active, hence good foragers. The adult birds require no more attention than Leghorns or Orpingtons. English breeders rate the hens as good layers, 150 eggs per bird being quite common.

Caught on the Wing

At the late Topeka (Kansas) show there was exhibited a monstrosity in the shape of a hen with two tails.

A splendid record: At the Tulsa (Okla.) Poultry Show the entries run up to 1500, representing fifty counties of that young State.

On poultry plants of any size it is a great convenience to have a workroom, where all appliances may be kept in clean and dry conditions, as well as a kit of tools.

Did you ever stop to think that poor hatches are often due to causes outside of the egg as well as within?

The Boston show benched 5470 entries. Of this number 3281 were chickens, 1980 pigeons, 37 rabbits, 71 cavies, 52 dressed poultry and eggs and 99 long words. An interesting and entertaining variety. The New York show had 5610.

The fancy has its place, but the most money is usually made by the fellow who goes heavy on utility, and treats the fancy as a side issue.

Feed more liberally of cracked and whole corn during the cold and rainy season; the birds will appreciate it.

The six chick commandments might be put as follows: 1, keep them warm; 2, keep them dry; 3, keep them clean; 4, keep them busy; 5, keep them hungry; 6, keep them growing.

No Birds in the Breeding Pens.

That somewhat depends on our purpose as well as the breed and variety we are handling. If we want fine breeding stock and show birds, the matings will not only have to be handled for color of plumage, but also for head and leg points and type of breed; if for commercial purposes, these points are not of so great importance, though not to be wholly overlooked. The number of males to females varies with different breeders, but in the main runs about as follows: With the Asiatics, Brahmas, Cochins, Langshans, etc., from six to ten; American class, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, R. I. Reds, etc., eight to twelve; Mediterraneans, Leghorns, Minorcas, etc., ten to fifteen. These figures apply to the general practice; when it comes to fancy points, it is often advisable to breed in pairs, thus keeping definite tab on the parentage of each chick. In the selection of breeding pens take the strongest males, those that are pugnacious, alert, full of ginger, and mate them to females of like character with good records as layers.

Several years ago the Maine Experiment Station carried on a series of experiments to learn the most profitable number of birds to a pen with Brahmas and Plymouth Rocks, conditions being alike in both cases. The numbers were respectively fifteen, twenty, twenty-five and thirty hens to the pen. The one with fifteen gave the largest profit per hen, but the pen of twenty gave the largest profit per pen. This would seem to prove that overcrowding is undesirable. Where birds are given intensive culture and their requirements intelligently looked after, they will often produce more hen fruit, or at least quite as much, as when given free range.

The New Standard.

In compliance with the provision in its constitution calling for a revision and republication of the American Standard of Perfection every five years, the American Poultry Association has just published the revised edition for 1910—a handsome volume of 332 pages finely illustrated with ideal representations of all standard breeds and varieties, and four colored plates defining the correct shades of color in feathers in certain breeds. On the whole, it is an admirable effort—the best standard the industry has ever enjoyed.

The present edition is the result of much careful and painstaking labor. The illustrations picturing ideal birds were all first submitted to expert breeders of each variety, which has resulted in the establishing of a type based on long years of observation in the breeding yards; the descriptive text has been much strengthened and amplified, rendering it less ambiguous and more specific in its information; a number of new varieties are represented that have really won their spurs, and the conditions laid down for judging and conducting exhibitions are more explicit and stringent along lines calculated to foster and promote a healthy sportsmanship in the showroom. No one at all interested in pure-blooded fowl, either as an amateur or professional, can afford to be without a copy of this valuable book.

Laying Hens and Egg Production.

In poultry culture, as in banking, merchandising and manufacturing, the one and ultimate aim is profit. Ordinarily profits are the difference between cost of production and the selling price. With a box of soap or a package of saleratus this is easily ascertained, but with live manufacturing adjuncts like the hen, it is not always easy. It all depends on what kind of business your hen is doing and how much. In both directions you can keep her. By giving her a congenial environment and sanitary quarters she will do a better kind of business than if in unsanitary quarters, and you keep her in a nervous and "skeery" condition. But upon top and beyond this you must so feed her that it will be her pleasure to shell out eggs. And since her fruit is the source of profit in the poultry business, you can well afford to study her needs and put the right kind of food into her boiler that shall bring about such a happy condition. What are the elements of hen-fruit production? Good stock, sanitary and comfortable quarters, exercise and proper feeding. You cannot extract blood from turnips, nor sunbeams from cucumbers; neither can you get a good crop of eggs from ill-fed and badly-managed hens. A fowl requires a certain quantity of feed containing protein, carbo-hydrates and ash to sustain life. A surplus over and above this goes to produce eggs or accumulate flesh.

As protein enters largely into their composition, it is necessary to supplement the grain feed which does not contain a sufficient proportion of protein with other foods such as blood, meat, bone, oil-cake meals and many others which contain a high percentage of protein. To all systems of feeding, and to all dry preparatory foods, it is well never to forget that they should always be supplemented with plenty of greenery—alfalfa, lettuce, cabbage, Swiss chard, etc. Let us again emphasize the importance of caring intelligently for the laying hens, the greatest money-getters and money-makers on the poultry farm. While proper feeding is possibly the most important one thing, there are also other elements that enter into the problem. The contented way the laying hen. Clean nests, quiet freedom from lice and mites, immunity from diseases, are all conditions that tend to induce duction. Housing has its influence also, but if bedroom is clean and free from draughts, ture does not trouble her overmuch. Styles of California are legion in numbers, but if warm tight, excepting an opening for ventilation, serve the purpose admirably.

"Don't shoot him," she panted. "I was on the hill bove the house and I saw it all. I was afraid he was ealing your cattle. Oh, what are you going to do?"

"I don't know," Billy replied honestly. "I intended take him to Prescott and place a charge of cattle stling against him."

"Oh, please don't do that! We'll move out of the untry. We'll do anything you say—I promise it."

"It would be better for you if he was in jail."

"Perhaps so, but I promised my mother—oh, you dn't know my mother! She was a good woman, and e loved him. The last time I saw her she made me omise that I would live with him and do all I could keep him from trouble. I've failed."

She said this, dry-eyed, without any apparent emotion her than the words expressed. She was still a stoical dian, though she spoke the speech of the whites. But r appeal to Billy was none the less powerful.

"I'm more sorry than I can say, for your sake," he re-ed slowly. "I wish I didn't have to say it, but he will ve to leave the country. There is nothing else I can . Won't you come to Crown King and let him go ne?

"I must keep my promise to my mother. We'll go in o or three days, as soon as we can gather the goats. I thank you. You have done a great deal for me. I —grateful."

Billy shoved his revolver into the holster, reached wnward and offered his hand. She gave him her d, which he held a moment.

"Good-by," he said. "Good-by."

"Good-by," was her only reply.

He gave her Pinole's rifle and rode rapidly away.

That night he told Alice about it.

"I think you did the wisest and most merciful thing, Billy," Alice said when he had finished the story. "One you should have gone long ago, if you don't love the rl."

"Love her?" Billy forgot Osifa in telling the little acher the story he had been telling her ever since her turn from the East.

The second day thereafter was Saturday, and Alice de with him to Castle Creek. They viewed the cabin a distance through Billy's glasses. The doors and ndows were closed, and the place was evidently deserted. Pinole and Osifa were gone.

Alice had never been on Black Canyon Creek, so they e in that direction. Shortly after noon the sky ouded over, and soon raindrops began to patter down. y had been caught in a late summer shower.

"Hurry!" exclaimed Billy. "I know where we can shelter."

They galloped up a little arroyo, hurriedly tied their es under a heavy mesquite, and clambered two or e hundred feet up the side of a rocky hill. Crawl- through a little hole, they found themselves in a cious cave, the extent of which Alice could only s. Billy set fire to a wood-rat's nest so that she d see the interior. The roof was covered with tiful white stalactites.

What a lovely place!" she exclaimed. "How lucky knew about it!"

There's quite a story connected with it. They say a Yuma brave once stole an Apache girl, and when people gave chase they hid in this cave. But the ches tracked them to the entrance and laid siege. or seven were killed on the side of the hill down e, mostly by rocks the Yuma rolled down on them, hey sat down to starve them out. When one of the ches became brave enough to make another attempt nter, there was no one to stop him. The lovers e lying dead by that rock over there."

Oh, Billy, what a terrible story!" She drew nearer im.

Yes, it is sad. Aren't you glad there are no savages side trying to take you away from me?" He drew down on a rock beside him.

Now it's time you gave me an answer," Billy de-ed, with as masterful an air as he could assume.

Oh, bother! I'll give you an answer next June."

June won't do; I want my answer now."

Billy Rudero, you're the silliest boy! Do you think let you keep your arm around me like this if I 't—" n hour later the sun had come out and they went n to their horses. Soon they came in sight of Black yon Creek, which, when they had crossed it at noon, been a little stream that scarcely wet the horses' cks. Now it was a seething, boiling torrent, fifty s wide.

t will go down as quickly as it has risen," said Billy. ht down there is a waterfall, and just below is an mous hole, with rocks in the bottom as big as a e. The Indians used to call it 'Whirling Water,' se the hole is full of whirlpools."

lf a mile on the other side of the creek they saw a bunch of white animals, several heavily-laden horses, and two persons on horseback following d.

she did not hear him, and the horse continued to his way among the rocks, whose highest points just showing above the muddy water. Billy hurried down, though he was not uneasy. She knew enough to give the horse his head, and he felt sure the old cow pony would struggle through.

Suddenly the horse put his foot on a hidden rock, slipped and went down, rolling completely over. Alice lost her seat, and Billy thought he saw her head strike another rock. She was swept away in the flood.

Billy saw all this while he was frantically digging the spurs into his horse's sides. Would he get there in time? He reached the stream a hundred yards below where Alice had entered, and dashed in. The girl was whirled toward him, and he clutched for her dress, but a passing eddy carried her beyond his reach. He plunged from the saddle into the water and struggled toward her.

For an instant she was thrown against the side of a rock. This gave him time to reach her, and in a moment he had her in his arms. She was unconscious. Blood was flowing from a cut in her forehead.

The fall! As he toiled and strove to carry his senseless sweetheart from those whirling waters, he realized dimly that it was only a few feet below him.

His mind became a blank. He knew only that he was tired, very tired, and that he must not give up. And then he knew that he was being conquered. The water was becoming swifter. He went over.

When Billy struggled back to consciousness his arms were being worked rapidly up and down. Above him he saw the face of Osifa. His head was aching, and he knew that he must have received a terrific blow; he was bruised from head to foot, and it was a moment before he could rise to a sitting posture.

A few feet away his own, Alice's and Osifa's horses stood, dripping water. Pinole was on his lank, lean pony at the edge of "Whirling Water," a seething, foam-covered caldron more than a hundred yards wide. His riata settled over something which a whirlpool threw up from the depths, and Alice was hauled to shore, like a piece of driftwood. Pinole unconsciously removed his riata, grunted to Osifa and rode away after his goats.

Neither Billy nor Osifa had spoken. He pulled himself to his feet and hurried toward Alice. The Indian maid was before him.

Silently they toiled over the unconscious girl. Billy was almost helpless, but Osifa ministered to Alice as though she had performed such tasks every day of her life.

"She has swallowed almost no water," Osifa said finally. "She isn't hurt except for that blow on her head."

The Papago girl tore a strip from her own dress and bound it around Alice's forehead. Her face betrayed no emotion as she looked at Billy and said:

"She will be conscious in a moment or two. I—I don't want to be here when she comes to. Good-by."

"Osifa—I—I—Oh, I owe you so much! we both owe you so much! You must have hauled me out of there as your father hauled out Alice."

She nodded.

"Please don't go, Osifa. Let us show our gratitude in some way."

There was a slightly scornful twist to her lip as she replied:

"Do you think that I would stay now? No, you have caused me enough sorrow. A wise man of the Papagos once said that people are like whirlpools—like those whirlpools we see down there. Each whirlpool is complete in itself until it meets another whirlpool which either throws it back or draws it closer until finally they are one. You and she have met to form one whirlpool, while I—well—I am one little whirlpool—and I always will be. You—and she—will forget all about this little whirlpool, but as for me, I can never forget."

"I never knew a truer, nobler girl than you, Osifa. I'm sorry—that's all I can say. But you are wrong when you say that I will forget you."

Tears, the first he had ever seen her shed, filled her eyes. She turned, mounted her horse and rode away without so much as a wave of the hand by way of farewell.

THE GLOVE AT CORONATION.

There is still a King's champion or hereditary champion of England. It was once his duty to ride on his horse in full armor into Westminster Hall at the beginning of the coronation banquet and three times to challenge formally to combat any person who disputed the sovereign's title to the throne. The champion flung his gauntlet down as soon as the herald had announced the challenge.

On no occasion was any opposition offered. When the champion took the gauntlet up for the third time the sovereign drank to him from a golden cup, which was then handed to the champion, who drank to his sovereign and straightway became owner of the cup.

The last occasion on which the champion appeared in Westminster Hall to execute this magnificent duty, or privilege, rather, was on July 19, 1821, at the coronation of George IV, when Henry Dymoke performed the ceremony on behalf of his father, the Rev. John Dymoke, rector of Scrivelsby, in Lincolnshire, who deemed the office incompatible with the functions of a clergyman.

The Dymokes of Scrivelsby Court are still King's champions, but probably the discontinuance of the coronation banquet in Westmnister Hall is the reason why they no longer ride in splendor on a mission so splendid as the coronation of the kings and queens of England.

Since 1377 for certain the office has attached to the manor of Scrivelsby, when Sir John Dymoke claimed by virtue of his holding Scrivelsby in right of his wife to act as King's champion at the coronation of Richard II. The Marmions were formerly King's champions, and had been lords of both Scrivelsby and of Tamworth Castle. Scrivelsby is situated in a beautiful park not very far from Horncastle. The present champion is Mr. Frank Seaman Dymoke.—[London Daily Graphic.

"What does it all mean, sir?" Thorne managed to ask.

"You wrote a darn good story," the managing editor volunteered, "and you did some mighty clever sleuth work. I like your nerve."

And then he put Thorne in a state of still greater bewilderment by giving way to a volley of laughter. When his mirth had subsided, he looked at the startled young man beside him.

"That was my brother you locked up tonight Thorne."

"Your—brother!"

"Sure. He's an alienist. That was his sanatorium you came very near wrecking."

Thorne's jaw dropped.

"And you came near putting a mighty fine doctor out of business."

Vaguely and from afar a comprehension began to dawn on Thorne.

"But Mrs. Chittenden?" he managed to ask.

"One of his patients," explained the managing editor, good-naturedly. "He was removing her from Bellevue Hospital to his sanatorium."

Thorne rose in a dazed way.

"What—what will happen?" His voice was unsteady.

"Nothing whatever, my boy," the older man responded, "except your salary will be raised."

A MEMORY OF MODJESKA.

We were gathered from the four corners of the earth in that little clubhouse which had so often welcomed the great and the near-great. Many of you know it occupies that beautiful little island which Modjeska loved. Here we were wont to congregate, and with the spirit of give-and-take we would while away the else lonely hours of the long Sunday evenings during the summer. Modjeska was always one of us—apart, and yet near with that illusive personality which radiated interest even to the stranger.

My bashful friend had just executed "The Dawn," and in the lull following the applause Modjeska and the Count entered the room. She wore the perfect garments of beauty whose clinging folds suggested the personality of the wearer and not the dictates of imperious fashion. There is a divine mystery in the efforts of the mind to recall the temporal robes of a truly great woman whose beloved form lives only in memory.

Immediately she was the center of a group of admiring and aspiring friends. This was now the real play of life. The scene was on; the settings were ideal; and an audience, grown loving and kind through long years of association, waited for the words from Modjeska's lips. The Count rolled his cigarette and took his stand near her like a great bulwark of strength and protection. Suddenly the room was hushed by the appearance of a beautiful young woman with all the bloom of youth. Sweet and clear rang out the words: "'Tis the last rose of summer, left blooming alone." Her voice had all the thrill of the song bird, and the room throbbed with sympathetic appreciation.

Modjeska stood at the far end of the room leaning against the casing. Her head drooped, and the fan which had been poised with all Modjeska's grace lay inert on her heaving bosom. She was indeed the broken flower in the garden of life. This was the first time we had ever seen her lose, even for a moment, her wonderful poise and queenly dignity.

"So soon may I follow,
  When friendships decay,
And from Love's shining circle
  The gems drop away."

The sands of her life were running low, and in that moment we stood with Modjeska face to face with the realization of the inevitable end of all earthly beauty and all wordly art. But the moment passed, and we looked through her eyes into that future where the spirit of influence shall live for ever and ever.

FLORENCE E. CASEBEER.

A MARVEL OF CINEMATOGRAPHY.

A cinematograph apparatus which takes pictures with intervals of one five-thousandth of a second has been invented by Dr. Cranz of the Military Academy of Berlin. A striking example of the power of the apparatus shows a bullet fired at a bladder of water that is hung on a string.

The eye only sees a little smoke from the pistol and a couple of holes in the bladder, from which the water runs; but when this is cinematographed and the film is shown slowly a very interesting series of operations can be watched.

First the bullet is seen approaching. It is traveling 1000 feet a second, but it seems to move quite deliberately. In front of it and extending a long way above and below it is a dim line, bent sharply immediately before the bullet. A bullet can no more pass through air than a vessel can through water without making a wave; and this is the air wave. It is made visible on account of its different density, just as the waves in air are seen above a chimney or over hot ground.

Behind the bullet come scattered grains of the powder that have not been burned, and traveling more slowly still comes the wad. The bullet enters the bladder and disappears inside, a little water spurting out of the hole it makes. Then it reaches the other side, but it no longer cuts through at once, as it did when the bladder was backed up by the water.

Something like a finger seems to push the bladder outward into a long tube, then the tube opens and lets out the bullet, which gradually travels away.—[London correspondence New York Sun.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

An Interesting Bill.

SENATOR RUSH of Solano county has introduced a measure that will produce a great deal of discussion throughout the State if it is reported out by the Committee on Agriculture. The bill provides for the creation of a department of agriculture for the State. It provides for the transfer to the department the powers and duties of the State Board of Agriculture, the State Agricultural Society, State Dairy Bureau, University Farm and School at Davis, the State Veterinarian, State Commissioner of Horticulture, State Bureau of Forestry, the execution of Pure Foods, Liquors and Drugs law, etc.

The chief of the proposed department is called the Director of Agriculture. He is to receive a salary of $6000 per year, and his deputy $4000. The present laws governing the department to be consolidated remain practically as they are. Section 3 provides as follows: "The director of agriculture shall have supervision over the offices of State Forester, State Veterinarian, the State Commissioner of Horticulture, the State Bureau dairy bureau and over the conduct of the university farm and school of agriculture at Davis, and said offices and said farm are hereby constituted a part of the State Department of Agriculture."

Section 5 has kindly left undisturbed the present State Agricultural Society, only changing its name to the "State Board of Agriculture." The law in this clause goes into details, providing for twelve directors who shall have the power to hold all State and district fairs and have authority to all necessary things to provide for these annual fairs, appoint marshalls to keep order, and apparently has no strings placed upon them in any way. In fact the only authority the Director of Agriculture has over this Board of Agriculture is the power to receive reports from it. But the said director shall have supervision over all the other divisions to be consolidated. As the State Forester, Horticultural Commissioner and Veterinarian are now operating their offices under special laws, and as these laws are to remain unrepealed, the Rush bill bids fair to disturb all these offices without apparent advantages.

For example, the State commission law gives to the State Commissioner of Horticulture the duty and power of quarantining against the invasion of fruit pests, and he may with the consent of the Governor establish permanent quarantine lines, as is now done to keep out pests from Florida. If the Rush law were in effect, and the commissioner's law left as it is, which would prevail in quarantine matters, the "supervision" of the director of agriculture or the provision of the law now giving that authority to the commissioner upon approval by the Governor? Should any of the fruit growers wish to read this consolidation law, it is known as Senate Bill No. 1055.

If it is necessary or advisable to consolidate these departments, why should not the United States Department of Agriculture be a good model? In that Federal department all bureaus stand upon the same basis, and none are exempted from control of the Secretary of Agriculture. Under this plan the so-called "State Board of Agriculture" could not have been created and all divisions would have been placed upon an equality.

That there can be no doubt as to the powers of the Director of Agriculture, Section 7 provides: "Whenever in any statute reference is made to the powers or duties of the State Agricultural Society, or the State Board of Agriculture, the State Dairy Bureau, the State Board of Horticulture, the State Veterinarian, or the State Board of Forestry, the same shall be deemed to mean the Department of Agriculture, and the said department is herby vested with such powers."

The Tulare Case.

FOR some weeks the fruit growers of Tulare county and the Supervisors have been facing a somewhat acrimonious disagreement upon the administration of the Horticultural Commissioner's office in that county. The case is peculiar, though in some respects is like those of other counties where the Supervisors are not in hearty sympathy with the present laws relating to the control of insect pests.

About a year ago the Horticultural Commissioner of Tulare complained about the great expense entailed upon the taxpayers on account of the number of shipping points in the county that had to be guarded from the reception of infected trees. Running through the county north and south are over 175 miles of railroads serving innumerable towns and stations. Trees were arriving at these stations practically every week, and in the busy season it was found impossible, even with a large corps of inspectors, to cover all this territory. Tulare county, being free from orchard scale pests it occurred to the commissioner to ask that a quarantine order be issued, stipulating that trees and plants could be landed at certain points only, and ten such stations were designated as the only places open to shipments from other places. This order was made in recognition of the cleanliness of the orchards, and of the fact that it would be impossible to properly inspect incoming stock in any other way. This is the first time such a measure has ever been tried, and it has worked very well, though bothering many nurserymen and planters who wished a more direct service from their nearest depot. But the planters of new orchards are being protected for all future time by this scheme and they cannot object seriously to a measure designed for their own protection.

The Supervisors of Tulare should appreciate what the State has tried to do in this case to make the inspection work of the county as cheap as possible by concentrating the incoming shipments to ten points. Those in close touch with the situation write me that the Supervisors and the fruit growers are coming to a better understanding, and that, while the former will insist upon cutting down all inspection expenses as far as possible, they are not in favor of leaving the county in any way unprotected.

Wild Goose Chasing.

IN the Sacramento Valley the farmers are suffering from the annual visitation of wild geese, brents and other members of the genus Bernicla, etc. Farmers of the South have perhaps seldom witnessed a genuine onslaught upon a field crop by these white-checked, white-cravatted marauders. So severe is the attack in this particular section that all barriers against the slaughter of wild geese may be broken down, and even now the sportsman who appears with two score of webbed feet dangling from his belt is reckoned a friend of the agriculturist.

I learn from Assemblyman Stuckenbruck that he will make no fight for his anti-meadow-lark measure, though he has introduced the same bill that created so much merriment at the last session. The principal objection to the bill last session was that the lark is our finest songbird. When the anti-geese Assemblymen were opening up the shambles of geese slaughter even to allowing them to be hunted with a howitzer strapped to the back of a perambulating steer, Mr. Stuckenbruck reminded them that the goose, too, is a songbird, and that she sends forth her lays both day and night, and most of all when the picking is good. The lark is content with what she can devour during the day. The friends of our beautiful songsters will be pleased to learn that at present there seems to be no danger of the meadow lark's being placed in the list of unprotected birds.

Carnation.

carnation, or, to express the name in strictly cal terms, Dianthus caryophyllus, is, according to , a native of southern Europe, and has been growing naturally, in England. The generic Dianthus, is compounded of two Greek words, the flower of the gods, which has led certain to call it the Divine Flower, a name that might be exchanged for one more simple and comprehen- . had the opinions of several different growers the commercial desirability of this variety and ject is of wide interest to small fruit growers. Van Fleet, the plant expert, whose sketch of the we recently published, writes from Chico to the New Yorker an account of the Himalayan as "The Himalaya berry is an Asiatic form of World Rubus fruticosus, or European bramble. railing blackberry or rather dewberry, of vigor- th, with rather finely-divided foliage and pink- . The berries in large clusters, are of fair size, black when , and of excellent flavor, but so soft in texture of little value except for home use. The Him- well liked and widely grown in California gar- the fruit is rarely seen in market. The blackberries most profitably grown in the Pacific States are the Evergreen, probably a form of the Old World Rubus laciniatus, which thrives well in the Oregon and Washington coast levels, the Loganberry, Phenomenal, Mammoth, Lucretia, and Gardena. All are of the trailing or dewberry type, and are of doubtful hardiness in cold climates except the last two, which were probably derived from the common eastern dewberry, Rubus trivialis. Gardena is one of the earliest of bramble berries, but is rated as poor in quality. Lucretia is everywhere favorably known. The Mammoth is the largest fruited of Judge Logan's seedlings. The glossy blackberries grow nearly two inches long and are of pleasant flavor, but plants are not always productive. The Loganberry and Phenomenal are plainly hybrids of the European red raspberry and native Pacific dewberry, R. vitifolius, the latter by Burbank. Both bear long purplish berries having a firm receptacle or core like ordinary blackberries, but with tart raspberry flavor. Both are successfully grown in California, but the Loganberry finds greatest favor abroad, and has been made to thrive, with slight protection, in the neighborhood of Washington, D. C.—[Rural Press.

Impure Seed.

NORTH DAKOTA now has a law prohibiting the sale and distribution of agricultural seeds containing seeds of quack grass, Canada thistle, sow thistle or dodder. The seeds most likely to contain these weed seeds are Brome grass, alfalfa or Canada blue grass. These will be carefully sampled and examined. Names of firms selling such seeds will be printed, and in case of very bad specimens such firms will be prosecuted. That is right. Farmers in Dakota are spending thousands of dollars for sulphate of iron to be used in spraying for weed killing. They are making a good fight to kill the weeds, but that will amount to little if such weed seeds continue to be imported in grass seed. The foul stuff which some seedsmen send out is a disgrace to the trade. Such fellows ought to be branded, but first of all farmers must learn to let such frauds alone and refuse to buy poor or dirty seed.—[Rural New Yorker.

Growing Potatoes on Wet Land.

WE recently alluded to George Shima as the expert Japanese potato grower who has not cornered the potato market and has not tried to do so. A more interesting thing, however, is the way he gets high-class potatoes on reclaimed lands, and more interesting still the way he tells it:

"I came here twenty years ago," he says. "I worked the first year, and the next season I leased a little land and planted potatoes. When I went to sell them I got only 95 cents, and the potatoes from Salinas were selling at $1.25. They told me the delta potatoes had too much water.

"I read all the reports of the Agricultural Department about potatoes, and I found out what the matter was. There was too much stagnant water in the land. After that, when I leased land I insisted on the owner agreeing to pump out all the stagnant water. Then, when the potatoes are a few inches high, I begin to irrigate with fresh river water. This water is warm, and it helps to keep the potatoes from being harmed by frost. Fresh water is better for the potato than stagnant water—just the same as it is for a baby. Now I get nearly as much for my potatoes as the Salinas growers for theirs, and I sell my crop as far east as New Orleans and Alabama."

Shima says he owns 400 acres in his own name, but that his main plan is to stick to leasing, with a clause under which the owner must pump out the stagnant water before he puts in his crop. "Then the land is sweet and the potato is good," he says.

Shima, with his five partners in the "Shima Company," now raises one-sixth of the entire crop, and the other Japanese potato growers in the delta lands operate in conjunction with him when it comes to selling.—[Rural Press.

SIBERIAN WILD FLOWERS.

Siberia seems to have a set programme for her flowers, which are beautiful in variety and coloring. September gathers the blue flowers to her bosom, and under her languid and caressing touch blossom myriads of dainty bluebells on long and tender stems.

In the rocky soil of the hilltops blue scabiosa shares its playground with dark blue snapdragon, and in the shady spots of the road grow, tall and hardy, purple-blue chrysanthemums.

Earlier in summer yellow holds sway—buttercups, daisies and violets, and after them red pinks and very deep briar roses. Delicious jam is concocted from the seed pods of the wild rose.

When summer comes an array of jars and glasses and a big kettle join hands with hat boxes and shoe bags and travel countryward. A temporary stove is built of stones not far from the house, and here simmers slowly the year's provision of preserves and jams and jellies, absorbing at the same time great doses of sun and fresh air.—[America.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Addresses of correspondents are not preserved, and consequently cannot be furnished to inquirers.]

The San Francisco Plague Scare.

AMONG other means taken by the political doctors to induce the public to pay for a national bureau of health is the suggestion of a scare in connection with the appearance of the bubonic plague—or the pneumonic plague, whichever it may be—in the Orient. This brings to mind a piece of ancient history—not so very ancient, either.

When Henry T. Gage was Governor of California, the political doctors worked up a plague scare in San Francisco, and actually succeeded in getting the Federal government to declare that the plague was epidemic in the Bay City, and to declare a quarantine. All this was absolutely without any solid foundation. There was no plague, and had there been a few isolated cases of plague, it would, as previously suggested here, be as impossible for the disease to become epidemic on the windswept peninsula of San Francisco as it would to grow bananas on Broadway.

Gov. Gage at that time made a valiant fight for the State, and its principal city. The doctors were about to bury in quick lime the body of a man who had died, as they declared, of the plague, when Gage forbade them to do so, and insisted in that and every other case of asserted plague that complete blood and other tests as laid down by the medical authorities on the subject should be had. This was done, and as stated, in no case was the plague discovered. In carrying on this fight Gage expended several thousand dollars of his own money, for which he deserves the gratitude of the State.

It is not generally known that after the government publications had declared the plague to be epidemic in San Francisco a secret commission was sent out from the Capitol to look up evidence. One of those who was nosing around about that time was Flexnor, who has since made himself objectionably active in attemptos to further the plans of the political doctors for the establishment of the closed shop in medicine.

For some peculiar reason the Federal medical service was at that time in charge of the Treasury Department. This was perhaps, after all quite appropriate, as it was mainly a question of boodle.

"After the war was over" and Gov. Gage had successfully defeated the attempts of the Federal health authorities to make of San Francisco a plague spot—after they had stated in their official publications that a plague was epidemic there—the chief of the service in Washington had the gall to write to Gage congratulating him on the fact that there was no plague in San Francisco. What do you think of that?

All this shows clearly what we might expect to happen should the mistake be made of establishing a national bureau of health under the control of a small section of one of the medical schools.

Persuasion is Better Than Force.

A Rich But Sensible Woman.

THAT looks like rather a queer heading, does it not? Yet when we look around us we are forced to admit that good common sense is more rare among the wealthy classes than it is among those who have to earn their living.

During the early part of February the papers of the country devoted columns and columns of space to reports of the latest Anglo-American alliance—the marriage of a daughter of Mrs. George Gould to Lord Decies. In this case the bridegroom seems to be rather more decent a sort of fellow than a majority of the fortune-hunting Europeans. As to the bride, she should be a sensible girl, for she has an exceptionally sensible mother—one who believes in and cultivates the family life. She is the mother of seven beautiful children—no race suicide here, as there should not be among those who are able to give their children proper training. Mrs. Gould was recently quoted as saying:

"My acquaintances have sometimes pitied me because I have had so many babies, but I have not one child too many. I have never had a child that I did not want, nor that has not found a warm welcome waiting for it. I think that is one reason why my children have all been so strong and have had such serene dispositions.

"I have tried to give my children as good a start in the world as possible by giving them sound bodies. I have nursed my babies myself, except twice when illness rendered it impossible. I do not believe in sterilized milk or patent baby foods, for nothing takes the place of the food that nature intended for the child.

"In raising my children my plan has been to bring them up to be simple and hardy. They live on the simplest and plainest foods—no pies and pastry and no nibbling at candy all-day for them. They have their breakfasts and lunches with Mr. Gould and myself.

"They have never caused me a moment's uneasiness, except when ill, and not a single heart pang," was the glorious tribute the mother paid to her family of girls and boys.

If we had more sensible mothers like Mrs. Gould the outlook for the American social fabric would be much brighter than it is.

A Tyrannical Measure.

RESIDENTS of Sawtelle, Los Angeles county, responding to a call of the Parent-Teacher Federation of that place, recently held a meeting to consider the question of a State Bureau of Health, as proposed in Assembly Bill No. 964, and Senate Bill No. 773 in the Calofirnia Legislature. A committee was appointed to protest vigorously against the proposed measure, which was unanimously voted to be unjust and un-American. One of the speakers, City Attorney Bowers, said:

"This bill to which my attention has been called is so broad, it seems to me, that we can hardly conceive of the power it confers. It is proposed that it be added as a enw section to the political code of the State of California.

"Now, in California we have several codes—the civil code, the civil code of procedure, the criminal code and the political code. This bill combines the civil and criminal and says 'If you people don't conduct your school in accordance with the opinion of some medical expert or some medical practitioner, who is not able to make a living and wants a job at the expense of the people and who can tell you what to do and what you must do—why, here's the law and here's the penalty attached to it.'

"In whose interest is the bill being pushed? Plainly in the interest of a certain school of medicine. Why are they at the Legislature asking for the passage of this measure? Not for the benefit of the children, as it is presumed to be—they would not be so interested in the health of our children as that. There is something back of it all. It provides for an appropriation and that is the most important thing in the bill."

A number of similar protests have been sent in from other branches of the association.

On account of the numerous protests against the passage of this bill that have been sent to members of the Legislature the proponents of the measure introduced some amendments which they declare should remove all objections. They do not. Indeed, some of the amendments make matters still worse. As the National League for Medical Freedom says in a circular, referring to this measure:

"The Bureau of Health and Development created by this bill would enable one school of medicine to absolutely control the health affairs of all the public schools and could only be effectively maintained by the unwarranted expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars of State and county moneys annually."

Far From Greece.

WE are sometimes in the habit of referring to California as a "modern Greece," and at least one of our cities boasts of being a "modern Athens."

All fudge. There is as wide a gap between the civilization of ancient Greece and that of modern California as there is between the civilization of California and that of the Cocopah Indians.

Raymond Duncan, with his wife and young son, recently visited Southern California, preaching the doctrine of a sound mind in a sound body, and the wearing of garments that are at once artistic, healthful and decent. It would scarcely be believed that he was refused accommodations at several hotels in this section, notably one at a seaside resort, where during the season hundrds of male bodies—many of them scrawny, hairy and ill-shapen—may be seen sprawling around on the sand under the noses of women wearing only a small apology for covering.

Modern Greece, indeed. Oh piffle! Rather say "modern grease," when the city government of a great and wealthy city like Los Angeles, for the sake of a few dirty dollars, sells the refuse of hotels and restaurants to raise sick hogs for human consumption!

Welsh Rarebit.

WILLIAM J. GREEN of Los Angeles writes that the Century dictionary sanctions the spelling "rabbit," while the New York Sun, a good authority, utterly flouts the other form—"rarebit."On the other hand, here is a communication from Fred H. Fisher, of No. 1029 Franklin street, San Francisco:

"Referring to the 'rarebit' controversy, I wish to state that 'Welsh rarebit' is correct, because a relic of aboriginal population of Wales are the originators. 'Welsh' from Wales, 'rare' because very few know how to make a genuine rarebit.

"To prepare a genuine rarebit takes expert knowledge, pains, and time, therefore a 'rarebit,' a bit, a bite, a piece, an epicurean dish. In other words: A 'rarebit' created by a Welshman, who knows how.

"There exists a millionaire clubhouse in Brooklyn, N. Y., whose members call for a 'Montauk sandwich' when ordering a Welsh rarebit. Correct, but too much to explain here.

"If Dr. A. L. Benedict or any one chooses to change the name of a 'rarebit, there is absolutely no harm in saying 'Montauk sandwich.'"

Care of the Body.

Evidently this is anothe case in which "doctors differ."

A Welsh rarebit, made in the ordinary way, with beer, is an insult to the human stomach. Take your beer separately, on the side. A piece of mild cheese, eaten on a slice of well-toasted whole-wheat bread, and always with some raw green stuff (this is highly important) is an appetizing and wholesome meal, when taken as a meal, not as a "teaser" for the stomach. The main drawback is that the cooking coagulates the albumen in the cheese. This, however, will not be so serious a drawback where a person has a normal stomach, and chews the food thoroughly.

Cheese—toasted or otherwise—is an important subject, but we must leave a little room in the Care of the Body for such trifles as immortality, and so forth. The "rarebit"-"rabbit" discussion is herewith closed. Spell it any way you like.

School Costumes.

THE following communication has been received on the subject of school costumes:

"The article by Superintendent Keppel in your issue of January 29 expressed a long-felt conviction I have entertained as to a uniform dress for school children. One time a teacher and always vitally interested in our educational system, this matter of dress has seemed to me a neglected one. The overdressing of so many of our young girls of school age has become positively ridiculous as well as injurious, to say nothing of the blighting effect on the girls who cannot afford the luxury. What we have, more than what we are early begins to take possession of the mind of the child. Do away with differentation in the matter of dress and boys and girls won't be long awakening to a realization that superiority does not lie in outward adornment, but in individual virtue. The beauty of a clean, tidy body, sweet and gentle manners, the faithful performance of duty and trust would more easily become coveted possessions, if ribbons, rats and puffs had little or no place. The meeting on the level of smple uniform dress in our public schools would be a most vital step toward the realization of the equality coveted by our forefathers.

"I make bold to address these lines to you because of the pleasure I feel in the hope that this suggestion of Superintendent Keppel may be agitated until public sentiment is educated to the good of this ucstom. May the good work you are doing through your columns continue."

Here is another suggestion on the subject, from Fred A. Binney of San Diego:

"If there is going to be a movement for plain dresses for school girls, surely the objection of your Pasadena school teacher against the monotony of seeing every girl dressed alike (like a lot of charity children) can easily be overcome. Dresses of cheap, plain material need not be all of one color. To give parents the choice of half a dozen colors, say cream, strawberry, pink, pale blue, pale green and yellow, would make the schoolrooms as gay as the flower gardens."

A simpler plan than this would be to have one costume, and to permit each pupil to select her individual colors for a ribbon in the hair or around the neck, these ribbons being of the same size, shape and material.

Ambitious Naturopaths.

THE naturopaths of California are seeking representation on the State Board of Medical Examiners, which now consists of five allopaths, two homeopaths, two eclectics, and two osteopaths, an osteopath—Dr. Tasker of Los Angeles—being president of the board. It is pointed out that although the naturopaths are licensed by this board, they have no representation upon it. It is proposed that the number of allopathic members shall be reduced from five to three, and two naturopaths added.

Twice One is Two.

FOLLOWING is sent in by R. G. Caldwell of Yuma, Ariz.:

Six-year-old Eunice was overheard discussing with her brother the death of a lady in the neighborhood. She said:

"Brother, what did the lady die with?" She was told tuberculosis.

"Is tuberculosis very bad?" she asked.

"Very bad," said her brother.

"Do people always die when they have tuberculosis?" she queried.

"Nearly always," replied her brother.

After a few moments she said:

"Brother, I wonder if she would have died if she had had only one berculosis."

Friends of Spiritualistic Mediums.

"THE CONTEMPTIBLE DAMAGING AND GHOSTLY FRAUDS PERPETRATED UNDER THE NAME OF SPIRITUALISM" is the title of a booklet of forty pages by J. M. Peebles, M.D., M.A., Ph.D. (Peebles Publishing Co., No. 519 Fayette street, Los Angeles. Price 15c.) Dr. Peebles, who has traveled and studied much, is the author of a couple of dozen boooks and pamphlets on hygienic and psychic subjects. One of his latest booklets, "How to Converse With the Spirits of the Dead" was reviewed here a few weeks ago. In a letter to the editor of the Care of the Body Dr. Peebles says:

"Through a struggle I came into spiritualism from the pulpit; that is to say, the higher aspects of spiritualism, making a marked distinction between spiritism so

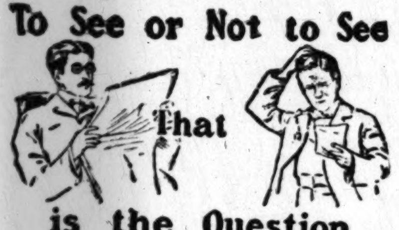
CARE OF THE EYES.
By DR. M. M. RING.
To See or Not to See



is the Question
"See the difference in expression on these two faces!"
"What makes this difference in expression?"
"Look at the men's eyes."
"O, I see. One man wears the NEW INVISIBLE BIFOCAL KRYPTOK, giving perfect wear and far vision WITHOUT LINES."
"The other man is trying to read without glasses when he should be wearing them."
"O! WHAT A DIFFERENCE!"
The most remarkable recent invention of the optical world—light, solid lenses—no conspicuous lines—no clouding—no lodging place for dirt.
Don't Think Thoughts Several Years Old
Many people think to themselves—"I do not wish to wear glasses because they make me look old" or "I will not wear Bifocal glasses because they are so conspicuous, etc."
One who thinks this now is thinking in terms of several years ago. All this has been overcome in the recent invention of the KRYPTOK and the TORIC form of lens.

Advantages of Dr. Ring's Special Toric Lenses
They may be set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.
They are ground to conform to the natural curve of the eye.
They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement
They eliminate annoying reflections from the back of your lenses.
They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.
They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.
They are especially desirable in Bifocals, because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are so much more elegant in appearance.
If you desire the benefit of my opinion and advice, do not hesitate to consult with me. Your eyes are my first consideration. The sale of a pair of glasses my last.
ABSOLUTE PERFECTION in eyeglasses and in the treatment of eye diseases is my Ambition. Your money back if not satisfied is my guarantee.
NOT ONLY THIS, BUT I AGREE TO CHANGE YOUR LENSES AS OFTEN AS THEY NEED CHANGING FOR ONE YEAR FREE OF EXTRA CHARGE.
This is the strongest guarantee man can make.
The above is the best reason in the world why you should come to me for your glasses and for relief from your eye troubles and recommend your friends to do the same.
ADDITIONAL REASONS:
YOU SHOULD HAVE ME FIT YOUR GLASSES
BECAUSE I make careful and exhaustive tests of each eye separately by the most modern and scientific methods and grind each glass to order separately to exactly overcome the trouble I find in that particular eye.
BECAUSE my glasses, prescribed absolutely on approval, will do everything for you that modern glasses can possibly do, and if it is found that you need medical attention for a diseased condition of your eyes I am able to explain this to you fully and treat your eyes myself, without sending you to another doctor who will, of course, require an additional fee. This very desirable feature is made possible on account of my having passed the California Medical Board and being a graduate and licensed
Osteopathic Physician and Surgeon
As well as a graduate and licensed Optometrist. You get the skill and knowledge of both for the fee of one—very reasonable at that.
BECAUSE I am now and have been for several years engaged in teaching others how to fit glasses and it is reasonable to suppose that I understand how to do the things I have been teaching.
BECAUSE I offer evidence of my skill and ability and give a genuine guarantee of satisfaction.
BECAUSE I do not use drops in your eyes that keep you from your work. I have a better method and give better results.
BECAUSE my glasses are made in my own shop. I am thus able to save you both time and money and insure accuracy.
BECAUSE I do my very best with every case that comes to me. That's the best reason of all.
A much larger number of people would seek advice about their eyes but hesitate on account of the fear that they will be told that they need glasses when they do not or that if they really do need them, that the wrong ones will be prescribed and hence will prove unsatisfactory.
It is to meet this last condition that I make my unreserved guarantee to every patient who honors me with his confidence and his patronage.
I have no desire to give the absurd impression that lenses will cure all human ills, but properly fitted glasses which I am capable of making will correct imperfect sight, put new life into age-dimmed eyes, remove the cause of many distressing conditions ascribed to other diseases, and which are really the result of eye strain. To suffering eyes I offer immediate relief and comfort, assured by scientifically correct lenses.
MY PRICES range from $1.50 per pair for simple reading (Stock) lenses up to $4.00 per pair for the highest quality of regular compound astigmatic lenses ground specially for your eyes and guaranteed to fit perfectly.
TORICS and KRYPTOKS cost a little more than the old or regular kind, but are preferred by those who can afford them. No extra charge for examination when you take glasses.
I do not believe you want bargain glasses any more than you want nature to endow you with a bargain pair of eyes.
The memory of the quality, the satisfaction and the pleasure that you receive from wearing a properly fitted pair of glasses remain with you long after the price has been forgotten.
The more you care for the comfort of your eyes and the appearance of your glasses, the more you'll be interested in my modern methods of eye-examination and eyeglass adjustment.
Dr. Merritt M. Ring

Once I had the honor of sitting in a spiritualistic seance in Paris with Victor Hugo, who, upon receiving a communication in French, through an English lady who could neither speak nor write French, wept with joy."

In his introduction the author states that the object of this publication is "to give to the world the truth in regard to the many contemptible and base frauds existing at the present time in public and in press under the sacred name of Spiritualism." He announces that communications sent by him to the "Progressive Thinker," the leading organ of the spiritualistic movement in America, were refused publication.

Dr. Peebles is not only a sincere spiritualist, but a devout Christian. He specially condemns those spiritualists who seek to cast doubt upon the existence of Jesus Christ.

Benefited by the Nature Cure.

FOLLOWING is a sample of many similar letters received by the editor of the Care of the Body. They tend to cheer and encourage him in his "demnition grind," and to lighten the somewhat thankless task of trying to teach people to cure themselves by the Natural Method, which involves will power, self-denial and patience. The letter is from Mrs. W. W. Jones of No. 155½ South Avenue 20, Los Angeles:

"You must at times tire of having your many admirers tell you how much they appreciate your writings, and how much good they have derived from carefully following the advice given by you in the Care of the Body, but I believe in rendering unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and I want you to know of the wonderful good your personal hygienic advice has done in my husband's case. It would have been even more remarkable, had he continued the treatment prescribed by you for a longer period. He is still following it, but not so strictly as I could wish. Results were plainly apparent before he had given your advice a week's trial. He faithfully followed it for a full month in every particular. Then as he got so much better he is not dieting as you would have him continue to do for at least three months. However he does not take any salt and eats no meat nor pastries of any kind, eats only twice a day, and avoids sloppy foods, so it is only in some things he transgresses. I wish I could impress upon every one who has anything wrong with his state of health, to give the 'Nature Cure' a fair trial. I am firmly convinced it will effect a complete cure when all else fails. If you should wish at any time to refer to me, I would be only too glad to give our experience, for as you are well aware, there are always persons who will not risk two-bits for something sensible, but will be taken in by some worthless nostrum highly advertised—not only worthless, but absolutely harmful. It might convince some of the skeptical to have the testimony of a disinterested person.

"It has been quite a surprise to me to learn how little even some of the regular practitioners of medicine know about the simplest hygienic laws. Or if they know, they are mighty careful not to tell those who consult them. I even had an eminent doctor say that it did not matter in the least what my husband ate, as gall stones were not the result of diet, and when I humbly begged to differ from him, he grew quite insulting, said that there were all sorts of foolish and faddish ideas prevailing nowadays, especially with persons who had not intelligence enough to trust to a doctor, who of course must know more about such matters than an ignorant layman. I asked him if he thought the question of diet was foolish, and told him I thought any doctor who would make such statements was certainly more open to the charge of ignorance than any laymen I had ever known. Whereupon he waxed exceedingly wroth, and told me that my husband could not live more than twelve hours unless he was immediately operated upon for the removal of the appendix.

"I called him up a few weeks after we began your treatment, and told him he was still alive, and incidentally in possession of his appendix and a few other things he had advised him to get rid of. It was really funny, for he got so angry that he hung up the receiver while I was talking. I had a lot of amusement out of the affair, and have no scruples in handing it to any one who begins to talk 'carve' to me, in the warmest language at my command.

"Another reason for my objections to operations is that when a child of 14, I was vaccinated, despite my protest against it. Child though I was, I had seen several cases of vaccination that caused serious trouble. The result was that I nearly lost my arm, took blood poisoning, and had several small bones removed, and also almost lost the use of the arm, so much so, that I cannot use it to write with, having no control of the muscles sufficient to guide a pen. I was left-handed, and wrote with that hand, which made it most serious for me. I begged them to vaccinate the right arm if it must be done, but the doctor said it would be best for me to learn to use the right hand to write with. I had acquired quite a skill in penmanship, and as the arm was carried in a sling for years (and I had to literally fight tooth and nail to keep it from being amputated,) I have never been able to write a decent hand since. Small wonder that I am a foe to any medical tyranny. I hope the sensible people who object to being carved or poisoned will raise such a storm of protest against the proposed National Bureau of Health, as will effectu-

To Whom Will You Trust Your Eyes?

TORIC LENS
FLAT LENS

Mrs. Helen Heulings says: "A few weeks ago the sight of my left eye left me, and I could only tell daylight from darkness. Three of the best known oculists told me nothing could be done for my sight, but under Dr. McCleery's treatment my sight has been restored. I cannot say too much for the good work he did for me."

To correctly examine the eyes means more than merely placing lenses before a person's eyes and asking him to read a string of letters. It means an examination of the interior of the eye to determine its health. It means also the examination of the muscular apparatus of the eyes to see if they work together in unison.

BIFOCAL LENSES
OLD NEW

Miss Jennie Williams, a former Los Angeles school teacher, says: "Previous to coming to Dr. McCleery I had been compelled to take a year's vacation because of continuous nervousness and headaches, but with no relief when school work was resumed. I was becoming discouraged, and was expecting to have to give up all work that involved continuous use of my eyes. His lenses and his treatment effectually cured me of the trouble."

Many of the ailments for which a physician's services are sought have their cause in the eyes, which may differ from each other in strength, or may be out of balance because of unequal development of the muscles that govern the movements of the eyeball, or adjust the accommodation of the eyes. The optic nerve itself may be weak and require aid.

Effect of Eyestrain

Headaches, Nervousness, a general feeling of lassitude, the majority of stomach disturbances, are all the result of Eyestrain, and are unaffected by medical treatment unless the eyesight is first properly corrected. If the eyesight is right, there is little use for a physician.

No person need suffer from Eyestrain except it be by their personal neglect.

No extra charge for the examination.

Specialty made of Kryptok (Invisible Bifocal) and Toric Lenses.

My guarantee for good work is that any required changes of lenses within one year are made without charge.

ally squash it so dead that it will never be mentioned again.

"I wish you every success in your efforts to educate your readers to the hygienic life, at least in some measure, though one might well imagine it an almost hopeless case, considering the ignorance of most people regarding even the most simple hygienic laws. But what can one look for, when an M. D. will say that diet does not matter? That is one of the things I object to in some osteopathic physicians. They do not place the due importance upon the question of diet that seems to me should be placed upon the most important factor in treating any disease. In fact, one might say the only factor. However, that may be too sweeping, as I have never consulted but three doctors of osteopathy. I always give all doctors as wide a berth as possible (except of course one who practices Nature's methods of healing,) Any others who get to experiment upon me will only do so when I am not able to defend myself, and I use that word advisedly.

"It must be a fine thing to feel that one has done so much good to his fellow-man as your writings have done. I wish you many, many happy returns of the Care of the Body birthday of January 15. May your pen never lose its power."

* * *

What They Would Do.

IN a communication to the Journal of the American Medical Association, June 8, 1907, the Kansas City Spirit of June 15, 1910, quoted Dr. Dixon:

"Compulsion, not persuasion, is the keynote of State medicine. . . . Let it be understood that, no matter how great efforts we may make to educate the people, unless we have the lex scripta—the written law—to fall back on, State medicine, while it may be a beautiful science, can never be a practical art. . . . These laws must reach into all the relations of life."

In the Savannah (Ga.) Press of May 23, Dr. W. F. Brunner, city Health Officer of Savannah, was quoted as follows:

"If we had the proposed new department, we could have, among other things, compulsory vaccination, and, while this might not be a move that would meet with popular approval, it would be one of the best things that could happen to this country, so far as the prevention of disease is concerned."

Comment on this would be superfluous.

* * *

Hugging Matches.

AN eastern professor—or was it a parson?—recently declared that modern ballroom dances are simply "hugging set to music."

In this case the speaker was eminently correct. The jolly decent old-fashioned quadrilles and "Lancers" have gone to join the earlier and more stately minuet, and all that remains is a monotonous mournful mooning around of a man and woman locked in a close embrace.

Why is it proper for a man to cavort around a room for hours with his arms around a woman, while to do the same thing sitting down would be regarded as highly improper?

Also, why may a woman show her legs at the beach and her breasts at the theater, but not vice versa?

Isn't there a lot of humbug about our social laws and customs?

* * *

Pure Food and High Prices.

THE president of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association says that the clamor for stringent pure-food laws has caused recent advances of prices by dealers.

Has the American people, then, to choose between eating adulterated and harmful foods, or paying an extravagant price for their food?

This appears to be something like an admission that the food packers have been poisoning us for many years—for which they ought now to be in jail.

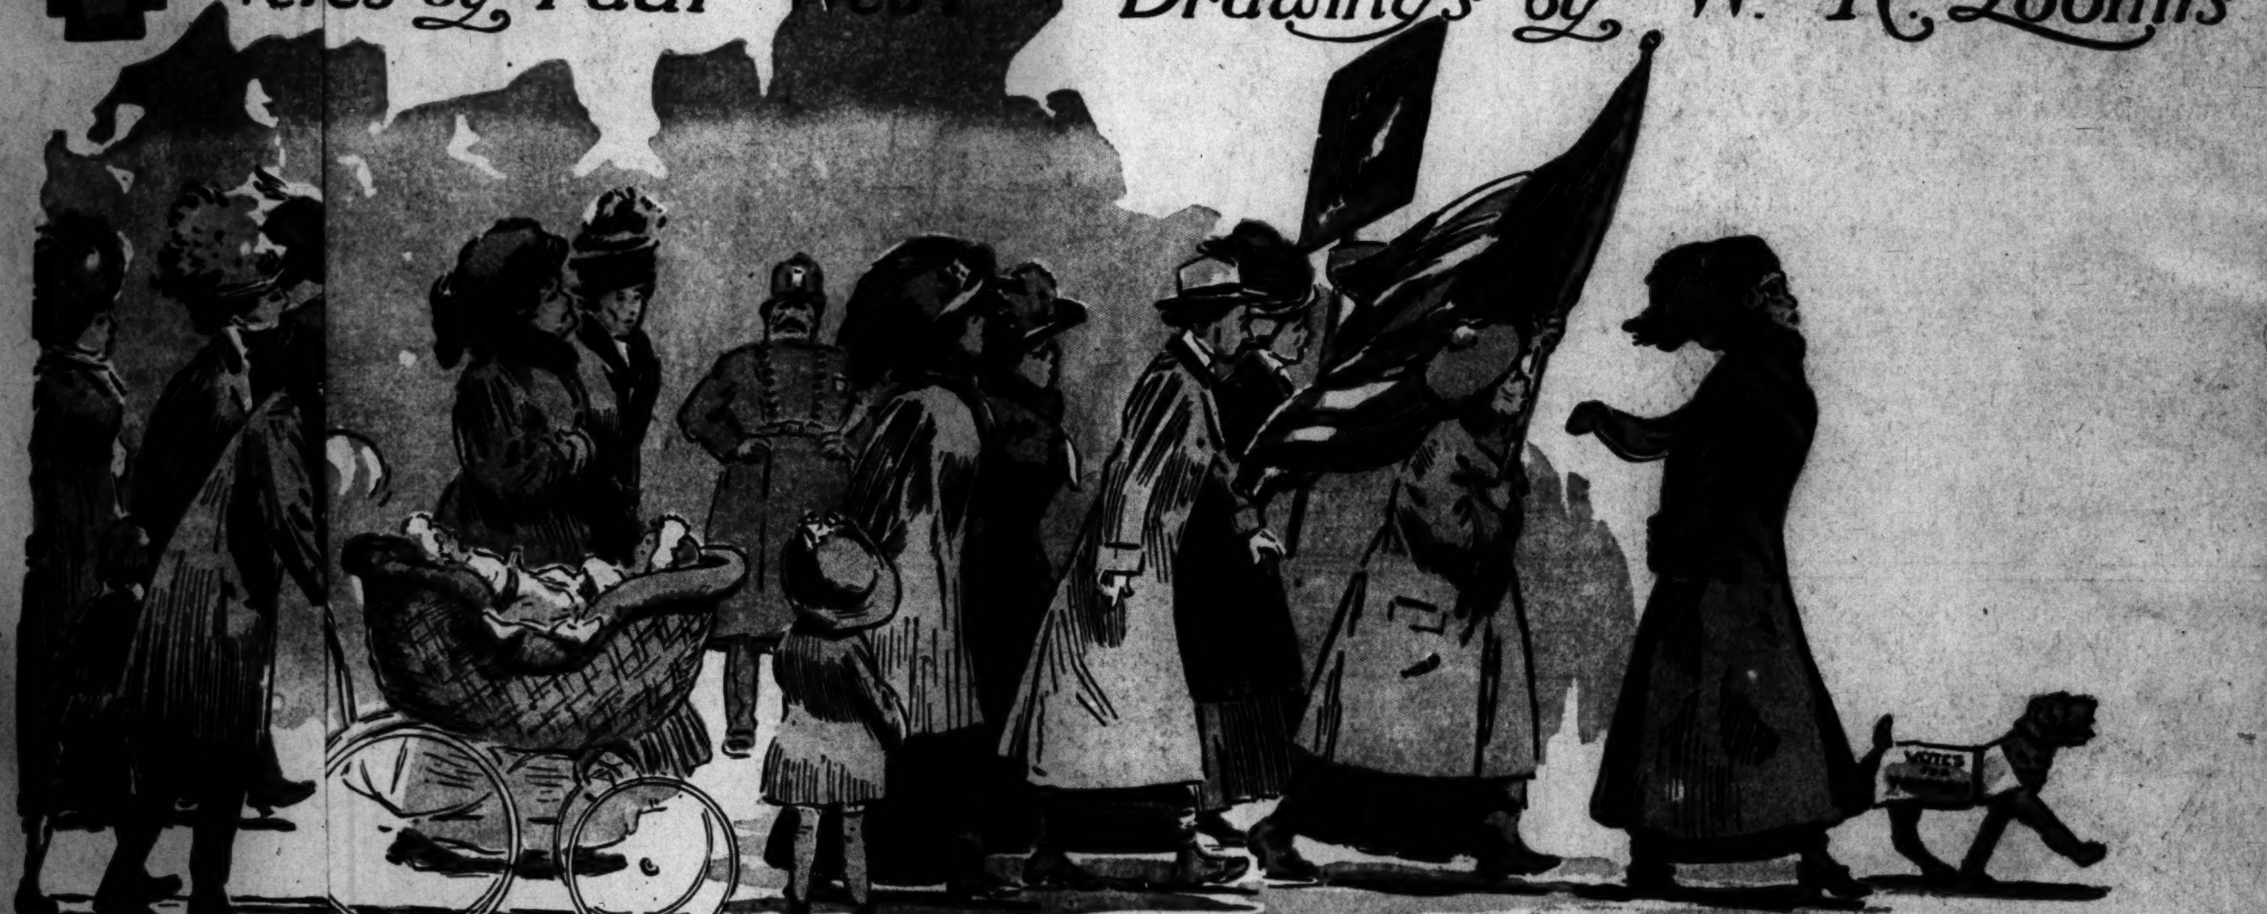
THE WIDOW WISE

Veres by Paul West — Drawings by W. H. Loomis

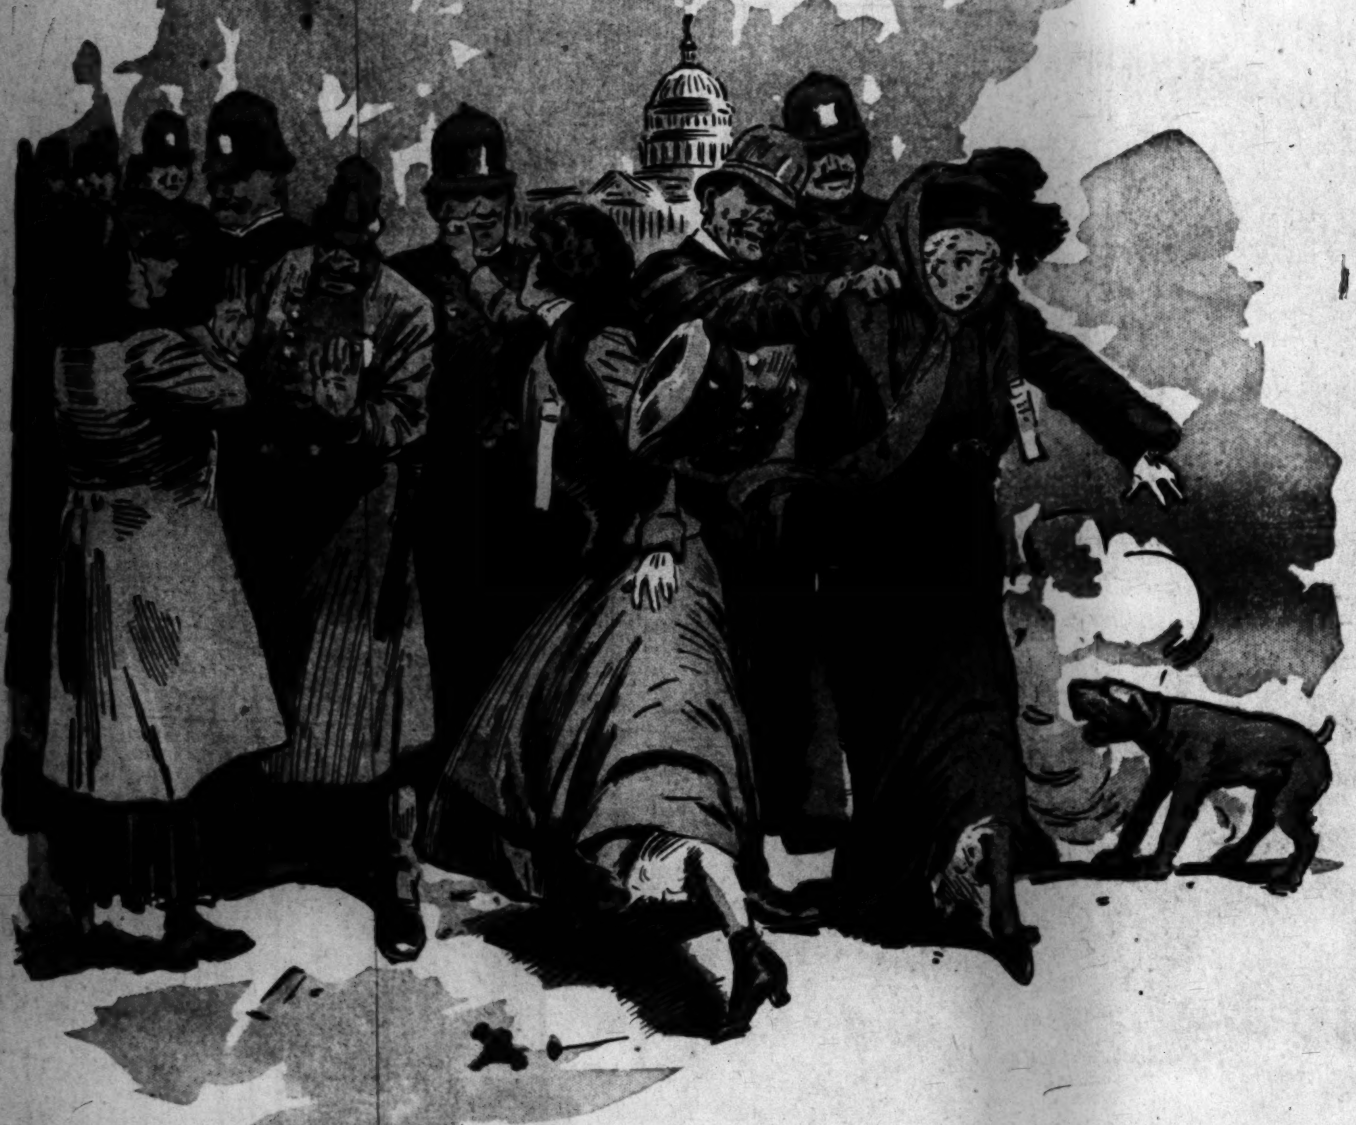


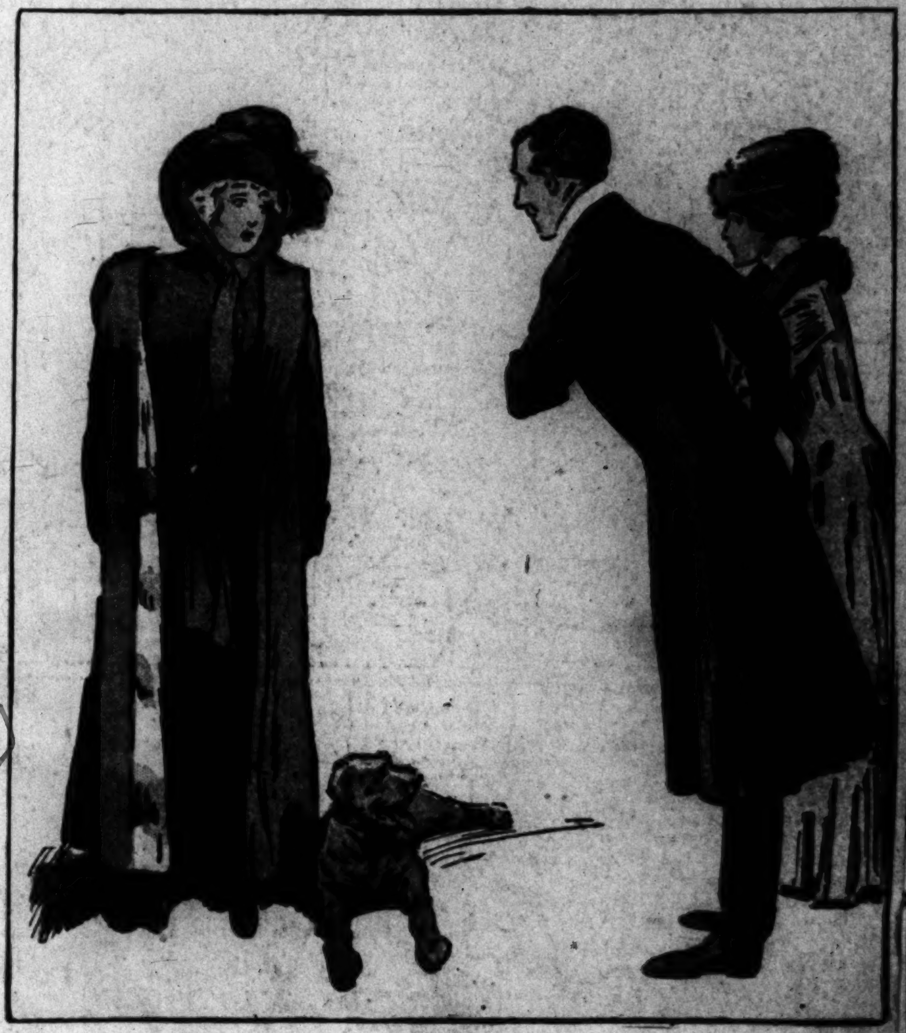
1—With all the Widow Wise's fads she'd ne'er been stung as yet
With the "Votes for Women" microbe nor become a Suffragette;
But all her friends were full of it, and finally she lent
Her presence to the "movement" and to a convention went.

2—Strong sisters whooped it up and gave the "tyrant's" nose a tweak
And then the "chairman" introduced a gentleman to speak—
Professor Brown—a handsome man—who said, to much applause,
The time would come when women would make all the nation's laws.

3—"No more," said he, "the woman weak can hold the reins o'er man;
She who has force and vigor, she's the only one who can.
It is the Woman Militant who'll capture every prize!"
And as he said these words he looked straight at the Widow Wise.

4—She knew that look! Her dear heart leaped. "'Tis evident," thought she,
"Professor Brown is smitten, and he throws this hint at me.
The way to win his love is clear. I will without delay!"
So she became a Suffragette upon that very day.





5—She saw the dear Professor oft, and every time he smiled
The Widow as a Suffragette continued growing wild.
She led in all their street parades, she took a leading part
And every indication showed it brought her near his heart.

6—At last one day the Suffragettes went down to Washington,
To storm the nation's Capitol. Great crowds observed the fun.
And as the Widow battled with policemen, like a man,
She thought, "If this won't win him, why, there's nothing else that can."

7—By stalwart cops the Suffragettes were driven through the town,
And as they reached headquarters there they found Professor Brown.
"Hurrah!" he said to Widow Wise, "I'd have been by your side,
But I've been getting married. Let me introduce my bride!"

8—The Widow looked. She saw his bride, a modest little dear,
"The same old tale again!" she thought. "I was a fool, 'tis clear!
Man may admire the Suffragettes, but when Love is the prize,
THE GIRLISH GIRL WINS EVERY TIME!" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

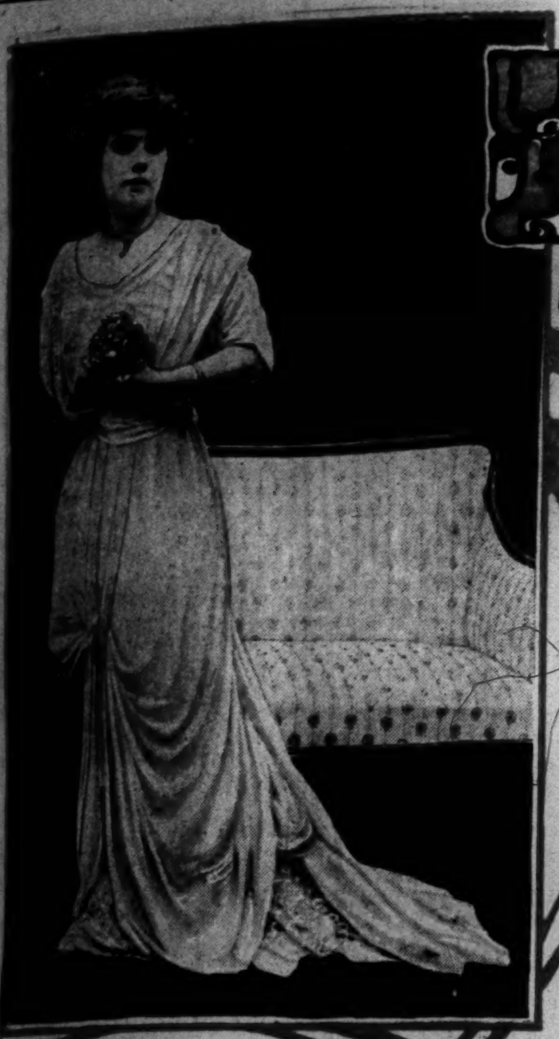
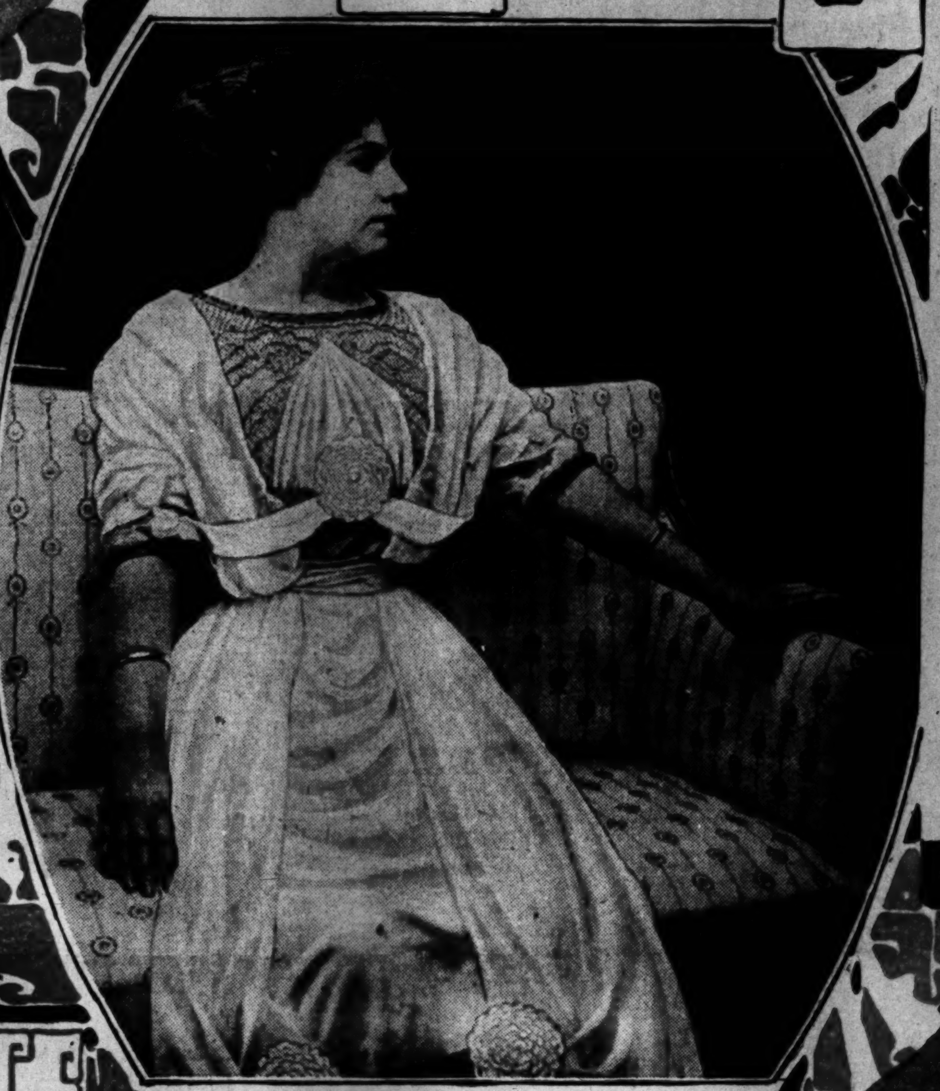
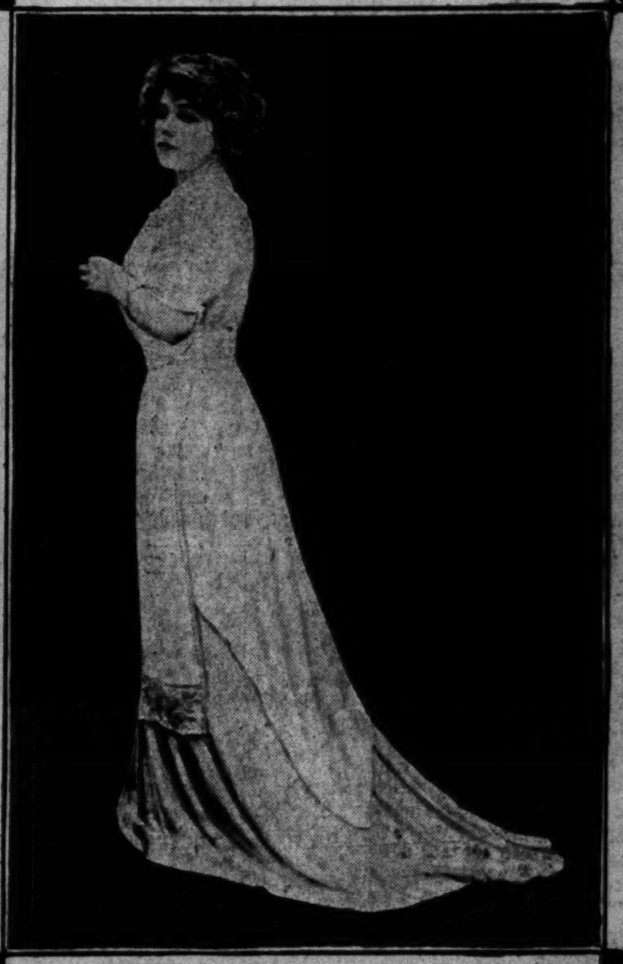
ARTISTIC DRAPERY in the NEW STYLES



Blue and Pink A Frenchy Combination





IT SEEMS as if, in spite of the very real revival of the costumes of the first empire, we were really getting back in another way to the modes of ancient Greece. Not for a long time has fashion allowed so much and such free artistic drapery as this fall's styles permit us. For which those of us who have beauty-loving tastes should be grateful.

Take the lovely blue chiffon gown over blue satin, with its skirt border of black. This is made with the extremest simplicity; but the drapery of the tunic—the manner in which it is caught by a flower plastron and then hangs in a loose tassel—makes of the little frock an ideal gown for a debutante. The secret of the whole thing is in the draping of the tunic so that it seems to fall naturally, and yet does not wobble or flop.

The value of long, straight lines, properly hung, is shown in the black marquisette over black-figured white French challis. This frock, again, is plainly cut; the deep folds and the braiding on the bodice are its only claim to ornamentation—and yet it is made beautiful and distinctive by the hanging of the drapery in back. This can hardly be called a tunic—it is rather an exaggerated sash—but the care displayed in fitting the gathers and cutting the hem makes of it a charming drapery.

The artistically draped tunic is shown at its best in the gown of blue veiling over pink, with its exquisite lace train and undersleeves. The materials of this gown are richness itself; but look at the simplicity of its cut and make—the soft pleats over the shoulders, the two narrow folds at the neck, the loose girdle! The beauty of the gown lies chiefly in the charming drapery of the tunic, caught by two folds of ribbon from the girdle, of a pink a shade darker than the underskirt. It looks as if it could be done in half a second—just hitched up and sewed—but more time and thought has been spent on the exact hang of that tunic than on all the rest of the costume together.

To show the full effect of drapery on bodice and skirt, we give two views of the lovely gown of white veiling over old rose satin. The profile picture shows the skirt admirably—the tunic held by the band of Gobelin blue satin, caught by two white cabochons. The trick here again lies in hanging the tunic so that it will not sag and yet will not be skimpy.

The front view shows the bodice better than does the side one. Here the use and value of drapery are very apparent; the corsage is actually held in place by the bands of veiling over the blue satin band held by the white cabochon. The sleeves are draped in the same way, and the front of the bodice has a full jabot that gives a final touch of careless art to the whole veiled and draped costume.

Lest it should be thought that this artistic drapery is confined to the veiled tunic gown, we show what can be done with one material in a light yellow soft satin. Here the tunic, so called, is of self-material and is stitched to the skirt. Its value for this article lies in the manner in which both the square piece in front and the fishtail effect in back are hung from the lace-trimmed bodice. There is art, too, in the sweep of the train, and in that most difficult of points, the cut of the skirt in front, just touching, yet not escaping, the floor.

Still, it is certain we may thank the veiled tunic and veiled effect in general for this artistic drapery; and properly thankful we should be. For so pretty and becoming a style has not been seen in the approved list of fashion for many, many seasons.

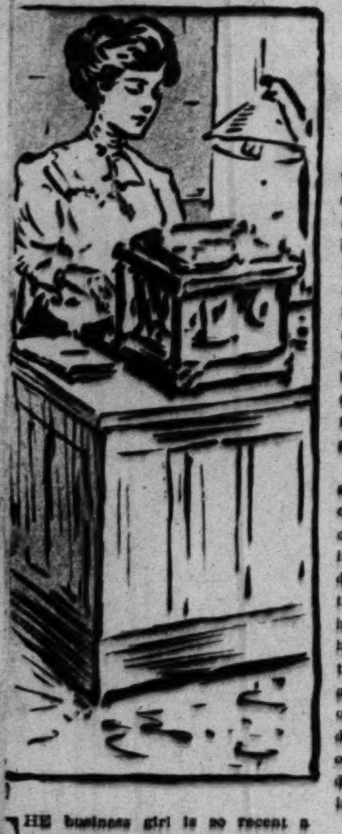
SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

By MARION HARLAND

The BUSINESS GIRL'S PLACE in the HOME



THE business girl is so recent a development that some of us have hardly become accustomed her yet. We are used to the girl o teaches school, to the girl who es music or painting lessons, even to girl who does bookkeeping or ste- raphy, but we have always regarded as something of an exception. Some s are so old-fashioned that we have yet shaken off the habit of taking or granted that when a girl finishes ool or college, or whatever course of dy she has pursued, she will come e for a while, to be a comfort to her ther and father and have a little al life, and then marry and enter a e of her own. There are a few of who still cherish a sneaking convic- that this is perhaps, after all, ut the best thing a girl can do with life.

et the business girl is undeniably n us in force, and there can be no bt she has come to stay. There ms to be no limit to the lines of work will undertake and carry through. ry day I am hearing of new depart- —at least new to me—she has made. t week some one told me of a an who is running a farm and sell- vegetables to her rich country hbors, and making money by it. I several women who are impre- s, managing singers and readers lecturers, and women who superin- factories, who are engineers, ghtsmen and architects, are as y as women who manage tearooms, as caterers, personally conduct es of travelers to the far ends of earth and drive automobiles.

d the business girl is not restricted e number of those who find self- ort necessary. The germ of inde- ent work is in the air, and few are young women who escape it. The that their fathers can take care of , and want to do it, does not seem ffect them in the least. Out of the ntal nest they go, to try their s, to pick up their own food and to their own nests.

this attack upon the business world by woman has created a new class, and there seems to be some doubt as yet how they shall be treated. What is the important feature—the business or the girl? Which is to be considered first? Is the fact of the business to be borne in mind to an extent that leads us to accord the girl the same kind of treatment we would give her brother in business? Or is the standard position of the girl in the home to continue to influence us even after she has to a degree emancipated herself?

I know one girl who works as hard as any man. She leaves her house by 8 o'clock in the morning, and there are occasions when she does not return to it until 9 or 10 at night. Her average dinner hour is 7.30. She gets home, well tired out, just in time to wash her hands before dinner, which her mother has cooked and put on the table. When the meal is finished she helps clear away and wash up, and it is often 9 o'clock or later before the tasks are done and the woman who has been out of the house at work all day can sit down for a few minutes' rest and reading.

I also know a man who works in the same office with this girl, and whose hours are no longer, his work no more exhausting than hers. When he gets home at night his dinner is ready for him, and by the time he has finished it he apparently has energy left for nothing but a pipe and the evening paper, while his mother clears the table and washes the dishes. She does not feel aggrieved at having to do it, either. She says the poor boy has been working hard the whole day and it is little enough to grant him the silence to smoke and read the paper in peace. I am not sure but what I agree with her.

"Hurries home to make salad dressing."

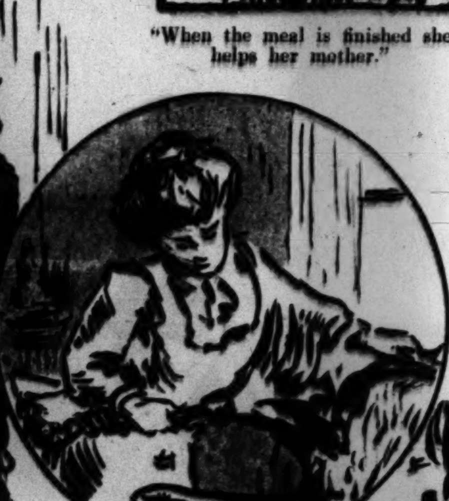
"When the meal is finished she helps her mother."



"Steals time from her morning sleep to dust the parlor."

But how about the girl? Why should different conduct be expected from her? Is it because home has always been the woman's province and we have not yet adjusted ourselves to the notion that it is too much to expect any one to be man and woman too, the bread-winner and the bread-baker besides? Are we making a mistake and in which case? Should we ask more of the man or less of the woman?

Of course, men differ in their attitudes toward their homes. I know men who are handy about the house, who drive nails and put up shelves and repair furniture and do a variety of other odd jobs for which a carpenter or a painter or a plumber would be called in for less fortunate households. The man who lives in a country town takes it for granted, generally, that he should do a little gardening after his working hours are over. It is his relaxation, his recreation, and so far as my experience goes his performances in this line are usually regarded less as duties than as free grace. He is considered as bestowing a favor rather than fulfilling a task which should be obligatory upon him.

But is it ever so with a woman who follows an employment which takes her outside of her home? What measure of indulgence is accorded to her? Does her family ever shake off the impression that she should be as ready to discharge small household tasks and responsibilities as though all her life lay within the four walls of her home and she had never known any but domestic pursuits? When she hurries home from the office in order to arrange the flowers for dinner and make the salad dressing and superintend the arrangement of the table; when she steals time from her morning sleep, that she may dust the parlor and look over the clean clothes before she goes forth to her daily toil—is this regarded as anything but a matter-of-course assumption of regular duties to which she was born and raised? Are allowances made for her because she has to work hard all day out in the world, and does any one feel, with the mother of the man whose case I have cited, that after she has been laboring all day nothing should be asked of her after she gets home at night?

I suppose women have been the home-makers of the world too long for them to assume any other position for a while without protest, open or tacit. A good deal of education will be necessary before we get to the point where we yield them the same privileges which their brothers hold as a foregone conclusion. Do the majority of women really wish to attain this standpoint? If pressed to it, would not they own that they have a lingering enjoyment of domestic duties—an unwillingness to relinquish the cares which have been theirs since Eve first kept house while Adam tilled the ground?

Even in this day of all vocations for women it is difficult for them to get away from the position to which they have been trained for years past. An amusing instance of this came to me the other day. A young woman of my acquaintance whom I would never have suspected of the least leanings toward domesticity, so thoroughly did she seem to have been emancipated by her office employments from anything approximating a home, called me up by telephone.

"May I come up tomorrow evening and use your machine for half an hour?" she asked. I hesitated, my mind running over the coffee machine, the washing machine, the vacuum cleaning machine, the typewriter. Which did she mean?

"You said you had been working at your machine the other day, and I thought perhaps you would let me come up and run up a shirtwaist with it," the voice went on.

"I meant the writing machine," I explained. "I don't own a sewing machine."

There was an exclamation of disappointment and then a laugh.

"Isn't it funny that I should have taken it for granted a machine could be only a sewing machine?" she said. "I don't believe I'm so free from femininity as some people seem to think, after all!"

I don't believe she is, either; and I don't believe that women will for many generations get to the point where they will not feel a sense of pleasure, no matter how vigorous business women they may be, in doing the essentially feminine things. I should be sorry to think otherwise.

At the same time, such feminine duties should be considered as their pleasures rather than as an obligation. Say what we may, it is not fair to expect a woman to go out and do her work as a man might and yet force the home work upon her, as we might if she never strayed beyond the bounds of the household. Since she is

e Life of the Business Girl

HE letter from Justicia has called forth so many replies and remonstrances that it has seemed wise ave this week in the place of the emothers' Exchange a Symposium e Life of the Business Girl. I give any of the letters received as I can space for.

I

reply to your query as to whether ticia" is a fair type of her order, I to say from experience that she is. Is t plain to any and to every one what l who earns from $6 to $10 a week, and has to pay board and laundry and y other expense, must sacrifice in order ust live? Justicia's case is no extreme by any means, and if space permitted uld tell you of girls who earned $6 and went hungry for the want of any lunch it. Articles appealing to the artistic of one's nature, telling of nutritious dainty lunches, are mostly wasted, so as being a benefit to the person whom are intended for. Not because these would not, but because they could not, advantage of the advice. One may w up one's hands and say, "Too bad; things! But what can we do?" But is poor consolation to the sufferers. I been a student of sociology for many s and have given much thought to the conditions of the working girl, especially the one who boards. I could fill pages which would enlighten some people as to their own responsibility in the matter. And it is the responsibility of every woman living to do all she can to lighten the burdens of her sister wherever she may find her. A broad system of education along the lines of brotherly love, not preached in sermons, but lived in life, is the only solution of the problem.

I. E. H. (Atlanta, Ga.).

II

I have been almost amused to see the stand taken by Justicia, for I know so well that even while she complains she would not exchange her lot for that of the best-paid and most highly respected domestic in the land. How do I know? Why, I have tried her, or one just like her. Permit a little bit of personal experience. I took into my home a girl 16 years of age, and she lived with me for seven years. She came to me as assistant nurse to my youngest child, then 3 years of age. As he grew beyond the need of a nurse, Nellie remained as chambermaid, and later took the place of waitress. She knew nothing when she came to me, but by the time she had been in my employ for four or five years she was a beautiful waitress. She was a sweet-tempered, bright little creature, and we were all fond of her. She made her interests and ours so much one that she always spoke of "our children" and "our house." She had her own dainty little room, of which she was very fond. We were living in a suburb, and she made friends among other maids in the vicinity. Alternate Sunday afternoons and evenings and every other Thursday afternoon and evening she had "off." In addition to this I gave her from Saturday noon until Monday morning every two months. She was very happy. Finally her mother fell ill, and the daughter must take a position where she could be at home every night with the invalid. About that time we moved into the city, and I gladly gave a letter of recommendation to Nellie for any position she might wish to fill. She got a place in a department store—not one of the best class, but one much frequented by the poor and middle classes. Here she stood behind a counter each day until 6 P. M. and on Saturdays until 10 P. M. She must be there at 8 every morning. She began at $6 per week. At the end of six years she is getting $9. Last winter she came to see me and, as I was engaged in writing a letter at the time, I told her she might step into the dining room and have a chat with my present maid, who succeeded to Nellie's place. In a few minutes I overheard Nellie's indignant protest.

"What! me live out again, do you say? Never! Do you suppose, after being my own mistress, that I would ever again go into any one's house as a servant? Yes, I know I was happy here, and I got my good $25 a month, and a birthday present always, or something handsome, or, maybe, $5, and I loved them all, and I had good care. But I tell you it was being a servant, just the same. Now I have my evenings off. Of course, in my mother's flat on the East Side it isn't like it is here for size and comfort, but at all events I'm my own mistress."

I heard the listening maid put in a feeble defense.

"I don't see how you're any more your own mistress than I am. You told me yourself that your feet ache terribly each night, that you can't sit down for hours during the day, that you often get but a mean bite at noon, and that, sick or well, you must stand behind that counter, while I may be resting here in my comfortable room. Where are you more 'free' than if you were still here?"

The answer was decided.

"Sure, after store closes I can do as I please, and there's no one can point to me and say, 'She's Mrs. Blank's servant.'"

"And would you rather have them say, 'She's a shopgirl?'"

"Indeed I would, for that's the same as being a saleslady in the right understanding. And while I'm a saleslady, you're known as 'a maid.'"

Do you wonder that I fail to pity Justicia, except in her ignorance of what constitutes self-respect and womanhood? It is too bad that she must work so hard, and starve, and try to make both ends meet, and be old before her time. But were I to offer her a comfortable berth in my sheltered home as "a maid" she would turn from it in disgust. "No!" she would gasp; "I would rather die!"

HOUSEKEEPER WHO KNOWS (New York).

The next letter is from one of the class to which Justicia belongs, and who voices the same plaint.

III

After reading the article written by Justicia, I was moved to write to you, stating that I believe every word of that letter. I have had experience, not in New York as a clerk, but in another large city as a milliner's assistant. The first position I got I kept for a month, for my employer was busy and had to take what he could get. When I found that good girls were not popular there and not wanted, I left. The second place I kept for a week, for they had the same standards as at No. 1. I boarded at home, fortunately. I could tell you of a big store that won't hire a girl who is what they call "too virtuous." I went there for employment because I was green. When I learned the truth, and they learned the kind I was, I could look elsewhere. If Justicia gets $10 a week, she gets more than I did; $4.50 was all that I received. I paid $2.50 a week for my board, 60 cents a week for carfare and I carried my lunch with me from home. You do not have to be a clerk to be looked down on. The feeling goes to bookkeepers, stenographers, typewriters, nurses, dressmakers, hairdressers, in fact, to everything that a girl can do to earn her own living. She is sneered at, and remarks are made that she's "not much," as "she's got to work for a living." I have heard such remarks, and know the truth of what I have written.

D. P. (Chicago).

Our next letter is from a man who has talked over the question with his wise wife.

IV

My wife and I have decided with regard to Justicia's wail of woe that her case is not exceptional. But whose fault is it that her condition is such? She answers that question herself when she says: "I don't know a thing about cooking or waiting and can't (might she not truly say won't?) wait to be taught." Her expenses, according to her own figures, are $6.25 per wek at the lowest. But as even a slip of a girl cannot subsist on a 5-cent sandwich for lunch, and restaurant keepers are not in the business for their health, 15 cents for noon lunch is a moderate allowance, bringing her expenses up to $7.15 per week, leaving her a net balance of $2.85 for a week's earning. Any girl that shows the least inclination to learn or perform household duties can easily get $3 a week, in addition to a room, board and washing, with a prospect of a raise within three months, and almost always Thursday afternoon off, and she is not bossed by a man and frowned upon if she sits down for five minutes.

When I saw the cashgirls, bundle wrappers, etc., behind the counters recently in one of the big city stores, I pitied them, but I could not help forming an opinion of the parents or guardians that would sacrifice their own flesh and blood to such drudgery. Of the older ones, I thought less, as they had evidently chosen their lot for themselves. My wife and I have one daughter. As my earnings were never more than $10 a week, and my wife was much of an invalid, besides our burying three children, every little bit would have helped; but I simply could not bear the thought of sending my child out as a shopgirl, come what might. She learned housekeeping of her mother, although her inclinations were for stenography and bookkeeping. Now, at 22, she is happily married. Two years ago she and her husband began housekeeping with nothing ahead, but, thanks to her good management and her husband's industry and good sense, they can look upon the future with hope, although he is but a laborer, with ten months' work each year. Had his wife been a shopgirl, she would not have known how to manage on his small income, and would have been ignorant of how to cook and make the best of the provisions she bought.

Says the wise domestic: "Why should I stand behind the counter pulling down bundle after bundle for customers who do not know what they want, pay out my scant earnings for things more ornamental than useful, in order to look attractive and pleasant for the benefit of my employer, pay dearly for meals that are scanty and ill prepared; afraid to rest my weary feet for one moment in all that long day, when I can, as a domestic, have a nice room to myself, eat what I want, rest when my work is done, have a half holiday each week and, at the end of that week, have $4 all my own, owing nobody a cent?"

Says the business woman: "My mother taught me to keep house, and I am proud of it. I was not needed at home, and took a position as stenographer, and have made myself invaluable by learning my employer's business. As a shopgirl I could not have done that. Had I failed as a stenographer I could have gone into any home and filled the position as housekeeper or maid."

As to "arabs" of the kitchen, Justicia knows, if she wants to be just, that one may find as true ladies in heart—not mere dress or complexion—among the Katies and Coras, Bridgets and Janes, Christinas and Annes of the kitchen as among the Mays and Myrtles behind the counter, or as among the Victorias and Violets of the drawing room. But there is a belief amounting to conviction that among the employes in shops and stores there are those who would think less of a stain on their honor and character than they would of stains on their hands caused by dishwater.

Mothers, if you would have your daughters useful, teach them housekeeping! Girls, if you would be a mistress in your own home, learn housekeeping!

O. N. N., a husband and father (Clinton, Iowa).

Our next letter is also from a man, but much of it is too strong to find a place in the columns of the family paper. I will, however, give some extracts.

V

To one who understands, the eternal whinings of young women who parade their woes and virtues in newspaper columns are disgusting. One hears everlastingly of the "pitiable" creatures, underpaid and overworked, for whom nothing is left but starvation or lives of shame. Nonsense! If women are not ashamed to do honorable work; if they are not too proud to live as respectable women in decent homes, there is no need of their turning to "lives of shame." Time was when girls served in families for from $1 to $2 a week and were contented, healthy, happy and laid by money, then got married and were happy wives and mothers. Gradually, as the ideas of social status "rose," our girls flocked to shops and factories as more "genteel." Domestics' wages climbed apace, until now even at $6 and $8 a week there are not enough maids to go around.

"Would you let your daughter do it?" queries Justicia. I cannot answer for others, but although my father was a professional man, as am I, my daughter attended normal school at a time when I was invalided and could not make any money, and during those two years she supported herself by assisting in a respectable family, doing all kinds of housework except the washing. Then, during a year while she had to wait for her return on the appointment list, she did housework and baby tending, and thus supported herself. There is a cry all over the country for domestic help, yet we claim that our virtuous daughters must go to the bad just because factory and store bosses will not pay them a living wage! Nay, they need not, for supply of foolish girls exceeds the demand.

Just for the sake of experiment, try housework, Miss Justicia. You need not "learn a new trade," as you put it, only bring to the work a willing heart and determination to please. You may not have quite the "freedom," but you will have a plenty of good food, a warm bed, improved health and money in the bank. And when you marry you'll know how to cook a meal and keep house for a man who'd like a genuine home. You'll know how to mend clothes, tend the sick, and if there have been children in the homes in which you were employed, you will know how to give intelligent care to your own children. As to "degradation," my child, I fear, from the tone of your letter, that Bridget and Dinah might teach even you something about good breeding, modesty of heart and the dignity of labor. A PINE CONE PILLOW

Designed by E. J. BUCKMAN

FOR your den or library or living hall I am offering today a pine-cone design for a pillow. It is so delightfully easy to work and so effective when done that I feel sure you will accept the pattern with thanks to the designer.

First of all, you must trace the design on linen, for only one-half is shown on the page. In another column there are directions for transferring patterns. I advise the carbon paper method for this, for you will find that medium-weight tan linen is the best for this pretty top.

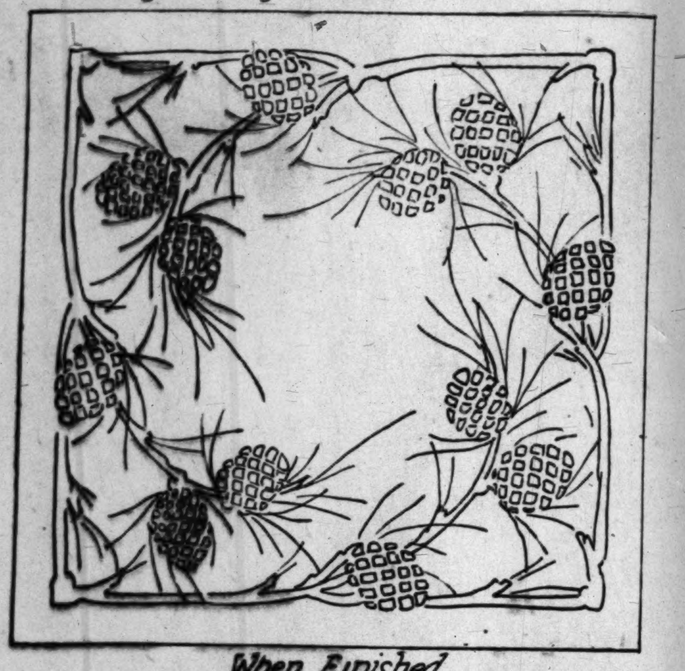
This design is a "swing" pattern. The lower edge of the half becomes the upper edge on the remainder. In that way there will be one large cone on each side of the central line.

When you have transferred your design, the working of it in one shade of brown and one of green is fascinating. Outline stitches with coarse thread should define the stem that forms the edge of the design. The occasional lines on the stem are to be marked with outline stitches also, using the dark brown thread.

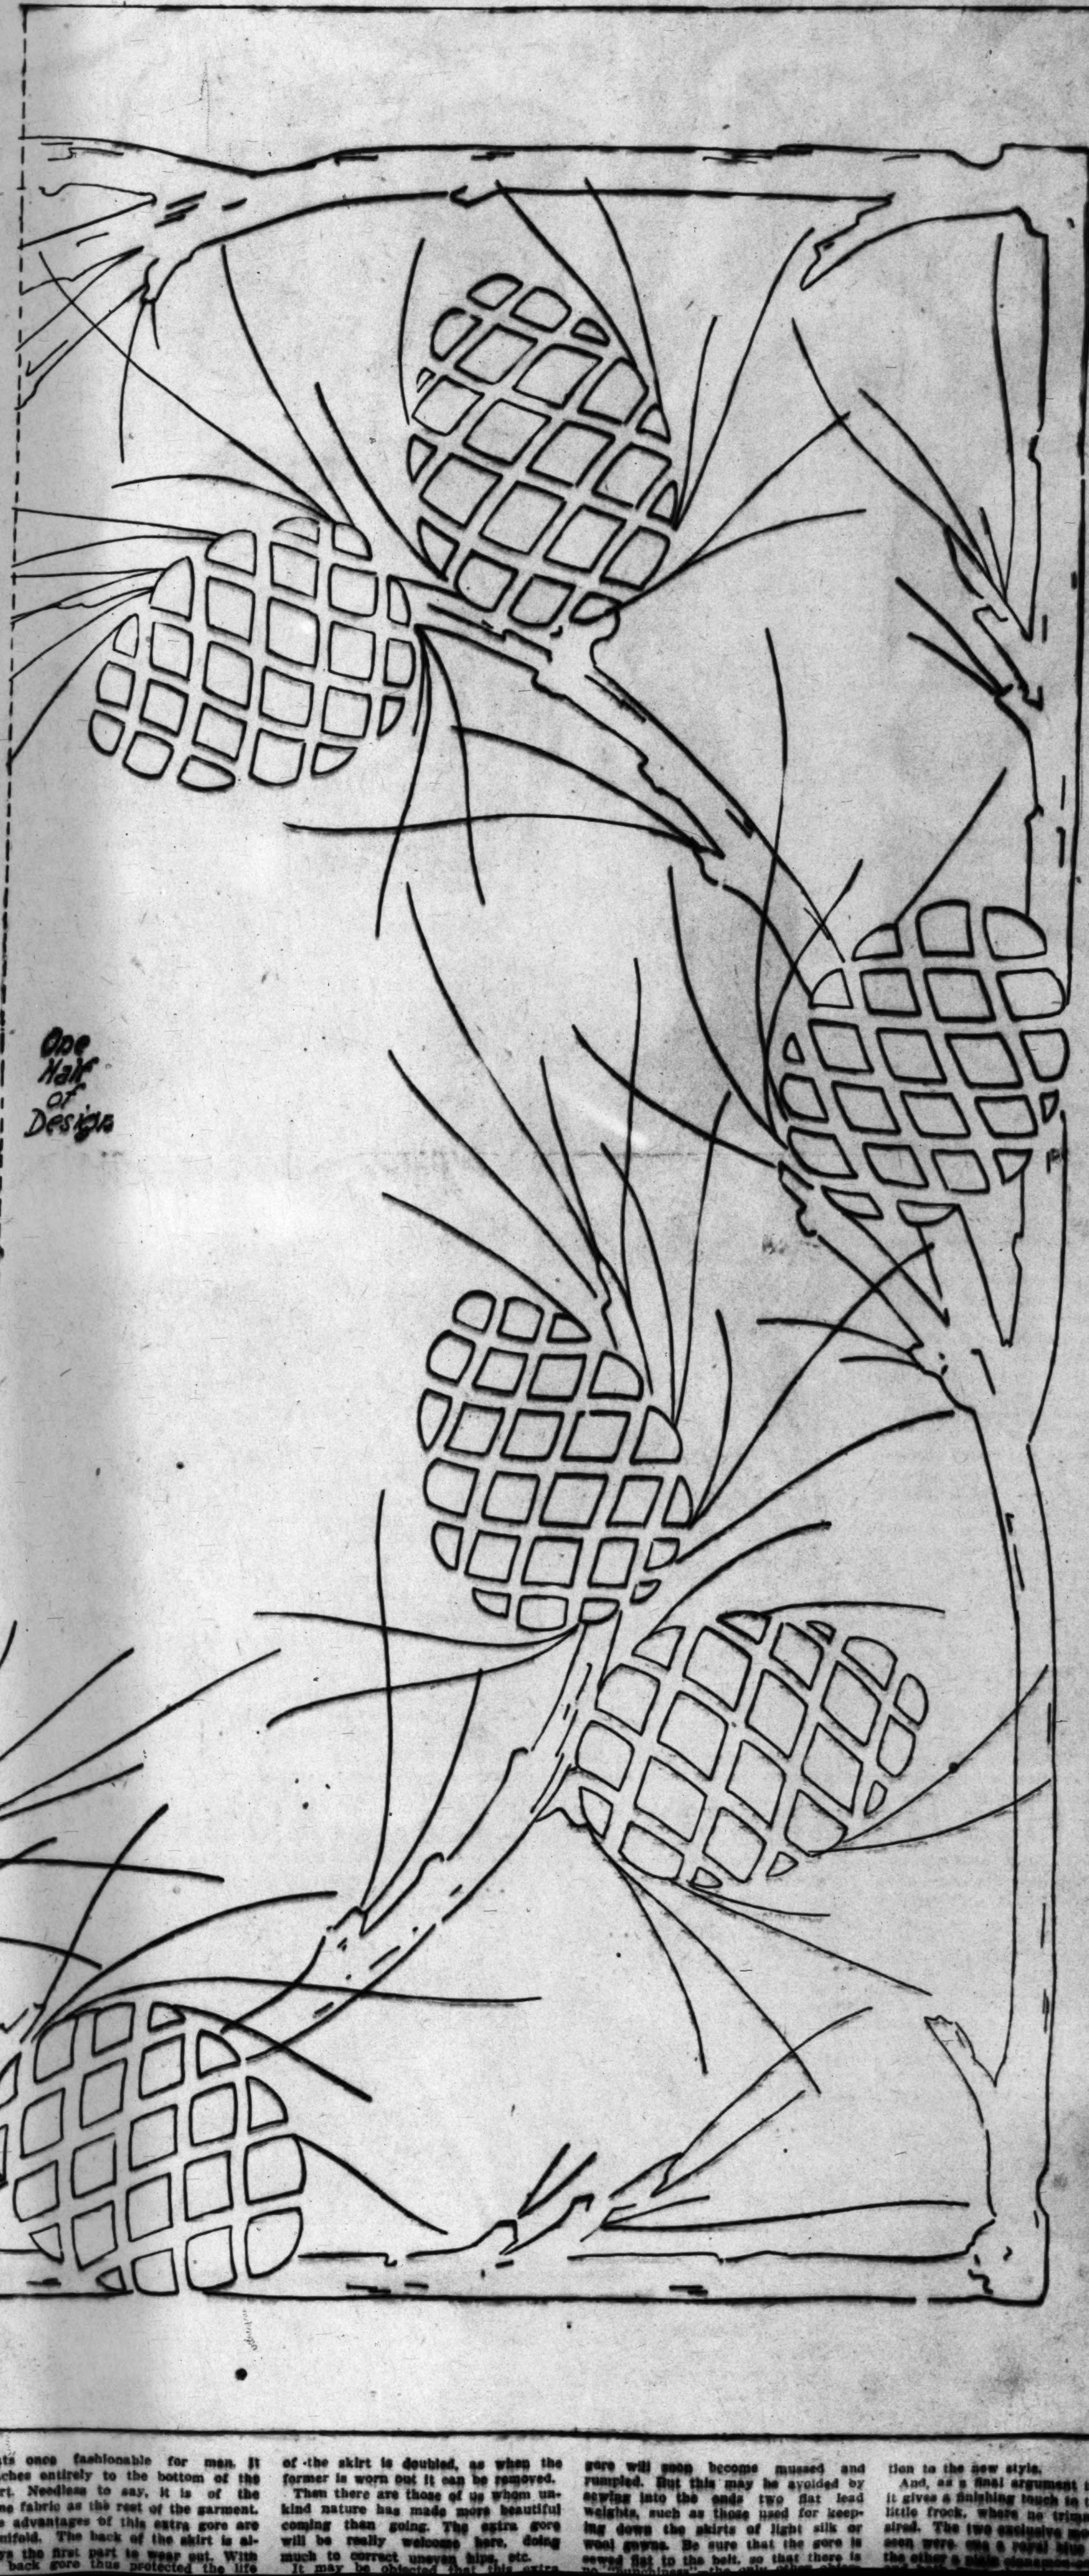
And while you have the brown cotton in your needle, you may as well work the cones. The diamond spaces should be worked solid with straight stitches, either the long way of the diamond or the shorter way, just as you wish.

The pine needles you will work in green, using the outline stitch. Before you know it, the pillow top is finished. If you can fill it with the fragrant pine needles, so much the better. A green or a brown cord is a good finish for the cover, and if you wish you can vary the one-color idea that is generally followed in the back and top by making a dark green back. Just a hint, of course, but remnants come in so well sometimes!

With a centerpiece on this same idea a set for the library or the porch of your summer home is irresistible. Try it.



When Finished



THREE WAYS TO TRANSFER

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Ribbon Embroidery

THIS pretty form of ornament is all the rage again.

The ribbon may be silk, satin, velvet, or even tinsel.

It is used for hair bandeaux, on hats, and for trimming dresses.

It is worked with silk, with narrower ribbon, with beads and with metal threads.

Pretty belts are made of gold ribbon worked with ribbon embroidery.

The ribbon used for the trimming in this case is pompadour or Dresden about one-fourth inch wide.

In a flower design, the larger flowers may be worked with crinkled or crepe ribbon.

In doing this work be careful not to drag or turn the ribbon while sewing it.

From Towels

A SIMPLE and useful combing jacket or peignoir may be made from a good large towel. Divide it into four even parts; cut off the two of these parts nearest the ends and sew them at right angles to the central portion. Sew tape where the pieces join to tie the peignoir on.

From three crash dishtowels you can make a sewing apron, turning up the bottom and stitching it into pockets. Ribbon strings complete the apron.

A large embroidered towel will make a good bureau cover for summer. A line of drawnwork will add to the appearance of a plain one used for the same purpose.

Shirtwaist Box Lid

I HAVE just heard of the most delightful new idea in space economy. If you, like myself, are cramped for space for your personal belongings, you will welcome it as I did.

It is this: Across the inside of the lid of your shirtwaist box tack strips of plain garter elastic, not too far apart. If the box is very long, you can insert a brass thumbtack in the middle, as well as at the ends.

And what are they for? Why, for holding collars and belts and jabots and ribbon ties; indeed, I'm going to make mine hold gloves, first wrapped in tissue paper, as well. I think it's a splendid idea, and I'm going to hand it to you.

A TOUCH OF GOLD ON FANCY BAGS

Gold Lace and Dresden Silk

Royal Blue and Gold Embroidery

Ribbon and Gold Net

Crocheted in Gold Thread

DON'T you fairly revel in the new styles? I do. I love Persian [illegible] and metal laces and [illegible]. And above [illegible] gold [illegible] opera bags, to go with the gold tissue scarfs and the gold-dotted tunics. There is the royal blue and gold bag, for instance. The foundation is of gold-colored satin, worked in Japanese chain-stitch. The darker portions are in the blue. The flap is made of rings crocheted in gold and connected by gold chain stitches and the lace and tassels are also gold. The lining is of the plain satin.

Very gorgeous indeed is the crocheted bag, made like any other Irish crochet lace, but in gold thread. Thin drawstrings fasten it.

The darker old gold is shown in the Dresden ribbon bag. A violet pattern is perhaps best in the ribbon; make on the pattern of a workbag, but smaller, and sew on the gold lace afterward where the ribbon is seamed together. The bottom is of cardboard covered with ribbon and edged with the lace. The lining and the long strings are of old-gold satin.

A dainty bag in ribbon work is shown last. Any light color will do for the bag itself, which is made with the cardboard bottom, etc., just as the bag last described. It is then completely covered with thin gold lace in a close pattern, the lace extending to the edge of the shirred top and being fastened there and at the bottom. On either side the lace is held down by a diagonal row of flowers and leaves in narrow ribbon the same shade as the silk of the bag, with a tiny gold bead as the center of each blossom. The drawstrings are of gold cord. Isn't each of these a dainty dish to set before a queen?

The Long-Tailed Frock

PARIS dressmakers have reported to us the trouser gown, but the long-tailed frock is not of the same ilk. On the contrary, it is a safe, sane and conservative garment which exploits a new and sensible idea.

In this style of frock there is an extra gore, as it were, in the back of the skirt. This gore is sewed like the rest into the belt, but it is loose everywhere else, like the long-tailed frock coats once fashionable for men. It reaches entirely to the bottom of the skirt. Needless to say, it is of the same fabric as the rest of the garment. The advantages of this extra gore are manifold. The back of the skirt is always the first part to wear out. With the back gore thus protected the life of the skirt is doubled, as when the former is worn out it can be removed.

Then there are those of us whom unkind nature has made more beautiful coming than going. The extra gore will be really welcome here, doing much to correct uneven hips, etc.

It may be objected that this extra gore will soon become mussed and rumpled. But this may be avoided by sewing into the ends two flat lead weights, such as those used for keeping down the skirts of light silk or wool gowns. Be sure that the gore is sewed flat to the belt, so that there is no "bunchiness"—the only other objection to the new style.

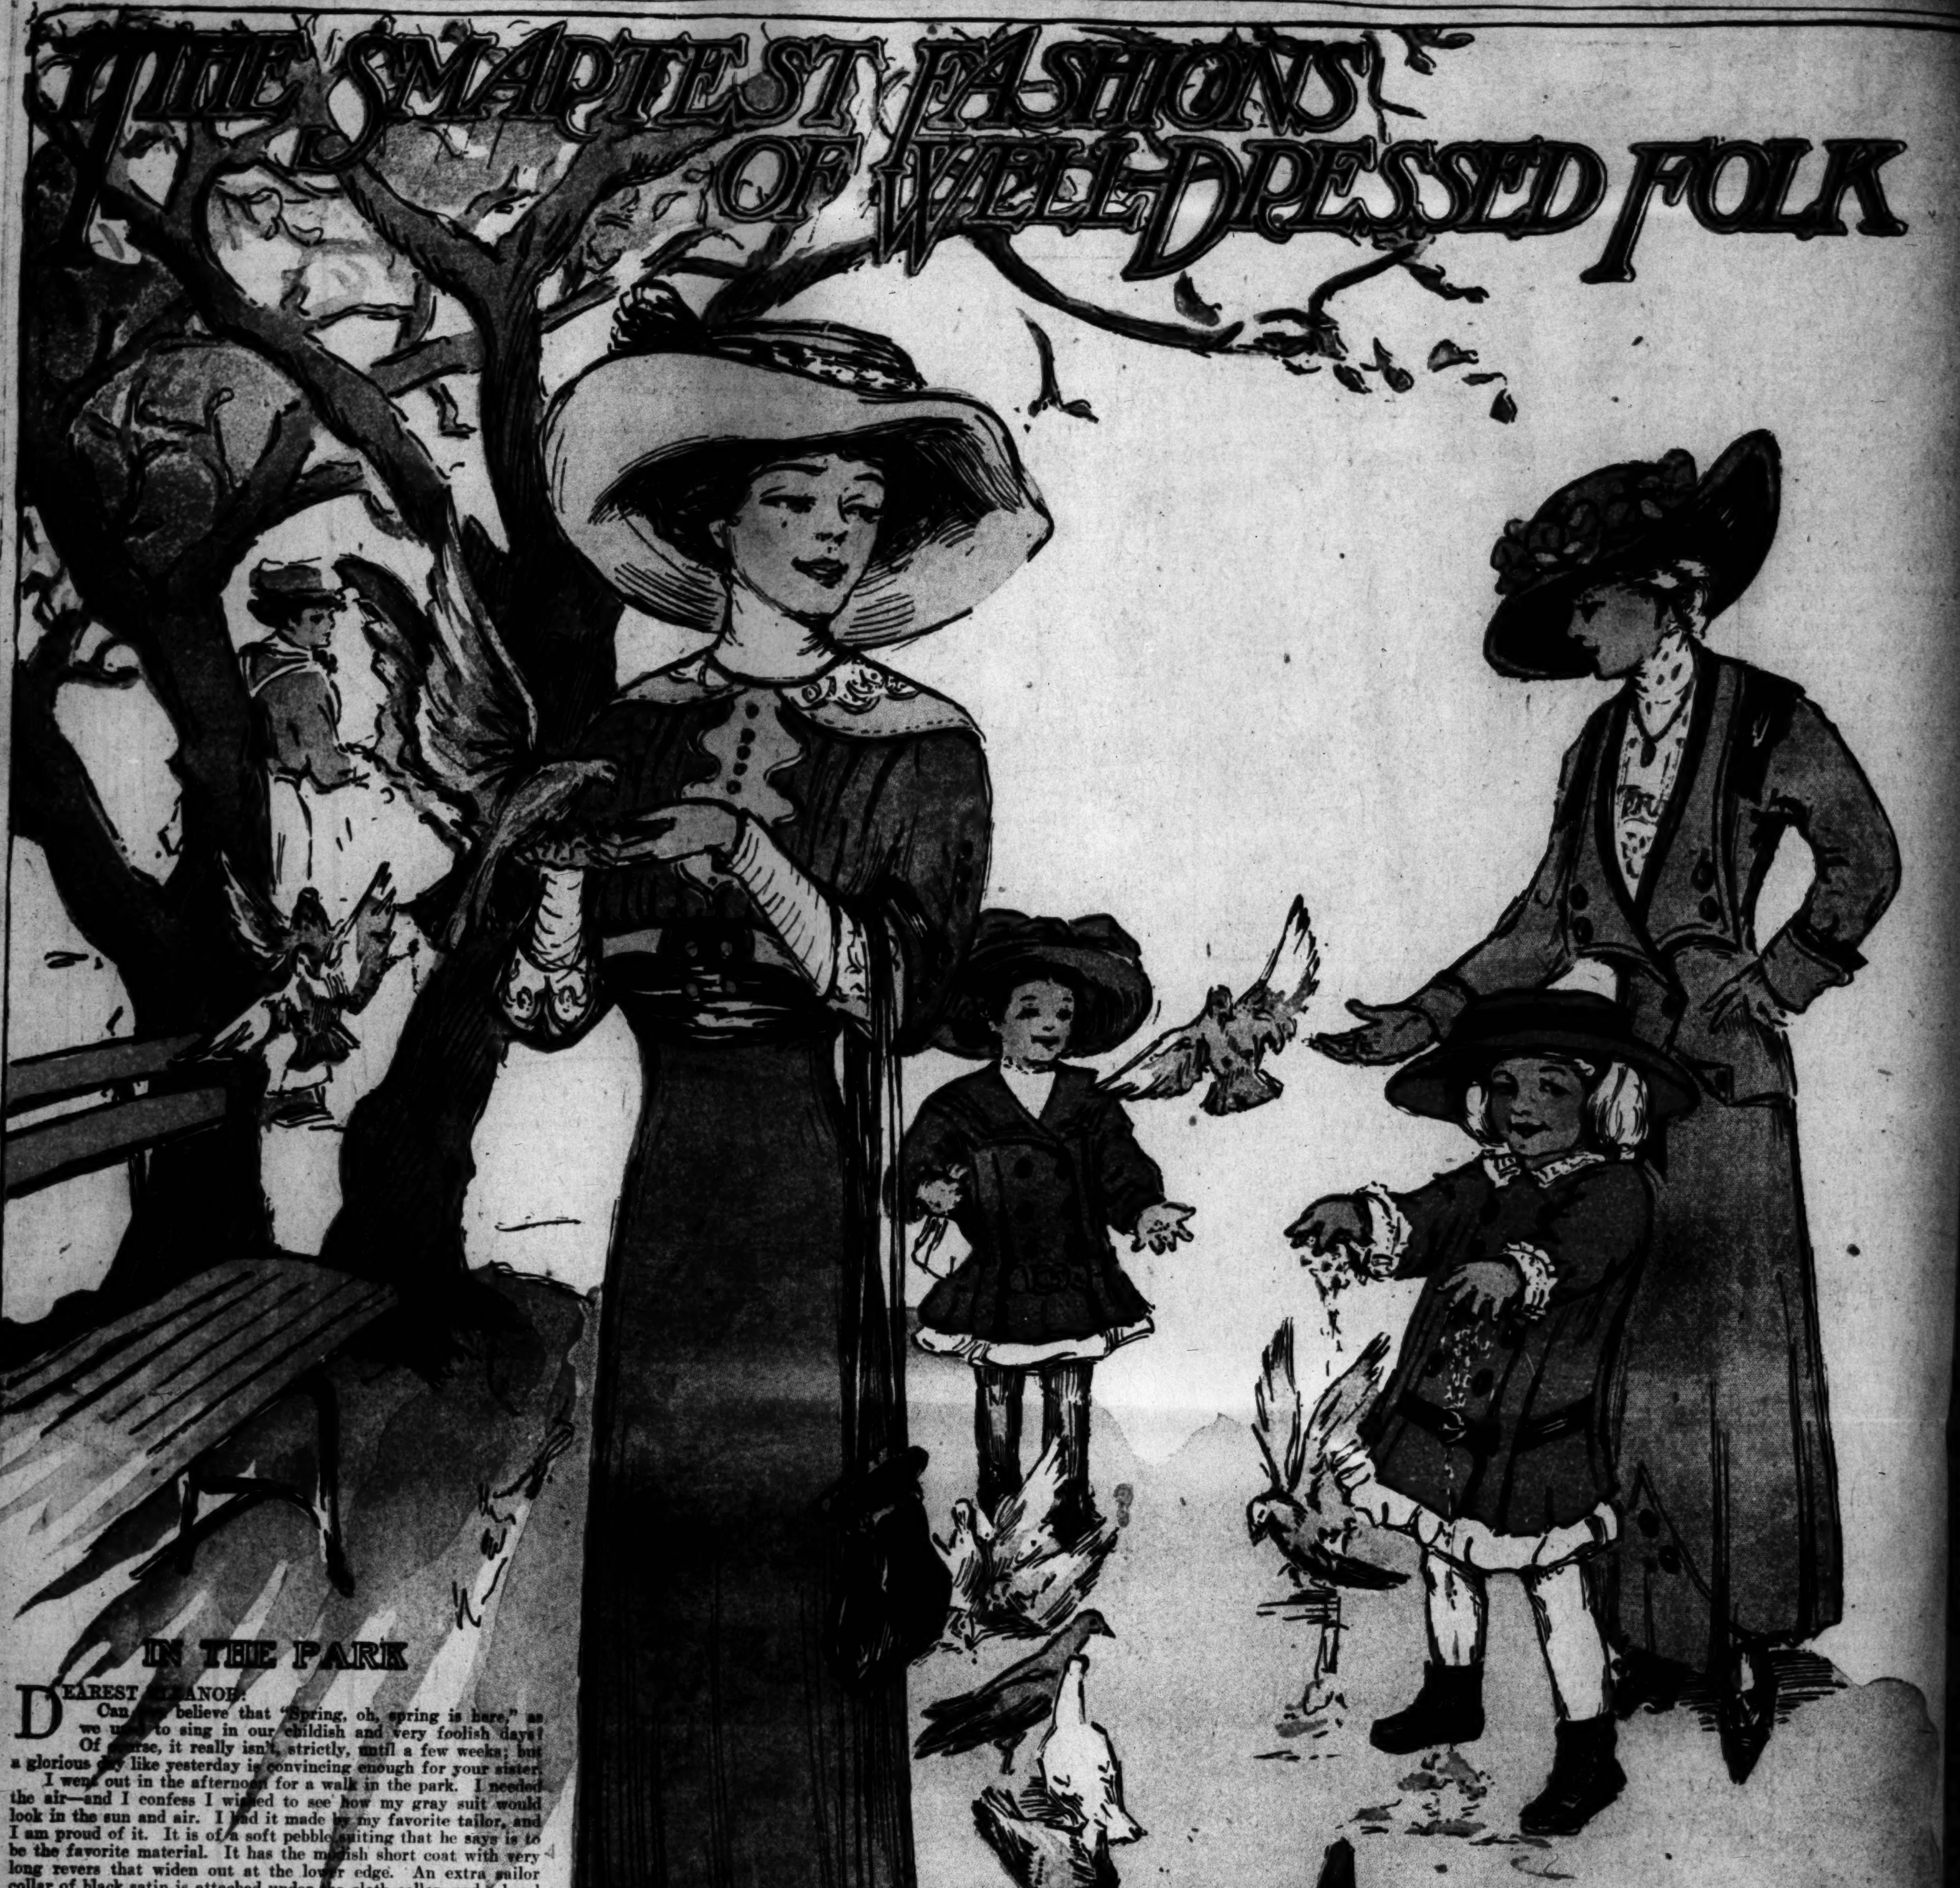
And, as a final argument in it gives a finishing touch to the little frock, where no trimmin sired. The two exclusive mode seen were, one a royal blue v the other a plain cinnamon-colo

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK



IN THE PARK

DEAREST ELEANOR:

Can you believe that "Spring, oh, spring is here," as we used to sing in our childish and very foolish days? Of course, it really isn't, strictly, until a few weeks; but a glorious day like yesterday is convincing enough for your sister.

I went out in the afternoon for a walk in the park. I needed the air—and I confess I wished to see how my gray suit would look in the sun and air. I had it made by my favorite tailor, and I am proud of it. It is of a soft pebble suiting that he says is to be the favorite material. It has the modish short coat with very long revers that widen out at the lower edge. An extra sailor collar of black satin is attached under the cloth collar, and a band of black edges the inner edges of the revers. The front edges of the coat are turned back in tiny flaps held by black buttons. Double cuffs are used on the sleeves, and the skirt I had trimmed with a pointed piece at the front—just for a change, you know. This can be removed if I grow tired.

I wore my new straw hat of gray chip trimmed with immense pink camellias in a low wreath. It turns up at the back and shows the facing of black velvet.

As I was walking in modish meditation, fancy free, I met Anne Clariton, who was out in the crisp air with her two nieces, who were feeding the pigeons that are the main attraction in the walks of the square. My! how the scene brought back the little park in Paris where the sparrows wait for their daily meal from the visitors.

Well, Anne wore a stunning one-piece dress of blue cloth trimmed with tan ratine. I saw the bolero effect there—obtained by a high girdle of black satin edged with tan, the upward curve giving the line that is surely coming on all coats and bodices.

A yoke of white tucked linen was quite shallow. The bodice was trimmed with a circular collar of tan, over which an embroidered linen collar was laid. Her sleeves were trimmed with turned-back cuffs of tan ratine and linen, and satin and dull gold buttons finished the grand scheme.

I must admire her hat in writing. It was of tan straw, very supple and immense. A band of feathers trimmed the crown, and the brim turned up at the front and side. Trust Anne for the latest turns on the millinery road!

The kiddies were dressed in simple little coats, one red and one brown, and, I fear, would have killed the birds with kindness if Anne had not dragged them away. But, altogether, the day's stroll refreshed me in many ways. Write to me, dear. I am sure that you have something new to tell me. Devotedly,

MADGE.
